ST. THOMAS, Virgin Islands—The assumption of duty as Governor of the Virgin Islands by Judge William H. Hastie was hailed by both officials and civilians alike as the dawn of a new era for the Caribbean possession.

Governor Hastie took the oath of office Friday in historic Emancipation Gardens in the presence of Secretary of Interior Julius A. Krug, visiting dignitaries of other Caribbean islands and several thousand natives who jammed the area after giving him a wild ovation.

Reasons for New Hope

Hopes of the islanders for a new period of relations with the mainland centered first around the fact that the new Governor is a racial kinsman thoughly familiar with the aspirations of the islanders. In during his work as assistant solicitor of the Interior Department and later during the 25 months he spent as judge here in the Federal District Court.

Likened to Election

"Your affection and enthusiasm for William Hastie, expressed through communications to the Congress and the President and to the Department of the Interior as well as editorials and news comment in your newspapers have demonstrated your approval of his appointment.

"This expression has given us the feeling that Governor Hastie's appointment is the next best thing to his having been chosen in a popular election. . . .

"Governor Hastie has a great opportunity. I am sure that he will prepare a practical program to build a firm economy for the future development of the islands."

Governor's Responsed

In his response, Governor Hastie declared, "It is my hope, it is my sincere belief that the Virgin Islands stand today at the beginning of a period of significant progress and achievement."

Expressing gratification over the "unprecedented demonstration of the reservoir of good will stored up for us in Washington and in this Caribbean neighborhood," he said that he expected the amount deleted from the appropriation by the House to be restored by the Senate.

New Ecomony Predicted

In addition, he said that he anticipated a change in the common setup, with the increase of exportation and the reduction of importation, thereby balancing the budget.

Insisting that money alone must not be the chief consideration, Governor Hastie gave a verbal spanking to those who criticize the acts of officials without taking any active part in political affairs.

Declaring that responsibility for the wise and unselfish use of power falls fundamentally upon the people, he expressed the belief that self-government is not a too distant possibility.

Hailed by President

In addition, Governor Hastie read a message from President Truman in which the latter said:

'It is with much pleasure that I send you my hearty congratulations and good wishes for a long and successful administration as Governor of the Virgin Islands. . . .

"Great responsibility has been entrusted to you and I am entirely confident of your ability to shoulder it.

"I should like you to tell the people of the Virgin Islands that I share their hopes for and determination to see achieved a great advance in the status of the islands economicaly, socially and politically.

"I shall do all in my power to have extended to the islands an ever increasing degree of self-government as the people demonstrate their capacity to govern themselves."

Never before since civilian administrators succeeded the Navy has this happy relationship obtained, as previous governors have frequently been at loggerheads with the Washington administration, causing the islanders to suffer.

Program to Await Study

In his inaugural address, Governor Hastie refused to chart any course his administration would folow, declaring that he preferred to study the situation with the guidance of the best minds of the island community before establishing his program.

In presenting Judge Hastie to Federal Judge Herman Moore, who administered the oath, Morris De Castro, a native, acting governor, said in part:

Hastie's Fitness Cited

"This is not just another inauguration. I say without fear of contradiction that President Harry S. Truman, in choosing Judge Hastie to be Governor of the Virgin Islands, has selected an outstanding American who is preeminently fitted to direct the destinies of these islands.

"Here is a man of human sympathy and understanding, familiar at first hand, with conditions in these islands, who has served among our people, and who has earned their love, their respect, and their admiration.

"People of the Virgin Islands, today is not Governor Hastie's day alone. Today is our day. Today we can look forward to a stable and steady administration guided by an able and experienced administrator.

"Today we can look forward to an administration which will be dedicated to the promotion of the general welfare of all the people of these islands."

Krug Pays Tribute

Governor Hastie was lauded by Secretary of the Interior Krug, who said in part:

"Governor Hastie has what no other Governor before him has had as he began his term of office: a thorough knowledge of the social and economic problems of the territory and an understanding of the people themselves.

Negro Governor of Virgin Islands

William Henry Hastie, Law Dean at Howard University and First Member of his Race to Sit on Federal Bench, Has Notable Record as New Deal Trouble Shooter

Frank I. Weller, in an AP Washington dispatch.

THE senate has confirmed Judge William Henry Hastie, 41, as first Negro governor of the Virgin islands. Harold L. Ickes promoted the appointment while he headed the interior department, which supervises the 50 islands, islets and cays which make up the Virgin group. The islands' 25,000 residents are 69% Negro and 22% mixed Negro and white. Ickes said he thought it was about time they had a chief executive representing the dominant race.

The islands have been under the flags of Spain, the Netherlands England, France and Denmark. In 1917 we paid Denmark $25,000,000 for this "poorhouse of the Atlantic" to keep Kaiser Wilhelm's U-boats from nesting there.

Judge Hastie is deeply grateful for his appointment as an honor to his race, but he isn't jumping up and down about it. For six years he's been dean of Howard university (Negro) law school in Washington and he likes it. His seminar is crowded with enthusiastic students.

Hastie and his wife, Beryl, a highly educated native of the Virgin islands, are leaders in the capital colored social set, which entertains such celebrities as the famed Negro singers, Paul Robeson and Marion Anderson.

Law Degree From Harvard

The judge struck a match to a very serious pipe as he told of the bee he had in his boyish bonnet to be an engineer. It brought him from "back of the tracks" in Knoxville Tenn., into a world that startled him.

His pharmacist father and his schoolteacher mother encouraged him. His mother spent long evenings telling him how the French had fought and failed to thrust a canal across the isthmus of Panama and of the great battle President "Teddy" Roosevelt had with congress to get authorization and funds to start it again.

Young Hastie quit playground marbles and buckled down to hard study. He majored in mathematics at college, "firmly convinced I was going to build great canals and dams and stand the whole universe on its head with new and startling things."

Judge William Henry Hastie, recently confirmed by senate as governor of the Virgin islands.

A couple of lawyer cousins in Washington got his feet back on the ground by helping finance what turned out to be a very profitable course in American jurisprudence. They made him read law in their offices and finally took him in as a practicing attorney. But first they made him get out and paint houses and do other hard jobs to help pay for his education.

He was graduated A. B. magna cum laude from Amherst and won his LL.B. and S. J. D at Harvard where he was one of the few Negroes ever to serve on the Law Review.

In early New Deal days Hastie was a protege of Felix Frankfurter, now associate justice of the United States supreme court, who then was one of FDR's "brain trusters." Ickes hired Hastie as an assistant solicitor in his department. At that time (1933-'37) "The Ick" was up to his elbows with minority group problems and so was the White House. Hastie helped calm the waters. In 1937 FDR named him United States district judge for the Virgin islands, the first Negro ever to sit on the federal bench.

In War Department During War

Former Secretary of War Stimson persuaded Ickes to let him have Hastie as a civilian aide and adviser on Negro relations in the armed services when the war started. Right off the bat he told Stimson it was a mistake to segregate black and white army officers. There was quite a stir at that time, built up by Nazi-Jap propaganda, that it was a "white man's war."

Hastie smoothed out a lot of dissatisfaction, in large part by convincing Stimson that the army should train Negro officers in the same camps with white officers. He said nothing about social equality. He simply said that it wasn't fair to the black soldiers for people to think maybe the Negro officers had "different and inferior training."

The war department pitched on his side as far as land officer training went. He walked out on his job when the air corps said "no."

Hastie is very proud of the battle record made by Negro flying officers trained at Tuskegee institute, but he opposed their segregation.

The judge is a member of the African Methodist Episcopal church. He is long and gangling (6 feet, 170 pounds), dresses in sharkskins and is equipped with a wide, high forehead and a pleasing personality.

Up north his voice has lost the soft cream of the old south. He speaks with the crisp consonants of the hard and calculating world he has to battle.

HASTIE'S FOES CHARGE COMMUNISTIC ACTIVITIES

Pittsburg Courier Sat 4-6-46

Pittsburg, Pa.

By JOHN H. YOUNG, Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON—Charges that William H. Hastie is sympathetic with Communistic ideology and that he has been connected with Communistic organizations were addressed to the Senate Territories and Insular Affairs sub-committee last Friday as hearings on the Howard University law school dean's nomination as Governor of the Virgin Islands were resumed.

The opposition also expressed itself as feeling that a Negro governor would hurt tourist trade and

During the hearings last week, Senator Murdock commented that Senator Eastland "is exhibiting a very fair attitude." In a quick reply, Senator Eastland said: "Judge Hastie himself is exhibiting a very fair attitude."

that Congress would not feel justified in allotting necessary funds to islands governed by a Negro.

LONG SESSION SEEN

The trend of Friday's session led observers to believe that the hearings will continue another week.

The latest attack on Mr. Hastie was made by Leslie F. Huntt, certified public accountant here and a former vice president of the Virgin Islands Company, a Government corporation from 1934 to 1944.

Mr. Huntt, who first testified March 28, resumed his attack on Mr. Hastie by submitting to the sub-committee newspaper clippings he said he had obtained from the House Committee on Un-American Activities. His testimony followed closely the line of questioning previously used by Senators James Eastland, Democrat of Mississippi, and Allen J. Ellender, Democrat of Louisiana.

MEMBERS IN ROW

The sub-committee, itself, got into a row over the admissibility of the clippings as evidence after Mr. Hunt admitted he knew nothing of their authenticity. Mr. Hastie then straightened out the difficulty by reading the clippings and conceding he was sponsor of the Conference of Constitutional Liberties held June 7-9 in 1940, and that he was and is a vice president of the National Lawyers Guild.

He also said he had no objections to the admission of two articles concerning the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, but questioned their relevancy because they referred to a time when he was not a member of the Southern Conference.

Senator Eastland said Mr. Hastie would be given a full opportunity after Mr. Huntt completed his testimony to answer the charges.

Mr. Huntt was allowed to insert into the record a typewritten copy of an article from the Sunday Daily Worker of Jan. 13, written by Benjamin J. Davis Jr., a Communist and city councilman of New York, approving Mr. Hastie's nomination.

CONSIDERS DAVIS A FRIEND

Sat 4-6-46

Questioned by Senator Eastland, Mr. Hastie said he and Councilman Davis had been friends from the time the councilman was a youth and his father was the Republican national committeeman for Georgia.

"I have not severed that friendship now that he has become a Communist, but I do say I have had no relation whatever to his political activities," Mr. Hastie declared.

During the testimony, Mr. Hastie said he was a member of the National Negro Congress "for two years, around 1935 or 1936."

"When you joined, did you know Communists belonged to the organization?" asked Senator Ellender.

DIDN'T SEE ROSTER

"I do not believe so," Mr. Hastie replied. "I did not have access to the membership rolls."

Mr. Hastie said he quit the organization "around 1936, about the time I went down to the Virgin Islands." His reason for this was that he had "become increasingly active in other organizations."

In reply to Senator Murdock, Mr. Huntt denied that he objected to Mr. Hastie's appointment as Governor of the Virgin Islands because he is a colored man, and admitted that Mr. Hastie had made an excellent Federal judge in the islands.

"What, in your mind, will cause him to be different as Governor than he was as judge?" asked Senator Abe Murdock, Democrat of Utah and chairman of the sub-committee.

"I don't know what his action would be in a war of aggression or a Communistic war," was the reply.

HUNT CONFUSED

Mr. Huntt was somewhat confused at the end of the Friday session and was referring to Mr. Hastie as "Governor." Mr. Huntt was given a week or ten days to get additional evidence to substantiate his charges of Mr. Hastie's sympathy with Communistic ideology and his connection with alleged Communistic organizations.

Secretary of the Interior J. A. Krug personally appeared before the sub-committee last week. Previously he had sent the sub-committee members a statement in behalf of Mr. Hastie.

KRUG PRAISES HASTIE

"I think in Judge Hastie we have an excellent candidate for the governorship of this important territory," he said. "I cannot be too strong in my endorsement of him."

He added that he studied Mr. Hastie's record and feels "he is as good a man as the department can recommend for the job."

Senator Owen Brewster, Republican of Maine, then had his say. He suggested that some persons think Mr. Hastie "is a little too collectivistic in his views," and asked Mr. Krug how he felt as to the viewpoint and background of Mr. Hastie and his own ideas regarding the solution of the problems of the Virgin Islands.

"I can tell you what my policy will be, and I am sure Judge Hastie will cooperate in carrying out this policy," Mr. Krug replied. "I think we will help those people most by putting them into position to help themselves."

WANTS INDUSTRIES

He added that there is no intention on the part of the Department of the Interior to adopt "any new kind of society for the Virgin Islands." A practical approach to the problems, he said, would be to try to get some industries going and people interested in the islands.

Answering Senator Brewster, Mr. Krug said he thought Mr. Hastie would be able to reorganize activities of the islands and would be able to effectively present their case to the Administration in Washington and the Congress in an effort to secure whatever collaboration is necessary.

Senator Ellender then asked Mr. Krug whether he thought the tourist trade to the islands "would expand with a colored man as governor."

"Of all the people I know for this particular job I can think of no better one than Judge Hastie, considering the tourist trade as well as local business," Mr. Krug replied.

Sat 4-6-46

"Do you think the tourist trade will be confined largely to colored people?" asked Senator Ellender.

"I think a great many white people are going to the Virgin Islands," was the answer.

"You are very optimistic," commented Senator Ellender.

During the examination of Mr. Krug, it was brought out that several letters had been received by the sub-committee in opposition to the appointment of Mr. Hastie. Chief objection was that whites are property owners in the islands. These letters will be turned over to the sub-committee.

Mr. Huntt said he was thinking of the welfare of the islands when he suggested that a Negro governor would not be able to obtain necessary funds from Congress. And it was Senator Eastland who suggested that a Negro governor would endanger the future of the islands.

COALITION FORMED

The two-week-old hearings have been characterized by the opposition of a coalition formed by a Northern Republican, Senator Brewster, and two Southern Democrats, Senators Eastland and Ellender.

The coalition has pursued the "Communistic" argument as its main objection. The Democrats have made a direct charge of Communism, while the Republican has indirectly hinted at Communism by expressing great interest in the continuance of free enterprise in the Islands. Underneath both procedures is what many believe to be a real issue: Whether or not a Negro should rule over a white man, regardless of that white man's minority.

The 1940 census for the Virgin Islands listed 17,176 Negroes and 5,477 of mixed race. The remaining 2,236 are listed as whites.

HEARING RESUMED

Interior Sec'y Krug Reaffirms His Backing

WASHINGTON

The ruling out of "smear" testimony by a white Virgin Islands businessman and the reaffirmation by Secretary of Interior J. A. Krug of his confidence in the nominee's ability marked last week's hearing on the fitness of William H. Hastie to become governor of the Virgin Islands.

The hearings were resumed on Thursday following a week's recess, due to the absence of Sen. Abe Murdock (Dem., Utah), chairman of the Senate Territories and Insular Affairs subcommittee.

Two witnesses were heard. They were Mr. Krug and Leslie F. Hunt, white Virgin Islands businessman, whose charge that Mr. Hastie was sympathetic to communism, was ruled out by Chairman Murdock on the grounds that he had no evidence to back it up.

Secretary Krug took the stand Thursday and reaffirmed a previous statement read to the committee of his confidence in the ability and integrity of Mr. Hastie.

Sens. Eastland (Dem., Miss.) and Ellender (Dem., La.) squirmed in their seats as the witness testified. When Mr. Krug had finished, both entered into long harangue about Virgin Islands syrup being used for rum instead of being shipped to feed starving Europeans.

It seemed as if they would blame Mr. Krug and Dean Hastie for the rum business in the islands rather than the present administration. Judge Hastie assured both men that if he is confirmed, he would "certainly see what could be done" toward using the "mo-lasses" (as Eastland pronounced it) for food.

After the syrup situation had cooled off, the two-man Dixie bloc then directed their attention toward an attempt to break down Mr. Krug's testimony that Dean Hastie was "an excellent candidate for the governorship."

Senator Ellender took the lead in this, questioning the Secretary of the Interior at length as to whether or not the appointment of a "Nigra" (as he pronounced it) as governor would cut down any tourist trade or lessen the chance for future outside investments.

Sat 4-6-46

Repeats Testimony

Mr. Krug, his faced flushed with irritation at the question, repeated with emphasis his statement as to Dean Hastie's fitness for the job.

Mr. Hastie, unperturbed by the slurs of the Dixie Senators, pointed out to the committee, which also included Sen. Owen Brewster (Rep., Maine) that what the Senators did not take into consideration was that regardless of what color the governor would be, the tourists would not come in contact with him, but with the numerous immigration officials, all of whom are colored persons.

Senator Eastland, who when the going gets rough, chews on a pencil, worked his pencil overtime when Chairman Murdock ruled out the nine pages of testimony introduced by Leslie F. Hunt, who so far is the only witness to oppose Mr. Hastie's appointment.

Senator Murdock explained his action by saying that Hunt had no substantiation of his numerous charges, which he admitted were obtained from an "investigator" of the Rankin-dominated House Committee on Un-American Activities.

Charges Communism

In the document, Hunt accused Dean Hastie of belonging to communistic organizations, asserting that because of this, it would be dangerous to have him governor of the Virgin Islands in the event that America goes to war with Russia.

This danger lies, he said, in the location of the islands, which gives them strategic military importance in relation to the Panama Canal.

Ending up with the statement that "we should not conduct such a social experiment that so obviously brings nothing but discredit to our system of government," Hunt sought to insert in the record numerous photostatic documents.

Senator Murdock interrupted the witness to ask what knowledge did he have on the authenticity of the charges. Hunt reluctantly admitted that he had none.

Senator Murdock then pointed out that the person who made the charges should be brought in to testify.

Ellender Backs Hunt

Senator Murdock then pointed feeble effort to give Hunt some support, pointed out that Judge Hastie had admitted being a member

"What is being attempted here," he continued, "is to have a witness present incriminating evidence that he cannot substantiate in the slightest degree.

"We don't want to take the irresponsible statement of some over-zealous investigator until it has been fully substantiated by a Congressional Committee."

When Chairman Murdock finished, even the two Southern Senators, who at first tried to force the testimony into the record, had to agree with the chairman.

Senator Ellender grudgingly admitted that "Some of those investigators go far afield in their findings."

Sat 4-6-46

Hunt, who by this time was squirming uncomfortably in his chair, nervously replied that his evidence had been collected by the "Un-American Activities Committee" and had been given him by a George McDevitt, committee investigator.

Disgusted, Senator Murdock asserted: "If you want to crucify a man, you have to bring the proper evidence before this subcommittee.

"If you have any witness that you have a Communist and will testify to the fact that Judge Hastie is a member of that group, then have him come here and testify," Senator Murdock snapped back.

"Here," he continued, "we have a witness (Hunt) who testifies that he knows nothing of the truth of statements and charges he is making against Mr. Hastie."

him where would he get his information from this time if he were given an extension time.

Hunt, turning a brick red, replied that he could not say because of the delicacy of the situation, but that he would give it to the subcommittee if they promised to keep the source of of the information in confidence.

Hunt then asked if he could continue. Senator Murdock hesitated, but Judge Hastie asked if he could thumb through some of Hunt's numerous documents and could thereby help him better organize his testimony.

Hastie Helps Witness

The nominee selected some of the organizations which Hunt claimed to be communistic, and told the committee he had no objection to their being entered into the record.

Included were the National Lawyers Guild of which Mr. Hastie is vice president, and the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

Mr. Hunt, a cunning expression on his face, then asked if he could introduce an article written by Ben Davis Jr., New York councilman, in the Sunday Worker, Communist publication, in which Mr. Hastie's nomination was approved.

After hastily scanning the article, Judge Hastie said he had no objection. Sat 4-6-46

At this point, Senators Eastland and Ellender, who had become dejected, came to life. For almost an hour from their barrage of questions, a listener would have thought Davis was on trial.

Explains Friendship

Finally they asked that Dean Hastie explain his acquaintance with Mr. Davis. Hastie, still calm, said: "I have known Mr. Davis for 25 years and at 21 he was a staunch Georgia Republican and his father a national Republican committeeman from Georgia."

Ellender interrupted: "Where was that, in New York?"

"I didn't say New York," corrected Hastie, "I said Georgia. I was a friend to him when he was a Republican and did not change when he became a Communist."

Hunt, his confidence restored by the new flurry of words, said: "In all fairness to Mr. Hastie I must say I have a very high regard for his legal knowledge. His stay in the Virgin Islands was very commendable and he was respected by everyone."

Senator Murdock, turning towards the witness, asked: "You saw nothing that would allow communistic views to interfere with his high office as judge?"

Hunt replied in the negative.

Witness Cornered

Senator Murdock continued, "Do you consider his educational qualifications high, and him to be liberal and tolerant?"

"Yes, I do," the witness said.

"You admit he is a wise man?"

"Yes."

Senator Murdock, a slow smile spreading across his face, said: "Then, these are the qualifications you stipulate in your article that a governor should have."

Hunt stared bewilderedly and said nothing.

His written testimony designed, he thought, to discredit Mr. Hastie, read:

"The new governor of the Islands must be a wise, a just, a tolerant man and a liberal man. But above everything else, he must be an American, with American methods."

Senator Murdock then asked the witness whom did he represent. Hunt replied, "a large portion of the businessmen in the Islands."

Speaks for 11 Men

When Senator Murdock was through boiling down the "large portion," it became exactly 11. It was also brought out that Hunt wanted to develop tourist traffic and business in the Islands.

Hunt's statement that although 90 per cent of the population was colored, the majority of the business establishments were owned by white people drew nods of approval from Senators Eastland and Ellender. Sat 4-6-46

"Certainly a colored governor could no do worse than some of the white ones have done," countered Senator Murdock, adding, "The mere fact that he is a colored man should not be used against him."

A Virgin Island resident, Roy P. Gordon, who was sent here by the Legislative Assembly of the Islands to testify, told the AFRO that there were only two dissenting votes against Judge Hastie in the Island and that they were in St. Croix. The vote in St. Thomas was unanimous.

(EDITOR'S NOTE:—The three main Virgin Islands, St. Thomas, St. John and St. Croix are governed by two Municipal Councils. A seven-man council, of which Mr. Gordon is chairman, operates for both St. Thomas and St. John, while St. Croix has its own nine-man council. Members of both councils meet once a year, at the call of the governor, in what is known as the Legislative Assembly.)

Both councils, he pointed out, met together once a year and hold what is called a Legislative Assembly and the vote for Judge Hastie in that branch of government was also unanimous.

Parade for Hastie

The citizens of St. Thomas, he said, staged a mammoth parade, asking that the Senate confirm the appointment of Mr. Hastie.

Regarding Mr. Hunt's testimony, Gordon had this to say:

"I think that Mr. Hunt has a fantastic imagination. At present there is a Sidney Kessler, a white continental, who is willing to invest $1,500,000 in a tourist and commercial venture in St. Thomas.

"He plans to do this whether Judge Hastie becomes governor or not. Mr. Hunt pointed out that he had 11 persons who were against the confirmation; but is that significant when 25,989 persons of the Islands are for him?"

Four Testify on Monday

Four persons, including Norman Thomas of the Socialist Party, testified in Hastie's behalf on Monday. Absent from the hearing were Senators Ellender and Brewster, and Senator Eastland failed to cross-examine as he has done in the past.

Mr. Thomas termed the communist charge "unfair" and insisted that the nominee was and is not "a fellow traveler" or a Socialist.

Foreman, Bourne Heard

Clarke Foreman, white, of Atlanta, president of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, and James R. Bourne, white, now chairman of a D.C. citizens' housing committee, termed the Communist charge against Mr. Hastie as "preposterous," and "purely imagination."

Mr. Bourne is a former relief administrator or Puerto Rico and consultant or the Virgin Islands, who volunteered to appear before the committee.

Miss Pauli Murray, assistant attorney general of Sacramento, Calif., the fourth person to testify, stated that the communist charge against Mr. Hastie was surprising because like the late Franklin Roosevelt and Wendell Willkie, he was admired by all parties.

National GRAPEVINE

By CHARLEY CHEROKEE

Good Morning, Guvnor! Chicago Defender, Ill.

SENATE HEARINGS on naming Bill Hastie Virgin Isles Governor, collapsed gently, after dragging three weeks. Communists themselves said Bill is no communist as charged, and Norman Thomas was there to say he is no Socialist. Charges that white tourists would shun the Isles, were laughed out the window.

Opposition led by Senators Eastland (Miss.) and Ellender (La.) put a witness on who tried to prove white business men in the Isles (whites are 10 per cent of the population) would sell out if a Negro Governor was named. Ellender raised the point of just who is white in the Isles and who is colored, pretty shaky ground for the Senator who comes from an area where many of the best white families have colored members. Sat

Eastland was disgusted with his own witness who proved to be the dumbest white guy we have come across (and that covers a lot of ground, chum). Once the Senator yelled to Chairman Murdock (Utah): "Stop interrupting my witness, give him as much rope as you gave the others." Everybody in the room added under his breath, "and he'll hang himself." Which he did.

Bill was in fine form throughout, looking properly modest when a parade of witnesses said what a fine guy he is, and in his rebuttal referring to the silly charges of the opposition merely as "misapprehension." There'll doubtless be a little flurry when the nomination gets out in the Senate proper, and Bilbo (whew, did you step in something John Henry) will get in some dirtiness for the record, but chum, Bill is in. Good morning, Guvnor!

Field in the company of Secretary of the Interior Krug, Governor Tugwell of Puerto Rico and other high officials.

Angela Durant, a Girl Scout, presented to Mrs. Hastie a bouquet from her high-school classmates.

Mr. Hastie will go to St. Croix tomorrow for a similar ceremony.

"President Harry S. Truman in choosing Judge William Henry Hastie to be Governor of the Virgin Islands has selected an outstanding American who is pre-eminently fitted to direct the destinies of these islands."

Virgin Islands Washington Post, D.C.

In selecting Dean William H. Hastie for the governorship of the Virgin Islands, President Truman made one of those nominations which deserve Senate approval by acclamation. But Senator Brewster of Maine seems to be laboring under the misapprehension that the Senate has been asked to confirm appointment of the Governor of Puerto Rico, Rexford Guy Tugwell. And Senator Eastland appears to be of the opinion that the question at issue is the character of former Interior Secretary Harold L. Ickes. Mr. Brewster said he wants to find out if Dean Hastie is "another Tugwell." Mr. Eastland asked if the nomination of Dean Hastie had been proposed by Mr. Ickes. 3-22-46

Of course, Dean Hastie is not "another Tugwell" or another anybody else. He is a man who has, by the peculiar qualities of his own mind, won high distinction in the practice and teaching of the law and rendered distinguished public service in the Federal Government. He has been an assistant solicitor for the Department of the Interior, judge of the United States District Court for the Virgin Islands, a civilian aide to the Secretary of War, and is now, at 41, dean of the Howard University Law School. Thus, he is unusually qualified, both by attainments and experience, for the important responsibility the President chose him to discharge. We trust that the Senate will not permit irrelevancies or prejudices to delay the confirmation of an appointment so manifestly appropriate. Friday

Negro Leader Gives Poll taxers Short Shrift

Special to the Daily Worker

WASHINGTON, April 1. — The poll taxers tried to have a red-baiting field day during the Senate Committee hearings on confirmation of William H. Hastie as governor of the Virgin Islands last Thursday. But one witness, Hope R. Stevens, general counsel for the National Negro Congress, set them back on their heels.

Stevens praised Hastie's character and experience as qualifying him for the job of governing the Virgin Islands with their 90 percent Negro population.

He challenged Ellender's statement that tourists of the "Caucasian race and businessmen would not be interested in the islands if a colored man was governor."

Denial of Hastie's confirmation would be a sign to the world's colonial peoples that America is embarking on a path of oppression of dark-skinned minorities.

He branded the attack on Hastie as an effort to use the red scare to obscure the issues." Only those with ulterior motives would raise these issues, he said. He also stated that opposition to Hastie could only come from "special interests" in the islands.

An unexpected by-product of the Senate Committee hearings was Ellender's attempt to red-bait the prominent Negro attorney.

"Do you know Benjamin Davis, Jr.?" he asked.

"Yes," replied Stevens. "I know him well. He is the only Negro member of the New York City Council. He is a fine man and a loyal American."

Ellender almost jumped from his seat. Tues 4-2-46

"Do you know James W. Ford and his writings concerning the right to self-determination in the black belt of the South?" Ellender asked.

"Yes. Every self-respecting Negro seeks self-determination for the Negro people in the Black Belt," replied Stevens. "In this we look for and have received the support of many fair minded white people."

Stevens then took the offensive stating it was much more democratic to defend the right of a man to be a voting as "some members of the Senate seem to want to do."

The obvious reference to the poll tax to eliminate the poll tax did not go unchallenged by Ellender. He protested that he had worked for its elimination in his own state. He added, that he did not like the method of "forcing the states from the outside" as the anti-poll tax bill would do.

"When someone's heel is on my neck, I don't much care whether it is removed by his being hit over the head or given a polite push," Stevens replied.

It wasn't quite what Sen. Ellender planned for all in all.

W. H. HASTIE INDUCTED VIRGIN ISLANDS HEAD

By Cable to The New York Times

CHARLOTTE AMALIE, Virgin Islands, May 17.—William H. Hastie was inaugurated Governor of the Virgin Islands today before thousands of natives assembled in Emancipation Garden.

The oath was administered by Herman Moore, United States Judge of the District Court of the Virgin Islands, while a contingent of United States Marines, veterans of World War II, homeguard and Boy Scouts drew up to attention.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—The nomination as Virgin Islands Governor of William H. Hastie, dean of Howard University Law School and prominent Negro lawyer and judge, ran into opposition today from poll-tax Sen. James O. Eastland (D-Miss). Friday

Eastland questioned Hastie about his associations, laying stress on his membership in the National Lawyers Guild, his interest in PAC, the National Negro Congress, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the Southern Conference for Human Welfare and the Scottsboro case.

The nomination of Hastie had received the support of CIO President Philip Murray, former Secretary of Interior Harold Ickes and present Secretary Krug.

Current hearings before the Senate Insular Affairs Committee brought out evidence of Hastie's record in the Virgin Islands from 1937 to 1937 as Federal District Judge, the first Negro to hold such a post. He would be the first Negro Governor, if confirmed, of the Islands—which have a population of 30,000, 90 percent Negro.

Sen. Owen Brewster (R-Me) questioned Hastie on his "social and political views," to which the nominee replied by outlining a program to make the Island self-sustaining, thus reducing the present federal expenditure.

Negro Named To Virgin Islands

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—(AP)—President Truman has decided to appoint Judge William Henry Hastie, Negro dean of Howard University of this city, as governor of the Virgin Islands, to succeed Charles Harwood, of New York.

The appointment will go to the senate when it reconvenes Jan. 14.

The White House did not say whether Harwood had resigned. Press Secretary Charles G. Ross simply said:

"The governor serves at the pleasure of the President."

WASHINGTON (Afro Bureau)—In a surprise move which stunned both colored leaders and political bigwigs, President Truman Saturday announced the appointment of Judge William H. Hastie as governor of the Virgin Islands. Judge Hastie, dean of the Howard University Law School, succeeds Charles Harwood, who was appointed by President Roosevelt. Mr. Hastie becomes the first member of his race to hold such an appointment. The position pays $8,000 a year. Sat.

Judge Hastie

In making the announcement Saturday, White House press representative Charles Ross failed to disclose whether Mr. Harwood was still governor or not. The appointment has to be confirmed by the Senate.

From other sources, the AFRO learned Mr. Harwood was in Miami, Fla., apparently en route to his home in New York.

In Elliott Loan Deal

Harwood has served since 1942, succeeding Gov. Lawrence Cramer. A wealthy man of 70-odd years, Harwood's name was mentioned in connection with the financial difficulties of the former president's son, Elliott.

It was charged by Westbrook Pegler that Harwood was appointed after he had extended a considerable loan to the younger Roosevelt. What political difficulties developed recently on the islands to bring about his sudden removal was not disclosed.

Judge Hastie takes into the governorship a keen knowledge of the Virgin Islands, where he has served on different missions. At one time he conducted an investigation for Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes during the regime of the late Gov. Paul Pearson. Sat.

He was later appointed judge of the Federal District court there. Resigning this post and returning to the States, he later married Miss Jean Lockhart, daughter of the island's wealthiest and most prominent merchant and land holder. 1-12-46

Resigned From War Dept.

During the war, Judge Hastie served as civilian aide to the Secretary of War until his resignation in 1943 in protest against efforts of the Army Air Forces to by-pass him on matters of policy pertaining to colored soldiers.

His resignation with its attendant blast at the Democratic administration brought him into the ill graces of party leaders like Cong. William L. Dawson, Chicago, who opposed his appointment to the Federal judgeship.

This position, with Dawson's approval was given to Irvin C. Mollison of Chicago. Dawson last week engineered the appointment of R. O'Hara Lanier as minister to Liberia. Sat.

But apparently Dawson was not consulted in the Hastie nomination as he was out of the city when the announcement was made and could not be reached for a statement.

Ickes Behind Move

Political observers here expressed the belief that Secretary Ickes was responsible for Hastie's choice, since they have been close friends since the time Judge Hastie served in the Interior Department as solicitor.

From the island side, it might also be suspected that his father-in-law threw considerable weight in Judge Hastie's direction.

Born in Knoxville, Tenn., Mr. Hastie was educated at Dunbar High School in Washington and Amherst College. He received his legal education at Harvard. He was a ranking student at Amherst and was a member of the editorial staff of the Harvard Law Review.

He entered the practice of law in the District of Columbia with the firm of Houston and Houston in 1931. From 1933 to 1937 he served as assistant solicitor of the Interior Department and from 1937 to 1939 he was judge of the District Court of the United States in the Virgin Islands.

He was promoted to dean and professor of law in the Howard Law School in 1939 and was given a leave of absence in 1940 to serve as civilian aide to the Secretary of War.

Confirm Hastie Without Delay

Memphis World, Tenn. Tues 4-2-46

It appears that the confirmation of William Hastie as governor of the Virgin Islands has been temporarily slowed up by inconsequential objections and petty jealousies. As to be expected, certain white supremacists, North and South, are searching as usual, for some grounds on which they may justify their position against his confirmation. More disconcerting than these even it has been hinted that certain influences among Negroes high in the councils of their parties are actively opposed to Hastie for the post. It seems that their chief objection to Hastie is that he is an outspoken opponent of bigotry, discrimination and injustices to his people and that he lacks a proper regard for party loyalty.

As much as we believe in party regularity and loyalty, we can see in this position no sound and sufficient argument to support the blind and flimsy excuse these Negroes advance against Mr. Hastie's confirmation. There are instances, many of them, where the broad interests of Negroes cut across and far transcend party lines. Hastie is an eminent American lawyer and a citizen of unquestioned integrity. His experience as Judge in the islands prepares him above any other person in this country to work with these people with understanding and sympathy. And it is our genuine hope that his confirmation will be speedily upheld and that no further objections will be registered by Negro leaders. Otherwise American Negroes will reserve the right to place them in the same category as they hold Bilbo, Rankin, Eastland, and the others. For Hastie has the endorsement of all liberals of this country, Negroes and whites alike. Moreover by virtue of his service to the people and because of his marriage to one of the native daughters there, he has won a deep and abiding love in the hearts of the islanders.

Job as Governor of Virgin Islands No Bed of Roses

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

By RALPH MATTHEWS

WASHINGTON — (AFRO Bureau)—When you walk out on the spacious veranda of the Blue Beard Castle Hotel flush against the mountainside and look down on the glittering tops of tin houses which form a patchwork of beauty tied together with flowers of every hue, you think that in St. Thomas, the capital of the Virgin Islands, God worked hand in hand with man to perfect an earthly paradise. Sat.

But when you stroll down the winding mountainside through the narrow streets close to where the turbulent waters of the Caribbean lash the shores, this beautiful illusion takes on a transparent aspect. 1-12-46

You begin to see the ugly bones of poverty, hunger and stark tragedy lurking behind the white stuccoed walls and on the gaunt faces of the thousands who must live and eke out a bare existence with little straw from which to build the bricks of life.

Into this parado soon will move tall, brilliant, humorless William H. Hastie, as the first member of his race to be named to such a post.

But as deceiving as the view from Bluebeard Mountain is the position he has attained. There is beauty in the honor adding as it does another rung to the ladder of achievement up which he has climbed holding one responsible position after another in the New Deal government.

But underneath, we who know the Virgin Islands best see this appointment as the worst possible thing which could have happened to him if at the age of 42 he is looking for a taste of contentment and happiness in his life.

There is no contentment in the Virgin Islands.

Fromer President Herbert Hoover put his finger on the core quite aptly when he describes the islands as America's poor house. But poverty while being the fundamental cause of discontent there as everywhere else in the world, is not the only cause of irritation.

Technically, the governor is supposed to serve "at the pleasure of the President" and can therefore be remove at a minute's notice or with no notice at all.

At the pleasure of the President means, of course, the pleasure of the Secretary of the Department of Interior and the Senate committee on Insular Affairs.

In addition to pleasing the capital bureaucrats, he must also walk a tight rope with the Municipal Council, a sort of figure-head parliament of local big wigs, whih exists more for the purpose of giving the islanders something to campaign over like a baby's rattle.

Has Little Power

The council has little power in alleviating the social or economic conditions of the islands, but it can make it terribly unpleasant for any governor who happens to get in its bad graces or fails to keep its members pacified.

Another little item which the governor will run into is the matter of caste which is deeply ingrained here as it is all of the West Indian islands with as little foundation.

One of the biggest rows ever kicked up in the Virgin Islands occured in 1930 when the United States attempted to take the census and stipulated in the forms that those with colored blood should be classified as "Negroes." All ofthe mulattoes insisted that they be listed as white.

Right there will be one of Judge Hastie's problems. A certain element will look upon his appointment as an insult to the people of the islands and would prefer the worst cracker of the south to themost enlightened person of color.

Whether the true motive of their opposition will be exposed is doubtful, since it may take other forms.

Married to Native

In this particular case, however, Judge Hastie is more fortunate than any other of the 13 million who might have possibly been named in that he happens to be married to the very charming daughter of one of the leading members of the mulatto group and indeed, the most important citizen of the islands barring none, the former Beryl Lockhart.

Her father, not only is the leading importer, bringing in everything from calico to turbine engines, but the Lockhart acres covery every foot of cultivatible land on the tiny island.

But this very blessing may prove to Hastie's disadvantage in that it will automatically identify him with the mulatto caste, whom the darker natives blame for a great deal of their economic troubles. 1-12-46

esv cdc ytdemke faftf faftf fafaf

This may be offset by the pride the islanders in general may take in having a native as the first lady and may spare Judge Hastie a fight from that quarter.

This is because one of the greatest agitations ha been for the appointment of M. DeCastros as governmental secretary, which is in the United States is eqvivalent to lieutenant governor.

Danger of Intrigue

Since the pattern in a number of instances has been for the sudden appointment of the secretary to succeed the governor as in the case of Lawrence Cramer, who was upped to the post while his superior Governor Paul Pearson was in Washington fighting the opposition of islanders in a Senate probe, there might be dager of intrigue should the agitators for a native governor be able to use DeCastros as a tool for their aims. This is just another of the little things Judge Hastie will have to watch.

While all the above has been discussing the difficulties Judge Hastie will face in the islands, there are many virtues in the appointment.

Judge Hastie will carry to the islands and unquestioned record for fighting for high principles for his race, which can easily be transferred from the circumscribed activities of the NAACP at home to the people of the islands. 1-12-46

His only handicap in this respect, will be the fact that natives are so engrossed in their intra-racial struggles that it is difficult for them to conceive of whites in the same aspect that we do here at home.

Would Rally to Bilbo

They would rally as quickly to Bilbo as they would to Wallace provided the former offered them a panacea for their immediate woes.

Judge Hastie will be able to do as governor many things he could not do as a member of the judiciary because in the latter post he could not identify himself too much with any faction or issue without projecting himself into the politics of the islands.

He will also be able to bring about a closer bond between the greater mass of colored voting strength of the States, which can be used to help the people of the islands get some of the things they need and want by identifying themselves with us in a more articulate way through their new governor.

If Judge Hastie can stand the heat, the mosquitoes, the boredom and isolation and knit all of these divergent elements into a whole, he has a great challenge and a great job.

Senate Begins Its Hearings On Hastie

By Louis Lautier
NNPA Correspondent

(Reprinted From Last Week's Late Edition)

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Mississippi's rabidly anti-Negro Senator James O. Eastland, a member of the Senate subcommittee on territories and insular affairs, served notice here Wednesday, before the subcommittee hearing on the nomination of Dean William H. Hastie as governor of the Virgin Islands, that he would closely question Mr. Hastie before the hearing was over.

In the first day's hearings, most of the testimony was highly favorable to the confirmation of Mr. Hastie. The first witness, Warren W. Gardner, solicitor of the Interior Department, read a statement on behalf of Secretary of Interior Julius A. Krug, who recommended confirmation. However, Senator Eastland made much of the fact that Secretary Krug took the oath of office only two days before the hearings began and said Eastland, "had not had time to familiarize himself with the Hastie nomination and the problems of the Virgin Islands."

Only four of the seven members of the subcommittee were on hand when the hearings began. One of these, Senator Warren G. Magnuson, of Washington, left for the West Coast a few minutes after the hearing opened but he left his proxy to be voted for a favorable report on the Hastie nomination.

Remaining to conduct the hearings were: Senator Abe Murdock, Democrat, Utah, subcommittee chairman; Senator Owen Brewster, Republican, Maine; and Senator Eastland.

The Republican Senator Brewster, while expressing personal approval of Dean Hastie's nomination, consumed considerable time in attacking the policies and practices of the Interior Department as they affect the Virgin Islands and other territorial possessions.

Chairman Murdock did not reveal, in the first day's testimony, just how he stood on the nomination of the Howard University law school dean to the first governorship to which a Negro has ever been appointed in this country.

BREWSTER GIVES OKAY

Senator Brewster made it known that, insofar as he is concerned, there is no question of Mr. Hastie's ability to be governor of the Virgin Islands since both he and Hastie are graduates of the Harvard Law School and both were editors of the Harvard Law Review.

Before that committee recessed, Mr. Hastie asked the subcommittee what line the inquiry would take so that he might prepare his statement to meet the questions in their minds.

Senator Brewster told him he was concerned only with his concept of how the United States is going to solve the economic problems of the Virgin Islands.

Eastland said he wished to question Hastie. Brewster then warned Hastie that questions would be asked him about his social and economic views.

HARWOOD DISCUSSED

Pointing out that there is a difference in the background and experience of Governor Charles Harwood, the incumbent, and Hastie, Brewster asked Gardner how he reconciled the two appointments under one administration.

"As the devil's advocate or a mean Republican," Brewster said he wanted to know whether the department had changed its viewpoint.

MOST COMPETENT?

Gardner answered that the department has consistently sought to get the ablest and most competent men it could find for its governors.

"I do not know whether at the time of his recommendation it was so considered," Gardner replied." I think it is no secret that during the course of his administration there have been moments when the department has not so considered him."

Brewster then pressed Gardner to have him state whether he considered Hastie's appointment a revolution in the department's viewpoint.

"All have been anxious to adapt our territorial administrations to the needs of dependent areas which are being administered." Gardner replied.

DIVERGENT VIEWS

Brewster then asked Gardner whether he was familiar with the divergent views of Governor Harwood and Robert M. Lovett, former secretary of the Virgin Islands government, whose pay Congress cut off to force Secretary Ickes to get rid of him.

"What I wonder," he asked, "is whether this appointment now represents the views of the department which then prevailed?" His reference was to the Lovett viewpoint.

Gardner said the department believes it important that the Virgin Islands become self-sustaining and work out their own problems.

GAINED RESPECT

Secretary Krug's statement pointed out that Hastie, while assistant solicitor of the Interior Department, worked on the Virgin Island's organic act, which Congress passed in 1936, and because of that work and the two years he spent in the Virgin Islands as federal judge, had gained him the "respect and warm affection of the islanders."

He added that the islanders were reluctant to see Hastie leave in 1939 and "now most gladly welcome him back as governor."

WARMLY REGARDED

The secretary's statement pointed out that the population of the Virgin Islands was 90 percent colored. "Confirmation of the man who is warmly regarded by those he is to govern, who has so well demonstrated his many abilities, and who is also a Negro, would be a convincing display to the world that United States officials have not merely been paying lip-service to abstract principles.

NEXT BEST

Only one other witness testified at the opening session. He was Jesus T. Pinero, resident commissioner of Puerto Rico, who agreed with the statement of the Interior Secretary that appointment and confirmation of Hastie is the next best thing to the Virgin Islanders electing their own governor.

HASTIE TAKES STAND

On Thursday morning, Dean Hastie outlined to the subcommittee his views on the reconversion of the Virgin Islands econony from a war-time to a peace time basis.

Because private capital was unwilling to invest and attempt rehabilitation of a large plantation and the sugar refinery which had been the largest employer in the Virgin Islands had failed, Hastie said, the only feasible thing was for the federal government to attempt as a public project the rehabilitation of industry.

At the time in 1930, Virgin Island economy was prostrate, Hastie said, and it was estimated that the Red Cross was feeding 25 percent of the people.

CHOICE SOUND

"My own attitude toward that sort of thing is that if there had been any substantial chance of private enterprise coming in and doing that job, the government should not have fostered it, Hastie said, "but when the choice was between putting the people on the dole and supporting the enterprise, I believe the choice was sound."

He told the subcommittee he believed the Virgin Island economy could be improved in the post war period by encouraging the people to produce food-stuffs for their own consumption in. Expected pyrotechnics developed. The chairman and Ellender and Brewster were present. Both Senators Murdock, other senators, were present. Expected fireworks did not yet developed. Hastie is making a great advance in the status of the Virgin Islands economically and politically." 1-3-18-46

Hastie's Appointment To Islands Job Seen As Honor To Race

Birmingham News 5-18-46 Birmingham Ala

BY FRANK I. WELLER

WASHINGTON, May 18 —(AP)— The Senate has confirmed Judge William Henry Hastie, 41, as first Negro governor of the Virgin Islands.

Harold L. Ickes promoted his appointment while he headed the Interior Department, which supervises the 50 islands, islets and cays which make up the Virgin group.

The islands' 25,000 residents are 69 per cent Negro and 22 per cent mixed Negro and white. Ickes said he thought it was about time they had a chief executive representing the dominant race.

The islands have been under the flags of Spain, The Netherlands, England, France and Denmark. In 1917 we paid Denmark $25,000,000 for this "poorhouse of the Atlantic" to keep Kaiser Wilhelm's U-boats from nesting there.

Judge Hastie is deeply grateful for his appointment as an honor to his race, but he isn't jumping up and down about it. For six years he's been dean of Howard University (Negro) law school here, and he likes it. Bull. 5-19-46

Hastie and his wife, Beryl, a highly educated native of the Virgin Islands, are leaders in the capital colored social set which entertains such celebrities as the famed Negro singers, Paul Robeson and Marion Anderson.

HASTIE WAS GRADUATED A. B. MAGNA CUM LAUDA from Amherst and won his LL.B. and S. J. D. at Harvard, where he was one of the few Negroes ever to serve on the law review. Age-Herald

In early New Deal days he was a protege of Felix Frankfurter, now associate justice of the U. S. Supreme Court, who then was one of F. D. R.'s "brain trusteers." Ickes hired him as an assistant solicitor in his department. At that time (1933-'37) "the Ick" was up to his elbows with minority group problems and so was the White House. Hastie helped calm the waters. In 1937 F. D. R. named him U. S. district judge for the Virgin Islands, the first Negro ever to sit on the federal bench.

Former Secretary of War Stimson persuaded Ickes to let him have Hastie as a civilian aid and adviser on Negro relations in the armed services when the war ended.

Senate Action May Restore $165,760

WASHINGTON (NNPA) — If the House's recommendation stands, William H. Hastie, governor of the Virgin Islands, will have to get along without an executive assistant, an assistant government secretary and commission of finance and a legal counsel.

In appropriating only $224,440 for the Virgin Islands for the fiscal year 1947, the House Appropriations Committee refused to allow salaries for those three positions, totaling $23,360. Sat

The entire sum, included in the Interior Department appropriation bill, reported to the House last week, is $165,980 less than the appropriation for the current fiscal year, including pay act funds to be appropriated.

It is also $165,760 less than the 1947 Budget estimates submitted to Congress by President Truman, who called for $390,200.

The appropriation for the current fiscal year was $383,050, plus $7,370 pay act funds to be appropriated.

Cut Not Final

The House action, however, is not final, but subject to approval by the Senate, which may put back into the Interior Department bill some of the funds eliminated by the House.

The amount recommended for the Virgin Islands includes $184,640 for salaries and expenses, $23,360 less than the Budget estimate. This reduction represents the disallowance for the three assistants refused.

Similar Action Recalled

In connection with the legal counsel, the committee said that it was advised that this work can be performed now by the Department of Justice and that the position of executive assistant to the governor has been unfilled for many months.

The House's action recalls that when the salaries of Federal judges were increased recently that of Judge Herman Moore in the Virgin Islands was kept at the old figure. 5-18-46

An item of $39,800 to operate the agricultural experiment station in the Virgin Islands is also included. This sum represents an increase of $3,200 over the current appropriation and is the same amount recommended by the Budget Bureau.

Oppose Aid to St. Croix

The appropriations committee eliminated an item of $142,400 for defraying the deficit of the municipal government of St. Croix, insisting that St. Croix adjust its expenses so that they will not exceed local revenues.

In addition, the committee directed attention to a letter of Nov. 19, 1945, in which the U.S. Comptroller General quoted from the 1944 report of the governor of the Virgin Islands, stating that St. Croix had invested $56,300 in War Savings Bonds.

The report quoted the Comptroller General as having stated: "The purchase of War Savings Bonds cannot be regarded as an expense to be defrayed from the Federal appropriation 'Defraying deficits in treasuries of municipal governments, Virgin Islands, 1944' either directly or indirectly."

Money Not Spent

In his letter the Comptroller pointed out that of $100,000 appropriated for defraying the deficit of St. Croix for the fiscal year 1945, there was an unexpended balance of $71,825.83 as of Aug. 31, 1945.

The committee took the unusual action in its report to express its appreciation for the services of Governor Charles E. Harwood, whom Governor Hastie succeeds. In this, it is believed it was taking a slap at former Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, who had been accused by Senator Allen J. Ellender (Dem., Miss.) of trying to remove Harwood over a period of years. 5-18-46

Hastie Backed by Ickes

Shortly before Ickes resigned, he persuaded President Truman to name Hastie to the post. The action of Mr. Truman in sending Hastie's nomination to the Senate was equivalent to an acceptance of Harwood's resignation.

Governor Harwood had been accused of not spending much time in the Virgin Islands and of not showing a very aggressive interest in getting its economy on its feet.

Sen. Murdock Terms Appointee 'Outstanding'

5-11-46 WASHINGTON.

William H. Hastie became Governor of the Virgin Islands Wednesday evening when the U.S. Senate confirmed his appointment on a voice vote, after listening to protests from only two Senators, Eastland and Ellender. By the Senate action, Hastie becomes the first non-white person to be appointed Governor of a U.S. territory. At one time he was Federal judge in the Virgin Islands.

Country 'Fortunate'

Taking the floor after listening to efforts of the two opponents to discredit Mr. Hastie, Mr. Murdock declared:

"In my opinion, this country and its Government are fortunate in having a man of the attainments and achievements of Judge Hastie to appoint to the high position of Governor of the Virgin Islands.

"We talk much about democracy. In emphatic language, in emphatic writing, and in emphatic statements, wherever Americans talk or write, we condemn mistreatment of racial minorities on any part of the globe . . .

"We have an opportunity to show to the world that Americans are sincere when they talk about equality of treatment to racial minorities in their own country." Sat 5-11-46

WILLIAM H. HASTIE

Pointing out that not only members of the colored race but distinguished members of the white race, deans of law schools and others, appeared before the subcommittee to urge Mr. Hastie's confirmation, Mr. Murdock stated that only one appeared to state any opposition.

Continuing, he said that efforts to attribute to Mr. Hastie communistic leaning because of his affiliation with the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, the National Lawyers's Guild and the National Negro Congress had proved futile.

Has Findings Recorded

Finally calling for the confirmation of the nominee, Senator Murdock asked that a brief resume of the subcommittee's findings be inserted in the Congressional Record as part of his remarks. In the statement, members of the subcommittee declared:

"We were impressed with the nominee's own statement that members of his race, regardless of political affiliation or ideology, have common problems and difficulties in this country; and that they work together in trying to solve those problems although they disagree in political thinking.

Unity Revealed

"It was also significant that Republicans and Democrats, white and colored; Protestants, Catholics, Jews — distinguished Americans representing the respected diversities which characterize our united people, by letter or personal appearance have endorsed this nomination warmly and have denied indignantly any imputation against the Americanism of the nominee . . .

"I doubt whether the entire number of communications unfavorable to this nomination exceeded 10 or 12.

"This is to be contrasted with the hundreds of endorsements already mentioned from representative persons, many of them among the most distinguished leaders in American life."

Shortly after being named for the post, which pays $8,000 a year and carries an indefinite tenure, Mr. Hastie resigned as dean of Howard University Law School.

It is understood that Mr. Hastie will leave for the Islands within 30 days or as soon after his business affairs are cleared up as possible. Sat 5-11-46

The Usual Dissenters

In his protest against the appointee, Eastland (D., Miss.) called him a "racial agitator," "a racial demogogue and a member of five communist-front organizations."

Ellender (D., La.) praised the work of the former governor of the Islands, Charles Harwood, and blamed former Secretary of the Interior Ickes for firing him. The Senate affirming vote was taken shortly after these sentiments were expressed.

The son of Mrs. Roberta Hastie of Washington, Mr. Hastie is married to the former Miss Beryl Lockhart, daughter of one of the Virgin Islands leading businessmen. The couple has one child.

The appointment, made by President Harry S. Truman, has been hailed by residents of the Islands, as well as Americans.

WASHINGTON (NNPA).—The Senate Territories and Insular Affairs subcommittee, which held extended hearings on the nomination of William H. Hastie to be governor of the Virgin Islands, voted 6 to 2 for his confirmation. Sen. Abe Murdock (Dem., Utah) chairman, announced last week. Sen. Hugh Butler (Rep., Nebr.) was not present when the vote was taken, but later was allowed to record himself in favor of the nomination. Senator Murdock said.

Favorable Action Awaited

The favorable report was sent to the full committee, of which Sen. Millard E. Tydings (Dem., Md.) is chairman.

Senator Tydings has been away from his desk ill, but he is expected back in time to call the committee quickly and that action of this committee would follow immediately.

Senators Eastland (Dem., La.) and James O. Eastland, Chairman of the full committee, expressed the hope that the committee would give its approval of Mr. Hastie at that time. Only the two Senators who to smear Mr. Hastie as being pathetic to Communism had failed to vote against Hastie in the sub-committee, Allen J. Ellender (Dem., La.) and Owen Brewster (Rep., Maine), Republicans, were expected to vote against the nominee.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Roberta Hastie, mother of the Virgin Islands governor-designate, is reported seriously ill at her home, 453 Irving St., N.W. The illness is the result of the strain she underwent while attending the hearings.

Red Charges Futile

He asserted efforts of opponents to smear Mr. Hastie as being pro-Communist failed. He was also joined in the vote for a favorable report by Senators Warren G. Magnuson, Democrat, of Washington, Frank P. Briggs of Missouri, Democrat, and Warren R. Austin of Vermont. 4-27-46

Chicago, Ill

WASHINGTON — William H. Hastie will have to carry out his duties as new governor of the Virgin Islands on a slashed budget, some $165,000 less than that of the current fiscal year.

The House Appropriations' Committee this week alloted the Virgin Islands $224,440 for the fiscal year, 1947, $165,760 less than estimates in President Truman's Budget recommendations.

As a result, the new Virgin Islands' chief will be without an executive assistant, an assistant government secretary and commissioner of finance, and a legal counsel. Sat. 5-18-46

Senate May Restore Funds

The Senate, however, may restore to the Interior Department bill some of the funds for the Islands eliminated by the House.

The House committee said it had been advised that the Department of Justice could perform the work of a legal counsel, and that the position of executive assistant to the governor had been unfilled for many months.

An item of $142,000 for defraying the deficit of the municipal government of St. Croix was eliminated by the appropriations' committee. It insists that the municipal government of St. Croix adjust its expenses so that they will not exceed local revenues.

The Virgin Island slice of the Interior Department appropriation includes $18,640 for salaries and expenses, which is $23,360 less than the budget estimate.

An item of $39,800 for the operation of the agricultural experiment station in the Virgin Islands is also included in the appropriation. This represents an increase of $3,200 over the sum granted for this purpose for the current fiscal year and is the same amount recommended by the Budget Bureau.

In reporting the Interior Department supply bill, the committee directed attention to a letter of Nov. 19, 1945, in which the Comptroller General of the United States quoted from the annual report of the governor of the Virgin Islands for the fiscal year 1944, stating that the municipality of St. Croix had invested $56,300 in War Savings bonds. Sat. 5-18-46

War Bond Sales

The report quoted the Comptroller General as having stated: "It would therefore appear that if the municipality of St. Croix invested $56,300 in War Savings bonds, as stated, either unreported revenues might have been used or other funds temporarily borrowed and later repaid.

"In either event the purchase of War Savings bonds for the municipality of St. Croix cannot be regarded as an expense to be defraved from the federal appropriation 'Defraying deficits in treasuries of municipal governments, Virgin Islands, 1944' either directly or in directly."

The committee took the unusual action in its report to express its appreciation for the services of Gov. Charles E. Harwood, whom Governor Hastie succeeds. In this, it is believed it was taking a slap at former Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, who persuaded President Truman to name Hastie to the post.

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico.—The inaugural party on their way to install William H. Hastie as governor of the Virgin Islands, stopped over here and was feted by the Puerto Rican government Thursday.

Flying with the new governor were his wife, Mrs. Beryl Lockhart Hastie, a native of the Virgin Islands, their 16-month-old daughter, Karen, and Secretary of the Interior J. A. Krug.

The Hastie party, flying in an Army Transport Command four-motored plane, landed at the San Juan airfield before dawn Thursday after a smooth nine-hour flight from Washington. The plane was met by Governor Rex Tugwell of Puerto Rico, and a host of insular officials.

After a few hours' sleep at the governor's palace, La Fortaleza, the Hastie party was taken on an airplane tour of Puerto Rico. Twenty Puerto Rican officials and newspapermen joined in the tour which was made in three ATC planes brought up from Panama for the trip.

Stopping at Arecibo, Governor Hastie and Secretary Krug were shown the famous Cambalache sugar mills and the proportional profit farms which surround it. Arriving at the mountain resort, El Yunque, at noon, the party was honored with a luncheon tendered by members of the island legislature. There Secretary Krug declared in a brief speech that he would support the Puerto Ricans if they should choose to seek independence. 5-25-46

Thursday evening the Hasties were guests of the governor at an elaborate reception at the governor's palace. Friday morning Governor Hastie left Puerto Rico by plane for St. Thomas, Virgin Islands.

Besides Secretary Krug, the following persons accompanied the Hastie party: J. T. Pinero, resident commissioner of Puerto Rico; Carlton Skinner, Interior department; Joel Wolsohn, special assistant to Mr. Krug; Arthur Goldschmidt, Interior department; Felix Cohen, Interior department; Irwin Silverman, Interior department; Mason Barr, Interior department; Williard Barber, State department; Creekmore Fath, Secretary Krug's office; Peter Edson of the National Enterprise Association; Louis Martin and Scott Tyler of the NNPA.

Tentative Date For Inauguration Set Following Senate OK

WASHINGTON — Judge William H. Hastie, confirmed by the United States Senate May 1, will take the oath of office as governor of the Virgin Islands around May 17.

Under-Secretary of Interior Oscar W. Chapman stated that the inaugural date has been set tentatively, pending the approval of the Governor-elect.

Julius A. Krug, Secretary of Interior, will be one of the speakers at the inaugural ceremony, marking his first trip to any of the U. S. possessions since taking over the office formerly held by Harold L. Ickes.

Hastie's approval came on a voice vote over the protests of Senators Ellender (D., La.), and Eastland (D., Miss.), who consistently have opposed the nomination. Sat. 5-11-46

Lauds Hastie

Senator Murdock (D., Utah), who served as chairman of the subcommittee hearing testimony on Judge Hastie's nomination, refuted the demagogury of Ellender and company. Senator Murdock said, "In my opinion this country and its government are fortunate in having a man of the attainments and the achievements of Judge Hastie to appoint to the high position of Governor of the Virgin Islands. We talk much about democracy.

"Mr. President, this nominee is representative, and a very splendid and outstanding representative of the Negro race.

"We have an opportunity to show to the world that Americans are sincere when they talk about equality and treatment to racial minorities in their own country. The population of the Virgin Islands is 90 per cent colored. The business of the Virgin Islands is largely owned by colored people. Here is an opportunity for us to recognize the outstanding ability and patriotism of a member of the Negro race." Sat. 5-11-46

The subcommittee of which Senator Murdock was chairman passed Hastie's nomination by a vote of 6 to 2, with only Eastland and Ellender dissenting. In the full Territories and Insular Affairs Committee, the subcommittee's favorable action was upheld by a vote of 11 to 2, with Eastland and Ellender still voting no.

Hastie told the Defender, "naeturally, I am gratified." He relinquished his post as Dean of the Howard University Law School to take the governorship of the Virgin Islands."

NEW GOVERNOR — William Henry Hastie, new governor of the Virgin Islands, speaks at his inauguration at Charlotte Amalie, St. Thomas. He is the first negro to govern a territory of the United States.

Hastie Confirmed At Last

Atlanta Daily World, Atlanta, Ga.

At long last the political chicanery and racial maneuvering has been cast aside and William H. Hastie, Truman's nominee for Governor of the Virgin Islands, has been confirmed. The favorable action by the Senate Committee was long overdue.

Now that the smoke in connection with his confirmation has been cleared, we may be permitted to say that Mr. Hastie's confirmation was rather strangely opposed by some of our Negro leaders who, we believe, will find it difficult to explain the basis for their objection, unless they come out and say what is in most peoples' minds—that they had nothing against him except the simple sin of not being a strictly and blindly party man.

As much as we believe in and espouse partisanship we are indeed unable to see how a Negro leader can render effective leadership to his people who fails to see how race should not be placed in front of all other considerations. There is absolutely no acceptable argument a Negro can offer for such partisan action against the larger interests of race. Sun. 5-12-46

Hastie made an eminently successful judge in the Islands. He also made a great inroad to the hearts and affections of its people. He is married to one of its Islanders. And he is by training and temperament, the best qualified lawyer for such a post. Liberal American jurists and statesmen have given high endorsement to his nomination.

This paper extends to Governor Hastie and to his family genuine good wishes for a long and successful career in his new field.

WASHINGTON

The cocksure, jaunty manner of Sen. James O. Eastland (Dem., Miss.) faded into an expression of chagrin Thursday as William H. Hastie, speaking slowly and calmly, gave testimony before the Senate Territories and Insular Affairs subcommittee on his fitness to hold the post as Virgin Islands' governor.

Sen. Eastland, aided by Sen. Owen Brewster (Rep., Maine), had launched into a lengthy and grueling examination of Mr. Hastie's social and economic views. Room 335 of the Senate Office Building was filled when Mr. Hastie took the stand.

The hearings which got under way Wednesday and continued Thursday, were adjourned Thursday afternoon until the return to Washington of Sen. Abe Murdock (Dem., Utah), committee chairman.

The confident expression wilted from Sen. Eastland's face after his lengthy questioning failed to develop any damaging evidence against the nominee.

Hides Real Motive

The Mississippi senator's opposition to Mr. Hastie, observers said, was really based on racial grounds, although his questioning hinged on an implication that the former Virgin Islands judge had been engaged in "subversive activity."

Sen. Brewster, who also sharply questioned Mr. Hastie, was apparently motivated by political reasons. Earlier, the Maine Republican had warned Mr. Hastie that he would be examined thoroughly about his social and economic views.

Maybe it was just a coincidence but all the Senators wore deep burgundy ties. Present when Mr Hastie took the stand, besides Sens. Eastland and Brewster, were Sens. Murdock and Allen J. Ellender (Dem., La.).

"What was your viewpoint about America's course in foreign policies before Pearl Harbor?" Eastland asked.

Hastie replied that he did everything he could to support the program and that he "certainly would not have accepted the job as civilian aide to the Secretary of War if I didn't." He added that he had hoped America would stay out of the war. 3-30-46

Goes Back to 1940

Eastland, apparently not satisfied with the answer, asked if Mr. Hastie had been a speaker at "that meeting in May of 1940 in which the late President Roosevelt's policies were criticized."

The nominee smiled and said that he could not recall such a meeting, but that if his memory served him well, there were a lot of people critical of Mr. Roosevelt's policies at that time.

Taking the line obviously suggested by his Mississippi colleague, Cong. John Rankin, ranking member of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, Sen. Eastland asked.

"Are you a member of the Committee to Abolish Peonage?"

Hastie said he recalled no activities on his part with any committee to abolish peonage, affiliated with the International Labor Defense, but that he had long been interested in the fight against peonage.

Answers in Affirmative

"Are you a member of the National Lawyers' Guild?" persisted Sen. Eastland.

Hastie's reply was that he was vice president of the national organization.

"Are you connected with the Washington Committee on Democratic Action??"

"No," replied Mr. Hastie, adding that he had cooperated with the organization.

Eastland continued his line of questioning, seeking to determine whether or not the nominee was a member of the National Negro Congress, the Southern Conference for Human Welfare (a favorite target for Sen. Bilbo), the CIO Political Action Committee, the New Negro Alliance, the NAACP, and the Constitutional Liberties Committee. 3-30-46

In response to this bombardment of questions flung by the Mississippian, Hastie testified:

Although he is a resident of voteless District of Columbia, he was a member of the Political Action Committee.

He did not recall sponsoring a conference on constitutional liberties in Washington in June, 1940.

He was a member of the National Negro Congress before he went to the Virgin Islands as a federal judge in 1937, but not since his return in 1939.

He was associated with the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

Founder of Negro Alliance

He was one of the founders of the New Negro Alliance, which sought employment for colored persons in local stores which had large colored patronage and won a Supreme Court decision sustaining its right to picket Safeway Grocery Stores.

He did not recall the Washington Scottsboro Committee or speaking under its auspices at Metropolitan Baptist Church on April 6, 1936, but was deeply interested in the Scottsboro case as a member of the legal committee of the NAACP.

Eastland then wanted to know if Mr. Hastie had taken part in a demonstration against the blood bank. The nominee, turning toward the Mississippian, looked him straight in the eye and replied: "I most certainly did."

Judge Hastie, in reply to Sen. Eastland's question as to what per cent of the Virgin Islands' population is colored, roughly estimated that about 90 per cent was, and that the majority of the property in St. Thomas was owned by colored persons.

Wife Studies Senators

Throughout the hearings, Mrs. Hastie, who was attired simply in a brown and yellow dress, hardly spoke or changed the expression on her face. She seemed to be making a deep study of the four Senators who were taking her husband through the two-hour grilling.

After the hearings recessed, she said that she was very proud of the showing her husband had made, and was sure everything would be all right.

Mr. Hastie's mother was also present and said: "They tried to catch my boy napping, but they didn't. I have always been proud of my son, but today is one that will stand out forever as a memorable one." 3-30-46

Earlier in his testimony Hastie outlined to the subcommittee his views for reconversion of the Virgin Islands economy from a wartime to a peace basis.

Defends Government Action

Because private capital was unwilling to invest and attempt rehabilitation of a large plantation and sugar refinery, which had been the largest employer of labor in the islands and had failed, Hastie said, the only feasible thing was for the Federal Government to undertake as a public project the rehabilitation of the industry.

At the time, in 1930, Virgin Islands economy was prostrate, Hastie said, and it was estimated that the Red Cross was feeding about 25 per cent of the population.

"If there had been any substantial chance of private enterprise coming in and doing that job, the Government should not have touched it," Hastie said, "but when the choice was between putting the people on a dole and supporting this enterprise as a public project, I believe the choice was sound."

He told the subcommittee he believes the Virgin Islands economy can be improved in the postwar period by encouraging the people to produce foodstuffs for their own consumption and by developing a tourist trade and handicraft or needle work.

Testifies Under Oath

At the suggestion of Sen. Brewster, Hastie was sworn when he began his testimony.

Tracing his background and childhood impressions to indicate his attitudes, Hastie told the subcommittee that his paternal great grandmother was a slave, but purchased her freedom and that of her son. His father, he said, was a school teacher in Knoxville Tenn., and later a Government clerk in Washington.

On his maternal side, his mother's older brothers, small independent business men, were residents of Alabama during the Reconstruction Era.

"They maintained their position through that unhappy period when they literally had to fight—I mean fight with guns—to maintain themselves, to protect the Yankee school teachers who had come down to educate their children," Hastie said. 3-30-46

From his ancestors, Hastie said, there was instilled in him a great belief in "self-reliance, industry and courage which can make for success in the American scene."

Queried About Resignation

"Under what circumstances did you terminate your services as civilian aide?" asked Sen. Brewster.

At the suggestion of Sen. Brewster, Hastie read the statement he made at the time of his resignation. In it he charged the Army Air Forces with having exercised against its colored personnel "reactionary policies and discriminatory practices.

"I should say in all fairness, in the period since my resignation there have been a number of most encouraging and helpful developments" in the Air Forces, he added.

"I assume that this statement was a culmination of strong representations by you in the Department before you resigned?" Sen. Brewster asked.

"That is correct," Hastie replied.

Sen. Brewster then asked Hastie whether former Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, the then Undersecretary of War, now Secretary Robert Patterson, and Gen. George C. Marshall, then Army Chief of Staff, were fully apprised of the situation.

Officials Did Not Know

Hastie replied that because of the heavy responsibilities of these officials during the war period "they could not give personal attention to many matters which I have no doubt they would wish to do." He added that he has always thought that "the basic attitudes of former Secretary Stimson, Judge Patterson and Gen. Marshall were not reflected in Army practices."

"To what extent had you discussed these matters with any or all of them and what was their reaction?" asked Sen. Allen J. Ellender, (Dem., La.).

"I would say a sympathetic interest," Hastie replied. He added that "even then despite the furor over the Air Forces not being autonomous, my experience was that in practice the Air Forces were pretty nearly autonomous; at least in matters in which I was interested they went their merry way."

Sen. Ellender asked Hastie whether he had "ever had it out" with Mr. Stimson. 3-30-46

Recalls Disagreement

"Yes," replied Hastie. "I remember one or two occasions when we specifically took up the Air Forces problem. On one basic thing there was disagreement between me and both Secretary Stimson and Judge Patterson, and that was the feasibility or desirability of unsegregated training and organization in the Air Forces."

"They said it was not feasible?" Sen. Ellender asked.

"Yes," replied Hastie.

Only four members of the seven-member subcommittee were present Wednesday morning. Besides the chairman, they were Sens. James O. Eastland (Dem., Miss.) Warren G. Magnuson (Dem., Wash.) and Owen Brewster (Rep., Maine).

Before the hearing was very many minutes old, Senator Magnuson took his leave but left his proxy to be voted for a favorable report on Hastie's nomination. He said he was leaving for the Pacific coast.

Ex-Harvard Men

Senator Brewster made it known that insofar as he is concerned there is no question of Hastie's ability to be governor of the Virgin Islands since both he and Hastie are graduates of the Harvard Law School and both were editors of the Harvard Law Review.

"Of what I have heard and learned of the record of Judge Hastie," said Senator Brewster, "I do not think his ability can be challenged, certainly not by a fellow-Harvard man."

Gardner Favors Hastie

The first witness called was Warren W. Gardner, solicitor of the Interior Department, who read a statement in behalf of Secretary of the Interior Julius A. Krug.

Mr. Krug had taken the oath of office only two days before the hearings began, and Senator Eastland sought to make much of the fact that he had not had time to familiarize himself with the Hastie nomination and the problems of the Virgin Islands.

Mr. Gardner admitted that the statement had been originally prepared by Erwin Silverman, acting director of the Interior's division of territories, and that he had revised it and the Secretary approved it. 3-30-46

"This nomination was recommended by Secretary Ickes, was it not?" Eastland asked.

Senator Brewster then asked if Hastie's predecessors, and Mr. Gardner replied he believed it was.

Brewster then pressed the witness while assistant solicitor of the Interior Department worked closely with the governors of all territorial areas will welcome the opportunity to cooperate with Dean Hastie," it said.

"Confirmation of the man who is warmly regarded by those who has so well demonstrated his many abilities, and of his work on the Interior, which is also a colored man would come in the Virgin Islands as well that United States officials have not merely been paying lip-service to abstract principles," the statement declared.

Appointment Praised

"The President could not have done a man more likely to provide a ness to have him state whether he considered the appointment of Hastie a revolution in the department's viewpoint.

"All have been anxious to adapt our territorial administrations to the needs of dependent areas which are being administered," Gardner replied.

Popular with People

The prepared statement accredited to Secretary Krug, which Mr. Gardner read, pointed out that Hastie was appointed by Ickes, who had been Department of the Interior, which Mr. Gardner disclosed that Secretary Krug had talked over the nomination with Interior officials and had met Hastie on Tuesday and had been very much impressed by him. 3-30-46

Only one other witness testified reluctant to see Hastie leave in "now most gladly welcome him back as governor."

at the opening session. He was Jesus T. Pinero, resident commissioner of Puerto Rico, who agreed with the statement of the Secretary of the Interior that the appointment and confirmation of Hastie is the next best thing to the Virgin Islanders electing their own governor.

Hastie Tilts With Dixie Demagogues At Hearing On Virgin Islands Post

Chicago Defender

Chicago, Ill.

By VENICE T. SPRAGGS
(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON — Senator Eastland (D., Miss.) at long last met his match in Judge William H. Hastie, Governor-nominee for the Virgin Islands, appearing this week before the Senate Territorial and Insular Affairs sub-committee.

The brilliancy of the testimony offered by the young Howard University law dean in support of his nomination for the high Virgin Island post so completely floored the Mississippi race-baiter, that when he was prodded by Senator Brewster, (R., Maine) to bring into the open the red-herrings which he was saving up to fling into Judge Hastie's face, his efforts fell flatter than a pancake. Even the members of the sub-committee on which he sat, including Chairman Murdock, (D., Utah) swung to Hastie's side, leaving Eastland sulking.

Although the hearings have been recessed pending a call from the chairman of the sub-committee, in many quarters it is believed that Hastie has proved so conclusively his fitness for the post to which President Truman has nominated him, further consideration will not be necessary.

Dixie Displeased

This is the story. When President Truman last December nominated Hastie for the Governorship of the Virgin Islands, it meant the ousting of the then Governor Charles Harwood, white, of New York, whose regime had not set too well on the stomach of the Virgin Islanders, nor had his administration been too satisfactory to the Department of the Interior under whose jurisdiction the government of the islands fall.

Southerners in the Senate were not pleased with having a Negro replace a white man, moreover, many of them were still smoldering under the shock of having Judge Hastie resign from his post in the War Department as civilian aide to the Secretary of War in protest of the continued "reactionary and discriminatory policy" pursued by the Army Air Forces. They therefore demanded public hearing on the President's choice.

They knew that former Secretary of the Interior, Harold Ickes was strong for Hastie in the Virgin Island spot, having full knowledge of his outstanding record of performance and accomplishment as assistant solicitor in the Department of the Interior, 1934-1937, and of his later record as Judge of the District Court in the Virgin Islands from 1937-1939.

Over 200 Attend

Sat

Chairman of the Senate Territorial and Insular Affairs Committee, Sen. Millard Tydings, (D., Md.), appointed a sub-committee headed by Senator Murdock to consider the nomination. Other members on the sub-committee were: Eastland, Briggs (D., Mo.), Magnuson (D., Wash.), Ellender, (D., La.), and Butler, (R., Neb.).

The first surprise for the sub-committee came in the form of the overwhelming attendance which the hearings attracted. More than 200 persons were present.

Sharing equal spotlight as a surprise was the unexpected warm, and praiseworthy testimony submitted in support of Hastie's nomination by the newly appointed Secretary of the Interior, Julius A. Krug, which was read by W. W. Gardner, an interior solicitor. Secretary Krug expressed his regret at not being able to testify in person.

It was here that Eastland made his first effort to confuse the issues by demanding to know who wrote Secretary Krug's statement. Mr. Gardner explained that as in all other offices, the statement was prepared by an assistant, in this case Erwin Silverman, acting director of the territories division of the Interior Department. He added that he had reviewed the statement. The Secretary himself had studied it very carefully before he endorsed it, and had called Judge Hastie in for a conference.

Secretary Krug in his statement said, "I could hardly have chosen a better occasion to make my first appearance as Secretary of the Interior before a Congressional Committee than one at which I might have the opportunity of endorsing the nomination of William Hastie as Governor of the Virgin Islands."

Reviewing the many complex problems of the islands in the light of Hastie's record of public office, Secretary Krug stated unequivocally, "The confirmation of a man who is warmly regarded by those he is to govern, who has so well demonstrated his many abilities, and who is also a Negro would be a convincing display to the world that United States officials have not merely been paying lip service to abstract principles."

Senator Brewster took the lead in questioning Judge Hastie's ability to bring the Virgin Islands out of the economic straits in which they find themselves. Taking strong issue with the Administration's handling of the Islands up to now, which he said had been operated on the New Deal theory of "pour out enough money, and it will get down through to the people somehow." Brewster said his concern was to determine Hastie's fitness for getting this "poor house of the Caribbean on its feet."

"Color Not Important"

He made clear that the color of the man's skin was not involved as far as he was concerned, adding, in considering a position of this character, "Too much weight could not be attached!" He said, "So far as I have heard of Judge Hastie, I don't think his ability, generally, can be questioned."

It was Brewster's questioning which gave Judge Hastie his best opportunity to demonstrate his competence for the post.

He reviewed briefly his educational background which included graduation from Amherst College as an honor student, and his subsequent graduation from the Harvard Law School.

In reciting his previous post of employment, he was questioned closely by both Senators Ellender and Brewster as to why he resigned from the War Department.

He testified that the attitude of the big three, Stimson, Army Chief of Staff Marshall, and then Under-Secretary of War Patterson was one of "sympathetic interest." He added, "I feel that the Army Air Force did pursue their own quasi-independent policy in the War Department, and were allowed to go their merry way unhampered."

Outlines Plans

Sat 3-30-46

Hastie delineated to the satisfaction of Senator Brewster his plans for revitalizing the economic life of the islands. He proposed the raising of foodstuffs for local consumption and the development of some crops for exportation. He recommended the expansion of the handicraft industry, and the development of resorts for tourist trade.

He specifically reminded the sub-committee that in spite of the low economic ebb in the islands, the Virgin Islands had not been a losing proposition to the United States.

Hastie said, if confirmed, he would welcome developments in the islands by private capital. This he said would relieve the Virgin Island Company, government operated, from responsibility in the islands. The Virgin Islands Company was set up to rehabilitate the islands' industries when the economics of the islands reached disaster proportion in 1930.

The Virgin Islands have never benefited from taxes levied on rum produced there as has the island of Puerto Rico. Brewster proposed, and Hastie agreed, it would be fair to give the Virgin Islands the same benefits given to other territories.

Favors Labor Importation

On the matter of utilizing in the United States labor found surplus to the need down in the Islands, Hastie had this to say. He would favor the importation of Virgin Islanders to relieve work shortages in the United States over the importation of British West Indians. However, he made clear, he was opposed to forcing any surplus workers to America unless they chose, and he was equally opposed to any agreement whereby they would be forced to return to the Islands against their free will.

He specifically reminded that as American citizens, they were within their Constitutional rights to remain in the United States, once they came here, or remain in the islands if they did not choose to come. Hastie stated that he favored economic cooperation between the islands in the Caribbean, but pointed out that international trade barriers would to some extent prove restrictive.

Brewster told Hastie there had been some serious question about "your personal ideologies" aired in the papers. He said that he had not been concerned about them, but apparently there were those who were.

Eastland Quiz

Sat 3-30-46

At this point, Senator Eastland gingerly began his "where were you on the night of" line of questioning. But by this time, his line was so completely out of character, the audience began snickering and had to be brought to order by the chairman.

Hastie told Eastland he had no party affiliation, but during the last campaign was a member of the National Citizens' Political Action Committee. On the matter of the form of government we enjoy in the United States he said, "I certainly believe that our form of civilian government is the best that the human mind has so far been able to devise." He expressed the hope that there will be improvements in this government as time goes by, adding, "I think the Constitution of the United States is one of the great landmarks in human progress."

Eastland queried him about his affiliation with the Abolish Peonage Committee, the National Lawyers Guild, the Washington Committee for Democratic Action, the New Negro Alliance, the National Negro Congress, Conference on Constitutional Liberties, the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, the Washington Scottsboro Defense Committee, his participation in a protest demonstration against the Red Cross' segregated blood bank, and finally if he had seen eye to eye with the late President Roosevelt's foreign policy.

Hastie went straight down the line, scarcely batting an eye as he answered Eastland firmly "yes," or equally firmly, "no."

Hastie Unabashed

He said he had no recollection of any affiliation with the Abolish Peonage Committee, but had been associated with a Mr. Huff of Chicago, who was fighting against laws involving peonage. He confirmed, "I am one of the national vice-presidents of the National Lawyers Guild," stating that he had joined the Guild in the mid 30's and had been a member continuously since.

On the question of his membership in the Washington Committee for Democratic Action, he stated, "I have constantly cooperated with this group in certain of its activities."

Hastie stated he did not recall sponsoring in 1940 a call to a Conference on Constitutional Liberties, but said there had been a time when he was member of the National Negro Congress. He explained, "I have not been a member since before I went to the Virgin Islands in 1935 or 1936." He admitted his chairmanship of the Washington Chapter of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, and said he was one of the founders of the New Negro Alliance.

While he did not recall participating on a program sponsored by the Washington Scottsboro Defense Council held on Thursday, April 16, 1936, at the Metropolitan Church, he attested his extreme interest in the Scottsboro case and of the efforts he made in defense of the defendents in the case. He told Eastland he participated in a demonstration against the Red Cross' segregated blood bank held under the auspices of the Local Branch NAACP.

FDR Foreign Policy

When Eastland probed Hastie's viewpoint on President Roosevelt's foreign policy, Chairman Murdock came to Hastie's defense stating there were many Senators, including Senator Eastland, who did not see eye to eye with the President on his foreign policy. Whereupon, Brewster added that up to December, 1941, President Roosevelt himself was assuring the American people there sons would not participate in any foreign wars.

On this score, Hastie testified that he had a very strong hope that we would stay out of war, but that he recognized that there were certain developments which would make this impossible.

He testified, "With utmost faith and fidelity I did my utmost to support the President's preparedness program while employed as civilian aide to the Secretary of War."

Sat 3-30-46

On hand at the hearings were representatives of a large number of national and local organizations prepared to give testimony supporting Judge Hastie, if hearings are resumed. Among these are Ashley L. Totten, president, and Julius A. Thomas, vice president of the American Virgin Islands Civic Association, New York.

Landed-Gentry Opposition

Jesus T. Pinero, Resident Commissioner of Puerto Rico in the United States Congress has placed his stamp of approval on President Truman's choice of a new Governor for the Virgin Islands.

As far as has been determined, only Leslie Hunt, a former FBI agent, and later secretary-treasurer of the Virgin Island Company, who is now connected with a private rum company here in America has indicated he will speak for the opposition on Judge Hastie's appointment. Hunt is said to be representing a small landed-gentry group of whites in St. Croix for whom the nomination of Hastie is complete anathema.

45c 1946 Virgin Islands (William Henry Hastie)

Hastie Appointment Fought by Polltaxers

WASHINGTON, D. C.—If Sen. James O. Eastland, poll-tax Mississippian and one of the Tory stalwarts of the recent filibuster against a permanent FEPC, expected Dean William H. Hastie of Howard University Law School to quail before his inquisition last week, he was disappointed. 3-30-46

Dean Hastie, whose nomination as Governor of the Virgin Islands was under consideration by the Insular Affairs Committee, already had been questioned almost two hours when Sen. Eastland took over the questioning, but remained urbane and poised throughout Sen. Eastland's crude attack.

Armed with a sheaf of records, Sen. Eastland questioned him about his "affiliations." At one point, when Dean Hastie, asked if he remembered making any speeches covered by the metropolitan police, asked what the approximate year was the Senator had in mind, Sen. Eastland replied, "Well,

ASKED ABOUT SCOTTSBORO

"On Thursday, April 16, 1936, at 8:30 pm, in the Metropolitan Baptist Church," thundered Sen. Eastland, had not the witness spoken here on the Scottsboro case?

"I may have. I have no recollection," said Dean Hastie. "I will say this, I was extraordinarily interested in that case."

Another poll-taxer, Sen. Allen J. Ellender, of Louisiana, who questioned him closely about his resignation as civilian aide to the Secretary of War, regarded the handsome and aristocratic features of the jurist curiously throughout.

Sen. Ellender, another filibusterer against FEPC and the chief foe of the 65-cent minimum wage bill in the Senate Labor and Education Committee, at least addressed him as "Judge," but Sen. Eastland did not bother with such niceties.

Hastie read into the record his letter of resignation to the War Department, saying he was resigning in protest against "reactionary policies and discriminatory practices." 3-30-46

Sen. Ralph O. Brewster (R., Me.), who subjected him to lengthy questioning on his social and political and "ideological" position, despite the Senator's reference to the fact they were fellow-Harvard Law School graduates, tried to turn Hastie's testimony into an attack on Secretary of War Patterson.

POLL TAXERS PERPLEXED

Hastie at every point was too skillful for his inquisitionists, however. He pointed out that Patterson "graciously" had urged him to stay longer after his first decision to quit, and that he agreed, until it was apparent he could do more to fight jimcro in the Army from the outside than within.

Sen. Abe Murdock (D., Utah), chairman, did little or nothing to restrain the poll-taxers from going on a fishing expedition, but he did remind Sen. Brewster that the hearing was not meant to put on trial Governor Rexford Guy Tugwell of Puerto Rico. Sen. Brewster admitted it, but proceeded blithely with his line of questioning.

Dean Hastie assured the Senators he would be delighted if private industry would come into the Virgin Islands, but pointed out that after the biggest employer, went bankrupt in 1930, this government was faced with providing a dole or making the Virgin Islands Company a government project. As it was, the Red Cross then was feeding 25 per cent of the people, he said.

He told the committee that by encouraging diversified agriculture and developing a tourist trade and native handiwork and crafts, the economy could be greatly bettered.

And he reminded his hearers that despite the poverty of the Islands they had brought in $47 million in revenue from rum in 10 years, a million more than has been spent on them.

Hastie Wouldn't Play Politics

WASHINGTON (ANP)—Senate confirmation of the recent Truman appointment of William H. Hastie as governor of the Virgin Islands, was delayed in being approved this week by lack of political support behind the former Virgin Islands judge. Hastie, now dean of the Howard University law school and former civilian aide to the Secretary of War, has consistently refused to play politics, and is known as an independent.

A sub-committee of the Senate has held two hearings on the Hastie appointment, at one of which Secretary of Interior Krug called Hastie a "distinguished American" and an "ideal candidate." Sen. Millard Tydings, chairman of the investigating committee, is said to oppose the nomination solely on the grounds that Hastie was backed by the liberal, Harold Ickes.

When a member of the House Un-American Activities Committee later was asked if their files were open to any member of Congress, he said he did not know, but that there was no master index and that it would take a good deal of searching to obtain such a file on an individual. He added that "they must have been photostats as we don't let our original files out."

WITCH HUNT STARTED

Highlight of the questioning was when Sen. Eastland, having failed to upset Dean Hastie in the slightest and apparently determined to ferret out something "subversive" before the committee adjourned until next week, demanded: "Now in May, 1944, did you attend a meeting against segregation of blood in blood banks?"

"I did, sir," said Dean Hastie. As head of the legal committee of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People he worked very actively against segregation, he added.

Similarly, Dean Hastie admitted other charges of Sen. Eastland and proudly added to them. Was he a member of the National Lawyers Guild? Yes, he was a vice president of the Guild, "and still am." Was he a member of the Washington Committee for Democratic Action? "No, I am not a member, but I certainly have cooperated with it." 3-30-46

"A charge has been made by a Congressional committee that the Abolish Peonage Committee is an arm of the International Labor Defense and that in 1940 you were a member of it," Sen. Eastland said.

Dean Hastie couldn't recall the name of the committee but said he had made representations frequently to the Department of Justice against peonage and could have acted for the group.

Rapidly, he "admitted" membership in the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, former membership in the National Negro Congress and other organizations. Asked about the New Negro Alliance, he said he was one of its founders.

Fight for Hastie

(Editorial)

LET THE PEOPLE'S organizations and people's leaders throughout the country swing quickly into the fight for Senate confirmation of Judge William H. Hastie as Governor of the Virgin Islands.

None can question the superlative qualifications of Judge Hastie for the post to which he was nominated by President Truman. None can question the eagerness of the Virgin Islanders (who know him well) to have Judge Hastie as their Governor.

Then why all the rumpus over his confirmation? Simply this: 3-30-46

- Hastie is a Negro.
- Hastie is an able and courageous fighter for the democratic rights of all people.
- Hastie was sponsored by that honorable fighter-for-democracy, Harold Ickes.

This is why the poll-taxers for whom Mississippi's Eastland speaks, ably assisted by the reactionary Tydings from Maryland, are now doing all in their power to keep Judge Hastie out of a Federal post higher than any Negro ever held. And these are precisely the reasons we must act quickly to assure that Hastie's appointment is confirmed.

Wire President Truman and both your Senators today. Demand the immediate confirmation of Judge Hastie as Governor of the Virgin Islands. 3-30-46

This issue concerns not only the people of the Virgin Islands and the Negro people of America; it is of vital concern to progressive citizens throughout our country. Let us throw everything we have into the fight for Senate confirmation of Judge Hastie as Governor of the Virgin Islands.

it's in the file here." The audience, which completely filled the small room, burst into laughter.

See Bilbo Plot To Stop Hastie

Chicago Defender Chicago, Ill.

By VENICE T. SPRAGGS
(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON—The "Communist" cry raised at Senate hearings considering Judge William H. Hastie as Virgin Islands governor is a red herring dragged in to hide the real issue—race. Sat 4-6-46

This week Senator Ellender (D., La.) dropped all pretense and demanded to know whether or not tourist trade to the islands would suffer under a Negro governor.

Senator Ellender has long been associated with Senator Theodore "The Man" Bilbo of Mississippi, notorious anti-Negro and red-baiter. Recently Ellender refused to allow a Negro member of a delegation calling upon him in Louisiana to speak. He is one of the most bitter demagogues in the Dixie bloc in Congress.

Up until now, the racial issue has been obscured by charges that Judge Hastie has affiliations with so-called Communist front organizations. Moreover, "grave doubts" have been raised as to his ability to bring the Virgin Islands out of the economic quagmire in which they have existed through the regimes of three white former governors.

Krug Backs Hastie

Refusing to suppress his racial antipathy for the gubernatorial nominee any longer, Ellender puts the question bluntly to Secretary of Interior, Julius A. Krug, who had appeared to place the endorsement and support of the department behind the President's choice for the top post in the islands.

Krug told Ellender bluntly that "of all people, colored or white, I can't think of a better person, tourist trade considered, than Judge Hastie." He added that Hastie is as good a man as the department could recommend for such a job. "I can't be too strong in my recommending him," he stated.

Here Ellender asked Krug if he expected to confine the tourist trade to colored people. Krug replied, "No," that he expected a large number of white tourists would be attracted to the islands as before.

Hastie Reburrs Ellender

Ellender sneered, "You think so? You are very optimistic."

But it was Hastie's interjected remark that put the issue in its true light. The 41-year-old law dean suggested, "The contact of the tourists is not with the governor, be he white or black, but with minor officials, who regardless of the color of the governor's skin, happen to be colored." He named the police, the immigration authorities, the proprietor of the hotel and various other officials.

Elections Suggested

Senator Abe Murdock, (D., Utah) under whose chairmanship a subcommittee of the Senate Territorial and Insular Affairs Committee is conducting the hearings, intersposed with the opinion that he thought the wishes of the people should be a more important consideration than the tourist trade as one item. Murdock added, if the report of the islands, which is 90 per cent colored, had the right to elect their own governor, there would be no question as to their choice.

Ellender countered, "why don't we let them elect him then?" to which Hastie replied, "I entirely concur with that suggestion whenever Congress sees fit to give such authority."

The outcome of the struggle between racism on the one hand and proved competence on the other is still too locked in mortal combat to determine the probable results. However, so far the odds seem to be on a Hastie victory.

Significantly, prior to Hastie's nomination, the confirmation of a governor has been a mere routine matter. But it is evident that when it comes to entrusting high office to a man whose skin is other than white, although the people whom he will govern are predominantly colored, the idea is so completely revolutionary, that it has been made an issue of paramount importance. Hastie, if confirmed will be the first Negro ever to be named governor of any United States territory or possession. Sat 2-6-46

While it was anticipated that hearings would be conducted, not even high placed officials in the Department of Interior, under whose jurisdiction the conduct of the islands fall, had expected any appreciable opposition.

The highlight of the hearings so far came when Chairman Murdock spiked the red-baiting of the sole spokesman for the opposition so far, Leslie F. Huntt, certified public accountant and former vice president of the Virgin Islands Company, government operated concern for the development of industries in the islands.

Represents Land Owners

Huntt, who is said to represent a handful of the landed gentry in the islands who have special interest to serve, claimed that "the progress of the islands will be retarded if not completely wrecked by the appointment of Mr. Hastie whose sympathies are with Communistic ideologies, and whose past record indicate Communistic activities." Huntt said to place Hastie in such a spot would do the world-wide cause of democracy irreparable harm.

He charged Hastie had been active in the affairs of at least five Communist-front organizations, and presented documents in proof.

When Chairman Murdock challenged the "authenticity" of the evidence, Huntt fell back on the feeble proof that they were collected by an investigator for the House Un-American Activities Committee, George McDavitt, claiming no further knowledge of the reliability.

Lashes Red Baiter

Here Murdock lashed into him, and unequivocally countered, "If you want to crucify and persecute a man, you have to bring the proper witnesses before this sub-committee. What is being attempted here is to have a witness present incriminating evidence that he cannot substantiate in the slightest degree."

He then added: "We don't want to take the irresponsible statement of some over-zealous investigator until it has ben substantiated by a congressional committee."

Hastie admitted membership in the Southern Conference for Human Welfare and the National Lawyers' Guild, two of the organizations cited by Huntt, but he denounced any connotation that they were "Communist-front" organizations.

Friend of Ben Davis

He admitted as well friendship of some 20 or 25 years with Communist leader Benjamin J. Davis, New York City Councilman, recently elected for a second term. He said he had known Davis when the latter was a Republican, "and I have not severed our friendship since he became a Communist."

"I have had nothing to do with the affairs of the Commuuist Party," Hastie said. "I believe we can work out questions of racial relations within our constitutional form of government. Davis perhaps did not believe that, I cannot speak for him." Sat 4-6-46

Ellender apparently not satisfied with his response on the tourist question, elected to continue his race-baiting. He said a large percentage of the property of the island was controlled by people of the Caucasian race, and that some had in mind developing these properties, but, "it is doubtful that they would expand these properties in the light of this appointment. He also stated he saw little hope of developing private industry with private capital under a colored governor.

Cites Former Failures

Hastie came back with the stinging reply, "the governors to date have not had marked success in getting an expansion of business."

Continuing, he asserted, "I believe my relationship with persons in business while federal judge in the islands, inspired some measure of confidence, and I believe I could persuade these people to expand business."

He discounted Ellender's claim that some landowners who had in mind developing some businesses would not continue under a Negro governor. He said, "I have complete confidence that the matter of race would loom largely in the minds of some people, but I am sure it would not loom largely in the minds of some others."

Northern Race-baiters

Nor was race-baiting confined to the southern members of the sub-committee. Even Senator Owen Brewster, (R., Maine) who at the outset stated that the matter of the appointment was not a matter of race as far as he was concerned, engaged in a bit of it himself.

He asked Secretary Krug whether he thought Hastie would be able to organize the needs of the islands and effectively present them to Congress in a manner sufficiently persuasive to get the necessary appropriations.

Krug expressed confidence that he believed Hastie could. But it was here again that the brilliant young lawyer scored. "I believe as a lawyer I am capable of organizing and presenting the needs of the islands," he said. "The committee will have to decide whether my personality is persuasive or antagonistic." He then ventured the opinion, "the race of the person proposing to Congress would not be a factor in determining whether the proposal is good or bad." Sat 4-6-46

Natives Back Hastie

Chairman of the Municipal Council of St. Thomas and St. John Islands, Roy Gordon was sent by the council to appear before the sub-committee to represent the desires of the people of that municipality in the choice of Judge Hastie as governor.

He testified that on June 11, 1946, his council had unanimously passed a resolution endorsing President Truman's choice. He said on Jan. 15, the Municipal Council of St. Croix had passed a similar resolution, with two dissenting votes, but that when the two councils met in Legislative Assembly on Jan. 31, there had been a unanimous endorsement of Hastie Thereafter, on Feb. 3, various organizations held mass meetings approving the nomination.

Others appearing before the committee in support of Hastie were Ashley L. Totten, president of the American Virgin Island Association of New York. With him, but not testifying were Drs. James L. Wilson and Denis Farelly, white, of New York, both native Virgin Islanders.

A dynamic bit of testimony was given by Hope R. Stevens, vice president of the United Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, and General Counsel for the National Negro Congress, who is also a native Virgin Islander.

Raps Committee

Stevens told the committee that Hastie was loved and respected by all those in the Virgin Islands except those having "special interests," who were "apprehensive" of his fair-mindedness and uncompromising position for right in dealing with affairs in the Virgin Islands, an approach which Stevens said "has not always heretofore obtained."

He took the sub-committee to task for seeking to obscure the real issue in red-baiting and told them they were laboring under the "age-old fear" that given the chance, a qualified Negro will equal or surpass the white man any day.

Seeking to package Hastie, the National Negro Congress and Benjamin J. Davis neatly, and label it Communist, Ellender subtly asked if Davis were not a member of the Congress. Stevens replied in the affirmative.

Lauds Ben Davis

When asked what he knew of Davis, Stevens declared, "He is a very fine man and a loyal American."

Ellender asked if he approved the Society for the Self-Determination of Negroes in the South, Stevens countered, "every self-respecting Negroes aspires to see that self-determination for all Negroes is brought about, not only in the South but any place else it is denied."

Truman's Naming Of Hastie Puts British Caribbean Policy On Spot

Chicago Defender Sat 1-26-46

Chicago, Ill.

By GEORGE PADMORE
(Defender London Correspondent)

LONDON—With the Labor Government's colonial policy especially in Java under heavy criticism, President Truman's appointment of a Negro, Judge William Hastie, Dean of Howard University Law School as Governor of the Virgin Islands, West Indies, is considered a brilliant diplomatic move on the part of the White House.

The appointment coming just before the next Anglo-American Caribbean Conference which is scheduled to take place at St. Thomas, chief of the American Virgin Island group, at an early date, has caused much embarrassment in British official quarters.

Judge Hastie is the second man of African descent who has been appointed to a colonial governorship.

Eboue Was First

The late M. Felix Eboue, a native of French Guiana, was the first Negro to reach such a distinguished position. He was Governor-General of French Equatorial Africa at the time of his sudden death in Cairo in 1944. His wife, Madame Eboue, was recently elected a deputy to the French Parliament to represent the West Indian Colony of Guadeloupe.

Judge Hastie has had a brilliant academic and public career. During the early part of the war he served as civilian aide to the U.S. Secretary of War but resigned as a protest against the racial segregation policy in the U. S. Army.

Returning to academic life, he became dean of the law school of America's leading Negro university —Howard in Washington.

British colonial officials in London who served with Dr. Hastie on the Anglo-American Caribbean Commission to which he was appointed by the late President Roosevelt, have a very high opinion of his administrative abilities and will follow his new career with interest knowing that the appointment of a colored man to a West Indian governorship will have far-reaching effects upon the natives in the British islands.

Against the background of the Hastie appointment, British colonial experts in London are reviewing the future political, economic and social structure of the West Indies.

"So much has happened in the sphere of Caribbean cooperation in the last twelve months that the report of the Anglo-American Caribbean Commission for 1944 seems out of date," says the London Econmist.

Commission Enlarged

"Recently it was announced that France and the Netherlands had accepted an invitation to join the commission, to which the latter had already sent an observer.

Earlier it was announced that membership of both the British and the United States sections had been enlarged from three to four to allow two unofficial West Indians to be included. Earlier still there was published a dispatch from the then Secretary of State for the Colonies to the Governors of the West Indies giving his views on how federation of the British Islands, an essential preliminary to any wider federation, could best be brought about.

The Anglo-American Commission, which was regarded by Colonel Stanley as the prototype of colonial regional bodies, is expanding rapidly from its early beginnings in 1942, when its first task was to ensure the food supplies of the Caribbean area that were gravely threatened by the submarine campaign. Its peacetime work, therefore, unlike its war-time achievements such as the establishment of a West Indian schooner pool, will tend to appear somewhat vague and unspecific. Possibly its chief significance will come to lie in the system of West Indian conferences, which were started to enable West Indians themselves to discuss matters of common Caribbean interests in open forums. Only one conference has so far been held, but the next should be of even greater interest than the first since it will include delegates from the French and Dutch islands.

Talk But No Action

Realizing that progressive West Indian public opinion is fed up with official policy of talk and no action, the Economist says that practical results of the conference, as exemplified in its recommendations, may appear disappointing. Possibly, the most important resolution that it passed was one calling for the consideration of the abolition of import duties on foodstuffs produced within the Caribbean area. This seems a sensible resolution, and a necessary reform, but as the British Colonial Secretary later pointed out, in a dispatch reprinted in the commission's report, it would infringe both the most favored-nation principle and Imperial preference agreements if it were intended to abolish duties on foodstuffs produced within the Caribbean and retain them on foodstuffs imported from without. Colonial regionalism, however attractive in theory, will still have to contend with national sovereignties when it wants to achieve any practical results.

Prof. Ralph Bunche, professor of political science at Howard University, who is now in London on the United Nations Organization staff under Edward Stettinius, has been appointed to serve on the American section of the Caribbean Commission and will represent his government at the forthcoming conference in the Virgin Islands. Dr. Eric Williams, secretary of the Caribbean Research Council in Washington, will also take part in the conference.

Dr. Williams, a native of Trinidad, West Indies, is assistant professor of Social and Political Science at Howard University and foremost authority of West Indian history. He is the author of "Slavery and Capitalism," the standard book on early West Indian history; and "The Negro in the Caribbean," an over-all survey of economic, political and social set-up in the West Indies.

N.Y. GOP Leader Joins American Labor Party

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Ill

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—Mrs. Ada B. Jackson, formerly a Republican Party leader, announced her membership in the Kings County American Labor Party Saturday.

The non-discrimination policy of the American Labor Party, which permits no Jim Crow clubs in any form, prompted Mrs. Jackson to leave the ranks of the GOP.

At a press conference held this week at her home, Mrs. Jackson told reporters that for the past several years she has "watched with deep concern the political plight of the Negro people in both major political parties."

Cites Barriers

She cited the "insurmountable barrier" which exists due to "separate political clubs for white and Negro Republicans and white and Negro Democrats." The American Labor Party, Mrs. Jackson pointed out, 'opens its doors wide to all citizens regardless of race, creed or color. Its policy grants participation and leadership opportunity to all races, and permits no Jim Crow clubs or segregation in any form in its organization."

She said that the recent filibuster in the Senate against the FEPC "is proof that both major political parties are violating the principles of our Constitution and Bill of Rgihts and constantly break their campaign pledges where the Negro is concerned."

"More than 200 years of legalized enslavement of the Negro in this country, and another 70-odd years of illegal enslavement," Mrs. Jackson added, "is a long time to wait, watch, hope and pray for freedom through the Republicans or Democrats."

She joined the American Labor Party, Mrs. Jackson said, because she is "convinced that this is the only way for my people."

The following Brooklyn Negro citizens endorsed Mrs. Jackson's statement: Syble Burnett, Irene Hamlett, Adele Carter, Jennie Trice, Lucille Gerard, Dorothy Rodrigues, Hattie Wilson, Gladys Thornhill, Odette DeVaughn, Rose Jeffers, Dr. Emily Charlton, Elizabeth Camp, Prof. Alexander Gatewood, Willa Granger and many others.

Mrs. Jackson is co-chairman of the Bedford District Health Council, president of the Bedford-Stuyvesant Schools Council, and active in the United Parents Association and the Brooklyn Interracial Assembly.

"The ALP," she said, "opens its doors wide to all citizens regardless of race, creed or color. Its policy grants participation and leadership opportunity to all races and permits no Jimcrow clubs or segregation in any form in its organization."

She also cited the recent Senate filibuster against the FEPC as evidence that both major parties are violating the principles of the Constitution and the Bill of Rights.

"They constantly break their campaign pledges to the Negro people," she said. "More than 200 years of legal enslavement and another 70-odd years of illegal enslavement for the Negro is a long time to wait, watch, hope and pray for freedom through the Republicans or Democrats."

Paul Robeson Defies un-American Committee

Daily Worker New York, N.Y. Fri. 10-11-46

By Jack Young

LOS ANGELES.—The Tenney Committee launched attacks on the National Committee to Win the Peace and Hollywood unions, but was met by challenging opposition from Paul Robeson and Emmet G. Lavery.

Robeson, co-chairman of the Peace Committee, told State Senator Jack B. Tenney that the existence of the Un-American Committee is "one of the evidence" that fascism still lives.

Lavery, Catholic president of the Screen Writers Guild, charged that what Tenney "seeks to apply today against the Communists could be applied tomorrow against the Catholics."

Questioned about the formation of the Win the Peace Committee, Robeson said he saw that denazification wasn't being carried out in Europe last year when he sang to the American troops there.

The Win the Peace Committee was formed spontaneously this spring to "get the facts before the people," said Robeson.

FATEFUL DECISION

"The American people today must decide what they are going to support," said Robeson. "I, as a Negro, know fascism would wipe me off the face of the earth. I can't support it."

Tenney got his hearing off to a typical start by ruling that Lavery couldn't have a personal stenographer take shorthand notes, and forbidding Lavery from reading a prepared statement.

In that statement, Lavery denied that either he or the Screen Writers Guild have ever "been dominated by Communist influence," and he challenged Tenney to a public debate.

The interrogation of Robeson was started by Richard E. Combs, committee counsel, with questions on Robeson's visits to the Soviet Union and the schooling the singer's son got there.

"My son had what I would call a very basic Soviet education," Robeson said, proudly. He later explained he sent his son to school in Russia so he wouldn't be subjected to prejudice here.

Robeson told of his work with the Free Festus Coleman Committee, the National Negro Congress and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee.

"The democracies made a horrible mistake by not supporting Republican Spain," said Robeson, "and they are making a horrible mistake now by supporting Franco."

He called for the recall of recognition to Franco and for withdrawal of American troops from China as necessary to world Peace.

This brought from Tenney his $64 question: "Are you a Communist?"

Robeson laughed. "I characterize myself as an anti-Fascist," he replied.

He said he wasn't a member though he would choose it over the Republicans, explaining that "in my association with Communists throughout the world, I have found them to be the first people to die, the first to sacrifice and the first to understand fascism."

Tenney tried another trick question, asking in a roundabout way if fascism and communism weren't the same thing.

"There's a very great distinction," answered Robeson. He cited Hitler's killing of the Jews as against the elimination of prejudice in the Soviet Union.

"There's a great difference between a thing that wipes out entire people and another that raises them," he said.

"Fascism is the domination, economic and otherwise, of a minority against the interests of the great masses of people," Robeson said.

"I feel that American Big Business today has decided to crack down all over the world," he continued.

"But we don't need to go to war to find out which way of life is best," he said. "We can solve it within the framework of peace by extending democracy and freedom to all people."

LAVERY TESTIFIES

Lavery testified that he wasn't a Communist. "I take my social conscience from the gospels of the Apostles," he said.

He argued against Tenney's thesis that communism is a menace, asserting that "the greatest challenge today is to put the greatest distance between World War II and World War III."

"We must be alive and alert to preserve the democracy we have," said Lavery. He added that to start "thought control" here would endanger democracy and bring the country that much closer to war.

As for Combs' continued insinuation that Communists were running Hollywood studios, Lavery replied that "in my 10 years in the industry, I have never yet seen a man who could 'finesse' what you would call a Communist picture past Louis B. Mayer."

Lavery lashed smear attacks on the Screen Writers Guild because among its 1000 members are some 10 Communists. Fri. 10-11-46

"The Communists make most of the noise," asserted Tenney.

"They may make most of the noise, but they don't make most of the scripts," replied Lavery.

VIEWS and Reviews

By GEORGE S. SCHUYLER

The Courier Pittsburgh Pa. Sat. 6-8-46

(This column represents the personal opinion of Mr. Schuyler and in no way reflects the editorial opinion of The Pittsburgh Courier.—The Editors)

Keynoting the tenth annual convention of the National Negro Congress, Dr. Max Yergan, noted Kremlin apologist, warned that "from this point on we will drive for unity within the ranks of the Negro people." Whenever Communists talk about unity they mean getting everybody else to follow the Stalinist line. Although the name of the organization implies that it consists of Negroes, Dr. Yergan emphasized that the Congress must no longer view itself as "merely a group of Negroes, since the advance of the trade union movement lies in the single organization of white and black labor." He added that unity with white workers would not sacrifice the drive for unity among Negroes.

Translated from Moscowese this means that, with the war over and Russia saved, the National Negro Congress is going to drive for "capture" of all the Negroes and will use the support of white Reds to that end. Moreover, it means that a drive will be launched to wean the Negroes away from such organizations as the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People or to "capture" it and hitch it to the Kremlin chariot. This was the real purpose for which the National Negro Congress was organized, and its return to the old policy was anticipated by all those who are hep to the Communist jive. The N.N.C. and other such organizations like the American Youth for Democracy (formerly Young Communist League) the Sweethearts of Servicemen and the International Labor Defense among others, have long conspired to undermine the NAACP and such outfits organized to defend Negroes, and now they are prepared to "go to town" to attain that goal.

They have already made considerable headway, especially among middle-class Negroes, and with a more intelligent approach, they are likely to win a large percentage of the NAACP membership, especially the youth, to the Red program. This need not have been if the NAACP had been better administered, and personally I am only concerned about the matter because I think it would be a dangerous development for Negroes, in view of the growing antagonism between the Soviet camorra and the United States. Identification of American Negroes with the Moscow clique would offer an added excuse for persecuting colored people.

Unhappily the NAACP has slept its opportunity and now finds itself trying to catch up with the Communist propaganda and tactics. Although it has been in the field since 1909, it has been incapable of developing any sound program attractive to the masses of Negro workers or capable of offsetting Communist appeals. The fact is that the Red conspirators are simply smarter than the NAACP administrators. Working in the same field of championing Negro rights, they get better publicity and are quicker to seize upon lucrative issues. Time and again they beat the NAACP to the punch and grab off the credit. They seem inclined to profit from past mistakes and from now on we may expect to see the Communists score at every opportunity and get more and more mass support.

This need not have been and it still need not be, but unfortunately the NAACP is distressingly unwitting of its way. With over a million Negroes in organized labor, it has paid little, if any, attention to labor except when some sharecropper was run out of his town or lynched. It has never had anybody handling labor. With a tremendous youth organization it has no youth program worthy of the name. Whereas its 1,000 branches could have been whipped into real fighting organizations, it has let the opportunity slip by. In sum, the directing psychology is one concerned with letter-writing, telegram-sending, viewing-with-alarm, loud protesting and handshaking. The only program it has had with any-For over ten years it did not even have a branch director worthy of Congressional hand-the name and when it finally got one it would not permit her to work thing near mass appeal in the past fifteen years has been the equal out any sound program, and she quit in disgust. Its public relations direction has been lamentable ever since Herbert J. Seligman left. The NAACP has done absolutely nothing to advance the interests of ceased to be publicity director. The work has been slipshod and inept. While it screams for more democracy with every other breath, it remains, as it always has, an oligarchic organization with every-thing run by a self-perpetuating board of directors for whom the masses of NAACP members never have an opportunity to vote, and which is largely handpicked by the secretary who is obviously far from being a superman. Masters of platitude and cliche, they are charming the some of the oldsters in a manner which the NAACP has so far been unable to equal, let alone surpass. If they eventually farmers, or consumers, while squandering fortunes for official expenses about the world.

Now come the various Communist organizations with something to offer, even if their program is dangerous and unsound youth and

"capture" the NAACP (which God forbid), it will be largely by default because those misleading the organization have been wandering about in the past.

New Orleans C. P. Leader Arrested 2nd Time in Week

Daily Worker New York, N.Y. Wed. 11-13-46

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 12.—After evading possible death Saturday night at the hands of an AFL Seamen's Union goon squad, James Jackson, Louisiana chairman of the Communist Party, was arrested on charges of "malicious mischief and disorderly conduct" by New Orleans police who supposedly had come to his rescue. Jackson has been released on a $1,000 bond.

Jackson, a Negro World War II vet, was besieged in his home in New Orleans Saturday night by a gang of goons. Police were called and arrived conveniently too late to catch any of the attackers.

Then they took Jackson downtown to "protect" him. In the police station they made the trumped up charges largely on the basis of a window Jackson had broken to attract aid while being sought by the thugs.

It was the second time in the same week Jackson had been arrested. Thursday a group of 80, directed by AFL Seamen's Union goon leaders, broke up a public meeting called by the Communist Party in New Orleans. Police arrested attackers and attacked, including Jackson and 16 peaceful members of the audience. They are to appear in court tomorrow.

Reason for the AFL union's goon attack on the Communists is a desire to lay up a smokescreen of anti-Communist and anti-Negro hysteria in order to start all-out warfare with the National Maritime Union and other unions of the Committee for Maritime Unity.

The SIU is known to have issued books to many more men than there possibly could be jobs for. The attacks are said to be definitely connected with the SIU's campaign to raid the NMU.

The Communist Party of Louisiana has called upon all progressives in the South and throughout the country to put pressure on New Orleans Mayor de Losseps Morrison and Superintendent of Police Waters to arrest and convict the goons and to quash the trumped up charges against Jackson and the 16 persons arrested with him.

Editor, Daily Worker:

I was sorry to see PM hook up with the gang that wants to boot the Communists out of the labor movement, or to kick anybody out of any movement. If right this minute we jerked up every Communist and tossed him or her out of the meeting hall and into the gutter, it would not be a short week till a second batch would be jerked and bounced. These would be the radicals, and a few days or hours later the revolutionaries of every breed and brand would get the old boot. Wed. 12-18-46

There's not a brain in this world that is wise enough to tell just where the owners and bosses would call a stop to the kicking out. It would not stop. It is like decontrol, like the black market, like prices, like wildfire.

Once you let it get a start, it wrecks everything. I don't think anybody will fear PM so long as PM don't get afraid of anybody.

That same big money boot that kicks out the Communists will be used to try to kick out the liberals, then the Democrats, then the Jews, then the Catholics, then the Negroes, then the Italians, then the other races.

What are all of us undesirables going to work at when our union hall is wrecked and we are walking the sidewalks? Unemployment. Inflation. Depression. The same old seven and six again.

Hats Off

PM New York, N.Y.

To Methodist Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam, president of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, for a forthright statement condemning those who "summon us to a holy war against Communism . . . diverting our attention from the primary obligation to democratize our own economic, political, ecclesiastical and social life."

Sun. 12-15-46

"I believe that totalarianism constitutes a threat not only to democracy but to religion," he said. "However, I am persuaded that energy expended in fighting Communism, if devoted to preserving and extending democracy, would make totalitarianism undesirable and democracy impregnable . . .

"Communism thrives in the jungle growth of racial discrimination. The killing of Negroes in a Detroit race riot, or the lynching of a Negro in the South, creates more Communists in a day than a Committee on Un-American Activities can ferret out in many days.

"Communism will never win a democratic and just America. It is democracy, more of it, not less of it, that will win the morrow."

Foster Warns of Attacks by Reaction

The Worker New York, N.Y. Sun. 12-8-46

Progressives will have to fight harder than in the past if the onslaughts planned by strengthened reaction are to be met, chairman William Z. Foster of the Communist Party told the CP Natinoal Committee meeting. "It will be harder to defend the living standards, the civil liberties of the people and the peace of the world" as a result of the November election, he said.

WM. Z. FOSTER

"The democratic coalition no longer controls the government of the United States. Not only that, but it has been seriously demoralized by betrayals of the Truman administration. This fact puts an added responsibility on the Communist Party to help give leadership to this somewhat demoralized and weakened national coalition. And generally it puts upon our Party the responsibility for a higher type of work than we have been putting forth up to this time."

Foster said that in the light of the demands upon the Party, it cannot be satisfied with a slow pace of progress. He called for more vigorous initiative "which is the very life blood of a Communist Party."

CITES BAD WORK

Foster examined various phases of Party work, especially recruiting of new members, building of the press and advancing work among the youth and gave "samples of bad work" to drive home his points.

The Party, he said, is far short of objectives it set for itself at the start of the election campaign. In each case the goal was realistic, he said.

He called for a "new fighting spirit in our Party."

By way of contrast, Foster quoted a press interview with Luis Carlos Prestes, leader of the Communist Party of Brazil, in which that country's party, recently out of a long underground period, was reported as confidently expecting a vote of a million in the next election. It has daily papers in many leading cities, plans two more and recently oversubscribed its half-million dollar press fund drive.

"This is the kind of spirit that our Party has got to have to tackle the big jibs we are confronted with," he said.

LABOR UNITY

The "central thread" of the Party's work, said Foster with strong emphasis, is the struggle for labor unity.

"We must make that a sort of a lighthouse in all our activities," he asserted. The whole country must be made aware of this stand of the Communists.

To drive home his point, Foster pictured the danger presented in the wage struggle with the "one-union-at-a-time" tactic weakening labor and causing general confusion in the country.

"That strategy won't work. The strategy that must be developed in the coming period is a strategy of joint action."

The same task confronts labor and is finally beginning to emerge, with respect to repressive legislation, Foster warned.

THIRD PARTY

Foster also stressed the role of the Communists in explaining the significance of the developing third party movement. The working class "is breaking from the apron strings of the capitalists of the country, and is finally beginning to emerge, along with its democratic allies, on a policy of independent political action." Sun. 12-5-46

The Communists must be so active in educating the people for a third party, said Foster, that "everybody—certainly everybody in the labor movement—will know that the main champions of a third party are the Communists."

Louisiana C. P. Leader Fined $25; Will Appeal

Daily Worker New York, N.Y. Fri. 11-22-46

By Emanuel Levin

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 21. — James E. Jackson, Jr., chairman of the Louisiana state committee, Communist Party, was freed on bond today pending appeal of a $25 fine sentence on a "disturbing the peace" charge.

Jackson, on Nov. 9, called police to protect him against attempts to break into his apartment by a group of white men who had threatened to take him into the woods. Jackson made noise to attract his neighbor's attention.

Police witnesses testified against him, but admitted they had been called to give him protection. They filed charges against Jackson when they discovered he had attended a Communist Party meeting Nov. 7, which was raided by hoodlums.

Charges of malicious mischief, filed by police against Jackson, were dropped by the district attorney. Quashing of the state statute

Political parties seek through votes to get their programs adopted. They represent economic forces in the national and local communities. Their seats of control are within the federal, state or city areas. This is the case with the Republican, Democratic and Socialist Parties, national political organizations. It is also the case with the Liberal Party in New York.

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH

But, it is not the case with the Communist Party. The Communist Party has its seat of control outside of the U. S. A. This is also true for the American Labor Party in New York. It is responsible to an alien country. It is not its own boss. Its boss is the Comintern in Moscow. The Communist Party of the United States would not dare to formulate, embrace or execute a policy at variance with the opinions of Generalissimo Joseph Stalin of the U. S. S. R. Thus, Soviet Russia, and not the United States, determines the program of a so-called political party in this country. But the Communist Party of Russia does not defer to the interests or desires of the United States or its President. In other words, if the U. S. A. and U. S. S. R. went to war, something we hope will not happen, the American Communist Party would not support the United States. It would back Soviet Russia. This is not a supposition. It is a fact.

Let us review a bit of history. 2-6-46

During the early period of the war, and Soviet-German collaboration, the Communists in the United States were picketing the White House, because the late President Roosevelt advocated lend-lease to Great Britain, France, Poland and Czechoslovakia. Communists provoked and fomented strikes. The "Daily Worker," Communist paper, denounced and smeared all persons and publications that were pro-Allies. In the House of Representatives, Congressman Marcantonio, well-known Communist fellow-traveler, voted against every bill designed to help the Allied forces or to help the United States prepare for war. President Roosevelt was roundly condemned and branded as a war-monger embarked upon an imperialist adventure.

Look at the record. While Hitler's Panzers were waging a ruthless and savage siege of Warsaw, Der Fuehrer at Danzig, September 19, 1939, stated: "Poland will never rise again in the form of the Versailles Treaty. This is guaranteed not only by Germany but also guaranteed by Russia." Seattle, Washington

In Hitler's famous Reichstag speech on October 6, 1939, he said: " . . . In Eastern Europe, due to the efforts of Germany and Russia, peace and order are taking shape. Interests of Germany and Russia are here in a complete agreement. The final organization of this territory, as well as the division of the Polish State, will not be solved by the war in the west, but exclusively by Russia on one side and Germany on the other."

The German-Soviet Agreement, executed September 28, 1939, at Moscow, reads as follows: "The Government of the U. S. S. R. and the German Government, following the collapse of the former Polish State, considered it as exclusively their own task to restore peace and order in these territories and to assure to the peoples inhabiting it a peaceful existence which will correspond to their national characteristics. With this object in view they concluded the following agreement:

Article 1. The Government of the U. S. S. R. and the German Government establish, as the frontier between their state interests in the territory of the former Polish State . . .

Was an agreement between the Third Reich and Soviet Russia to the interests of the United States? Well, it helped to strengthen the forces of Hitler which cost the United States the lives of thousands of American boys, white and black, and billions of dollars. It forced a heavy war burden and sacrifice upon Great Britain and France. Suppose Hitler had not changed his mind and invaded Russia, Hitler, with his Russian ally might have conquered Great Britain, which would have been a grave threat to the world position and national security of the United States.

Would it be to the interest of the Negroes of the United States for this country to be vanquished by Nazi Germany and her Axis partners, even if Russia was one? To the thoughtful Negro, the question answers itself. Whatever may be the limitations and racial problems of the United States, the basic interests of the Negro are tied up with the rise or fall of this country, the U. S. A. If the United States goes down, the Negro will go down. If the United States goes up, the Negro has the opportunity to go up with her. Thus, when Hitler turned upon the United States, he also turned upon all of her citizens, including the Negro, whose blood, brawn and brains have helped to build the American civilization. 2-6-46

What was the American Communist Party doing while Stalin was shaking hands with Hitler? It was busy betraying the U. S. A. with every means at its disposal short of open rebellion. It was almost a question of a flip of the coin that Soviet Russia became the ally of the United States and Great Britain and France. But for the mystical intuition of the Austrian Paper-Hanger, Soviet Russia might have been one of the Axis powers and the foe of this country.

Listen to the Report of the Fifth Extraordinary Session of the Supreme Soviet of the USSR by Viacheslav Molotov, at Moscow, October 31, 1939. Says he: " . . . The ruling circles of Britain and France have lately attempted to depict themselves as champions of the democratic rights of nations, and the British Government has announced that its aim in the war is destruction of Hitlerism.

It amounts to this, that the British, with the French supporters of the war have declared something in the nature of an 'ideological' war on Germany . . ." But, there is absolutely no justification for a war of this kind. One may accept or reject the ideology of Hitlerism, as well as any other ideological system; that is a matter of political views. But everybody would understand that ideology should not be destroyed by force, should not be eliminated by war. It is, therefore, not only senseless, but criminal to wage such a war as a war for 'the destruction of Hitlerism', camouflaged as a fight for democracy."

This is the same Soviet Russia and the same Molotov that became the ally of the United States.

When Hitler's army crossed over on Russian soil, the American Communists withdrew the picket line around the White House and became sabre-rattling patriots who demanded the abolition of the strike in war and peace so that the U. S. A. could arm and produce arms for Russia and the other Allies, to help win the war for the Soviet Union. 2-6-46

The union of Soviet Russia with Germany is the blackest page in the history of the USSR. And by the same token, the picketing of the White House by the American Communists, while Great Britain's and France's backs were against the wall, and America was making preparations for war to defend and protect her national interests, is the blackest page in the history of American Communists.

During this period, the Communists who had posed as the Messiah of the Negro, deserted and betrayed the cause of the Negro.

The Negro's attention was first directed to the Communist Party when it was employing the most devious and questionable tactics in misrepresenting the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People to the poor Scottsboro boys, convicted in Alabama, in 1931, for the immoral purpose of securing the case of these unhappy youngsters for the Communist International Labor Defense to build up the Communist movement in America. As a result of this deliberately dishonorable act, Communists, while the Scottsboro boys were languishing in an hell-hole prison, facing the lynch-rope, were vulgarly parading various and sundry alleged mothers of those boys up and down the country, collecting hundreds of thousands of dollars which went to the spreading of the Communist propaganda against the United States and financing of Communist agitator-payrollees. If the Communist politicians had not put their filthy fingers upon these hapless Scottsboro boys, all of them would have been freed long ago.

We submit that this is not the type of conduct the Negroes need in this country.

All self-respecting Negroes fight and hate with all their hearts segregation or Jim-Crow. The Negro Communists and their fellow-travelers, swallowed hook, line and sinker the notorious resolutions of the Communists Internationale of October, 1928 and October, 1930, that state: "The main Communist slogan must be: The right of self-determination of the Negro in the black belt."

In other words, Communists would pull up root and branch, Negroes' homes, farms, stores and all of their belongings where they now live all over America, and huddle them into a restricted segregated "black belt" of slums in the South, misnamed a state. Even if it were desirable and of course, it stinks to high heaven, it would require a civil war of fire and blood, and the nameless death and destruction of Negro life, to oust the present Southern white, Negro-phobists.

Verily, this is not only Jim-Crow with a vengeance, it is the most fantastic, screw-ball monumental propaganda hoax ever foisted upon a people. Any so-called Negro leader who will fall for such baloney, is either wrong in the heart or wrong in the head, and probably both.

Negroes have their own opinion about Jim-Crow. They reject it, because it degrades them. It makes them feel inferior.

Jim-Crow comes home to Negroes like a ton of bricks upon their heads when they start out to hunt an apartment, put their children in schools, or travel down South. Jim-Crow is not a propaganda theory to Negroes as it is to the brass bonnets of the Communist political hierarchy in Moscow. It's a condition, a real condition and a serious condition.

One prominent Communist leader who put himself on record for a Jim-Crow Negro state in the United States, said, July 22, 1945: "When . . . the principles of the right of self-determination for the Black Belt was liquidated, I was not sufficiently mature." See pamphlet, "The Negro in a Soviet America."

When he says he was not sufficiently mature, he means that he had not grown up. No, not physically, he was a man, but mentally and morally. Now, Negroes haven't the time to hold their leaders on leading strings, like nipple-suckling babes to keep them from cutting a hog or being taken in by high-pressure propaganda Communist charlatans.

During the war, the Communists changed their line again on the Negro. This time it was a hands-off policy. Communists opposed the fight for jobs for Negroes during the war on the grounds it would hold up war production of munitions for Soviet Russia.

What did the Negro Communist candidate for the New York City Council say about this?

In the "Daily Worker" of Sunday, July 22, 1945, Mr. Davis said: "As a member of the National Board, I bear a heavy responsibility for the error. I accepted the false position because I considered it correct. I applied it in all my work and most especially in the field of Negro work, with resulting serious weakness in that work."

Leading Communists admit that the hands-off policy concerning the fight for Negro rights during the war was wrong, but only after the war is over. Says Doxey Wilkerson, high Communists, in "Political Affairs for July, 1945," "We have helped disarm the working class and the Negro people, rather than help prepare them for the hard struggles which life now thrusts to the forefront."

The Communists' greatest contribution to the Negro is that of attempting to disrupt sound Negro movements during the recent world war, the time of the Negroes' greatest need for support.

While the Negroes were marching and fighting all over the country for fair employment practices in war plants, the Communists were denouncing such activities as Fascist, demanding that racial discriminations be overlooked in the interest of war production.

But the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters was holding meetings all over New York City and the country, condemning racial discrimination in war industries as supporting at home what we claimed we were fighting abroad —the Nazi theories of the Master Race.

The only reason why Negro Communists betrayed the Negroes during the war was because it was the line of the Communist Party. They knew that this was a notorious Quizling trick, but they had to do the Charlie McCarthy stunt and obey their Communist Master's voice. And be it known that the Communist Party maintains a real Gestapo over its members. Whenever a Communist or fellow-traveler fails to hit the ball by following the line, his neck is due for the noose. He will be purged. He will be liquidated. This means in gangster language, rubbed out politically. Negro Communists know this. That's why they sacrificed the Negro during the war. They got the order to give the Negro's cause the bye bye to save Russia. Negro Communists remembered the fate of other Communists, Negro and white, who were either too dumb or too daring to hew to the line.

Note that even the once high and mighty Earl Browder, than whom none was more sancrosanct, was beheaded by the ruthless hatchet men of the Communist dictatorship in the Kremlin.

Everybody knows about the famous novelist, Richard Wright, who wrote "Native Son," which was the first Negro book ever to be given the distinction of the Book of the Month. Well, do you know what happened to him? He was liquidated. He wrote a series of articles in the "Atlantic Monthly" telling why he was no longer a Communist. He had the temerity to buck the Communist line. Richard Moore, who was not thought to be so important as Wright, but when he deviated from the unholy Communist line, he had to go. It was the decree of the Gestapo.

James Ford, once Communist candidate for Vice-President of the United States on the Communist ticket is as silent as the tomb. He stubbed his big toe on the Communist line and while he has not been sentenced to expulsion and purgation, his lips are sealed and he has become a veritable Communist nonentity. What has happened to him? We should like to know. The Communists have used him to inveigle Negroes into the Party. But they have no further use for him and so they have submerged him.

And, we warn the other prominent Negro Communists that sooner or later they will meet the very same fate. Benjamin J. Davis, Jr., is having his honeymoon now. But it won't last, the Communist Gestapo will ere long frown upon him for erring from the true faith of the Kremlin, and he, though prominent now, will, too, be ruthlessly consigned to the limbo of political oblivion. The tactic is simple. Negro Communists, in the sordid scramble for petty power, are played off against each other and used to lynch politically a Negro Communist who appears to want to be independent. Do the Negroes of the United States want Negro leaders who are the slaves of such a dangerous political clique. We are sure they do not, and they will not if they fully understand what the Communist movement means.

Thus, it is apparent that the Communist Party could not represent the Negroes if it would. It can only, and will only represent Soviet Russia. Now, since the Communist Party deserted the Negro cause during the war, why give it a chance to desert it again? A Negro or any other Communist is not free. Nor is the American Communist Party free. A Communist in the United States must take his orders from the Communist Party and the Communist Party must take orders from Moscow, Russia.

Do the Negroes want leaders who must wait on instructions and orders from Soviet Russia before they can speak out on an important social, economic and political policy?

Now, we don't only object to American citizens, black or white, being tied up with the Communists because of its alien control, but we would object to American citizens being involved with the Democratic or Republican Parties if they were the pawns of Great Britain or Japan.

Look at Russia today. Look at the U. S. A. today. Nobody knows what may happen. We hope there will be peace between these two countries. But suppose there is war. Negro Communists would have to oppose the U. S. A., the interests of their own country and fight on the side of Soviet Russia, because they are Communists, for if they did not, they would be promptly kicked out and smeared as traitors to Communism. Do you see how dangerous this thing is?

Because of the shifting political climate of Soviet Russia, Negro Communists don't really know what they can think from one day to the other.

Besides, what can a Communist do for the Negro or anybody else? The answer is nothing. Why? This is not hard to answer. It is a matter of common knowledge that

Foster Warns Of Onslaughts By Reaction

Daily Worker

Progressives will have to fight harder than in the past if the onslaughts planned by strengthened reaction are to be met, chairman William Z. Foster of the Communist Party told the CP National Committee yesterday. "It will be harder to defend the living standards, the civil liberties of the people and the peace of the world" as a result of the November election, he said.

Negro leads Communists in Louisiana

Tribune
Los Angeles, Calif.

NEW ORLEANS — Louisiana Communists will probably have to fight harder for the free exercise of their creed, now that they have James E. Jackson, a Negro, as chairman, it was indicated here last week. Sat. 11-30-46

The Communists met last week at Bethlehem Temple, where they have peacefully gathered for the past three months, but this time, with Jackson presiding, white outsiders broke in with tomatoes, eggs, stench bombs, and assorted missiles, turning the proceedings into a near-riot.

Police arrested about 125 Communists and outsiders, charging most of them with disturbing the peace, but holding six whites, members of a local AFL union, on charges of inciting to riot. Jackson is also being held, reportedly "for safekeeping" because his life is considered in danger.

Communist Leaders Meet Here

Daily Worker New York, N.Y.

The National Committee of the Communist Party yesterday began its first post-election meeting in this city and heard an extensive report by General Secretary Eugene Dennis as the first point on its agenda.

The most decisive task facing all progressive workers is to bring about united action between the entire labor movement and all anti-fascist democratic forces, Dennis declared. Wed. 12-4-46

He called for a "broader, more militant, labor-progressive-democratic coalition which can rally all anti-monopoly and anti-war elements, irrespective of political, trade union or religious affiliation." The need has been underlined by the Republican victories of Nov. 5, Dennis declared in the report for the National Board.

"The Republican victory does not yet signify the coming to power of fascism in these United States," said Dennis. "But let there be no mistake. If the renewed offensive of the trusts and arrogant toryism is not checked and defeated now and on the morrow, the extreme reactionaries represented within the GOP, and the fascists centered around American Action Inc., will succeed in usurping power and inaugurating the dictatorial rule of the most fascist minded monopolies."

"Reaction won new vantage points in the election, but its forces can be blocked if l[illegible] or and the democratic camp will unite on a common program of struggle for jobs, security and equal rights for all, for progress, democracy and peace, moving towards a new progressive political alignment under labor leadership," Dennis said.

"Toward this end," he stressed, "top priority must be given to achieve the widest joint action of the CIO AFL and the Railroad Brotherhoods everywhere at every level."

Failure to organize such action will retard the movement towards the vitally necessary new political alignment, said Dennis.

Outlining a program for action, Dennis placed first on the list the drive for substantial wage increases for all workers and the adoption of legislation to raise the minimum wage to 75 cents an hour.

He followed this with 15 items, including measures to raise living standards and to establish a permanent, democratic peace. Among the legislative objectives listed for the 80th Congress were:

A people's tax program;

A five-year federal housing program, providing for 3,000,000 new dwellings a year, with top priority to vets;

Maintenance of rent controls without rent increases;

Increased appropriations for veterans;

Enforcement of the National Labor Relations Act and the Norris-LaGuardia Act without amendments. Repeal of the Smith-Connally Act;

Extensive long-term credits and relief grants to countries devastated by the war.

To save rent controls, "tens of thousands of tenants in the cities must be organized on a neighborhood and block basis."

"The struggle against the mounting prices of food requires not only that a concerted effort shall be made to bring the meat trust and dairy industry under public regulation and ownership, but also that the present spontaneous consumers' resistance movement shall be extensively organized in every block and ward."

Turning to the 1948 elections, Dennis declared the main objective of the labor-democratic camp must be "to defeat at all costs the candidates and program of the reactionaries and pro-fascists."

It will aim at the election of a progressive, pro-Roosevelt presidential ticket and Congress which will "vigorously champion an anti-monopoly and anti-war program, which will take bold steps to grapple with the problems of jobs, security, equality and peace."

There is a distinction between the Democratic party apparatus and the Democratic party convention. He said it is possible the Wallace-Pepper Democrats and the independent labor-progressive forces may yet succeed in influencing the outcome of the 1948 Democratic national convention.

The obstacle in the way of a third party is not the legal difficulties of getting on the ballot, he said. The main problem is the absence of a broad base in a well organized democratic coalition.

In the section of the report dealing with the struggle for peace, Dennis suggested that the near future may see changed relations between the U. S., the Soviet Union and Great Britain which will be favorable to the cause of peace. He cited the recent left trend in the European elections, the growing opposition to Bevin's polices in Britain, and the Wallace-Pepper movement against the line of the U. S. State Department. Wed. 12-4-46

Progressive advocates of peace must oppose the efforts of the trusts to militarize America and establish beachheads everywhere on the globe, Dennis asserted.

"They must do this if the American people are to receive butter and bread instead of guns and atom bombs."

The bi-partisan foreign policy is not a national policy, he said, because it does not reflect the needs of the people.

"What progressive America needs and longs for is a truly independent and a national policy — a policy which will strengthen the democratic unity of the U. S. and the Soviet Union. It is a foreign policy which will steadfastly promote the interests and security of unions. This accusation must be seen for what it is, he declared. "Namely, that the instru-mentality of red-baiting, the corpo-rations, their press and stooges are actually intervening in the internal life of the CIO." Discussing the high tide of red-baiting as a factor in American political life, Dennis cited the charge made at the CIO convention that the Communist Party seeks to intervene in the internal affairs of the CIO. This accusation must be made, he declared.

Communist Party in Theory and Practice

Daily Worker New York, N.Y.

Reviewed by Joel Remes

In The Communist Party and You, Betty Gannett, assistant organization secretary of the CP, has written a clear, simple, vigorous pamphlet which speaks intimately and frankly to new Communists about the Party they have joined, how it works, and what their new responsibilities are. It makes clear that the process of becoming a Communist is not an automatic one, achieved by signing an application blank. The Communist Party is a unique type of party whose principles specially fit it for its great task of leading the working class and its allies to socialism. These principles can be learned only by work and study. The Communist Party and You will be welcomed because it will help make the period of adjustment shorter and easier for the new Communist.

Valuable Guide

For older members of the Communist Party, too, it has many valuable uses. It can help them participate more effectively in the education of new members, for it constitutes a basic text for new members classes. It can be helpful as a recruiting pamphlet, aiding in clearing up many of the misconceptions people have about the Party, and smoothing the way for their recruitment. It can also help to educate old members of the Communist Party in the best method of cooperating with new recruits and making them at home in the Party.

The Communist Party and You will also be read because it is alive with the joy that grows out of joining the Communist Party. This joy grows out of the consciousness that one has willingly entered the common path of work and sacrifice in the highest cause, for the final result will be the ending of the horrors of capitalism and the building of a new and bright life for mankind. And Betty Gannett is a thousand times right when she says to the new Communist:

"You have every reason to feel great pride in your membership in the Communist Party. Your life has taken on a new meaning, a new significance. You now have a great purpose, shared by your fellow-Communists. You are not alone. You are strong."

Arrest Eight For 'Sedition'

Defender Chicago, Ill.

Charge Communists Who Aided Africans

Sat. 11-30-46

CAPETOWN, South Africa—For aiding exploited miners last August when police killed nine strikers and injured more than a thousand others, eight officers and members of the Communist party here were charged recently with sedition. Bail was fixed at $800, and preliminary hearings set for Jan. 6.

At the same time as the arrests, leading newspapers carried a large advertisement from the Chamber of Mines, the Smuts-dominated government, reporting that native miners "are not sufficiently advanced to have labor unions." The "official statement" charged the African Mineworkers Union, sponsors of the strike against a 50-cent-a-day wage level, was under "communist influence."

Leaders Arrested

Among those arrested were Dr. H. J. Simons, lecturer at Capetown University, and Mrs. Betty Sachs, editor of the Guardian, a progressive newspaper which supported the striking miners. Also charged with sedition was W. H. Andrews, national chairman of the Communist party, and Moses Kotane, the party's Negro national secretary, who aided the miners in their fight for overtime pay.

Their arrests came as the mineworkers union at Johannesburg prepared for a "mass service gathering" commemorating the martyr-miners, killed when Smuts ordered police raids in eight urban centers against so-called "agitators."

The police seized documents of many trade unions, of the Guardian and of the Friends of the Soviet Union. These they were forced to return when the Supreme Court ruled, in a suit brought by the newspaper, that their seizure was unlawful, and ordered the minister of justice to pay costs of the Guardian's court action. A public apology was also made at that time by the minister to the Friends of the Soviet Union. He said the raid "was directed against a certain individual" and added that it "was not intended in any way to give the impression that the society was a suspect organization."

Aiken's speech was a small voice in a wilderness of opposition to Federal housing that offered little hope for veterans and prospective low cost home buyers.

Offer "Used Homes"

Interests represented by Meyerhoff and Edgar N. Greenbaum, Chicago Investment builder have what they term a solution for vets housing. If the Federal government will remove all controls on rents and building materials, they will build for people who can afford $80 apartments and $10,000 homes. Veterans, and low income families can move into the "slightly used" quarters vacated by such a move.

Speaking at the same meeting, Dr. Robert C. Weaver, of the American Council on Race Relations, said that all post-war housing programs must open new areas for minority groups.

Largest round of applause during the session went to Meyerhoff, however, when he called for abolition of the National Housing agency, and all other government housing moves, except loans to private builders.

Consideration for the Minority

The Times New York, N.Y. Fri. 12-6-46

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEW YORK TIMES:

The remark in your editorial of Nov. 25 that "the Communists believe not in majority but in minority rule" seems to me to miss the mark. Theoretically, it is assailable because the Communist doctrine is totalitarian, and the ruling élite bases its claim to governing on the assumption of general popular consent. Practically, your argument is not on firm ground either. By the modern methods of mass psychological propaganda, including intimidation, totalitarian rulers really succeed in marshaling majorities for plebiscitarian ballots. If they did not attach vital importance to popular consent, why would they produce such insane quantities of propaganda for home consumption?

Dictators—certainly the best experts on dictatorship—believe that their regimes would tumble if they ceased being backed by 90 and more per cent. A democratic leader can manage with 51. Hence if it were correct to define democracy as majority government, the dictators would justly boast of being the better democrats. Fri.

In reality, the only reasonable way of defining the term is to describe democracy as majority rule with consideration for the minority. Communism is undemocratic even where it is accepted by the majority because it persecutes the minority. A minority will enjoy the consideration of the majority only where free elections can relegate the latter to the rank of the former. This is the criterion.

National Committee Urges Fight for Negro Job Rights

The need for higher tempo in labor's struggle for Negro rights and Party building among the Negro people occupied the late afternoon session of the Communist Party's National Committee Thursday.

This was emphasized in the report of John Williamson, organizational secretary, and in a special report by Henry Winston, World War II veteran and secretary of the National Negro Commission of the Communist Party.

Williamson spoke of the need to "recognize that the Browderite policies had some of their most disastrous effects in weakening our traditional fighting bond with the Negro people." 2-16-46

"Today," he emphasized, "we can only overcome this serious situation if we adopt a broad mass policy, if the Party dramatizes its fighting leadership by taking up locally and nationally in a hundredfold more energetic way the struggle for Negro rights; if we create a general vigilance against the covered forms of white chauvinism that have penetrated our ranks, and lastly involving a larger number of Negro comrades in all phases of the operative leadership in the Party."

Henry Winston, in a detailed report, cited numerous examples of the big offensive by Big Business against the Negro people. Among these were the more than half million Negro workers laid off in aircraft, munitions and ordinance plants, particularly in the South. He emphasized efforts underway to drive Negroes back to the land and women into domestic service.

Warning of the drive to get Negro women out of industry, he assailed government cooperation with employers to assign Negroes to menial jobs.

With regard to FEPC, Winston said "here is the use of the machinery of government to wipe out teh gains of Negro workers."

In view of the exodus of Negro workers from war plants, and inasmuch as the perspective is one of crisis, not prosperity, Winston stated that "gains won during the war by Negro workers are faced with utter extinction." 2-16-46

While critical of the Truman Administration, speakers noted that the Republican Party is taking advantage of the dissatisfaction among the Negro people to try and regain their former status among the Negro people.

Arnold Johnson, Ohio State secretary, spoke of the need for closing the gap between the Party's influence and its organizational results. "We continue to have tremendous influence," he said, "as far as any demonstrative forms of support shows. At the same time we do not perform that independent role of actually conducting mass struggles upon specific issues."

Josh Lawrence, NMU leader, and chairman of the National Negro commission said, it was still necessary to take up the fight for adjusted seniority for Negroes. He added that FEPC was an issue labor must fight until it is won.

ADJUSTED SENIORITY

Returning from a recent tour of the midwest, Councilman Benjamin J. Davis, reported a need for "widespread knowledge in the Party on the problems of the Negro people, the fight for adjustments on seniority, for renewing the crusading spirit in the fight for Negro rights."

Davis said the precedent for seniority was set about eight years ago under the leadership of Mike Quill and the Transport Workers Union, when it placed Negro drivers on the Fifth Avenue buses.

Davis scathingly assailed Trotzkyites and Social Democrats who throughout the country are "focussing attention on the Negro question hoping to disrupt our Party and attempting to pose as a working class force." He singled out A. Phillip Randolph, "Dubinsky's boy," as "the bridge between the Democrat and Republican parties and the Negro people." 2-16-46

William Patterson, legislative director of the Illinois-Indiana district, urged greater attention to the South "where the national liberation struggles of the Negro people in full alliance with the poor whites are yet to be fought out." He outlined a program of state and federal projects to take up the slack made by the closing of munitions and other plants in the South.

Claudia Jones, member of the editorial board of the Daily Worker, urged a stronger fight against white chauvinism, which "must be reflected in our press, theoretical organs and above all in struggle. We must win greater gains, greater victories."

Other speakers on party building among the Negro people and on the struggle for Negro rights, included James W. Ford, member of the Review and Cadre Commission, Robert Minor, Southern editor of the Daily Worker, and Nat Ross, Southern Representative of the National Committee.

The discussion concluded with agreement to issue a draft resolution on the question and a discussion bulletin to the party, and to hold a further discussion at the next National Committee meeting.

Davis, Cacchione Rip St. Patrick's Day Snub

Daily Worker New York, N.Y.

City Councilman Benjamin J. Davis Jr. and Peter V. Cacchione yesterday saluted St. Patrick's Day as a symbol of the fight for Irish freedom, and assailed as un-American and insolent the exclusion of the Communist Councilmen from the traditional parade today.

Their statement follows:

"St. Patric's Day symbolizes the 700-year struggle of the Irish people for their national independence and religious freedom against oppression. It is well-known that the Communist Party is unequivocally in support of this struggle, as it is in support of the struggles of all people for their political and religious liberty. We would consider it an honor to march in the parade tomorrow as we have done in the past. Sat. 3-16-46

"However, we were not invited to participate. In fact, an insolent letter was sent to the City Council by John J. Sheehan, of the Parade Arrangements Committee, expressly excluding us, although all other members of the Council were invited. The implications of this letter were wholly and unjustifiably slanderous with reference to our views and integrity, and we consider our exclusion an un-American act. Sat. 3-16-46

"The attempt of Mr. Sheehan through this letter to pick out arbitrarily who shall represent the City Council was defeated when the Council, due to the opposition of a majority and minority member, refused to place the letter in its own official proceedings.

"Our support to the fighting traditions of the Irish people and to the historic significance of St. Patrick's Day is undiminished."

The traditional parade to St. Patrick will be held down Fifth Ave. today.

His Fight Debunks Anti-Negro Lies

By BETH McHENRY

Howard (Stretch) Johnson finds his new post as New York educational director of the Communist Party a natural follow-up for his activities of the past 2½ years.

For Stretch (hardly anyone ever calls him Howard) was with the brave 92d Division in Italy and he saw plenty of action and plenty of people and the answers are as clear as a bell to him.

"You take the partisans in Northern Italy," he told us in an interview the other day. "They were courageous and tough and selfless and they were perhaps the greatest factor in victory there in Italy. I met their leaders and they were for the most part Communists; with Marxism in their heads and the love of their fellowmen in their hearts. That's why they were so brave and able."

WEARS PURPLE HEART

Stretch himself was wounded in the Northern Appenines campaign. He still carries around some 30 pieces of shrapnel scattered through his body. He has the Purple Heart t o, but then decorations were not rare among the fighting men of the 92d.

"American Negro troops were away out front in Italy," Stretch recalled. "If ever lies were answered by the deeds of men, the soldiers of the 92d Division answered Sen. Eastland's slanders by their magnificent fighting record." Wed 3-6-46

Stretch Johnson pointed to his own group. In a quartermaster battalion at Fort Warren, Wyo., he and 299 other men, all Negroes, were training. Asked to volunteer for infantry combat, 32 of the 300 volunteered and went over with the 92d. Of that small group, said Stretch, three got Bronze and Silver Star medals for meritorious service in combat and four got Purple Hearts.

WITH THE PARTISANS

In Italy, Stretch Johnson learned the language and acted as an interpreter with the partisans from whom the U. S. Army obtained information about the German dispositions.

He described the way the partisans, men and women, would go back and forth behind the German lines, "with the same assurance and cheerfulness that a Communist here goes out to distribute leaflets."

Dangerous assignments were routine to the North Italy Communists. Detection meant death before a firing squad. But these people didn't falter. They got the information and they defeated the Germans.

Stretch was wounded twice in action, the second time last April. He got it in both arms, legs, back and shoulders. He put in three months in a hospital in Italy and six months in one here.

ORGANIZING VETS

He considered building the Communist Party and organizing the war veterans about the biggest jobs to be done in America.

"The most encouraging sign as far as the organization of Negro veterans is concerned," he told us, "is the plan for the formation of an interracial nationwide veterans' organization whose main purpose will be to fight for Negro rights."

He himself is on the State Executive Committee of the United Veterans for Equality. The big struggles now are against more Freeport cases and for a permanent FEPC.

Stretch Johnson considers himself a New Yorker, although actually he was born in Orange, N. J. His youngest brother, Wesley, saw service in the Pacific, got the Soldiers' Medal for heroism in the Okinawa campaign. Another brother, an actor, volunteered for overseas service with the United Service Organization and went with the Porgy and Bess troupe to the South Pacific. Wed 3-6-46

Another thing he recalled warmly was the popularity of the American Negro troops with the Italian people. Ask anyone who has been over there, Stretch said.

HOWARD JOHNSON

"The Italian people were suspicious and afraid of many Americans, but the Negroes they took to their hearts, perhaps because we approached them as fellow human beings in trouble."

Communist Call to Action

TO ALL PARTY MEMBERS

Dear Comrades:

The highly significant meeting of the National Committee of our Communist Party concluded its three-day session on Friday, Feb. 15, with the adoption of a number of important decisions and actions on a series of major issues and problems now confronting the American working class and nation.

The meeting was characterized by a great awareness of the responsibilities of our Communist Party in the huge economic and political struggles of the day. It highlighted the political urgency of building a mass Communist Party firmly entrenched in the key industries and shops as the indispensable instrument of the working class in defeating the reactionary drive of American imperialism at home and abroad.

The meeting discussed in this light a wide range of fundamental questions. Among these were: the present wage and strike movement, the fight for Big Three unity as the key to world peace, the fight for a progressive legislative program and the preparation for the 1946 elections, the tasks in the struggle for Negro rights, the work among the veterans and youth, the struggle against Browderism, for an intensive struggle on the ideological front, and the building of a strong, fighting Communist Party.

The National Committee calls upon our membership to study in detail the policies outlined at this meeting. The main reports and decisions will be made available through the columns of the Daily Worker, Political Affairs, and in several pamphlets. Membership meetings, conferences and club discussions are planned in each district. Only through an understanding of these decisions can we bring about that heightened mass activity so vitally necessary if our Party is to meet the test of the unfolding struggles of today.

We call upon our entire membership to re-intensify all its efforts to help bring to a successful conclusion the strike struggles now underway, and to prepare the working class to meet with strengthened unity the far-reaching economic and political battles against monopoly capitalism which loom ahead. The great militancy and solidarity of labor, supported actively by the Negro people, the veterans and other sections of our people, has already wrung important concessions from the employers and has partially checked the offensive of big business. But the fight is not over.

The struggles for wage demands and the protection of the economic and political standards of the workers will involve larger sections of the CIO, the AFL and the Railroad Brotherhoods. No stone must be left unturned to help bring about the greatest coordination and unity of all sections of labor. This demands a decisive change in the work of all progressives in the AFL to prevent the reactionary leadership of its Executive Council, dominated by the Lewis-Hutcheson-Dubinsky clique, from sabotaging the united front of labor against the attacks of the monopolists. This further demands that no reliance be placed upon the Truman Administration, but only upon the organization, unity, and firmness of labor itself.

The further expansion of the independent activities of the Party will help steel the ranks of the working class, help wrest new concessions from the employers and the Administration, advance the unity of labor and its allies, and bring forward the working class as the most consistent champion of the cause of the people.

We call upon our membership to redouble its activities around a well-defined legislative program which must include in the first place the defeat of the Case anti-labor bill, the enactment of a permanent FEPC, the maintenance of price control and an end to inflationary price concessions to the trusts; a minimum wage law of 65 cents an hour; unemployment insurance for striking veterans; and other vital needs of labor and the common people. On the basis of such a program, the Party should gear its entire membership for the 1946 elections. The crucial 1946 elections demand the elimination of all apathy and passivity—and the full mobilization of all labor and progressives to defeat the reactionary Republican and Democratic southern bourbon coalition in Congress. Only the development of an independent policy of labor and its democratic allies in the course of these elections, can accomplish this objective. Only such a policy will speed the development of a broad anti-monopoly, anti-imperialist and anti-fascist people's party—independent of the two main bourgeois parties in time for the 1948 elections.

The Party must do everything to help crystallize a broad labor and people's coalition in each area for the defeat of all pro-fascist and reactionary candidates, irrespective of party label, and for the election, on both the Democratic and Republican Party tickets, of candidates responsible to and representative of the labor-democratic camp. The independent political role of labor, asserted in unison with all anti-fascist forces, can score important victories in 1946.

We call upon our membership to renew with greater determination the struggle against the anti-Soviet, anti-United Nations "get tough" course of reactionary big business, the imperialist trend of the Truman administration, and for strengthening the American-Soviet-British coalition as the only means of ensuring a long-term peace .

With increased energy the Party must revive the mass campaign to withdraw our armed forces from China. These continue to be used as a threat over the Chinese people, and encourage the reactionary Kuomintang clique to sabotage the recently concluded Kuomintang - Communist-Democratic League pact for a united democratic China.

We must rouse to action large masses of the American people in support of the national, liberation struggle of the people of Indonesia, and for the complete independence of Puerto Rico and the Philippine Islands, ensuring that the pledge of unconditional independence for the Philippine Islands in July 1946 will be fully achieved.

We call upon our membership everywhere to develop a consistent day-to-day struggle for the rights of the Negro people, against the increaisng violations of the most elementary democratic liberties of the Negro people, and against the vicious anti-Negro campaign of propaganda and incitement fostered by the reactionary trusts and their agents in Congress. In this connection the Party must conduct a relentless struggle to protect the wartime gains of the Negro workers and to prevent the elimination of Negroes from industry, carrying this fight into every shop and union. The Communists must help influence all of labor resolutely to defend and extend the rights of Negro workers as a necessary condition for raising to a new level the alliance of labor and the Negro people.

The Party, in the course of developing its own independent activities, must mercilessly exterminate all expressions of white chauvinism in its own ranks, improve its work in every community, continue the beginnings attained in the South, and systematically develop Negro cadres for leadership in all fields of Communist work.

At no time in the history of America did the working class face such huge and complicated tasks. At no time have the workers fought with such resoluteness and determination. At no time was there also such great need for Communist leadership and guidance. The American working class is in motion. Fundamental questions are stirring the people. These can be answered only by a Party which bases all its policies on the science of the working class, the science of Socialism-Marxism-Leninism. That is why the National Committee centered its major attention on the political necessity of building a mass Communist Party representative of the most advanced fighters against capitalist exploitation and reaction—a fighting Communist vanguard, able to assume leadership of the working class, unswervingly defending its interests at all times and under all conditions.

The decision to launch a national Party Building Drive to last from March 15 to June 1, represents the needs of today. Everywhere throughout the world the Communist Parties have grown to phenomenal size. In the liberated countries of Europe—in France, Italy, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, Belgium, Greece, Poland—millions have joined the Communist movement. Spectacular growth has been shown by the Communist Parties in the colonial and semi-colonial countries and in Latin America. Our Party, working and living in the strongest and most powerful imperialist nation of the world, must increase its strength if the cause of peace, democracy, and security is to be won.

Our Party in America can grow if every Communist in the shops and industries will bring into our ranks the militant workers in steel, auto, packing, electrical farm equipment, mining and other important industries of the country. Only if we sink deep roots among the workers in these industries can we speak of creating a Party worthy of the name Communist. We are confident that this campaign will be taken up in every club, shop and industry—and that we will grow rapidly in the coming months among the shop workers and trade unionists, among the youth and veterans, among the Negro people and women workers.

Our Party can become the fighting Marxist Party of the working class if it rids itself completely of every vestige of Browderism which had such disastrous effects on our own organization and the struggles of labor and the people. The unanimous action of the National Committee for the expulsion of Earl Browder will clear the road for a more energetic struggle against all remnants of revisionism and opportunism. It will raise the struggle against Browderism to a new level—that of an alien enemy ideology which must be completely uprooted in order to strengthen the Marxist-Leninist understanding and will to struggle of the entire Party.

We are confident that the entire membership will support this action of the National Committee. With renewed energy our membership will work to build a united and powerful Communist Party, strict in its adherence to the principles of Marxism-Leninism, defending the immediate interests of the workers and advancing the cause of socialism in America.

Now is the time for work, and greater work. Now is the time for building a great fighting Communist Party

Seattle Communists Fight Discrimination

Seattle, Wash.

Editor, Daily Worker:

The Kings County Communist Party here in Seattle recently sponsored a public meeting of protest against racial discrimination. The meeting was well attended and the spirit shown gave evidence of the determination of the people of the north-west to fight discrimination of all kinds.

A resolution was passed to support the fight of the citizens of Columbia, Tenn., against Jimcrow and segregation. The boycott of motion picture houses and transportation facilities which practice Jimcrow is a good idea.

We, in Seattle, are communicating with the citizens of Columbia for the purpose of attempting to organize a similar movement here.

HATS OFF TO ALABAMA

Hats off to Alabama, first to go over the top in the Communist Party recruting drive.

Liquidated under the revisionist policies of Earl Browder, the Communist Party in Alabama not only made a comeback but achieved the goal set for June 1 yesterday, a little less than two months ahead of time. Tues 4-9-46

Harold Bolton, party organizer there, announced the results in a jubilant telegram to John Williamson, member of the national secretariat. Alabama is now setting its sights for a goal of 250 members by June 1, he declared. His message concluded with "regards to Texas," whose party members in socialist competition with Alabama, now are on the spot.

Williamson replied with a message of congratulations. "That's an inspiration to the entire party," he said. "If it can be done in Alabama starting virtually from scratch and working under difficult conditions, then it can be done all over the country."

People & Issues

Walter White And the Facts of Life

By Benjamin J. Davis

The Worker

THE Negro people of America have a very high and favorable regard for the Soviet Union. It is the one country where racial and religious discrimination is a crime and where the criminal laws governing this subject are rigidly enforced. The Negro population took special pride in the great contributions made by the Red Army in defeating Hitler and they have viewed the equality in fact enjoyed by the peoples of the Soviet Union as an example set for the world, including their own country.

Although it is well known that the 15,000,000 Negroes are not Communists (a small percentage are, however), they realize that any setback to the Soviet Union is a setback to democracy and freedom among peoples, and would have harmful consequences for the democratic principles of our own country. Most of the Negro newspapers reflect a real positive appreciation of the Soviet Union and attempt to deal fairly with news about the role and achievements of this Socialist land.

Knowing that the capitalist rulers of America occasionally succeed in getting a Negro leader to betray his own people for a mess of pottage, large sections of the Negro workers understand quite well how American and British imperialism are able to get certain reactionary, anti-Soviet forces in Iran to betray their country for sinister purposes. Certainly, the Negroes are not easily taken in by the pretensions of Secretary Byrnes, of the poll-tax, anti-Negro regime in South Carolina, when he claims to be deeply interested in the "weak and defenseless" colored people of Iran. New York, N.Y.

SOME are taken in, however, indicating there still is a small market for anti-Soviet peddlers in restricted Negro circles. For example, Mr. Walter White spoils one of his recent columns in the Negro press by falling hook, line and sinker for the current slander of "Russian imperialism" hurled against the Soviet Union in connection with the so-called Iranian question. In so doing, Mr. White shows that he understands neither the "Iranian question," the Soviet Union, nor imperialism. In brief, the "Iranian question" is merely an artificially-created crisis by the American and British governments to incite hostility against the Soviet Union in preparation for an anti-Soviet war—World War III. If it isn't the "Iranian question," it will be some other "crisis" unless the people intervene for world peace and security.

Imperialism is the exploitation by the monopoly capitalists in the mother country of the peoples of colonial or subject countries. The Soviet Union is a classless society without capitalists or capitalism and cannot be imperialist. These facts and laws of economics are very elementary and Mr. White should know them. It is the imperialist policies of our government which are driving toward war. The Soviet Union is a fortress of peace and world security.

WALTER WHITE is secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, which makes many contributions for Negro rights and on other issues of internal democracy, particularly on the legal front. But every now and then he swallows a piece of anti-Soviet bait, evidently not fully recognizing that the white supremacy forces dangle the same type of bait against the Negro people in America. It is about time he learned the facts of life.

How Alabama Achieved Its Quota

The Worker

By HAROLD BOLTON

New York

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—On April 5, Alabama, with a quota of 150, reached its goal, almost two months ahead of the deadline! New York

Of the 159 new members, over 33 percent are from the district's concentration industries, steel, coal and ore. Over 61 percent are from the organized labor movement, CIO and AFL. In round numbers, 95 out of the 152 are trade unionists.

The main question the district faced in the drive was to overcome the lethargy and passivity of the older members, many of whom clung to the theory that only a deep economic crisis such as in 1926-36 would move the people to the party. This theory was used to discount all the rich possibilities in the strike struggles, especially in steel, which in turn affected ore, coal and other industries.

In many instances it was necessary actually to bypass the older members and to arouse the newer ones who were more alert to the moods of the people and to the danger signals of a third world war, Truman's desertion of the path to peace, the slander against the Soviet Union, the murder of FEPC, the organization of the Klan, and the rising cost of living.

The killing of Timothy Hood, young Negro war veteran in Bessemer, Ala., by the police chief [of Brighton, Ala.] for the "crime" of moving the segregation sign on a street car, the attack against the Negro people in Columbia, Tenn., the call for increased segregation in transportation, on the part of the state's white supremacists, all tended to move the masses of the Negro people into action.

PASSIVITY BROKEN

Leaflets, organized work by the clubs, and activity in unions and churches broke through the fog of passivity and thus in a comparatively brief period the deadlock was ripped apart and we began to move into action. Our clubs raised funds for the steel strikers, as well as for the Timothy Hood case. We became increasingly active in the communities, through the distribution of leaflets and we increased our Worker circulation from about 150 copies weekly, both subs and bundle orders, to over 500 copies weekly, in the space of less than three months.

The club have begun to grow, although even yet there are some which have not moved in the drive. However, most of the clubs, both new and old, are participating in some activity. Many new clubs were formed, three in steel, one in coal, one in grain and three in food, as well as others.

The district functionaries spent the great bulk of their time in the clubs assisting the work, not taking over the work. No extra "tempo" meetings were called but emphasis was placed on the club leaders' work in the clubs.

NEW GOAL

The drive is not yet completed. We have resolved to reach 210 new members by May 11 and then attempt to bring our recruiting to 250, to equal the Texas goal of 250.

Whether or not the pace can be held remains to be seen. It is necessary to improve the concentration composition to better than the present 33 percent, although actually our goal was to double our membership in these industries, which has been accomplished, except in ore.

Highlight of the campaign is the readiness of the Negro people to join our ranks, if they are properly approached. The great majority of the new members are Negro workers. Sun 4-21-46

It is no accident that one of the newly formed clubs calls itself the Ben Davis Club. Ben Davis' election to the New York City Council, as well as his fighting activity there, has helped us immeasurably in this drive.

BIG GROWTH AID

The role of the newly established shop clubs and the supporting activity of the community clubs during the recent strike struggles were major factors in the Party's growth in the key industries. Many of our community clubs became recognized as an important factor in the strike and some locals issued union credentials authorizing the Clubs to send out speakers and committees to speak and collect for the union.

While placing our major stress on building the party in basic industry through the improved functioning of the shop clubs, we must never lose sight of the fact that to really forge ahead in concentration, the entire party organization must participate. Thus, through the efforts of the Cleveland West Side striking brought home to the com-

55% Ohio Recruits Are Basic Workers

Daily Worker, New York, N.Y.

In setting forth Ohio's objectives in the Party Building Drive of 1,000 new members, 50 percent of whom shall come from basic industry, our State Committee emphasized that the success of this drive shall be judged, in the first place by the extent to which we achieve our concentration objectives.

Examining the results of the drive to date we can say that although we are by no means satisfied with the tempo of our recruiting we have exceeded our concentration goal. Out of 450 recruits 55 percent are in basic industry, coming from steel, rubber, auto, electrical, coal, aluminum and railroad workers.

We decided to make steel the pace-setter in the drive. To dramatize our steel concentration and to formulate concrete plans, a statewide steel conference was convened in Youngstown. One hundred delegates assembled, the bulk of them steel workers. They came fresh from the picket lines bubbling over with experiences of the contributions of our Party and the press towards achieving victory in the strike. The conference worked out a program of building the party in steel "in the course of struggle to preserve and extend the strike-won gains."

It wasn't long before we began to get results. A Lorain steel worker was so enthused that within a few days he recruited 7 others. Steel recruits were reported from Youngstown, Cleveland, and Canton. A Negro steel worker from Ohio Valley, President of an active NAACP branch composed mostly of steel workers, was deeply moved by the conference discussion on the need for our Party to be seen and felt in the life of the community. At the next meeting he informed the members that he was a Communist. The response was such that he has now built up a list of 20 prospective recruits. Fri. 5-17-46

Youth Club, a tool-and-die-maker, a Westinghouse and railroad worker were recruited. Comrades in the white collar and professional groups assisted in recruiting steel workers by the sale of The Worker in Lorain and in the Broadway steel area of Cleveland.

The broad movement against the Tennessee lynch terror that was developed by the Ohio Party brought many key workers into our ranks. A striking example of that is the campaign conducted by the Canton Communist Party in the course of which 24 Negro steel workers joined.

Greatly increased mass education in industrial communities, utilizing the radio, press and leaflets has proven a powerful aid to Party building. In Ohio Valley the weekly message of the Communist Party broadcast by A. Krchparek is awaited with intense interest by thousands of coal miners. No wonder that 26 coal diggers and steel workers have joined the Party in the past 4 weeks.

The voice of Andy Onda can be heard weekly in the homes of numerous steel workers in Youngstown and Warren discussing such problems as: How to fight speed-up in the mills, how to prevent layoffs of Negro workers regardless of seniority and how the veterans can win back their vacation pay.

Similarly, the Cleveland broadcasts by Gus Hall and those in Akron by Joe Friedman, have made a considerable impression not only on the rank and file, but also on many of the leading forces in the labor movement. Fri. 5-17-46

ONE GETS SIX

The great opportunities for Party building in new fields that are opened up by new members were 66 New Members

The Worker
New York N.Y.

By Nat Ross

Sixty-six workers joined the Communist Party in a single meeting in one of the industrial centers of the South. An examination of how this came about should be of some value to our Party throughout the country.

A carefully selected list of 150 active trade unionists and other community leaders were invited to this meeting. A total of 110 were present, all but 10 of them Negroes. The chairman of the meeting was a well-known Negro trade unionist. The district chairman of the Communist Party, spoke on some problems of the people in the South. The writer dealt with the struggle for peace, Truman and labor, the Negro people and the profound developments in the South. The main talk was delivered informally with numerous stories and incidents related to bring home some political lessons. Sun 6-16-46

Fifteen minutes was devoted to an appeal for joining the Communist Party, during which time the role of the Communists all over the world was discussed. The significance of the Benjamin Davis election received particular attention. The role of the Communists in the trade unions was discussed during the question period.

Literature worth $5.50 was sold, including Minor's pamphlet, How Ben Davis Was Elected, Wilkerson's Why Negroes Should Join the Communist Party, Dennis' pamphlet on the Struggle for Peace and Magil's on Socialism. The meeting opened with an invocation and closed with a benediction.

Practically every one of the 66 who signed up is a trade unionist, the majority being active members. About half of the new members are women. Out of the 87 non-members present, only 21 failed to sign up, some because they did not have the initiation fee.

What lessons can be drawn from this meeting:

1. The working people and especially the Negroes, are profoundly stirred by the political upsurge in the South, dramatized in the registration-to-vote movements and the union organizing drives. They are anxious to join in the struggle for higher wages, jobs, against Jimcrow and against the imperialist war drive.

2. The fighting policy of the Communist Party on the Negro question and the exposure of the anti-labor and strikebreaking role of the Truman Administration has won many friends for the Communist Party.

3. The drive to organize the unorganized millions in the South comes at a most crucil time. Southern Communists promptly overcame certain negative attitudes in their ranks toward this drive, which had been provoked by official red-baiting and anti-Negro statements. This dynamic approach is enabling the Party to make a vital contribution to the historic drive to organize the unorganized. Sun 6-16-46

4. Proper planning and organizational measures prior to, during and after the recruiting meetings are essential.

5. There are dozens of cities in the South, as well as in other sections of the country where similar results can be achieved if proper plans are made.

6. The National Party Building drive officially ends on June 18. But in reality it should be the beginning, the springboard from which all Party organizations shall move to recruit thousands upon thousands of new members who ardently believe that the Party's fighting policy is their policy, the only policy in the defense of the American people.

rades in Youngstown. Thus, a steel worker recruited in the mill invited six others to attend a public meeting arranged by a community club, where all six were recruited.

The Cedar-Central Section of Cleveland has not only set an example in recruiting, but also in the education of new members. A number of new members' classes have been set up with an excellent attendance record. They have also formed a class for 18 steel workers who wanted to learn more about the Party. Their enthusiasm has mounted with every class they attend, Abe Lewis, the organizer for Cedar-Central reports.

of the drive, we are determined to:

1) To make a determined effort to involve in the drive those individuals and clubs which haven't as yet done any recruiting.

2) To ask all the clubs to check up on other recruiting plans and take the necessary measures to guarantee the carrying through of their decisions. The need to check up on the execution of correct decisions is not only true of the clubs, but of the higher bodies as well.

3) To schedule the drive in the State, County and Clubs on a week to week basis. This means setting a weekly goal, and a program of activities that will make possible the realization of that goal, to include special meetings of nationality groups, youth, vets, mass activities in connection with price control, peace, etc. Fri. 5-17-46

4) To arrange in Ohio 50 well-prapared house parties during the National Recruiting week-end of May 24, 25, 26.

5) To give more direct assistance to the main concentration points in the final phase of the drive. The State Chairman has been assigned to spend two weeks in Youngstown and the State Secretary in Canton and Akron, to assist the local leadership both in planning the drive as well as in speaking at meetings and visiting of contacts.

Buffalo Club Recruits 44, Mostly Negroes

Daily Worker New York, N.Y.

BUFFALO, April 10.—The Frederick Douglass Club of the Communist Party, six months old, has recruited 44 new members, most of them in the fight for Negro rights.

The club functions in Buffalo's Fifth Ward, predominantly a Negro community. Thur. 5-11-46

On Nov. 3, a white candy store owner was brutally murdered. The next day, the police began to round up Negro young men, and held them for hours for questioning. As a result some of them lost their jobs

[illegible] weeks later, five young Negro boys were arrested for riding in a stolen car. These boys, ranging in age from twelve to eighteen, were then accused of the murder.

The club leaders immediately got in touch with the families of the boys, got the facts from them and went with them to get a lawyer. A leaflet was issued, exposing the frameup and calling for mass protests. The Club organized a delegation of Negro and white to see the Mayor and to demand the release of the boys. A mass meeting was then called in one of the leading churches in the community, and the campaign was picked up by other groups and by the churches in particular.

BOYS RELEASED

As a result, the boys were released and the murder charge dropped. The father of one of the boys not only joined the Party, but recruited 15 workers from his shop, a steel plant, to build a shop club. In all, 23 people joined the party as a result of this successful campaign.

In Buffalo, Negroes who applied for jobs as cab drivers were turned away with the statement: "What would we look like sending you after a white woman." The Club got busy on this issue, got out a leaflet, held a protest meeting, and brought the question up in several community organizations. Thur. 5-11-46

The Common Council was forced to hold a public hearing on this question. The Party, the CO Council, the ALP and many other organizations were represented. The Mayor was forced to postpone the voting for two weeks, after which a negative vote was sneaked through. This fight is by no means over, and ten people have already joined the Party on the strength of this campaign.

When the International Bowling Tournament opened in Buffalo, some members of the Club learned that a Negro team, of the Jesse Clipper Post of the American Legion, had been refused admission. On inquiry it turned out that the rules of the American Bowling Congress allowed only "white male" players. Thur. 5-11-46.

A telephone campaign was organized by the Club, involving the entire Party in Buffalo. We tied up the box office phone successfully. On the opening night of the Congress, the Party picketed the Armory where the tournament was being held, with the overwhelming majority of the pickets white members and sympathizers. Sen. Mead refused to cross the line and wide publicity resulted.

The NAACP, The CIO Council, the Urban League, Jewish War Veterans, churches, and unions took up the fight. To get the heat off, the Congress announced that at its convention the question would be taken up of changing the constitution. On that day that the Convention opened, a representative delegation of the labor movement and the Party was present, put up a stiff fight to state its case to the delegates, but were unable to.

This fight must be continued, and it will be continued at the tournament. The independent, leading role of the Party in this fight received wide attention in the press, and at our last meeting twelve new members have joined the club.

This kind of activity has resulted in real Party Builidng. Our recruits are mostly steel, and other basic industrial workers. Many of our new members are vets. Our Club is sure that continuing such fights in behalf of the people will lead to further strengthening and further victories.

Sirs:

I am puzzled about the statement in Arthur M. Schlesinger Jr.'s article, "U. S. Communist Party" (LIFE, July 29), reading, "With the attack on Russia, the Communists soft-pedaled the race question. The party is currently trying to make up the ground thus lost by exploiting the riot in Columbia, Tenn. as it exploited the Scottsboro affair and by sinking tentacles into the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People."

This has been variously interpreted as either a) infiltration into the association or b) making attacks upon the association. Could LIFE and Mr. Schlesinger tell us just what is meant?

Sirs:

Congratulations on the excellent article by Schlesinger on "The U.S. Communist Party" (LIFE, July 29). In the muddle of so much careless thinking about Russia and the Communist party it is good to read such an objective and rational article, free from hysteria and red-baiting. . . .

Sirs:

Professor Schlesinger's "The U. S. Communist Party" not only shows up the C.P.U.S.A. as a fanatical fifth column but—more important, perhaps—rebukes those influential Americans who fellow-travel where Russian foreign policy is concerned. While these (often) well-meaning Americans do not hew absolutely to the party line, they do manage to place major blame for the present impasse of the Big 3 on Britain and America. . . .

11 Bronx Reds Are Expelled As Too Radical

The Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky. Wed. 11-6-46

Group Had Threatened Rebellion Within Party

Special From The New York Times to The Courier-Journal.

New York, Nov. 5.—Eleven rank-and-file members of the Communist Party have been purged for attempting open rebellion within the party ranks because they thought the official Communist line was not radical enough, it was announced today.

The party's indictment against those it expelled charged that they were guilty of making exaggerated and "one-sided" attacks on the Democratic Party and the Truman Administration while sparing the Republicans, whom the Communists regard as "the main centers of reaction."

Others Ousted Earlier.

The ouster, which hit "small fry" members of one of the party's Bronx clubs, was the first announced wholesale expulsion of leftist heretics since the party began to rid itself of influential members, one and two at a time, for the same reasons.

As such, it was the first indication that the top-level heresies had filtered down to the Communist rank and file and had enlisted some of them in defiant opposition to the party.

Victims of the purge held views substantially the same as those for which four members recently were ousted. The four were William F. Dunne, who once shared leadership of the party with William Z. Foster and Earl Browder; Vern Smith, a leading West Coast Communist; Ruth McKenney, author of the "My Sister Eileen" stories, and her husband, Richard Bransten, who wrote for The New Masses under the name of Bruce Minton.

Only Four Are Named.

Sopkesmen at the Bronx County committee of the party declared it was believed that the 11 dissidents had been tied up with the Dunne-McKenney group or at least had engaged in "some contact" with them. Only four of the 11 were identified by name: Sylvia Price, her two sisters, Eileen Rechtman and Bea Rechtman, and Jerry Schwartz.

The eleven were accused of carrying on "disruptive antiparty activities of a left-wing, sectarian, semi-Trotzkyist nature."

Recruit and Educate, CP Board Calls

Daily Worker New York 2-15-46

Local Groups to Set Quotas, To Stress Socialist Teachings

Party building in a new manner—with quotas set by district, county and club organizations instead of by top committees—was voted unanimously after a full half-day discussion yesterday by the National Committee of the Communist Party.

Recruiting is to be carried on in the course of a campaign to strengthen the Party politically through educational activity, simultaneous with organization and leadership of mass struggles.

This was the meaning of the resolution authorizing the drive, which was adopted by the committee.

Education for socialism as the only final solution to the problems of the American people must be an important feature of the drive, a number of speakers stressed. This political enlightenment must go hand in hand with the day to day struggles for wage increases, lower prices, housing, Negro rights and the election of a progressive Congress in 1946, they said.

FIGHT ULTRA 'SELECTIVITY'

A majority of members who spoke argued against any tendency to restrict or narrow down the drive. They warned against being so "selective" in recruiting as to exclude from the party workers willing and eligible to join. The perspective, as hammered out in the discussion, developed for a drive to win the masses of workers, especially in the basic industries, and to educate them to an understanding of Marxism-Leninism.

Some members warned against "paper recruiting" or recruiting for the record which leads to high levels of fluctuation.

The basis for the discussion was laid by John Williamson, national organizational secretary, in a sub- report on the proposed party building drive.

Williamson said that strike struggles involving millions of workers was a crucial test for the party, which "had to demonstrate its leading role and provide immediate answers to numerous problems confronting labor and the nation."

FOUGHT FOR FEPC 2-15-46

The strikes activized many members who had not attended club meetings for months, he said, and where there were Communists, strike activity and morale were at their highest. He documented this with examples from Chicago, Buffalo, Boston, Youngstown, Flint and other strike areas.

Communists were also active in organizing the national campaign in support of legislation for a permanent FEPC, Williamson said, and stimulated other groups to activity. As a result, a conference on a city FEPC was held in St. Louis which strengthened the fight for national legislation.

He gave other examples where initiative by the Communists resulted in action of labor, the Negro people and other population groups, for progressive ends.

In the course of these struggles, Williamson said, "Our party has started to relearn how to function as a vanguard political party of the working class."

"It is by helping the workers to understand and meet complicated problems which go beyond the elementary experiences and practices of the trade union that our party will re-establish itself with the confidence and support of the workers."

Elizabeth Gurley Flynn reported on her recent visit to Paris as a member of the American delegation to the International Women's Congress. She described in glowing terms the great Communist Party of France and spoke of its interest in the American party's struggle against Browderism. 2-15-46

IDEOLOGICAL CAMPAIGN

Gil Green, Illinois state secretary, said the drive must be approached with the aim of building a solid, Marxist-Leninist party which will function as a vanguard.

"The issue is between real party building and the sort of recruiting drives we used to put on. Party building must have as its main fulcrum an ideological campaign." He described reeducating cadre as essential, to eliminate bad habits of work acquired during Browder's revisionism.

One of the highlights of the day's session was the speech by City Councilman Peter Cacchione.

"One part of the good old days I'd like to go back to," he said, "are good old days before Browderism, when we organized and led mass struggles."

Cacchione recalled that when he entered the party in 1932, New York had 6,000 members. It grew to 15,000 in a year and a half as a result of the struggles led by Communists for unemployment insurance and the veterans' bonus.

Housing, said Cacchione, is one of the biggest issues facing the people today. 2-15-46

"There are two and a half million families without homes. Before another year, the figure will be three million. Many young people cannot get married because they can't find homes. Many young couples are worried about having babies for the same reason. Yet capitalism boasts about its protection of the sanctity of the home."

HOUSING MAJOR ISSUE

Miss said Miss Gaulden, "is a millstone around the Negro people's neck. We attract the Negro people because of our militant fight on issues which concern them. But we have not yet found the medium to train and hold our new members."

Irving Potash said that the Communists were among the workers. He asserted that unions led by Communists in many unions and many struggles isn't known by the party and the trade unions is shown to the workers. He emphasized the most successful in winning conditions for their members. "It is time for correct educational activity on socialism.

SOUTH NEEDS COMMUNISTS

Gabor Kish, secretary of the Washington, Pa., organization, said that the party drive will succeed only if the difference between the party and the trade unions is shown to the workers. He emphasized the necessity of more educational activity on socialism.

"But fluctuation," said Miss Gaulden, "is a millstone around our neck. We attract the Negro people because of our militant issues which concern them. But we have not yet found the medium to train and hold our new members."

Irving Potash said that the Communists were among the workers. He asserted that unions led by Communists in many unions and many struggles isn't known by the party and the trade unions is shown to the workers. He emphasized the most successful in winning conditions for their members. "It is time for correct educational activity on socialism.

He urged the Communist Party to take up housing as a major issue and fight for a solution.

Rose Gaulden, Harlem party leader, said the Negro people of Harlem want and need the Communist Party. She told of Negro veterans who learned about socialism from their Communist buddies in foxholes. They came to party headquarters to join, she said.

Nat Ross, Southern representative of the national committee, asserted that the Southern people desperately need the Communist Party, because it is the only party that has a solution to the Negro question and will lead struggles in the interests of Negro and white. The revisionist period has left its scars in the South, he said, and there is resistance to party building which a drive will overcome.

Morris Childs, editor of the Daily Worker, emphasized the role which the party press can play in the recruiting drive.

Mother Ella Reeve Bloor, with her usual spirit and humor, welcomed the party building drive and expressed confidence in its success.

Other speakers on party building included: 2-15-46

William Schneiderman, California state secretary; Carl Winter, Michigan state secretary; Bella Dodd, New York state legislative secretary; Arnold Johnson, Ohio state secretary; Jack Stachel, member of the national board; John Steuben, New York; Henry Huff, Washington state chairman; Anne Burlak, Massachusetts state secretary; William Norman, New York state organizational secretary; Roy Hudson, western Pennsylvania secretary.

The Party That Fights For the Negro People

Daily Worker

—— By Elizabeth Gurley Flynn

We are especially inviting Negro Americans, men and women, who are deeply and justifiably stirred against segregation, discrimination, lynching and violence—North and South. They will find their efforts to wipe out jimcrow and to attain full democracy shared by every Communist.

Mon 4-22-46

The Communist Party is uncompromisingly opposed to all concepts of white supremacy as of the same barbaric ideology which produced fascist Aryan supremacy and anti-Semitism. We are fighting for the full rights of Negro Americans, and all our past activities demonstrate this.

We first became known to the Negro people through the Scottsboro case and the fight to free Angelo Herndon. Any illusions that the winning of the war would automatically carry with it the complete equal rights of Negro Americans has proved to be a will-o'-the-wisp.

FOUGHT AND DIED

Negro soldiers fought and died gallantly. The record of the 92d Division glows with their heroism. Negro air forces were ranked among the best and bravest. Negro women were nurses, WACs, Red Cross workers, and worked faithfully in every war industry. Negro seamen helped to "keep 'm sailing" and many were killed by submarine attacks.

The names of Dorie Miller, Captain Mulzac, Mrs. Bethune, Ferdinand Smith, and countless others are identified with America's war effort.

Capitalist America is now saying to our Negro citizens: "Go back to the kitchen, back to the porter's jobs, back to the mops and pails; back to the unskilled, underpaid, overworked, dirty, menial jobs; back to the plantations, back to the share-cropping. Put on your maid's cap, put on the patched overalls, lay aside your diplomas, your natty uniforms, your service ribbons, your medals, your union cards (you're out—the last to be hired, the first to be fired); forget about the four freedoms (keep your place)—back of the bus, sandwich in a bag, watch that sign: 'White Only,' keep your mouth shut if you don't want to be killed.

No American Legion Posts in the South for the black soldiers and separate Jim Crow Posts in the North. Don't try to vote, soldier in the Southland, if you value your life.

UNITY OUR AIM

The Communist Party fights all such disgraceful Jimcrow practices—North and South. When a Bilbo froths at the mouth and shouts—"Communist" at all who fight for Negro rights, we are complimented. Unity of black and white workers and all other liberty-loving people is one of the main objectives of the Communist Party; solidarity to wipe out this fascist shame in our country.

We plan to double the membership of our Party in the South in this coming campaign, to strengthen our work in this direction. We are very proud of our Negro leader, Benjamin J. Davis, Jr., who is one of our two Communist Councilmen in New York City, which exceeds in population, many countries.

Peter V. Cacchione of Brooklyn is the other Communist Councilman, a veteran of the last war, a leader of the unemployed demonstrations of the Hoover days, a staunch fighter for the people on every issue.

DAVIS CHEERED FOR ATTACK ON POLLTAX IN CHARLOTTE

Special to the Daily Worker

CHARLOTTE, N. C., April 29.—New York City Councilman Benjamin J. Davis, Jr., denounced the polltax at a student rally at Smith University here Friday.

Seven hundred Negro students attended the meeting, which was sponsored by the Alpha Omega chapter of the Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity. This was the first time that a Negro university has heard a Communist leader address a student meeting.

When Davis arrived yesterday he was met at the station by a police escort and a large crowd. Davis also spoke at the second ward high school and the local church. He received ovations at all meetings.

Davis was presented to the students of the university in connection with National Citizenship Week. His topic was "A Voteless People Is A Hopeless people." At the conclusion of his speech, Davis was congratulated by the president of Smith as an outstanding representative of the Negro people.

A Negro Newspaper Echoes Hearst

New York, N.Y.
Daily Worker

By CLAUDIA JONES

Growing lynch terror against the Negro people has called forth militant indignation and action on the part of their allies—organized labor and its Communist vanguard. Strong aspect of the reaction to this pro-fascist drive has been the unity expressed by the Negro people themselves.

Obviously, the Negro people recognize that unity is vital to defeating this drive—unity both among themselves and with their allies.

That's why it's strange to find a prominent Negro newspaper stating editorially," "News that Communist Party is becoming actively interested in the Columbia, Tennessee riot causes . . . . is disturbing."

Why should the participation of the Communists be "disturbing" to the editors of the Richmond Journal and Guide? (April 20) Everyone knows that it's not news that the Communists were among the first to expose these dastardly events. Well-known also is that the Communist Party, north and South today represents the most outspoken force against this lynch terror directed against the Negro people, and particularly Negro veterans. Communists, above all recognize that this domestic pro-fascist assault upon the Negro people, as well as on labor, democracy's two strongest forces, is part of a well-planned drive on the part of our own imperialistic for world domination and a new world war.

ATTACKS SCOTTSBORO

It is therefore all the more incredible that the Journal and Guide should refer to "bitter experience" in the fight for Negro equality with the Communists. What is this "bitter experience?" It is—says the Guide—holding up "Exhibit A" — the "notorious Scottsboro Case." This historic case in which the Communist Party fought and won the lives of nine Negro boys who were scheduled to die in the electric chair! Of this case which Dr. Adam Clayton Powell wrote recently could not be measured in terms of the effect on Negro-white unity, the guide holds up as "bitter experience."

Here it where it stubs it toe. One may compare the Scottsboro Case and the long hard struggle it took till the victory was won with the Ferguson Case in Freeport, L. I. Within two months; the mass struggle of the people, Negro and white, in New York State has brought three signal victories, in the exoneration of the brothers by the Army, Navy and Court authorities. Will the Guide see the prime role of the Communists in winning such victories as "disturbing"?

Insofar as the "notorious" aspects of the Scottsboro case it refers to is concerned, the Guide should be reminded that what was notorious about Scottsboro was the lynch-like justice this case represented. What was notorious was the official silence from official circles—than—as now. What was notorious was the freedom that the lynchers were to receive. It was the Communist Party that challenged the Big Business and Southern Bourbon forces in Scottsboro. It is this challenge that makes the Communists disturbing, alright—not to the mass of the Negro people, but to their enemies.

TOO MUCH AT STAKE

Therefore to do what the Guide tells its readers: "Let's Not Have A Tragic Repetition of Scottsboro" is to miss the key significance of the anti-Negro violence. It is to be guilty also of subtle red-baiting. The way to have no Scottsboro's is to fight unitedly to prevent them and to uncover the reasons for the occurrence of lynch law. The way to have no "tragic repetition" of Scottsboro or Tennessee is to prevent the divisive ideologists of the enemy, whether red-baiting or otherwise to infect the forces of unity who sincerely fight to achieve full equality for the Negro people. Certainly the editors of the Journad and Guide know that the Tennessee victims are the martyrs of a Jimcrow imperialist system which oppress both the Negro people and their white allies in the heart of the South.

There is too much at stake in this vital case for the Guide's editors to yield to red-baiting or any other pressures. There can be no disagreement with the Guide's emphasis that the defense of the Tennessee victims by the NAACP is in good hands.

Any exclusion of democratic forces, including the Communists, can only hurt the mass campaign which will be required to free the indicted Tennessee victims.

On Joining the Communist Party

Daily Worker

By SAMUEL SILLEN

IN AMERICA today it is not easy to be honest with other people, but it is a hundred times harder to be honest with yourself. A social system based on deception keeps driving us to deceive ourselves. And this is one of the most hateful features of capitalism—its pressure on human beings to avoid facing their real feelings, their real ideas.

Very often, for instance, one hears a man say (I used to say it myself): "Yes, I agree with the program of the Communist Party, but I won't join because I can be of more help outside the Party; I will not be labelled." Or another person will say (and I have said this too in my day): "The Communist Party is the only consistent party of progress, but it needs people of much greater courage and selflessness than I possess; I'm not quite good enough to be a Communist." 5-20-46

The second argument is flattering, and the first is friendly; but neither, I suspect, quite gets to the point.

And what is the point when you get right down to business with yourself? It is usually, especially among those of us who are white-collar workers, professionals, etc., a hesitation to snip the cord that attaches us to the very system that we understand breeds war and fascism and the exploitation of man by man.

It is not easy to be a Communist in America today. For capitalism, despite all pretences of freedom, skilfully envelops people in an atmosphere of intellectual terror; it threatens to punish us for being honest with ourselves; it holds our job as a club over our heads; it identifies our children as hostages.

In a measure this threat works. But on serious people, on people who have not yielded their innermost selves, it has a reverse effect. It sharpens a man's hatred of the tyranny and fraud that perpetuate Jimcrow and anti-Semitism. It gives an edge to his deepest desire as a decent human being to make himself felt as a force against fascism. It steels his will to stand up for what he knows to be the truth about Socialism. N.Y. N.Y.

None of us was born a Communist. Every agency of public miseducation pressed upon us the subversive, foreign-dictated, regimented horrors of Communism. And if we at last struggled through this swamp of lies to the sunlight, it was because a sense of man's dignity and worth could not be killed. 5-20-46

The Communist Party battles for such human integrity. It is composed of men and women who understand that in our day, when nothing less than the fate of all humanity is being decided, nobody can afford merely to dip his ankle in the struggles that swirl around us. We need a science of history as a guide to action; we need firm organization; we need a sturdy weapon of criticism and a clear, attainable goal. We need a concrete, day-to-day program on all living issues. And this we find in the one American Party basing itself on Marxism-Leninism, the Party of the working class.

Why is it that so many of the great intellectuals of all lands have joined the Communist ranks? Why did Dreiser in America, Picasso and Joliot-Curie, Haldane and O'Casey, Ehrenberg and Simonov, Ting Ling and Kobayashi? It is because they have understood that as Communists men best fulfill their mission to battle for those singing tomorrow which Gabriel Peri envisioned even under the shadow of the Nazi executioner. 5

A man must in the end make his own decision. The Communist Party cannot make up his mind for him. It can only urge him to assert his strength against a decaying system that moves headlong toward war, using science—the inheritance of all mankind—for destruction, imposing on the people the unbearable burden of its own toppling structure. Mon.

We appeal for recruits in a volunteer corps that fights for liberation of men's minds as well as release from economic bondage. We appeal for class-conscious, vanguard fighters against fascism. We appeal for men and women who dare to face not only the world but themselves, who wish to enhance their value as human beings through scientific understanding and organized action.

The Daily Worker has set itself a goal of 500 recruits to the Communist Party directly through its pages. I shall be happy to receive applications or letters of inquiry. Many of them

Harlem Communists Find:

Concentration Gets Recruits

By John Hudson Jones

Since March 15 the Harlem Communist Party has recruited 250 of its quota of 400 new members. Rose Gaulden, member of the Harlem Section Committee, in charge of industrial concentration, yesterday stated that, "since our direction of recruiting has changed from loosely organized community work to concentration on industrial workers, the Party now has the basis for mass growth."

Freedom Road Club is leading the Harlem party organizations with fifty-six new members. It has begun concentration on railroad workers. Twenty of the fifty-six are veterans. new York, N.Y.

The new members have come from among shoe workers, furriers, office workers, housewives, veterans, musicians, seamen, domestic workers, teachers, artists, railroad workers, garment workers, and long shore workers. 6-7-46

The recruiting is planned on a week to week basis, with a careful check-up on decisions and plans of work for each of the six clubs. Each concentration worker is assigned three to five people from the contact lists. Kits of educational material are made up, consisting of pamphlets by William Z. Foster, Benjamin J. Davis, Doxey Wilkerson, and others. Leaflets on current emergency issues, and the Daily and Sunday Workers are included. Friday

VISITS IMPORTANT

Miss Gaulden placed great emphasis on the visits to the contacts, "for it's then we discuss the issues of the day, and the program of the Party." 6-7-46

"We have found that the Daily Worker has been of invaluable assistance in this respect. Many of the people have commented that, 'of all the papers they read, the Daily Worker says more about the problems and life of Negroes, than any other'."

The recruits are immediately taught the principles of communism, and the basic program of the Party, in new members classes. In the six branches, eight classes are now going on simultaneously.

Miss Gaulden mentioned four things she considered good "Party Building Practices":

1 — Communists must be bolder, and show more imagination in presenting their program.

2—New members must be carefully integrated into club life on the basis of individual interest and ability.

3—Communists must be constantly sensitive to the basic needs of their communities, and organize struggles around them.

4—Communists must develop the attitude that there are never enough Communists, and talk to a prospective recruit every day.

ACTION PROGRAM

On housing and community sanitary conditions, the Party action program is based on these demands:

1—Compel landlords to obey the law and repair our homes.

2—Organize tenants and demand action from the city commissioners.

3—Serve summonses on all landlords guilty of violations.

4—Write and send delegations to Mayor O'Dwyer protesting the filthy conditions of Harlem's streets.

Michigan CP Wins a Tough Fight

By CLAUDIA JONES Daily Worker Detroit.

The victorious campaign of the Michigan Communists to regain their place on the ballot was a grand demonstration that a mass party can be built. N.Y. N.Y.

One of the stories going the rounds is that of a housewife in Albion county who greeted the Communist petition collector with the words: "So you're a Communist!" Standing in the rain this housewife told Abner Berry, educational director of the Communist Party of Michigan. "I declare I'm so glad to see a Communist." This housewife told how she knew of the Communist Party in its fight for the workers demands for equal rights for the Negro people.

It must be understood that Michigan law operates against minority parties being on the ballot. Some indications of this: A minimum of 11,744 signatures of registered voters are required to place a political party on the ballot. What is more; such signatures must come from 10 counties in the state. Not is this all. Not more than 35 percent may come from any one county 5-20-46

In many outstates counties, reactionary control has militated against securing petitions. In 1940, for example, wholesale intimidation of the people of Michigan followed a successful drive to get the Communist Party on the ballot. The capitalist press printed lists of names of signers, resulting in loss of jobs, social ostracism, even to the extent of forcing signers of petitions out of communities. Many of the collectors were molested by the police.

Yet 14,000 people of Michigan from 27 counties signed the Communist Party petitions.

Behind this figure of achievement, a significant story lies. How was it achieved? Early scouting in the outstate areas resulted in the sum total of 3 signatures after three days in the field. This at first resulted in a feeling of pessimism.

But something happened to make the difference in the final results. What had happened was a firm recognition that not to have achieved this drive would have meant a failure to rid the "revisionist," lack-of-struggle methods of work; of lack of confidence in the working people, the Negro people, the women, veterans and youth of Michigan.

This is by no means to imply that there was easy unanimity in such thinking. For example, Jack White, Labor secretary of the Michigan CP District described to me in detail a state board and staff meeting in which these questions were discussed.

This was at a time when with only two weeks to go—3,500 signatures had been collected—the majority in Wayne County. The maximum allowable — another twist of Michigan law for minority parties—were 4,100 in any one county. Assessing the situation mathematically, he stated, some 50 signatures a day were required —with some hard traveling through the state, to boot. Approximately 1,000 manhours were required to insure fulfillment of this petition drive 5-20-46

But the entire Party staff was organized to head crews that were sent out into the field to secure signatures. A large part of the credit for this, all CP workers emphasize here, goes to the stubborn determination of Carl Winter, chairman of the Michigan State Committee of the Communist Party. Sunday

EAGER RECEPTION

Many Michigan Communists tell you enthusiastically today of the surprise they experienced at the response of the people for the message of the Party. Not only, they tell you, in the eagerness with which they were received, but the conviction uttered by the people in such words as: "if the Communists are not on the ballot here, they must have something"; "I have heard about the Communists"; "Tell us more about your Party"; "We have heard about your fight for full equality for the Negro People," and "I want more information about your Party."

Indications of the response include the financial contributions of the people which in many instances provided for the maintenance of the entire stay of collectors in outstate areas. Main backbone of support were the Negro people to whom the Communist tradition of struggle is an honored one. The women, the veterans and the workers also proved the correctness of the concentration policy of the national leadership of the Communist Party in outlining its drive.

Some 150,000 pieces of literature were distributed and in the course of securing the signatures some 100,000 people, it is estimated were contacted. 5-20-46

Among the results were: (1) realization of the readiness of the people for a mass Communist Party and setting higher sights for the recruiting campaign, (2) the entry of William Allen, Daily Worker midwest correspondent, for the post open in the coming Detroit Common Council by-election, and (3) the organization of a general victory celebration May 26.

Foster, Ward Talks in Luce Radio Debate

The essentially democratic nature of Communism was demonstrated by Communist Party Secretary William Z. Foster and Dr. Harry F. Ward in a radio debate against Clare Booth Luce and William Henry Chamberlin on Tuesday, May 21. The opening statement of Foster and the opening statement and closing remarks of Dr. Ward follow:

Daily Worker New York, N.Y.

Foster's Opening Statement

Communism, far from being antagonistic to democracy, is the most profoundly democratic social movement in the world.

This is proved by the basic principles of Communism, by the progressive, anti-fascist programs and struggles of the Communist Parties in all countries. Above all, it is proved by the Socialist democracy and the anti-fascist foreign policies of the USSR.

The Communist movement, and the trade unions and other popular forces working with it, are the major bulwark of world democracy. The danger to world democracy and peace comes principally from the monopolies in the United States.

The monopolists, with their predominant influence in shaping American foreign policy and their imperialist determination to rule the world, are, together with their British junior partners, a malignant threat to democracy in the United States and throughout the world.

DR. WARD

American monopolistic forces are the basic cause of the present highly dangerous tension in the United Nations, and they must be curbed by the American people.

Wed. 5-29-46

Dr. Ward's Opening Statement

In principle there is no antagonism between communism and democracy. Communist theory regards democracy as an historic process which moves through three stages, capitalist, Socialist, Communist. It sees each as higher form than the other, bringing more freedom and more equality to more people.

In practice what we are now dealing with in the Soviet Union is not communism but Socialist democracy under Communist leadership.

The Soviet founders held that political guarantees of freedom and equal rights were ineffective as long as economic power was in the hands of the few. So they first laid the foundations of economic democracy as the sure basis of more freedom and more equality. Wed. 5-29-46

After the people had learned to share in the making and execution of the economic plans on which their lives and future depend, then came the constitution of 1936 with its unlimited democratic guarantees. And now the further decentralization of control through the "party and non-party bloc," in the recent election.

In this general course there is agreement with, not antagonism to, the equal, inalienable rights of the Declaration of Independence and Lincoln's "government of the people, by the people, for the people." It was this basic agreement, not merely the need for national preservation, which bound together the people of the United States and the Soviet Union in the war.

If the further development of the democratic way of life is now our aim, the unfolding of the Century of the Common Man can also become a joint enterprise. If our objective is to be the American Century, antagonism is bound to grow.

Dr. Ward's Closing Remarks

Mr. Foster and I, in different approaches, have shown that both in theory and practice communism is thoroughly democratic. We have shown that the Soviet Union has a highly democratic regime, and that its postwar foreign policy makes for democracy and peace.

Our opponents have indulged in reckless distortions and misrepresentations of Communist policy. Their logic leads to war; a war which Gen. Eisenhower has warned would be long and ruinous.

FOSTER

We have shown that the danger to world democracy comes, not from Communists, but from American economic royalists and their British friends. American monopolists are a menace to everything democratic in our country and the world. With their imperialist aggression and their control of our foreign policy, they have become the mainstay of world reaction.

To avoid disastrous atomic war, costing millions of American lives, the American people need to take their foreign policy away from the monopolists and their unholy alliance of Republicans and southern polltax Democrats. They need to stop the shameful persecution of the Negro people, and enact the late President Roosevelt's Economic Bill of Rights.

They need to return to Roosevelt's program of world collaboration, and compel the Truman Administration to restore Big Three unity, to drop the warlike "get-tough-with-Russia" policy, and help build the United Nations into a real organization for peace.

The Soviet Union suffered 30 times as many killed as we did in our common war to save democracy, and it wants to live in democratic peace and friendship with us. Wed. 5-29-46

World peace and democracy depend upon the American people getting our foreign policy out of the hands of the monopolists, imperialists and warmakers.

NEIGHBORS SAVED HER HOME—The constable eviction of Mrs. Sophie Smith (shown with her three children) was halted when the Communist Party took action. At her home at 3825 Mt. Vernon St., Philadelphia,, Mrs. Smith said: "I was delighted. I was just about to go out of my mind. The constable said he didn't care how many babies I was going to have—he was going to throw me out. But he changed his mind. All the people in the street were inside the house and outside. I never belonged to any organization. I never even voted. But I am going to join the Communist Party." Mrs. Smith had been paying her rent to the holder of the lease who disappeared with it. Now she has her home in her own name.

Will Not Be Communists

The News and Courier Charleston, S.

In a newspaper published by and for colored readers in South Carolina an advertisement invites people to come and hear a "world famous Star of Screen, Stage and Radio", and in another newspaper one reads that the head man of an organization claiming to have a membership of 500,000 colored people says that the star in question is a Communist. Anyway, whatever be the truth or untruth of the allegation, The News and Courier is confident that colored people of South Carolina will not turn Communist as long as they remain in the state. The colored people of South Carolina are not disposed to run wild unless they be set on by politicians. All qualified negroes have the privilege of voting in South Carolina, and any person, white or colored, who intereferes with them in the enjoyment of their privileges should be punished swiftly and sternly. Blows don't silence him; disputes Robeson

PAUL ROBESON'S STATEMENT BEFORE BODY CHALLENGED

The Neighborhood News
Los Angeles, Calif. Thurs. 10-10-46

With the eyes of the nation focussed on the Negro with his unstained record as an optimistic patriot, another dramatic incident last Tuesday followed that staged by singer Paul Robeson on Monday. The latter was a speech by Edgar Brown.

"Heart and Hand Society" card clubs now are operating as under ground offshoots of the Ku Klux Klan in California since the courts outlawed the hooded order in the state.

Testimony covering these two points was given Tuesday to the State Senator Jack B. Tenney committee on un-American activities at the State Building here.

ROBESON CHALLENGED

Edgar G. Brown, National Negro Council director, challenged Paul Robeson's testimony of Monday.

At that time, Robeson spent more than an hour extolling the advantages of Communism over the American way of life.

Robeson has no right or authority that I know of to speak for the Negroes of America," declared Brown, who said he had attended numerous large gatherings of Negroes in the past year.

"Robeson was not at one of them," he continued, "and I might say that 99 percent of the Negroes are opposed to what he is advocating. We are not interested in anyone, including Robeson, who is trying to tear down our Government."

District Attorney Edmund G. "Pat" Brown of San Francisco, candidate for State Attorney General, and a representative of his opponent, District Attorney Fred N. Howser of Los Angeles, was on yesterday's list of witnesses.

LET'S FACE REALITY

Let me take as my text three front-page items in Friday's News. One is the interview which Maj. Laurie Battle gave to Fred Taylor, the second is Gov. Sparks' speech before the Alabama Bar Association, and the third is Secretary Byrnes' historic declaration at Stuttgart. The point I would like to make is that, in the light of what Mr. Byrnes said and implied, both Maj. Battle and Gov. Sparks give the effect of irrelevance. Maj. Battle is all for calling Russia's bluff, as though that were not what we have been doing for many months. Gov. Sparks is for getting tough with Communists even to the point of amending the Bill of Rights—a queer way of proving that democracy is preferable to communism. At this crucial hour in history, clear thinking by our political leaders is badly needed.

Alabama

Maj. Battle has been orientating himself in Washington. He has returned with pleasant anticipations of service there. He is still the modest, solid, serious-minded man who won the favor of so many voters in this district earlier in the year. He is going to Congress next January with the best wishes of an overwhelming majority of Jefferson County citizens. But one wishes that he were not already giving evidence of what can be called a congressional lag. On the very day Mr. Byrnes spoke so plainly and creatively on the German problem, Maj. Battle talks about calling the Russian bluff.

If there's a bluff to be called, Mr. Byrnes has been doing that at the peace conference and in the Foreign Ministers Council ever since the abortive meeting in London. Our government has been showing its teeth to Russia for months. To suggest at this stage of the game that our foreign policy involves "appeasement" is not to realize what is happening and what has been happening on the stage of world affairs. Mr. Battle supports our government's course but he is merely endorsing a fait accompli What his constituents are concerned about is the consequence of this program of calculated risk. 9-9-46

Gov. Sparks has delighted many Alabamians with the way he has grown during his tenure as chief executive. He has shown a progressive spirit, he has taken a large-minded view of affairs. He has demonstrated an eagerness to make our democratic system work as an instrument of strength and hope in terms of a steadily enlarging freedom. But when he addressed the lawyers, he lost step with himself. Disquieted by the activities of American Communists, he urges that they be dealt with punitively even if freedom of speech has to be curtailed. This is a queer conclusion for a man like Gov. Sparks to reach.

One wonders what sort of literature he has been reading. His jitters are surely not the result of Communist "infiltration" in Alabama. The brethren may be ganging up on Montgomery, but there is little sign of them or their works in Birmingham. The governor doesn't like their ideology and their subservience to Moscow. Neither do the rest of us. But what excuse is there for assuming that the Commies are a threat in this state—so great a threat, indeed, that Mr. Sparks is willing to consider, if not to urge, placing an embargo on the free trade of ideas, the freedom of speech and press guaranteed by the first article of the Bill of Rights. 9-9-46

If, as Gov. Sparks and most other Americans think, the situation in the world presents a contest between democracy and communism for the favor of mankind, we do not strengthen democracy by imitating totalitarian dictatorship. There is no freedom of opinion or press in Russia. If we are to win out in this war of ideas, we can do so only in terms of democratic values. If Gov. Sparks wants to help democracy abroad, he might have chosen to discuss a deepening of democracy at home—even in Alabama. He might have spoken out against the Boswell amendment. He might have reiterated his opposition to the cumulative feature of the poll tax.

You protect democracy by enriching it, by spreading it. That is the meaning of Mr. Byrnes' pronouncement on the future of Germany. The German people, he said, must be set free to stand on their own feet, to have their own government, to shape their own destiny—short only of becoming a military menace again. It is in the diffusion of competent democracy that our best hope lies against any rival system. You do not aid that diffusion, you do not persuade the beaten masses of Europe to turn to democracy, by poisoning the well-spring of democracy at home. You do not make ready for the eventualities of tomorrow by growing panicky and dispraising the heartfelt things inestimably dear without which democracy is a mere label, without which we cannot achieve any ultimate triumph in the struggle for peace among men and security among nations.

Daily Worker, New York, Thurs. 9-5-46

By Theodore Ward

Andy Brown must be some guy, I thought, as I rode out to meet the district secretary of the Alabama, Tennessee and Mississippi Communist Party.

And I was right. I found that out later, after I learned that Andy's health had been beaten down some by overwork and beatings administered by cops and white-hooded gangsters who rule the South these days.

He's in New York, I discovered, for a medical check-up.

As he opened the door, I encountered a tall, well-built Negro, about 52.

"I'm from the Daily Worker," I said. "I'm out here to interview you."

"Just give me a chance to shave up a bit," Brown said, "and I'll be with you."

The host went into the kitchen and returned with a glass of wine.

"It's terrible how short we are of forces in the South," he said, handing me the glass. "But they've just had a big successful drive for new members."

Brown entered from the hall just then.

"You just ask what you think of," he told me.

"Well, how long have you been in the Party?" I asked, choosing the commonest question you hear among comrades.

"Since '31," he said.

"How did you come to join?"

"I used to listen to the open-air meetings of the Party in Birmingham. Every day," he said, "I used to come by and listen. Then I got to reading the Daily Worker and the pieces of literature they used to distribute. After about six months I made up my mind this was what I was looking for, and I've been in ever since."

I wondered what he could say about what was happening among the Negroes of the South since the outburst of the present lynch terror. How was the temper?

"High," he said abruptly. "Since the outbreak of terror, our worry has been and is are we going to be able to give leadership to the masses, they're moving so fast."

"It's the old matter of too few in the Party—is that it?"

"In a way, yes," he replied slowly. "But you must understand, we're not alone down there. There's a surprising number of organizations which are putting up a militant fight against the lynchers and Bilbo and Talmadge."

Turning to the role of the trade unions in the South, he said: "One of the most reassuring things we've got down there is the response to Operation Dixie. Here we see the beginnings of real unity. I noticed too," he added, "the NMU of New Orleans voted a $1,000 reward for the Georgia lynchers; while the Mine, Mill and Smelters Union along with a number of others have been very active in the fight to bring the lynchers to justice."

This seemed in contradicition to the sort of evidence of disunity and racist sentiments being brought out by questioning of the whites called up for jury duty in the Columbia, Tenn., case. I questioned him on his.

"You forget two things," the thoughtful Negro leader said. "First you forget the men called for jury service there are mostly farmers with little or no contact with labor and the progressive whites of the South. Secondly, the reason behind all this terror. It's an organized effort to smash the growth of democracy in the South.

Negro People Are Joining the Party That Leads Struggle for Equality

The Worker New York N.Y.

By CLAUDIA JONES

Fifteen years ago, a small anguished Negro woman rushed out on the streets of Chattanooga, Tennessee asking everyone she met: "Where is the Communist Party?"

She found the Communist Party; and it acted. Sun. 4-7-46

That woman was Mrs. Ada Wright, mother of the two framed up Scottsboro Boys, Andy and Roy. Her question was answered in a historic struggle by the Communist Party which made the Scottsboro Case a worldwide cause. The legal and mass defense of these boys represented the first time since the Reconstruction era following the civil war that so vigorous a defense of Negro victims of lynch terror was made. It led to the raising of the question of full democracy in the heart of the South for the first time since post-Civil War times.

The Communist Party fought for the lives of those nine boys and won. Out of that historic and effectively-led case, the right of Negroes to sit on juries was won again. Out of Scottsboro, thousands of Negro and white workers were taught that the source of lynch law and police violence against Negro citizens stems from Wall Street and its oppression of Negro citizens and white workers in the heart of the South—the Black Belt. Out of Scottsboro, the fundamental lesson of Negro-white unity against imperialist oppression was re-learned in our land.

The Communists were the first to recognize that this case involved more than the persecution of nine teen-age boys, because this is the Party that carries forward the democratic heritage of the Abolitionists, against present-day semi-slave conditions of the Negro people. Then as today, the Communists led in the uncompromising demand for full punishment of the lynchers, because its principles inspire it to fight for the rights of all oppressed peoples.

PARTY OF THE OPPRESSED

This is so because the Communist Party is the party not only of the Negro people but of all the oppressed. It was able to see deeper meaning of Jimcrow and segregation because it recognizes that all attacks on the Negro people by Big Business and their Southern Bourbon hirelings is aimed at putting the crassest exploitation and reaction more firmly in the saddle. The Communist Party fights for the strengthened unity and alliance of Negro and white because it realizes that only thus can the common enemies of both be defeated.

Its principles are based on the great truth enunciated by Karl Marx: "Labor in a white skin cannot be free while labor in the black is branded." Sun. 4-7-46

These are basic motives which have found the Communists in the forefront of the fight for full political economic and social equality for the Negro people. It is no humanitarian or paternalistic approach which governs its acts.

BARS BROKEN

It was this Marxist-Leninist principle that the Communists brought to the labor movement, more than 25 years ago. This principle won wide support among labor and other progressive sections of the population. Sun. 4-7-46

Those were the days of organizing the unorganized. It were the Communists who inspired this fight which led to organizing Negro and white sharecroppers in Mississippi, Georgia and Alabama. They sought tirelessly to integrate the Negro worker in the labor movement. The Negro worker, in turn learned greater organization and discipline by struggling side by side with labor. Through the common fight, many bars were broken down, narrow nationalistic prejudices which white labor had accepted from the hands of the monopolists, who seek only to divide and conquer, began to be broken down.

The answer to the age-old question asked by Negro Americans: "Who are the friends of the Negro people" was answered. If today the unprecedented unity of Negro and white exists [illegible] vage struggles of labor, it is [illegible] because the Communists pioneered and zealously supported the nation-wide agitation to organize the workers of basic industries into industrial unions. If today, Negro workers in packing, steel and other strike struggles are referred to as solid champions of labor's cause, not a small part of the answer is the pioneer[illegible] of the Communists.

Nothing has so contributed to the political development of the Negro people than the work of the Communists within the labor movement to secure for him a place of equal opportunity. Sun. 4-7-46

INSEPARABLE ALLIANCE

Today, the Negro need no longer, indeed he cannot now fight alone He is part of an inseparable alliance of organized labor and its Communist vanguard.

That is why the best sons and daughters of the Negro people have found their way into the Communist Party. They recognize that the Communist Party fights not only in the tradition of Frederick Douglass, Harriet Tubman and Sojourner Truth, but that the Communist Party is a party of a new type—a party of the working class—a Party that is building the future of mankind—Socialism.

In that free society of the future, there can be no exploitation of man by man and no economic, political and social inequality. The Communist Party is the conscious force that shows Negro and white workers that you cannot compromise with the jimcrow system but must fight without quarter to destroy it.

It is no wonder that the enemies of the Communist Party have charged in the past that it is the Party of the Negro. We Communists say the charge is true. It is the one party that is proud of being the party of all oppressed peoples.

Such are some highlights of the Communist tradition of struggle for full equality for the Negro people.

Naturally, as a result of this tradition, thousands of Negro Americans who have become conscious of the impetus which Communists have given to their battle for democracy, ask:

"Where is the Communist Party?"

This Party fights on, and is giving battle to the issues faced by the Negro people and the working class just as 15 years ago when it was found by Mrs. Ada Wright. Today it fights against the wholesale driving out of Negro workers by Big Business employers; for maintenance of the war-time gains of the Negro people; it fights for enactment of legislation for a permanent FEPC; for the anti-poll tax and anti-lynch bills; it fights to unite Negro and white against the anti-Negro crimes of Freeport and Columbia Tennessee; it is fighting to unite the people against the war mongering drives of the British-American imperialists; for true peace and security to cement unity with our great ally, the Soviet Union. Sun. 4-7-46

In the Communist Party, Negro workers have a better opportunity to fight in alliance with white workers for their demands. Today in the South, Communist Party represents the key vanguard force that is fighting for unity of Negro and white and for full equality of the Negro people. Throughout the country, it is the Communist vanguard that leads in the fight for equality, peace security for American workers.

If you are a fighter for Negro rights; or wish to learn more about how you can best speed this fight, your place is in the Communist Party.

CP Spurts in Harlem—Members Double

Daily Worker N.Y.

By Claudia Jones

All signs point to the growth of a mass Communist Party in Harlem. This is what the 300 new, enthusiastic recruits tell you. This, too, is the estimate of the Harlem Communist Party leaders, with whom I recently spoke, following completion of their recruiting drive.

Above all, it is shown in the people's response to the CP's fight for their "bread and butter" needs. Mon. 7-15-46

The new members represent the accomplishment of 75 percent of the original quota set by the Harlem CP in the national recruiting drive.

It likewise represents a doubled membership since the organization of the Harlem Section of the CP.

STRIKE STRUGGLES

They are wonderful people—these new members. Leaders of the Harlem CP Section, Councilman Benjamin J. Davis, chairman; Robert Campbell, executive secretary; John Lavin, administrative secretary, and Rose Gaulden, industrial concentration director, point with pride to the new industrial recruits.

Fifty-five percent of the recruits are from this category and were recruited mainly as a result of the recent strike struggles of the trade unions. They include longshoremen, among the most exploited workers in New York City; railroad workers;; hospital and fraternal organization members.

Several new CP branches are now set up to meet the day-to-day needs of these workers, and work is proceeding to stabilize them as industrial clubs. Great credit for this work goes to Rose Gaulden, National Committee member of the CP.

Fifty-five percent of the recruits are Negro veterans. Many came straight from the armed services looking for the CP; they tell you today that it is the CP who has taken up their battles in a forthright way as evidenced in the fight against lynch violence and Jimcrow justice in Columbia, Tenn., and Freeport, L. I., and the recent Gestapo-like action of a South Carolina policeman, in Secretary of State

Many and varied are the experiences of this consumers and tenants movement. Chief among these experiences is the vanguard work of the Communist Party itself, spearheaded by the work of the ever-battling Councilman Benjamin Davis in the New York City Council. Mon. 7-15-46

The key lesson of these experiences is that victories have been won by the Communist Party in its struggle for better conditions.

HEAT ON LANDLORDS

One of the stories going the rounds in the Harlem CP today is how the spade work of two small Communist Clubs, the Abe Lincoln and Nat Turner, by their mass activities forced N. Y. Housing Commissioner Thomas N. Saxl to repudiate his former generous policies and practices toward landlords who failed to clean up garbage in their slum tenements.

This work resulted in the biggest court fines to date leveled against landlords for such violations.

Another is the first-time ruling won following a CP fight against Byrnes' polltax state, who gouged out the eyes of a Negro veteran less than three hours after his demobilization from the Army.

Without a doubt, the Communist Party has rewon its place as a frontline fighter for Negro rights and for Negro-white unity.

In the course of its recruiting drive, the Harlem CP aided in initiation of a Consumers and Tenants Movement. This new movement, known as the United Harlem Tenants and Consumer Organization, welcomes Communists and non-Communists.

As told me by Bob Campbell, Harlem CP executive secretary, "The party has embarked on a campaign to rid Harlem of the onus of being a slum, unhealthy community because of neglect of the city administration and the policy of the greedy landlords. We are interested in breaking Jimcrow in the existing housing projects (such as "Stuyvesant Town") and also forcing the greedy landlords to use their super profits, piled high for decades, to improve the health and housing conditions in the community."

the unwarranted eviction of the Whaley family at 16 W. 125 St., issued by the City Marshal's office, which is: before anyone gets an eviction notice, personal permission must be granted by the City Marshal.

By no means do these imply self-satisfaction. The Harlem CP leaders, conscious of the effect of the revisionist errors on the Party in Harlem, consider the manner in which they are now working to help place the Harlem CP fully on the road to surpassing even its past traditions of militancy and struggle.

Their sights are set on (1) combating the rising prices, rents and growing unemployment, (2) training new leaders for the party, (3) building a stable CP organization in the community through consistent struggle for peace and against World War III.

And in it all, they have their eye on socialism. You feel it everywhere—as in a new members' meeting I attended a few weeks ago, which welcomed the 300 recruits, who bought literature to learn more about socialism.

A Negro Leader from Bilbo's State

Daily Worker New York, N.Y.

By CLAUDIA JONES

In famous Paseo Park, in the heart of Kansas City, Mo., 13 years ago, a 21-year old Negro youth stood before an immense crowd listening to white and Negro speakers tell about the fight to free the Scottsboro boys.

On the speakers rostrum were Herb March and Abner Berry. They mirrored in their words what was then becoming an international fight, led by Communists, not alone for justice, but for the full economic, political and social equality of 13 million Negro Americans. Thursday

Two kinds of petitions were passed among the crowd which this Negro youth signed. One was a Communist Party petition to free the Scottsboro Boys; the other an appeal to join the Communist Party. The Negro youth, known as Henry Winston, signed them both. 1-10-46

SAW TERROR

From then on, Henry Winston's life reads like an American working class saga. For 11 years a member of the National Committee of the Communist Party, veteran of World War II, and Secretary of the National Negro Commission of the CP, he is one of the scheduled speakers at the forthcoming Lenin Memorial Rally, next Tuesday, Jan. 15, at Madison Square Garden.

HENRY WINSTON
During Army Service

Winston born in Hattiesburg, Mississippi, not far from Bilbo's home, had himself been witness to terror and injustice of the feudal polltaxers and lynchers in the Black Belt; he too had experienced the plight of Negro sharecroppers and workers. 1-10-46

These were the days of hunger marches; the days of the fight for unemployment relief. And "Winnie," as his friends call him, was in that fight. He told me with pride how deeply he felt when a Negro youth in Texas, Barney Ross, framed much like the Scottsboro boys, had his life sentence commuted by the Governor of Texas, as a result of the activities of his Communist co-workers. "We could both fight and win," he said. 1-10-46

Henry became active in the YCL. Holding many posts, not alone in Kansas City, but in Ohio, in Harlem as director of the YCL, and in Brooklyn, he was elected to the National Committee of the YCL in 1935. Shortly before this, he went abroad to visit the Soviet Union, France and England.

"I found in France and England much of the same kind of problems as those faced by the American working class," said Winnie. "In the Soviet Union I saw how Socialism works. I brought back a lasting impression that freedom of all peoples and internationalism—true inter-racial brotherhood, has been achieved there since racial discrimination is punishable under Socialist laws and customs." 1-10-46

Author of many pamphlets and articles, Winston pioneered in the movements which developed in the last decade, as a result of the growing political maturity of the Negro people. He helped found the Southern Negro Congress, the National Negro Congress, and participated in both the American and World Youth Congresses.

Winston enlisted in the Army shortly after Pearl Harbor, serving over 3 years, in the American and European war theatres. He received the Certificate of Merit, highest regimental award, and the Certificate of Proficiency. He served as army correspondent, and as assistant to the Educational office. He was responsible for orientation classes, helping to prepare the men for return to civilian life. 1-10-46

In an interview on the coming Lenin Memorial meeting, Winston emphasized Lenin's contributions to the fight against national oppression.

"Lenin," he said, "was first of all an internationalist. The cornerstone of his teachings is that of proletarian internationalism. It was this that led him to understand not only the problems of Russia but those of oppressed peoples everywhere. As far back as 1913, he made a study of the national oppression of the Negro people which had within it the elements of solving the Negro question in the United States. Today in our country, Lenin's internationalism lies in the unity of Negro and white—a unity against monopoly capitalist oppression of the working class and its imperialist oppression against the Negro people."

Negroes and the Communist Party

By Benjamin J. Davis

The Worker New York, N.Y.

The election of Henry Winston, young Negro veteran, as national organizational secretary of the Communist Party, is an event of notable importance whose significance will not be lost in any circles of the American people. Sun. 9-8-46

While our Party functions through a collective leadership, the three pivotal posts of its structure are the national chairman, held by William Z. Foster, the national secretary, occupied by Eugene Dennis, and the organizational secretary, now held by Winston. Winston was unanimously chosen at the July session of the National Committee of the Party.

This event will bring joy, added confidence and determination to the Negro people who, today, find themselves the victims of the most virulent drive unleashed against them by the white supremacists in the last half-century.

Negroes will not fail to note that while monopoly capital, through the Bilbos, Rankins among both Republicans and Democrats, are seeking to deprive them of their elementary citizenship rights, the forces of labor are giving practical demonstration of their determination to secure an equal and free life for Negro citizens. The Negro people will recognize that the Communists are the most advanced of these forces.

None of the capitalist newspapers carried anything about this important fact. Those that did, in this case, failed to point out that as Winston is a Negro. That, of course, was entirely unnecessary. But it might be remarked in passing that if Winston had been the victim of some vile frame-up as is so often the case with innocent young Negro veterans, from Mississippi to Freeport, L. I., the fact that he is a Negro would have been plastered all over the most sedate capitalist newspaper.

Hundreds of Negroes hold extremely minor posts within the two major parties, although some of these posts have very big titles. This event within the Communist Party will strengthen their fight against Jimcrow within their own parties.

Communists make to the fight for Negro rights are weapons against Jimcrow wherever it rears its head.

The special pattern of national oppression imposed on the Negro people by capitalism makes any recognition of the dignity and equality of the Negro people a rare and exceptional occurrence. It will become even rarer if the present aggressive plans of American imperialism, pursued by the Truman administration for war and world domination abroad and fascist reaction at home are not defeated. ★

BUT SUCH recognition is not new for the Communist Party. It is the bone and sinew of our Party, which is schooled in the science of Marxism-Leninism, and which effectively fights for the ultimately irresistible proposition that the American working class cannot be emancipated from exploitation without the liberation of the Negro people.

The Negro people know the Communist Party as an organization which practices what it preaches. Three Negroes are on the national board of 12 members; 10 on the national committee and Negro members in our Party hold many of the highest posts of responsibility. They are leaders not only of their own people but of the labor and progressive movement, white and Negro alike. Only the Daily Worker and The Worker, of all the daily press, can cite Negroes as editors and as equal staff members in all departments of the paper, and this is only a beginning.

Most of these Negro Communist leaders, like Winston, are workers and come from the very backbone of the Negro people.

IT WAS ONLY after the defeat of Browderism within our Party that it could make such a giant stride toward fulfilling its responsibility on Negro rights. Only then did Winston's election take place. The revisionism of Browder which tailed after monopoly capital—the main enemy of the Negro people—could not but blunt the Party's sensitivity to the special oppression of the Negro.

While the general staff of the Republican Party and certain of its allies in the Democratic high command fill the air with words about Negro rights, it is from the working class, its allies—and from its Communist vanguard—that the deeds spring. It is clear that the collaboration of the Negro people and the labor movement in the present crucial elections and the building and strengthening of the Communist Party is the best guarantee in turning back the present offensive of Bilboism in our country.

ALTHOUGH A SMALL fraction of the membership of the Communist Party are Negroes, there is a warm friendliness toward Communists among all sections of the Negro people. This feeling is naturally most pronounced among the Negro workers, the most politically mature and stable majority of the Negro people. But it is by no means confined to them.

Addressing the recent national Negro Elks convention in Buffalo, N. Y., on Aug. 25, the Rev. D. Ormond Walker, Negro pastor in Buffalo, who is not a member of

Examiner Los Angeles, California Tues. 10-8-46

Communists are using the infamous Ku Klux Klan as a means of recruiting Negroes and Jews into their fold, was charged here yesterday before the State Senator Jack B. Tenney Committee on Un-American Activities.

During recent months, witnesses related, the KKK has been accused falsely of violence against Negroes and Jews, though exhaustive investigations have shown irrefutably that the Klan was not involved.

NEW TACTIC——

"Red" newspapers have played up such stories, which thorough going inquiries failed to substantiate, law enforcement officials told the Tenney Committee at the State Building.

"Communists have taken a new tack," explained Senator Tenney. "They now describe themselves at every opportunity as 'anti-Fascists.'

"They point to the Ku Klux Klan as a Fascist organization, and in that manner convert hundreds to their cause.

"This committee holds no brief for the Ku Klux Klan, which must be stamped out, together with Communism. Both groups are strictly un-American."

The Communist trick in using the Klan's bad name for their own purposes came out after Police Officer Russell Camp played a recording of a recent Mobilization for Democracy broadcast.

This recited scores of terroristic incidents, blamed on the KKK, against Negroes and Jews in this area.

State Attorney General Robert W. Kenny also referred to them, in charging the Klan was to blame, in many instances, and that the hooded order was increasing its activities and membership here.

Paul Robeson, noted Negro singer-actor, denied being a Communist, but said he would choose that party over either the Democrats or Republicans.

the Communist Party, said:

"In most of the Southland today American democracy is robbing the Negro of the right to vote, the right to travel as a free man and the right to education. Our race would be better off in a communistic society."

Is there any wonder why such sentiments are expressed?

The Communist Party — and with it the whole labor and progressive movement — will be strengthened by the elevation of this staunch young Negro leader to his new post of honor and responsibility.

South Communists Win Recounts in Fight on KKK

Daily Worker, New York, N.Y.

Fri. 4-5-46

By DOROTHY LOEB

Five fiery Ku Klux Klan crosses were set afire in Birmingham, Ala., one day last week. The next day, the Communist Party had leaflets in preparation, attacking the Klan and exposing this terror as being directed not only against the Negro people but against Terror was unleashed against the Negro people of Columbia, Tenn. A mob spread destruction throughout the Negro community. Two were killed while in police custody and scores of others arrested in a prelude to a wholesale frame-up.

Within a short time a Communist Party organization rose in Columbia. This very onslaught, in which fascists and klansmen intended to crush developing democracy, produced the struggle that called people to take their place in the ranks of a fighting party.

That's the way it went, according to Nat Ross, assigned by the national committee to lead party work in the South. He tells about these developments when you ask about progress in the drive for 20,000 new Communists by June 1.

DRIVE ROLLS ON

Despite terror, despite acute financial hardship, despite a costly liquidation policy under Browder, the party drive is going forward, Ross reports. Fri. 4-5-46

He gives a few figures. Texas had recruited 128 of a goal of 250 up to a few days ago. Alabama accounted for 135 out of a goal of 150 and its party leaders are already figuring on going over the top by April 15 and using the rest of the drive time to better it.

The Alabama district includes Tennessee, but recruiting there has been fruitful enough to permit establishment of a separate statewide apparatus there.

From the word is 44 recruits in Florida reports 18 signed up. Louisiana and Florida are reported "coming along" but there are no late figures.

Ross says also that despite the difficulties, Communists in the South are operating more militantly and more openly than before. There has been a wide sale of Robert Minor's pamphlet about Ben Davis' election, he reports, and many areas make good use of the Sunday Worker. In Texas, for example, regular sale of The Worker has been organized in front of union halls. CIO and AFL workers who took subscriptions were among first new recruits, Ross tells us.

Ask Ross what accounts for the step-up in sign-up in the South and he tells you: Fri. 4-5-46

"The party is applying a correct policy in the struggle for equal rights for the Negro people, especially in the defense of the rights of returning servicemen.

"Our emphasis on the registration of Negro and white people for the 1946 primaries so that action can be taken against polltax Congressmen is effective.

"The participation of the party in support of strike struggles and in the preparatory stages of the drive to organize the unorganized in the South means a great deal."

But there's an inter-action between what Communists do and say and the militancy of the people themselves that promises success for the party recruiting drive, Ross indicates.

PEOPLE'S FIGHTING SPIRIT

He says there is a fighting spirit general among the people. They are up in arms against the attacks of the employers, wage cuts through loss of overtime, downgrading, the closing of plants and growing unemployment. Returning war veterans, especially among the Negroes, are politically conscious. They are not going to be kicked around.

Ross reports, too, that there is growing awareness of an identity in interests between labor and the standing that both are simultaneous targets of the lynchers.

Thus when Communists in trade unions or the small group of Communists in Columbia call for joint action, this rings the bell. The Nashville AFL Central Labor Union adopted a resolution demanding that those indicted in the Columbia, Tenn., frame-up be freed.

The CIO council in Nashville and the CIO council in Birmingham took similar action.

These are unprecedented developments in the South, Ross says, and he asserts that they arise not just from a sense of outrage over lawlessness in Columbia but from recognition that the same mob that attacked Negroes is out to destroy unions, too. Fri. 4-5-46

Ross cites a few facts about Columbia to show that this isn't mere theorizing.

"The biggest company in Columbia," he says, "is the Monsanto Chemical Corp., which has carried on persistent and brazen anti-union campaigns.

"Monsanto was exposed by the newspaper 'In Fact,' as connected with the notorious German trust, I. G. Farben. Fri. 4-5-46

"In 1942, three Columbia people, two of them still there, were arrested for activity in connection with the German American Bund.

"Careful examination indicated that there is a tie-up between Bundists, Ku Klux Klan elements and fascist-minded corporation executives, with their base in the nearby village of Culleoka. It was from Culleoka, not Columbia, that the mob came to sow destruction in the Negro community."

The Negro people have learned that they can count on the Communists to champion their rights. They have seen the Party's struggle to free the Scottsboro boys. They have seen the Party fight to put an anti-lynch bill through Congress. They have seen the Communists fight for justice in Georgia's recent mass lynching disgrace.

Organized labor has known the Communist Party as a leader in the fight for a powerful union movement. The American people have recognized Communist help in organizing the bonus and hunger marches to Washington. They have wherever Americans have fought for freedom, the party has lent active combat fascism in Ethiopia and Spain . . . in America itself.

Tenney group delves into Mobilization for Democracy

Daily News, Los Angeles, Calif.

Tues. 10-8-46

State Sen. Jack B. Tenney's committee on subversive activities, looking into affairs of the Ku Klux Klan here, turned its guns upon the Mobilization for Democracy yesterday.

The Mobilization for Democracy, whose chief aim is combating the Klan, has as its honorary president Atty. Gen. Robert W. Kenny, and Kenny was the first witness in an afternoon devoted to investigating the Mobilization.

Police Chief C. B. Horrall and Asst. Chief Joe Reed testified they thought the Mobilization did harm.

Mayor Fletcher Bowron, a brief witness, said he agreed in principle with the Mobilization, but complained that those groups opposing the triple K do not bring specific evidence to the police.

The committee heard a recording of a radio broadcast by the Mobilization, which dramatized KKK terrorist incidents in this area.

"We feel that something must be done to stop this kind of broadcast," said Assistant Chief Reed.

"I would say such broadcasts are very detrimental," Chief Horrall testifed.

Kenny, with a straight face, topped his testimony by suggesting that Senator Tenney's committee join with those groups which are fighting the Klan.

When he mentioned the most recent appearance of the KKK symbol on the door of a resident, Combs said it had been discovered that it was the work of a landlord wishing to frighten a tenant.

"For goodness sakes!" cried the attorney general. "Don't give that landlord the impression he can get away with it. That's playing with dynamite. That kind of stuff led to Hitler in Germany."

Kenny said it was difficult to get indentification in Klan cases.

He suggested state rewards for evidence leading to conviction of the KKK terrorists and a state law requiring such organizations as the Klan to list all members with the state—as New York law requires.

Other witnesses questioned by the committee included William Bidner, secretary of the Mobilization, and Sgt. George H. Weiner of the sheriff's office.

Weiner told of the discharge of a sheriff's deputy who was reported soliciting membership for the KKK.

Bidner defended the Mobilization.

"Neither the Mobilization nor organizations affiliated with it are detective organizations, nor are we equipped for the job that properly belongs to a $10,000,000 police department," he said.

Earlier, the committee heard Paul Robeson testify that he was not a member of the Communist Party, but that he saw no reason for "the inference that communism is evil." He told why he is an "anti-fascist independent."

He pointed out that Fascism to him, for a personal reason if for no other, simply means death.

"I, as a Negro, know that Fascism will wipe me off the face of the earth," he said.

And he declared the danger of Fascism is growing more acute in this country.

He was questioned about the aims of the newly formed National Committee to Win the Peace, which is jointly headed by Robeson and Brig. Gen. Evans Carlson, who may testify later.

That committee, Robeson explained, is concerned with the failure of American policy to oppose the Fascist elements it fought during the war.

Robeson said Fascism results when a reactionary minority grows fearful of a rising popular democracy, and cracks down.

"I fear it is going to crack down in this country," he said. "I know a lot about Fascism. I have seen it in many countries."

Robeson's testimony followed that of Emmet G. Lavery, president of the Screen Writers Guild, who denied he was a Communist.

The Talmadge Way: Georgia Democrats, brandishing Confederate battle and state flags, whoop it up for white supremacy

RACIAL: White Supremacy?

Fri. Newsweek Dayton, Ohio

The white supremacy moment in the Southern wing of the Democratic party made news in two states last week:

Alabama: White-supremacy die-hards had long since resolved to find some way to dodge the Supreme Court decision outlawing the Democratic white primary (NEWSWEEK, April 10, 1944). Cotton farmers in the "black belt," so called for its black clay soil and not for its Negro majority, were especially aroused by Reconstruction-era fears that colored candidates might capture their local offices. They hit upon this scheme: Amend the state constitution to make Alabama's educational requirements for voting the strictest in the country, so that only a handful of Negroes would qualify. Mon.

Last week this proposal had split Alabama Democrats into two warring camps. Gov. Chauncey Sparks joined the white-supremacy wing, led by State Chairman Gessner T. McGorvey, in urging the voters to ratify the pending Boswell amendment on Nov. 5. A voice from the past, that of ex-Sen. "Cotton Tom" Heflin, the Bilbo of the '20s, echoed their pleas. Just as earnestly, Sen. Lister Hill and the liberal Birmingham News, Alabama's biggest daily, joined in fighting the amendment. On the fence: Senator-designate John J. Sparkman and Governor-designate "Big Jim" Folsom. 10-21-46

Should the Boswell amendment pass, all voters would have to be "of good character" and able to "understand and explain" the Federal Constitution and "the duties and obligations of good citizenship under a republican form of government." To all it was obvious that only a dull-witted registration board would let many Negroes pass these tests.

Georgia: Whereas the Alabama plan would use education as the excuse for disfranchising Negroes, Governor-nominate Eugene Talmadge of Georgia was not so subtle. Ailing from a stomach hemorrhage in Jacksonville, Fla., last week he sent a message via his son and manager, Herman, to a Talmadge-handpicked convention of Georgia Democrats in Macon: "We Democrats who believe in the democracy of our forefathers believe that a Democratic white primary should be restored to our Southland."

Frankly Talmadge argued that "the Negro has not demonstrated his capability of casting intelligent ballots." His proof: "99 per cent of the Negro vote" in Georgia's July primary (NEWSWEEK, July 29) favored James V. Carmichael over Eugene Talmadge. His remedy: permit only whites to be members of the Democratic party.

Dutifully and boisterously, the convention approved this plan and a companion measure to perpetuate the county-unit rule which gave Talmadge the gubernatorial nomination even though Carmichael won a popular plurality.

To dodge the Supreme Court's ruling, Talmadge planned to adopt the system, first used in South Carolina last summer (NEWSWEEK, Aug. 26), under which the Democratic state party was reorganized into a whites-only private club. All that was needed to put this plan into effect was for the 1947 Georgia legislature to erase all primary laws from the state's books. Then, theoretically at least, the new Democratic club would be exempt from Federal laws and court rulings.

Both Parties 'Jim Crow'

The News and Courier Charleston, S.C. Thurs. 10-24-46

The national "Democratic" party of James F. Byrnes, Henry Wallace, "Bob" Hannegan, Candidate Mead and Harry Truman, Esq., president, uproariously demands political equality for white and colored people, and, under the leadership of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt seconded by her late husband, has succeeded in luring the Northern negroes into camp. That party has been in power more than 13 years, and in all these years, while shrieking denunciation of "Jim Crow", it has practiced "Jim Crow" in federal offices in Southern states. The understanding has been complete between the Southern "Democrats" in congress and other Southern politicians and the national chieftains of "Democracy" that, as long as the Southerners shall "stick to the party," no colored man will be appointed federal district judge, district attorney, collector of internal revenue or postmaster in a Southern state. Th t this exclusion of negroes from offices in the South has been and still is the national "Democratic" policy The News and Courier approves—the opposite policy wou cause serious trouble to the Southern colored people. That it is a "Jim Crow" policy will not be disputed. Since the inauguration of the late President Taft, 1909, the Republicans also have pursued "Jim Crow" as to federal offices in the South—the policy of the Republicans of appointing negroes to important offices in the South virtually ended when Mr. Taft did not renew President Theodore Roosevelt's repeated appointments of Dr. Crum to be collector of the port of Charleston. Mr. Taft sent Dr. Crum to Liberia as American minister. Colored men of the South who are hungering for offices should migrate to Northern states where they can get them. Reports are that Northern negroes are swinging back to the Republicans, the party of their daddies, this year. It is an evidence that the hypocrisy of the relations between the Northern city "Democrats" and the white Southerners is plain to them. In the Harlems, negro "Democrats" can be and are elected to congress.

'TWAS TO BE EXPECTED

Globe and Independent

Paul Robeson was a proper spokesman for the delegation that went before the leader of Paul's party to request him to abandon what is jokingly called his FOREIGN policy and take a look at the domestic scene, where some of the most brutal lynchings in the history of this country have taken place and under the administration, headed by a man who was the darling of the Political Action Committee with which Robeson was affiliated in the 1944 election.

It appears that Robeson is riled and embarrassed over the do-nothing policy of HIS party leader. And Robeson's party leader appears also to have gotten riled over the way Robeson talked. We are just as worked up over the wave of lynchings as is Mr. Robeson, otherwise we would get Satanic glee from his embarrassment over the behaviour of the present leader of the "Party of Humanity." Nashville, Tenn.

In 1944, Franklin D. Roosevelt was sick unto death when he was nominated for his fourth term. The Democratic Party manipulators knew this and that is why they manifested such interest in putting the "right kind" of a man in line for Mr. Roosevelt's successor. That right kind of a man would have to be one who could be depended upon to fetch and carry for the Dixie Bourbons and the political machine bosses of the big Northern cities. That right kind of man, to make a long story short, was Harry S. Truman. Fri 9-27-46

Colored Republicans tried their hardest to convince colored Rooseveltians that they ought to desert the New Deal ship and support Dewey and Bricker. Dark New Dealers not only refused to do this but were the most intolerant and vindictive assailants of the Republicans that were on the loose in 1944. Theyrow were the difference between victorya and defeat for the finest ticket that was in the field in 1944—the ticket of Dewey and Bricker.

Roosevelt died, as was expected. Truman came to power and there was deep bon of the deepest die. And Robeson Better luck next time, Paul, and don't expect any relief from lynchings until we get a fearless and competent man in the White House.

Tru-and Company made Truman not only presidentially possible, but sure.

Where The Democrats Fail

The Informer
Houston, Texas Sat. 9-28-46

An Associated Negro Press article from Philadelphia not so long ago brought the news that Negro medical school graduates in the class of 1947 had been refused opportunities to receive internships in army hospitals, while at the same time the Surgeon General's office was announcing that "there were 83 vacancies available," presumably to other races. Here is where the Democrats fail to make good on their vaunted belief in "equal rights to all, special privileges to none." The Democrats are in complete control of the armed forces and no legislation is needed to see to it that crass injustices like this are eliminated. They should take action, but they don't.

Struggle for Negro

By Frank R. Kent

The News and Courier
Charleston, S. C.

WASHINGTON.

It was in 1936 that the great negro vote in the pivotal Northern states, which had been the basic Republican asset since the Civil war, was transferred almost solidly to the Democratic party through the Machiavellian machinations and low guile of the Honorable James A. Farley.

For 10 years, covering three presidential and three off-year congressional elections, the negroes have remained in the Democratic camp, registering Democratic and voting Democratic all the way from 75 to 98 per cent. In this year's campaign—the first since the Roosevelt death—the Republicans have real hope of regaining this great group of voters whose defection counted so heavily against them. The Republican sufferings on this score can be easily understood, particularly when it is considered that each negro vote lost counted twice It not only had to be subtracted from the Republican total but added to the Democratic. Sun. 9-29-46

And now the Republicans, after more than a decade of futility, are making their first hopeful attempt to recover this practically indispensable party asset, which from 1861 to 1936 helped elect their presidential candidates and since then has been potent in defeating them. Neither time, money nor work will be spared this fall. The effort will be intensive and extremely earnest. All of which makes it pertinent to list, first, the means by which these votes were taken over by the Democrats, and, second, the reason the Republicans believe they can get them back now.

It was Mr. Farley, with Mr. Roosevelt's enthusiastic cooperation, who engineered this transfer in 1936. In the order of their importance he would list the means as follows: (1) The WPA, then under Mr. Harry Hopkins, and upon the relief rolls of which an amazing percentage of negroes was placed; (2) Mrs. Roosevelt, whose fraternization was exceedingly effective—a million copies of her picture taken with a group of male and female negro students were distributed among negroes in 10 selected states by the Democratic National committee; (3) federal patronage, a larger proportion of which went to negroes in the early Roosevelt days than had been given by any other president; (4) employment by the Democratic committee of an unprecedented number of negro teachers, preachers and speakers who, well paid both as to salary and expenses, traveled the selected states spreading the Roosevelt gospel; (5) the negro press which in, one way or another, had become strongly pro-Roosevelt.

By these means was accomplished what Mr. Farley, with reason, regards as the most effective coup in the history of national politics. Now, the Republican grounds for feeling this is the time to "right the great wrong" as some have referred to it, are these: (1) Mr. Roosevelt is dead; (2) the WPA no longer exists; (3) the Democratic party failed to repeal the poll tax or to pass a Federal Fair Employment Practices act, whereas one was passed by a Republican governor in New York; (4) the federal patronage has mostly been distributed; (5) the negro press, like a number of negro leaders, has become disaffected and is now largely Republican again; (6) the present Democratic chairman, Mr. Hannegan, is many grades below Mr. Farley in skill, judgment, knowledge and tact.

He appears too busy proclaiming himself a "true liberal" and carrying on his personal feuds within the cabinet to give the necessary time and attention to blocking this Republican effort or to appreciate what its success will mean to the Democratic ticket in about ten important and debatable states. Checking the first list against the second, it does seem that the Republicans have about a 60-to-40 chance of achieving their objective in this struggle for the negro vote this time. It is one of the basic reasons for their general confidence.

The Negro and the G.O.P.

The Courier Journal

In the December 7 issue of The Courier-Journal Sidney Simms, a Negro Democrat of Louisville, informed the Democrats how they could prevent the colored people from returning to the G.O.P. Such a letter puzzles me, for, as I understand Mr. Simms, he is begging the Democratic Party to allow the Negro to exercise and enjoy the rights G.O.P. Presidents and Congress have given to the Negro during the last 80 years. Louisville, Ky.

If Mr. Simms feels that the Negro has gained from any general social legislation of the New Deal (and they have) he must realize that he was able to do so only because the G.O.P. has seen to it that he was on a legal equality with his white brother. Any basic right the Negro has has been received through the efforts of the Republicans (e.g. the 14th Amendment). Democrats, Mr. Simms, give lip service to Negroes' rights, but do little to help them to exercise such rights (as you pointed out in your letter), while Republicans not only recognize the existence of those rights, but, for the most part in Northern States, allow the Negro to exercise them. Mon.

Mr. Simms, you'd best stick to the party which has given your people the constitutional and legal right to demand other rights. Stop begging the Democrats. It will be of no avail.

The Claudian Line

The News and Courier Charleston, S.C.

This Senator Claudius Pepper of Florida is a wholehearted supporter of the New party's, the "Democratic" party's, demand for the repeal of the poll tax as a requirement for voting, for the passage of a federal FEPC law and for the trial of accused lynchers in federal courts. Sun. 12-29-46 If that be "Democracy", he is a true "Democrat", loyal to national "Democratic" program. He is every inch a "Democrat", and so are the young negroes and their white associates who met in Columbia not long ago. If other Southern congressmen are opposed to him and to his friend Wallace, what are they?

Slavery to Names.

The News and Courier Charleston, S.C.

The recent prediction of Ransome J. Williams, Esq., now rapidly climbing down from the governorship of South Carolina, that "the South will vote for anybody the Democratic party puts up" is also a prediction that any party calling itself "Democratic" would be able to make a fool of the South. Perhaps the horrible Republicans, having this in mind, may change their names to "Democrats". Meanwhile, in South Carolina, the "Progressive Democrats", negroes, are the 'Democrats' loyal to the Roosevelts. Sat. 12-14-46

A Negro Democrat's Suggestion

The Courier-Journal

As a Democratic worker and a Negro, I have some suggestions which, if carried out, would prevent the Negro voter from returning to the Republican Party. Louisville, Ky.

All of the policy makers of the Democratic Party should select a staff for Democratic Headquarters that would be courteous to the Negro. If they would remember the campaign pledge of Mayor Taylor to treat Negroes as citizens the vote trend would be in the direction of the Democratic Party.

Mr. Taylor, our Mayor, must answer these questions: What about segregation at the Municipal Auditorium? Why does police brutality continue? Will juke boxes, dice, and numbers be patronage for Negro party workers? Is it the policy of the Democratic organization not to welcome the support of liberals such as Charles Scott and Alfred Carroll?

PM

A consummate Texas politician tells me that in 1948 the Democrats will run either Sen. William Fulbright of Arkansas or Ellis Arnall, present Governor is a lifelong Democrat who has attended every convention of his party of Georgia. He is pretty sure it will be Arnall.

Perry

Sun. 12-15-46 New York, N.Y.

My informant (name furnished on subpena duces tecum) is a Democrat since 1900 but one. He was a Roosevelt man because Roosevelt was the best vote-getter. He divides his time between Dallas and Washington and thinks politics as the plane flies.

His argument goes like this:

Sam Rayburn (he says) would not take the Minority Leadership in the next House because Rayburn has figured out that the margin of Democratic defeat in several crucial states equates the Negro vote in those states. Rayburn realizes (he says) that the curse of Talmadge, Bilbo and Rankin must be taken off of the party if the party is to have any reasonable hope of returning to power, and that for this nothing will serve but for a liberal Southern Democrat to be put forward. My Texan agrees with his eminent fellow Texan.

He believes that Tom Dewey's overwhelming re-election was due in large part to the New York State FEPC law, and that the existence of this law ("It don't matter whether it works or not so long as it's on the books") in states under Republican administrations will have a tremendous pull on equal-rights-conscious elements.

The Democrats' problem being how to counteract this factor, their choice, he says, must be Arnall, whose elimination of the poll tax was, for Georgia, a far greater step forward than was Dewey's FEPC for New York.

He picks Arnall also because the young Georgia Governor has fought Talmadge on every front, and because he has been a good, sound administrator of state government. Fulbright is a bright star with a national name, and some of the party's strategists might prefer him, but he lacks the administrative record Arnall has been able to make—and he does not come from the deep South. The man who can take the race-prejudice curse off of the Democratic Party must come, my Texan feels, from "as deep in the South as possible."

He thinks Sen. Claude Pepper of Florida, though from farther South even than Arnall, and an even more commanding figure in the fight for liberalism, would not be chosen by the party regulars because "Claude is too smart: they're all afraid of him." Pepper has sponsored Federal anti-poll tax legislation, "but his law didn't pass. Arnall's did."

My Texan points out that Arnall, soon to leave the Governor's office, is "staying on top of the ball" by prosecuting the hate-mongering Columbians and the Ku Klux Klan, and that he is "speaking all over the country all the time."

"The boys," he says, "are keeping their eyes on him. He's young and ambitious. He hasn't stumbled in a gopher hole yet."

Arnall, he says, would be acceptable to Northern liberals—and "the groups around Wallace." He recalls Arnall's strong speech for Wallace at the Chicago convention.

"They like him—and the old wheelhorses of the party down here, dad blame 'em. They'll have to go along with him because they want to get their committees back."

When I ask him what Arnall's election chances would be, I learn how eloquent a Texas shrug can be:

"Oh, it will be a sacrifice play. He'll have to run for the fun of it—unless, of course, we have as many as six-seven million out of work by then, which is probable. Then he'd be elected. Arnall hasn't got any hard and fast program for job insurance. But he's got the best one. He just says we've got to do whatever is necessary to make a job for every man that wants one. . . ."

My Texan friend says it's nothing to him—except that he likes to see Democrats win. He's for Arnall, he admits, "just for the same reason I was for Roosevelt."

Southern Democrats Gain Influence in Party

New York, N.Y.

By VIRGINIUS DABNEY

RICHMOND, Nov. 16—Democrats of the Upper South see some rays of hope in the political situation brought about by the recent Republican sweep, but their prevailing view seems to be that the region will lose a good deal more by what has happened than it will gain. Sun. 11-17-46

Southern Democrats are now much more influential in determining Democratic party policy than formerly, since the ranks of the Northern Democrats in Congress have been decimated, but they will be much less important in Congress, where they have dropped many important committee chairmanships, as well as the speakership of the House and the Presidency pro tem of the Senate.

It is argued that for the next two years the Republicans will be unable to override any of President Truman's vetoes without the aid of the Southern Democrats, and that this will give the region a bargaining point for use in dissuading the GOP from pushing FEPC and anti-lynching bills which most Southerners find distasteful. But the prevailing opinion is that the Republicans will capture the White House in 1948, in which event they will no longer have to count on the Democrats for aid in combating a hostile President. It is believed that the GOP will push FEPC and anti-lynching bills at that time, if not sooner.

Election of a Republican President two years hence may bring policies as to freight-rate equalization, tariffs and other matters directly contrary to the South's desires. Furthermore, the South has been almost completely ignored in the past by Republican Presidents when important appointments were made.

The argument is being made that the South has itself to blame for this situation, since it has adhered rigidly to the Democratic party

GOP Makes Few Gains In Winning Support

Times - Dispatch

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N. J. Feb. 15—Recent Republican efforts on behalf of FEPC legislation in the Senate once again highlight the longstanding Republican party problem of winning the Negro vote back into the GOP fold.

These efforts are naturally concentrated upon Negro voters outside the Southern States, since the vast majority of Negroes in the South do not cast ballots.

There is no evidence today to indicate that Republican efforts are winning over any great proportion of Negro voters in the States outside the South.

In fact, a poll just completed throughout the nation, which included a cross-section of Negro voters, finds the voters favoring the Democratic party today over the Republican party by a vote of three to two.

The fact that Negro voters continue to prefer the Democratic to the Republican party can be explained in large part by economic factors. 2-16-46

Comparable Groups

Here are the figures of Negro voters and white voters in comparable occupation groups.

The figures are based on the question:

"If a presidential election were being held today, which party would you vote for—the Democratic or Republican?"

	Democratic	Republicans
Negro voters	60%	40%
White voters in same occupations	58	42

The figures above are of those with opinions on the subject. Three out of every 10 Negro voters, about two out of 10 white voters in the comparable group, had no opinion.

As was mentioned earlier, the above figure of 58 per cent Democratic for white voters in the same occupation groups as the Negro voters, represents the opinion of white voters in the skilled, semiskilled, and unskilled occupation categories. The Republican party is preferred by a majority of white voters in business and professional and farm groups, outside the South, and the two parties are about equally strong among the white-collar workers. 2-16-46

Race Important

This is not to say that race will not at times be more important as a determining factor than economic status, but the evidence does indicate that until the present economic cleavages give way, or until the Republican party can convince voters in the middle and lower economic income groups that it represents their best interests, little headway in winning the Negro vote is likely to be made.

At the present time, institute surveys find, only about one out of every 10 in the lower economic groups think that the Republican party represents his best interests.

A Negro Democrat's Program

Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky.

Negro Democrats work on election day and make financial contributions to the Democratic organization whenever they are solicited. Since some Negro voters in the recent Mayor's race supported the Republican Party some adjustments are required to hold the Negro vote for the Democratic Party.

I am an election worker and a financial contributor. As such I propose the following program for the Democratic Party:

(1) Name a Negro Democrat to the City-County Executive Committee; (2) in the next legislative race give Representative Charles W. Anderson, Jr., opposition; (3) have Mayor Taylor name a Negro attorney on his legal staff; (4) Federal patronage for Negro Democrats from Kentucky; (5) dismissal of police officers for brutality; (6) appoint a Negro Democrat to the Democratic State Central Committee; (7) the integration of competent Negro Democrats into various governmental agencies.

Public Jobs Suggested For Able Negroes

Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky.

I was pleased to read the letter by William N. Jones entitled "A Negro Democrat's Program."

In the recent campaign E. Leland Taylor was fortunate in having Fletcher Martin, Negro war correspondent, to manage the Negro division of his campaign. Martin is competent and is a true representative of the new Negro. I observed his activities in the recent campaign daily.

If the Democratic Organization is interested in future Negro support the party leaders must recognize a man of this type. Sun 2-24-46

I recommend that Mr. Taylor appoint a Negro to the Board of the Louisville and Jefferson County Children's Home. (2) Employ several competent Negro Democrats in jobs in the City Hall. (3) Recognize the leading Negro Democrats, J. Clark Jefferson, Dr. M. A. Blackburn and D. W. Wilson. (4) Name a Negro Democrat to the City-County Executive Committee. (5) Advise Senator Alben Barkley and Congressman O'Neal that no Negro Democrat from Louisville has received federal recognition.

"We do not want the Negroes in the Party. They do not belong in the Democratic Party."

as Forgotten

In 10 states, representing a balance of power in last year's balloting, the Negro vote turned the Democratic trick, according to compilations by political statisticians here. The States were New York, Pennsylvania, Missouri, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, West Virginia, Kentucky, New Jersey, and Ohio.

Now, in the filibuster against the Fair Employment Practices Commission, Democratic statesmen are inviting Negroes out of the Democratic column in 1946, a critical Congressional year.

President Truman, a harassed man, was known to be worried about this invitation from Southern leaders of his party.

Wallace Starts Political Campaign

WASHINGTON—Secretary of Commerce Henry Wallace isn't taking any chances on being left holding the political bag if the Truman administration begins to lose out with the public.

He continues on excellent terms with Truman, but has also embarked on a speech-making campaign which, while supporting most of Truman's enunciated program, makes it plain that the ex-vice president still has a very forthright political mind of his own.

It didn't get much attention, but Wallace made a significant speech at a Negro fraternity meeting in Washington the other night which drew wide acclaim in the Negro press—a segment of the public that Bob Hannegan has been worried about ever since Mr. Truman tossed aside the question of the D. A. R. and Hazel Scott, wife of the Negro congressman, who was barred from singing in Constitution Hall.

Wallace's next talk will be at a 10-state farm meeting in St. Paul on Jan. 11. This will be Wallace's first farm speech in almost two years and has more significance than meets the naked eye. After January, Wallace will make three or four speeches a month all over the country, renewing his contacts with the hundreds of delegates who voted for him at the last Democratic convention, at the same time checking his political fences around the nation.

Wallace doesn't plan to resign from the cabinet before June, and when he does he will go out with Truman's blessing in order to campaign for liberal congressmen who will support the Truman program. This is the type of campaigning where Truman is weakest and Wallace strongest, so there will be no break with the Truman administration—unless.

The "unless" hinges on plans to get Wallace to testify before Congress regarding Truman's recommended labor legislation and the much debated cooling-off period. Wallace is opposed to this, and if called before Congress will be forced to say so—in which case he will follow customary practice and submit his resignation. Trouble-makers on Capitol Hill already are maneuvering to put him on the spot.

THE SOUTH IN THE SADDLE; FILIBUSTER MAY HAVE VIRTUE

For better or for worse the South is in the congressional saddle. With the President hailing from Missouri and the secretary of state hailing from South Carolina and with key committeemen throughout congress hailing from the South, it can be truly said that the South is in the saddle. From the color point of view this may seem calamitous; but a closer inspection of circumstances and history shows this is not necessarily the case. 2-1-46

Paradoxical as it may seem the Negro's greatest political advance came under a Democratic administration; and this administration would have been impossible without the solid Democratic South. Roosevelt was without doubt the ablest of all presidents and this ability was largely shown by his heroic attempts to integrate the Negro into the citizenship of the United States. It is no wonder that Gunnar Myrdal said that the New Deal was the first serious attempt to integrate the American Negro into the political and economic and social United States. But this brilliant administration would have been impossible without the support of the "solid South"—solidly Democratic.

ELECTED FOUR TIMES

The ability of Mr. Roosevelt to get himself elected four times can be explained largely in terms of the support he had guaranteed in the South. The South's democratic votes were always in the electoral bag. So then if the South gets into the pay off, it is to be expected that they accede to power.

This writer is beginning to wonder if the Negro's fears on this score are justified. Nominally the North has been in the political saddle a long time; but actually the South has held the whip hand in politics ever since emancipation. The North has always tried to appease the South since Appomattox. Tacitly and explicitly the North has conceded to the South the right to handle as it seems best the Negro issue. The dismal failure of anti-lynching legislation is a case in point. The decline of the FEPC is another. The North thinks more of the political feelings of the white South than of the social feelings of the Negro South.

The North has religiously refused to invoke cloture rules which might have made impossible the filibusters which have thwarted the legislature more directly affecting the color question. Politically this is easy to explain, however distasteful it might be to the Negroes. Politicians are slow to insult voters in favor of non-voters. However sympathetic a politician may be toward the righteous claims of the Negro, their first obligation is to get themselves elected. That the immortal Roosevelt could so successfully fly into the face of these ugly political issues and reach down for the masses and so generally saw to it that Negroes were included in these masses, is one of the political wonders of history.

SOUTH IN SADDLE

That the South is in the saddle does not spell doom for the Negro any more than it has spelled doom with the North in the saddle letting the South hold the reins. It amounts to the same thing. Fortunately even the reactionaries and Negro-phobes of the South are beginning to see the disadvantages that lurk in the oppression of the Negroes. It is here that hopes lie for our ultimate integration into these political and economic and social United States.

It is the fond hope of this writer that the current filibuster over the FEPC bill may go on indefinitely. It takes something like this to show the nation and the world how nasty is race prejudice. With a revolution of nationwide proportions hovering over the country, with bankruptcy of the nation a startling possibility, with Russia rising and bidding fair to stand at the head of the nations, our country is being cursed with Negro-phobes who are willing to subordinate everything to keeping the Negro down. What is more, they are attempting to thwart a measure that is both democratic and Christian. 2-1-46

When a group of political Nazi-minded men becomes so oblivious of its country's weal as to jeopardize the nation to hold down a few million people because of their color, we are witnessing one of the sorriest spectacles of history. The longer these color bigots filibuster, the better the world can see democracy at its worst! These Negro-phobes are doing more to advance Communism in this country and the world than any other force. The greater tragedy is that these men were elected by the voters of a so-called democracy. The pith of it!

(1) The city and county executive committee does not have a Negro member; (2) the Jefferson County delegation did not introduce any bills favorable to Negroes; (3) the Democratic organization refuses to support a Negro candidate for the General Assembly; (4) the law-abiding Negro Democrats cannot obtain an audience with party leaders.

If the Democratic Party wants future Negro support the following complaints must be remedied:

BRUNSWICK, May 10—The South's first all-Negro political organization paying allegiance to the Democratic Party, but founded by a group of one-time "traditional Republicans," will meet in Brunswick Saturday to lay plans for an educational campaign among Negro voters. Sat. 5-11-46

Pres. A. T. Walden, Negro attorney in Atlanta, said the group, known as the Georgia Association of Citizens' Democratic Clubs, was founded in Macon last year.

Purpose of the Association, he continued, is to educate the Negro in the values of citizenship and to "encourage the Negro to have an interest in government as well as have some voice in it."

To Be With White Folks

News & Courier Charleston, S.C.

Fancy that half a dozen bold, able, intellectually and personally honest Democrats should appear on the South Carolina scene.

Suppose that they should demand reform and should expound the Democratic principles of Hammond Hayne, Calhoun, Hampton, Tillman, insisting upon reduction of federal government, non-interference with the constitutional rights of states, rigid economy, tariffs for revenue only, with radical lessening of taxations, federal and state, as the wholesome result.

Imagine that these Democratic leaders declared for a cleaning out of state government from top to bottom and the utter destruction of state and court house rings.

How would they be received by the people, by the honest and industrious, thrifty citizens? Wed 6-19-46

Suppose that they insisted not only upon the certain and swift punishment of all criminals, but particularly upon the arrest and punishment of bands of persons, called pickets, when they resort to insult, intimidation, assault and battery, force, to prevent other people working when they wished to work.

Thus, these leaders would resist establishment of a form of slavery in South Carolina. Note again, we are thinking of half a dozen men of invincible courage as well as fully informed, of high order of intelligence, who would not hesitate to invite danger to themselves for the sake of the state.

Finally, think of these leaders as persons now calling themselves "Progressive Democrats" and having black or brown skins.

From the ranks of the "Progressive Democrats" is not the remotest likelihood that such leadership will come. Not one suggestion or hint of understanding of Democracy, or hint of improvement in government has been uttered or written by them.

All they want, all they are asking for, is to vote in company with the "white folks" and to have some of the jobs from the hoppers of the state and federal ringsters.

Democratic Party Campaign Chief Opposes FEPC, Anti-Lynching Bill

The Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.

WASHINGTON — The Democratic Party platform may call for an FEPC, anti-lynching and anti-poll tax legislation, but one of its chief campaign directors is opposed to all three. Representative John Sparkman (Ala.), chairman of the campaign speakers' bureau, stated his position on the "Meet the Press" program over the Mutual Broadcasting network last week. Sat. 10-19-46

Cecil B. Dickson asked Mr. Sparkman how he stood on the issues vitally affecting Negro rights and he stated: "I am against all three of them. Also, against any aggressive part of the program. Further, I would like to say that endorsing the Democratic program generally doesn't mean that you have to endorse every single part of it. The Democratic Party doesn't hold members to the exact letter of the program."

Local Democratic Club Gets Going After Hectic Start

Savannah Tribune Thurs. 5-16-46
Savannah, Ga.

In an atmosphere charged with explosive expectancy and uncertainty, a crowd of about five hundred persons gathered at St. Philip AME church last Friday night to reorganize the Negro Democratic Club of Chatham County.

Scarcely had the meeting been called to order by the Rev. H. W. Murph, pastor, and then turned over to C. L. Alexander, the retiring president, who explained the purpose of the call, than a pent up feeling of suspicion began to show itself through the representatives of the various elements present. Thurs. 5-16-46

A heated wrangle ensued for some time and at one point it such a way as to obviate any further trouble.

A committee, headed by the Rev. Murph, was sent out to draft rules for the proper procedure of the meeting and upon their adoption the body proceeded to elect its permanent officers. Thurs. 5-16-46

Dr. Gilbert declined to allow his name to be presented as president, due to the urgency of other business, therefore, the race lay between the three nominees T. J. Hopkins, John W. McGlockton and John Q. Jefferson. Mr. McGlockton won by a comfortable margin.

For the office of first vice president, Dr. Gilbert did not decline the nomination and he was elected without opposition. Mrs. Ophelia Lee McIver was elected second vice president and T. J. Hopkins was elected to the third vice presidency. John Q. Jefferson was named financial secretary, Sidney A. Jones, recording secretary, and Dr. E. J. Smith was made treasurer. Thurs. 5-16-46

The organization will meet on Friday night, May 31, at St. Philip AME church, where plans will be made to further increase the number of Negro registrants. Other matters of vital importance will also be discussed.

Negro Democrats To Offer Ticket For Congress

The executive committee of the South Carolina Progressive (Negro) Democratic party, meeting yesterday in the Masonic Temple on Washington street, adopted a plan calling for the employment of a full time campaign director to encourage registration for the general election; decided not to put out a statewide ticket this fall, but voted to put out congressional candidates in the several districts.

Only one congressional candidate, James E. Prioleau of Georgetown party, presided at the meeting, with various agencies in the county for the Sixth district, was formally attended by about 150 committeemen. He said the plan for a full time director of employing a full campaigns for encouraging registration was being left to the mat- ter of a candidate is being discussed at some length with the district executive committee and was finally adopted, the employment to extend over a two-year period. 4 Enroll In Columbia, But Democrats Refuse Negroes Privilege Of Enrolling

Daily World

COLUMBIA, S. C. (SNS)—

Four Negroes were permitted to affix their names to club rolls of the Democratic Party in Columbia Friday by Lane L. Bonner, acting secretary of the Richland County Democratic organization said these names would be purged, presumably after enrollment ends late this month. 6-6-46 Thurs.

Four other Columbia wards, however, refused enrollment, as did a ward at Lake City Saturday; and general conclusion was that Negro enrollees would be refused throughout the state, in keeping with a resolution adopted at the May 15 convention of the party and, a subsequent request made by a special rules committee.

FOUR IN WARD NINE

Atlanta Ga.

The enrollees, all in ward 9, were George A. Elmore, Rev. F. M. Young, Rev. E. A. Davis and James M. Hinton. However, wards 2, 7, 3 and 8 refused enrollments.

The Friday attempts were led off by Rev. J. P. Reeder, pastor of Mt. Zion Baptist church and president of the Columbia Citizens' Committee Club, at ward two. He, John H. McCray, state chairman of the Progressive Democratic Party, and C. L. Lilliewood, a barber, all live in ward 2, first stop on a motorcade tour of Columbia enrollment places. 6-6-46 Thurs.

Suddenly confronted by these men and others in a party who acted as witnesses to each other the woman enrollment clerk nervously denied her identity and referred the applicants to the party headquarters, which explained to Rev. Reeder the rules, referring them to John I. Rice, county chairman of the party.

At ward 7, where enrollment was attempted by J. W. White, Leonard Hazzard, Samuel Osborne and Dr. L. H. Hallman, the group was also referred to Chairman Rice. Atlanta Ga

Rev. Robert H. Wilson attempted enrollment in ward 3 and Roosevelt Franklin in ward 8. Both were referred to Chairman Rice.

GENERAL ATTEMPTS WEDNESDAY

The Columbia attempts were made ahead of the Wednesday scheduled date in order that Rev. Reeder and Rev. E. A. Adams, state president of the Citizens' Committee, both of whom had to be out of the state on the agreed upon day, could participate. The general attempts were set for Wednesday. Unable to make even the Friday attempts, Rev. Adams was scheduled to establish further evidence of denials Monday, morning.

CASE TO COURT

6-6-46 Thurs.

Attorney Harold R. Boulware began Friday afternoon preparing affidavits on the denials for their submission to the U. S. Department of Justice and the national NAACP office. He said he received by mail Monday morning an affidavit from L. M. Green of Lake City, setting forth denials in that town.

Ga. Democrats Urge Continued Registration

Albany Meeting Slowed Up By Talmadge Crony

By V. W. HODGES

ALBANY, Ga.—(SNS)— Georgia Negro Democrats, at a one-day meeting here Thursday, urged continuation of the current registration campaign over the state; pledged cooperation to member clubs in overcoming impediments in the registration of Negroes in the several communities; called upon all employers of Negroes to grant them "reasonable and proper" time from their jobs in order that they may pile up the "largest possible" vote in the July 17 primary, and counseled their members to be alert to any plot or trap which may be designed to ensnare them by their foes.

The Albany gathering embraced clubs belonging to The Georgia Association of Citizens Democratic Clubs for the Southwest region and was attended by representatives of over 55 Democratic clubs. A. T. Walden, president of the state body, presided over the meeting and oultined the agenda for consideration of the delegates.

HITS SNAG

Meeting at the Union Baptist Church here, the original opening of the gathering was slowed up temporarily when local representatives of the Albany Progressive Democratic Club spotted the presence of Dr. J. W. Holley, deposed President of the Albany State College and Talmadge henchmen, whom they demanded to be asked out. For a while it appeared that Dr. Holley would have to be evicted from the session; but apparently sensing the extreme displeasure of the delegates over his presence, together with his purported espousal and advocacy of the Talmadge cause, he was persuaded to leave without incident. Four, others, whose credentials could not be certified, were also requested to leave. 6-16-46

MANY NEW CLUBS

With this unpleasant task finished, the delegates plunged headforward into the business of the meeting. Twelve new clubs matriculated into the state body. Significant among these was one from Baker County, the home of Sheriff M. Claude Screws; one from Early County, and another from the extreme southeast corner of the section, Brooks County.

TESTIMONIALS Atlanta Ga.

Attorney Walden called upon the delegates for expressions relative to difficulties which may have been encountered in attempts of their people to become qualified registrants. This was perhaps the most illuminating phase of the entire session. One representative revealed that over 400 Negroes in his community stood in the registration line an entire day, only to show up the next day, in their determination to qualify to vote. Similar expressions, though on a somewhat smaller scale, were made.

As to be expected in some communities, Registrars were reported to be hostile to the registration of Negroes. One leader reported that Negroes in his county were subjected to various types of questions in an effort to exact the literacy test. In one case, a prospective registrant was asked who was the 16th U. S. President? Who elects the judges? What is a document? In two other cases reported, Negroes were either asked to recite the Preamble to the U. S. Constitution or else listen to its reading and then write the part read and hand to the Registrar perfectly correct just as was read.

HOLIDAY PROPOSED

In order to bring out the largest possible vote on election day, July 17, the Association proposed and called upon all employers to permit their workers a day, or a half-day, or time "reasonable and proper" in order that they may exercise the sacred responsibility of voting. Daily World

NO ENDORSEMENTS

The Association again steered clear of endorsements for any candidates for state offices. But the qualifications, past records of performance and general fitness of all announced candidates were reviewed for the information of the leaders, following which the Association authorized the appointment of a committee "with power to act," should it be deemed expedient to make any committment of its members to any candidates. No mention was made of local candidates, since those matters are left to the discretion of the local clubs. 6-16-46

'The People of South Carolina'!

The News and Courier

J. Strom Thurmond, Esq., nominated for governor, having declared that "the people of South Carolina have passed on the issue of private versus public development of Clark's Hill in last summer's Democratic primary", it were as well to inquire to whom he referred as "the people of South Carolina". Charleston, S. C.

Are 60 per cent of the white adults who did not vote in that primary excluded from consideration as of "the people of South Carolina"? Sat. 11-2-46

Are 142,000 persons who voted for Mr. Thurmond and no others "the people of South Carolina"?

In the state are approximately 650,000 white adults. About 500,000 of them were non-voters for Thurmond.

Meanwhile, it is customary for politicians to dismiss from mind 381,000 negro adults. Let it go at that.

Those of the people of South Carolina who have minds well know that the election did not turn on Clark's Hill. It was a third-rate issue in a campaign of second-rate issues.

Persons who have minds are aware that the people of South Carolina are committed to nothing which J. S. Thurmond and other candidates advocated. Mr. S. was nominated because more people liked him than liked other candidates, and if that he does not know, he has the lessons of the primary school yet to learn.

The nearest to an issue in Mr. Thurmond's "race" was his antagonism to the "Barnwell Ring", to Brown and Blatt, and for the issue which he declares the people passed on he appears in person to second the contention for public ownership of Clark's Hill by Attorney Edgar A. Brown.

If "the people of South Carolina" decided in the little primary (white man's primary and not Democratic) in favor of public ownership versus private ownership of Clark's Hill power, the state is committed to public ownership of utilities. That is New Dealism. That is Rooseveltianism. Moreover, it is the policy of the "Progressive Democrats", negro "Democrats", the only group in South Carolina truly and fully loyal to the New party.

The negro "Democrats" perceive that when the federal government shall own Clark's Hill and other utilities, the federal government will dictate the rules of employment. The "Progressive Democrats", the "Liberals", the CIO-PAC, advocate the FEPC, federal laws to try lynchers, regulation of suffrage in the states.

Of course the negro "Democrats" would vote for federal ownership of Clark's Hill if they had a chance. They would vote for everything else federal.

The monstrous absurdity of it is that, in their eagerness to have Clark's Hill developed with money extracted from taxpayers, the politicians are delaying and preventing a development of it that would now be in process by a private company and that would cost the American taxpayers not a dollar.

Critical for White People

The News and Courier Charleston, S.C.

In 1948 or before, colored men and women of Barnwell county, calling themselves "Democrats" and advocates of the election of a "Democrat" to the presidency, will organize as clubs. Barnwell is a county of South Carolina in which the ratio of negroes to white people is one of the four or five largest in the state.

These negroes of Barnwell will demand the privilege of voting with the white people in their clubs and, if denied it, will demand representation as national "Democrats" in county and state conventions of national Democrats. Sat. 8-31-46

The News and Courier can think of no law or argument that can prevent a colored citizen being a national "Democrat".

In a state convention in 1948 delegates to a national Democratic convention to nominate candidates for president and vice president, presumably, will be chosen. In this state convention Barnwell will have representation for whole population, white and negro, and the large majority in its population is negro.

These colored national "Democrats" will go to Robert Hannegan's national Democratic committee and to the nation convention's committee on credentials demanding admission of delegates of South Carolina's negro Democrats to that convention and saying: "These white folks in South Carolina not only refused to let us negroes into their Democratic clubs, into their party, but they actually used us to give representation to negro counties disproportionate to their white votes whereby their politicians, such as Colonels Brown and Blatt, would be able to meet on something like equal terms the men of Anderson, Greenville and Spartanburg."

What would be the answer of "Bob" Hannegan, Esq., and Senator Pepper's Candidate Wallace, Esq., to that?

The News and Courier has proposed and insisted that the white people of South Carolina, holding primaries to nominate candidates for state and county offices, organize as a white party separate and apart from the national "Democratic" party. This party should elect its own chairman and members of committees.

In campaign speeches many candidates have roared and snorted about "white supremacy". Not one of them has pointed to the critical issue confronting the white people. The News and Courier, and The News and Courier alone, has pointed to it and to the way out. In less than two years all of the "leaders" will be forced to discuss it.

The Saddest 'Democrats'

The saddest "Democrats" in South Carolina are the colored "Democrats", true New Dealers, loyal to the memory of the late President Roosevelt. Charleston, S.C.

National Democrats To Bar S. C. Group, Negro Head Declares

Columbia, Oct. 3.—(AP): In a statement to officers of the South Carolina Progressive (negro) Democratic party, Chairman John H. McCray said today that steps had been taken by national Democratic party officials to bar from the 1948 national convention delegations from states that declined to include negroes in their state parties, as is the case in South Carolina.

He said he understood the Republican party was contemplating the same step.

McCray said he was under obligation to withhold the source of his information, but that he hoped to have a "full report" within 10 days. His statement:

"This is to report to you that I am informed, as of this date, that success of an issue raised by the Progressive Democratic party in 1944, pressed during conferences with members of the national Democratic committee during conferences in Washington and other Democratic leaders during the national convention in Chicago, seems assured.

"I have been informed that necessary steps will be taken at the next national convention to disbar from membership in the convention, presumably through refusal to admit as delegates, delegations from those states and territorial possessions who purport to represent states and territorial possessions who deny and limit membership in the party within their sections on a basis of race and color.

"While it is not expedient at this time to make public the authority of this information, it can be said that the advice is reported to me after extensive efforts on a nationwide basis which leave little doubt as to its possible occurrence. I am made to understand further that few delegations will be affected.

"I understand, also, that a similar action will be undertaken by the next national Republican convention.

"The full significance of this unprecedented move will be covered in a full report to all executive and unit officers we hope to submit within the next 10 days. But it writes 'finis' to the several deeades of unfortunate political operations which, principally among Southern states, have made a great mockery of the very word 'democracy'.

"At the moment, it technically affects only South Carolina. However, it may well affect pending or expected actions in several other Southern states."

EDWARDS FAVORS SEATING NEGROES

Roanoke, Va., Times

Believes Them Eligible for State Convention

Aug. 16, 1946

Horace Edwards, state Democratic chairman, has written James F. MacTier, city chairman, that, in his opinion, Negro delegates will be seated at the party's state convention in Richmond September 5.

The communication was in reply to MacTier's request for an opinion after the point had been raised last week by Dr. H. T. Penn, local Negro, at a meeting of the city committee.

Cites Court Opinion

Edwards wrote that it was his belief that the supreme court had nullified a party provision that limited membership to white persons through its action in a case from Texas two years, and added that he believed that any Negro delegates to next month's meeting would be seated. At any rate, he went on, such delegates will be certified to the temporary convention roll.

"I recall," Edwards wrote, "the Negroes participated at the convention two yeares ago. I see no reason why they should not have the same rights this time."

The convention he referred to was held in Roanoke, and his statement appeared to conflict with that made by Dr. Penn that Negro delegates were not seated at the convention, although they actually took part in the proceedings.

Bamberg Solon Sues Negro Democrats; Slander is Charged

News and Courier Thursday Charleston, S. C.

Bamberg, July 17.—Special: Suit for $250,000 has been filed in circuit here against officers and agents of the South Carolina Progressive (negro) Democratic party by Representative Fred L. Hiers, of Bamberg. He charges circulation through the mails of letters derogatory to his character.

Listed in the complaint are "John M. McCray, Mrs. A. B. Watson, J. C. Artemus and Lucius Wright", described as executive officers and agents of the party. The first three named are said to be officers of the party in Columbia, and Wright was described as a Bamberg county man active as an agent.

Mr. Hiers said the group planned a "scheme to charge" him with lacking requisite qualifications to practice law, charged him with improper practice, and charged that his acts and ability as a representative is "a gross reflection on the integrity of Bamberg county". 7-18-46

He said false and libelous statements were published "in the form of letters" mailed to persons in Bamberg county last May 29 and that on the same date similar statements were made in a letter mailed him, a copy of which was sent to the United States department of justice. He said the latter letter charged him with improper conduct, ignorance of law, lying to the public, and false legal advice.

Mr. Hiers denied the charges. He said they were made maliciously in an effort to cause him public ridicule. 7-18-46

NEGRO DEMOCRATS MEETING TODAY

T 28

A meeting of the negro Democratic leaders of the Eighth Congressional District is being held in Waycross this afternoon at the negro USO building, and several from this city are attending. Dr. M. A. Cassels, of Brunswick, district director, is presiding.

State officials of the Association of Democratic Clubs are present and plans for a stepped-up statewide campaign to reach every person before the July 5 registration deadline, will be implemented.

Negro Democrats Ask Libel Case Change of Venue

Bamberg, Oct. 24—(Special)—Harry R. Boulware, attorney for the defendants, has petitioned the court for a change of venue in the $250,000 libel suit of Bamberg county house of representative Fred L. Hiers against the Progressive Negro Democratic party of South Carolina. Arguments on the motion will be heard by Judge J. Henry Johnson at common pleas court here November 4.

The suit grew out of statements alleged to have been made in a letter received by Hiers from the Columbia headquarters of the Progressive party.

Hiers said yesterday that if Judge Johnson overrules the motion for a change of venue, the case probably will be tried in the next term of common pleas court here.

Pepper Wants Wallace For Race In 1948

The Defender Chicago, Ill. Sat. 8-24-46

WASHINGTON — The political aspirations of American liberals were given voice last week when Sen. Claude Pepper (D., Fla.), flatly stated he would like to run on the Democratic presidential ticket along with Secretary of Commerce Henry A. Wallace.

The Florida defender of Negro rights conceded, however, that President Truman's chances for renomination was overwhelming.

But the hard-hitting Senator did not hesitate in favoring Wallace for the nation's number-one job. At the last party national convention in Chicago, Pepper was probably Wallace's strongest individual support during the heated battle for the vice presidential nomination.

Pepper is genuinely identified with the most progressive wing of the Democratic party. On most issues he has been snowed under by old-line Southern politicians who conspire with reactionary Republicans, but he has staunchly supported antiracist legislation.

No Organized Effort

Queried concerning his political aspirations, Pepper said that he did not intend to campaign for the Presidential nomination but that he surely would not run away from the offer. When asked about a "Wallace-Pepper" ticket or a "Pepper-Wallace" ticket in 1948, he replied, "I would be happy to be on the ticket with anyone."

However, the progressive Dixie senator made no bones about whom he expected to get the nomination. He said he believed President Truman would be the party banner bearer in 1948, and added, "If he is nominated I will support him."

Pepper assured his questioners that "if I am a convention delegate I will fight for the nomination of some one who will make the party more liberal," so that it will actually represent the elements fighting reaction, fascism and big business control of the nation's economy."

Both conservative and liberal quarters recognized the Pepper statement as a prelude to ensuing struggle for control of the Democratic party. On the other hand Republican hopes of the situation precipitating a split ticket were scotched by the Senator's flat stand on party solidarity, regardless of who is nominated.

Democrats to Seat Regular Delegation, Johnston Declares

Columbia, Oct. 15. (INS)—U. S. Senator Olin D. Johnston today denied reports that the Democratic party would refuse to seat a delegation to the national convention in 1948 from any state that didn't allow negroes to vote.

John McCray, negro newspaper publisher in Columbia and chairman of the Progressive Democratic party, said recently that he had been advised by national party leaders that such an action would be taken and pointed to South Carolina.

Johnston, who is the national committeeman from South Carolina, insisted that any matters dealing with South Carolina be referred to him. He said that he had heard of no such action by national party leaders.

He said:

"I believe in allowing each state to handle its own affairs, and that's what we're going to do."

Senator Johnston said that he was bitterly opposed to the federal government taking a hand in the case of Batesville Chief of Police L. L. Shull. Chief Shull is to face trial in the United States court in Columbia next month on a charge of violating the civil rights law in connection with the beating of a negro veteran in Batesburg early this year.

"The FBI and other federal law enforcement agencies should remain out of state affairs," Johnston said.

When advised that Circuit Judge G. Duncan Bellinger, of Columbia, told the Spartanburg grand jury yesterday that the state should put the Democratic primary rules back on the statute books to halt improper election, Johnston said that he was still of the opinion as he was in 1944. In that year, the senator called a special session of the general assembly to repeal all Democratic primary laws.

He said:

"I am still of the opinion, as was the house and senate in 1944 when we repealed all the Democratic primary laws and turned the operation of the Democratic primaries over to the party.

"We must keep the Democratic primaries as they are, so that the federal government will have no legal right to contest or to interfere with our primaries."

He said he would go to Mississippi next year to speak to the legislature of that state on how to remove primaries from state control.

Won't Meet in Charleston

The News and Courier Charleston, S.C.

In 1948 one of the issues that may interest South Carolina's Democrats is whether or not a delegation shall be sent to the national Democratic convention that will support candidates for vice president and president favorable to paying State Senator R. M. Jefferies the remainder of the fee claimed for services in the litigation preceding the construction of Santee-Cooper, of which he is now president and general counsel, wage only $10,000 a year. The claim is, or was, for about $130,000. The Democrats of South Carolina when they shall elect delegates to the convention of 1948 will, one takes for granted, not be unmindful of the claims of their fellow citizens. Unfortunately, the national convention is not likely to meet in Charleston in 1948. The Harlemite Democrats of the Northern cities would probably object strenuously to coming to a city where the hotels for white people would decline to provide them with rooms and entertainment. 10-5-46 Sat

What Failure Would Disprove

The News and Courier

If the colored "Democrats", members of the New party, fail to oust Dr. Byrnes from the office of secretary of state it will disprove his assertion on the floor of the senate, "The negroes have come into control of the Democratic party". The News and Courier would have no pleasure in the spectacle of a jobless Byrnes. Wed. 10-30-46 Charleston, S.C.

Slighted the Colored "Democrats"

The News and Courier Charleston, S.C.

Presumably the "Democrats" of New York, "Empire State", omitted to nominate a colored "Democrat" for governor or United States senator because upon diligently searching their ranks they could not find a colored statesman who they thought measured to Mead and Lehman. This "Democratic" aspersion on the colored statesmanship of the Empire State will be deplored in Cleveland, Chicago, Detroit and Pittsburgh, and they may make amends for the discourtesy. ORGANIZATION HOLDING NIGHTLY BALLOT INSTRUCTION MEETINGS

Thurs. 7-11-46

In the most hectic meeting since its reorganization several months ago, the Citizens' Democratic Club thundered its approval of James V. Carmichael as the proper candidate for the Negro vote to support in the primary election of next week. The meeting was held Monday night at Bethlehem Baptist church which was filled to the very rafters, and was presided over by President John W. McGlockton.

Secretary in a Quandary

Everything was serene until Recording Secretary Sidney A. Jones was called upon to read the report of the policy committee. Mr. Jones in his opening remarks stated that he was in a quandary as to what report was wanted as the report he had was one which was framed by the president alone. At this point Mrs. Ophelia Lee McIver refreshed Mr. Jones' memory that he had in his possession a report that was properly made out by the seven members of the policy committee of which he, Mr. Jones, was a member, and that that report was the report which the president wished read.

Mr. Jones then read the report, which had already been approved by the executive board and was awaiting the confirmation of the organization.

Rev. Baker Makes Passionate Appeal

When Mr. Jones had finished reading the report, Donald Thomas moved the adoption of the report by sections. A substitute motion was made by the Rev. S. A. Baker, pastor of the church, in a passionate appeal, to adopt the report as a whole.

Unreadiness on the substitute was voiced by Mr. Jones, T. J. Hopkins and the Rev. H. W. Murph, all of whom were members of the committee, and, it is said, had concurred in the making of the report a day or so before.

Objectors Booed

Pandemonium broke loose as the three objectors attempted to voice their opinions, and they were booed off the floor. The motion was put and the report was adopted as a whole. It was brought out in the discussion of the report that the policy committee in attempting to ascertain the views of the two sets of candidates from Chatham county for the State Legislature sought an audience with them. Messrs. Evans, Skinner and Smith, candidates of the Citizens' Progressive League, met with the committee and satisfactorily explained their views on matters of vital importance to the Negro. The Tribune

Several Candidates Refuses Audience

An audience was not obtained with Messrs. Alexander, Connerat and McNall, candidates of the administration, but Mr. Bouhan, Judge Houlihan and Sheriff McFeeley met with the committee. It is stated that Mr. Bouhan expressed the opinion that he did not think it necessary for the candidates to meet with the committee. However, it is stated that Mr. McFeeley expressed the feeling that the candidates should give the committee a hearing. It is said that Judge Houlihan agreed with Mr. Bouhan on the matter. The failure of the committee to get a hearing from the three administration candidates for the legislature has been bitterly criticized by the Negro voters. Savannah, Ga.

Rivers' Literature Burned

At the conclusion of the meeting some Rivers literature which had been handed out to the attendants by some paid workers furnished fuel for a flaring bonfire which was started in front of the church.

The organization is holding several meetings every night at which the proper use of the ballot is being taught. Thurs. 7-11-

Danger in Their Silence

News and Courier

Members of the white party who vote in primaries take no pledge to vote in the general election for candidates of the national "Democratic", or Truman-Hannegan party—they may vote for Communist, Socialist, independent Democratic or even for Republican candidates for president and vice president, if they wish, without loss of standing in the white party. Sunday

If national "Democrats" recognize negroes as "Democrats" in South Carolina (they do), can white Democrats exclude negro "Democrats" from club meetings that elect delegates to county conventions that elect delegates to state conventions that elect delegates to the national "Democratic" convention that nominates candidates for president and vice president? Charleston, S.C.

If, in 1948, negroes be excluded from the white club meetings, county and state conventions, and those negroes shall send delegates to the national convention, will they be denied recognition?

Some of them came home from Chicago in 1944, after they had been denied admission to the national convention and told their fellow "racemen" that they were given assurance of representation in the national convention of 1948. 9-1-46

The News and Courier again advises and urges the white people who hold primaries to nominate state and county candidates to hold a convention after the primaries this year and form an organization separate from that one that has connection with the national "Democratic" party. It is no white man's party. Nobody says that it is.

The leaders of the white party in South Carolina, the senators, representatives in congress, the 11 candidates for governor, the candidates for other offices, especially for the legislature, should not remain silent on this subject. Sunday

Where They Will Enter

The News and Courier

The saying of The Barnwell People-Sentinel that negroes who have been delivering speeches in Columbia and passing resolutions in support of Editor Wallace, D.P., "might as well recognize here and now that they are not going to be accepted into the ranks of the white Democrats" is we believe, correct, but guaranty is not given that these negro "Democrats" will be denied representation in the convention of the national "Democratic" party, which is NOT a "white man's party". These negroes are faithful to the New party, the Rooseveltian party, a mixed racial party, and we are not sure that any white Democrat in Barnwell is a defender of its principles. If one be, let him speak. Charleston, S.C. Fri. 10-25-46

The South Carolina Clubs

Newsweek, 9-16-46

Dayton, Ohio

I was profoundly interested in your report about South Carolina's secession from the Union in defying the authority of the Supreme Court (NEWSWEEK, Aug. 26).

I was a member of the German Reichstag before Hitler's rise to power, and I can say emphatically that the tactics employed by the Democrats from South Carolina are pure Nazi tactics, quite aside from their racial Nazi beliefs.

Assuming Congress would pass a new law directing all [labor] unions, defined as unions, to account publicly for their affairs, to admit, in the South, Negroes as equal members, and to hold elections of their officers and permit Negroes to take part in these elections on equal footing; assuming the unions would oppose that law and would lose out, the Supreme Court upholding it and declaring it constitutional; and assuming the unions would reorganize themselves into private "clubs," as the Democratic party of South Carolina did, thus evading the law and defying the Supreme Court—the howl of public opinion would be deafening. All unions would be accused of rebellion against the law and all constitutional authorities, and the senators from South Carolina would presumably fight in the forefront against these Red unions dictating to the country and employing a dirty trick to thwart a Supreme Court decision. Newsweek

But this is exactly what the Democratic party of South Carolina has done. Eight hundred thousand Negroes . . . have been deprived of their constitutional rights as interpreted by the Supreme Court of this country. It is to be hoped that the Supreme Court will be called upon to uphold its authority against the racial Nazi supermen from seceding South Carolina. Mon. 1-16-46

The Democrats and the Negroes

The Courier-Journal, Louisville, Ky.

Since before Mayor Taylor was elected Mayor of Louisville the Negro vote has been returning to the Republican Party. What is the cause?

As a Negro Democrat I shall attempt to explain why the Negro Democrat is leaving the Democratic Party. We have been unable to obtain federal recognition in Kentucky, along with the attitude of federal agencies, such as O.P.A. and W.A.A., and R.F.C., which have failed to integrate competent Negro Democrats into their organizations.

Recently we have lost the support of Charles Scott, influential Negro Democrat, because he complained of the following: (a) No Negro on the City-County Executive Committee. (b) No Negro on the Democratic State Central Executive Committee. (c) Police brutality. Thurs. 11-21-46

Since I have contributed financially to the Democratic Party locally, I suggest the Mayor take some remedial action before the Governor's race.

One Year of President Truman

A year ago, April 12, Senator Harry Truman ascended to the Presidency of the United States. No element of the population was more alarmed by this event than the Negro people. A general feeling of distrust and fear prevailed. There were apprehensions based on Mr. Truman's Southern rearing and birth and the fact that he had won the Democratic nomination for Vice President because he was an acceptable compromise to the Negro-hating Southern politicians. His record in the Senate on racial matters had not been offensive, neither was it particularly attractive. Saturday

Despite doubts and misgivings born of these factors the Negro Press and public refrained from pre-judgment and charitably accorded President Truman the benefit of all doubts; and out of self-interest, fervently hoped for fair play and a successful administration.

On purely racial matters, President Truman has belied all presumptions and inferences raised by his Southern background and connections. His support of Negro legislation and Negro appointments far excelled the late Franklin D. Roosevelt. He has repeatedly declared for permanent Federal FEPC legislation and the abolition of the poll tax. He has been outspoken in favoring a national educational bill and for a measure giving greater medical aid to the poor, and other social legislation which would have vitally affected Negroes. Sat.

His Attorney General has not equivocated when it came to enforcing the decisions of the Supreme Court pertaining to Negroes' voting in Southern primaries. And the Supreme Court decisions in respect to equality of educational facilities in Southern States have taken on new meaning and force during his administration. He appointed the first Negro Federal judge ever to serve within the confines of the United States and the first Negro in Anglo-Saxon history to rule over a province where the population is mixed. In the light of this record, no one is warranted in challenging his good faith or friendship.

Despite this outstanding record of good intentions, all surveys indicate that Negroes, along with other elements of the population, are leaving the President. In most populous Negro districts of the North, recent registrations show a decided drift from the Democratic Party. An analysis of the causes shows many of them to be beyond his control. Pittsburgh, Pa.

The Roosevelt following among Negroes was built, in part, through Mrs. Roosevelt. The Roosevelts were a team in which the wife played almost as important a part in obtaining popular support as did the President. Mrs. Truman has not been an asset in winning or retaining Negro support. In the only opportunity she has had to win favor with Negroes she failed dismally. While Mrs. Truman acquiesced to the prejudices of the DAR, Mrs. Roosevelt, under a similar provocation, resigned from the organization.

Although President Truman advocated a permanent FEPC bill and anti-poll tax legislation he has failed to have either of these measures enacted. This is also true of other social legislation he sponsored, which, if passed, would have beneficially affected the lives and well-being of Negroes.

Negroes have a dual personality in our body politic. President Truman may have retained a large part of his Negro support if his social legislation which affects Negroes as citizens and not particularly as Negroes, had been enacted. Old Age Pension, Slum Clearance, Social Security, NYA, WPA, Relief, and other social legislation for the underprivileged, were the basis of Franklin D. Roosevelt's popularity among Negroes, and not the few special things he did in their behalf.

Mr. Truman, however, lacked the force and influence to have his programs and recommendations adopted by the Congress. The public gives little credit for good intentions; the test is a programatic one of results.

There is probably nothing that has occurred during the year of Mr. Truman's administration which has alienated so many Negroes from him and the Democratic Party, as the rise of Southern Congressmen and Senators to dominate in national legislation. President Truman must take some of the blame for this condition, for scarcely had he been elevated to the Presidency before he surrendered his leadership in legislative matters. 4-27-46

He publicly announced that he would hereafter give Congress full reins in initiating and controlling legislation. He erroneously assumed that this gesture of cooperation and good-will would keep within bounds of a liberal program, Southern members of Congress.

Instead of reciprocating the President's invitation for comradeship, Southern Democrats accepted it as weakness and as a licence for the unrestricted propaganda of their hates and racial theories. It is this abandonment of leadership which has contributed to the scuttling of FEPC and other racial and progressive legislation. The President should have known that every bit of strength, leadership and coercion would be necessary if these arch enemies of progress and liberalism were to be suppressed.

It is true that the Republicans cannot escape blame for their dastardly part in the Southern-Democratic-Republican coalition, but neither can President Truman, whose leadership has permitted the Southern bloc to get out of hand and his party to deteriorate. He lacks the statesmanship to sufficiently solidify the conflicting elements which make up the Democratic Party so that it may continue on a progressive and liberal course.

The Truman Administration has failed to take a firm stand for a fair and equitable disposition of colonial peoples. It has lagged behind while other Governments have championed the cause of black colonies.

President Truman has also been blamed for unfavorable delays and readjustments which are inescapable in the transition from war to peace. Relatives of soldiers overseas are resentful because their boys are not discharged as quickly as they think they should be. Veterans' housing, strikes and a multitude of other issues have all in a measure been charged to the President and lessens his popularity. Even the popularity of a Roosevelt would have suffered from these adversities which could not be entirely controlled.

President Truman has won the affection of all by his fine personal qualities. But the weak and underprivileged need a rugged, militant champion. Rights and privileges are not won except through struggle. We would be ungrateful if we did not acknowledge President Truman's evidences of friendship for the Negro people, and we would be derelict if we did not show that it has produced but little in racial advancement.

Truman's Poll Tax Stand Seen As Indication He "Won't Run"

Courier Atlanta, Ga.

Wed 4-10-46

WASHINGTON—(ANP)— President Truman's statement in Chicago Saturday that southern states must work out poll tax problems for themselves was seen by Clark Foreman of Atlanta as an indication that the President has lost hope for election in 1948.

Foreman, president of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, presiding over a "Win the Peace" meeting here, said the statement by Mr. Truman is a "most significant reversal of presidential policy." The President made the observation before a high school press conference last Saturday in Chicago where he was honored Army Day guest.

The President's statement at this time, as interpreted by Foreman, "can only mean he does not intend to run in 1948 because he can't get any of his program thru congress as long as poll taxers dominate both houses. He must have finally made up his mind he is a failure, cannot be President and will not run for election," Foreman said.

Does Truman deserve the Negro vote?

Tribune

CHICAGO — Should Negroes support Truman on the basis of his race record? Well, the answer seems to depend on whether one is a good Democrat or a true-blue Republican. Sat. 4-6-46

Two staunch Democrats, Mayor Edward J. Kelly and Sen. Joseph Guffey (Pa.) debate the question with two Republican leaders, Herbert Brownell and Perry Howard, in the June Negro Digest, and the vote, as might be expected, comes out even-Stephen. Los Angeles

Sen. Guffey cites Truman's support of FEPC, anti-polltax, and anti-lynching legislation, and his "precedent-shattering" nomination of a Negro to a federal judgeship, while Mayor Kelly praises Truman's "consistently liberal stand" as a senator and declares, "No other President has done so much to advance Negroes in so short a time". California

Brownell, ex-chairman of the Republican National Committee, depreciates the Truman record as "one of pious words but no performance", recalling that Truman was absent from Senate and not voting when FEPC and anti-polltax came up for passage, that he has said, "I wish to make it clear that I am not appealing for social equality of the Negro".

Howard, Republican committeeman from Mississippi, echoes these sentiments, "President by accident only, Truman means well. But he is so handicapped by the stranglehold that Southern Democrats have on his political throat that he will be able to do less for us in the future than he has in the past.

MR. TRUMAN'S RACIAL VIEWS

The Chronicle Detroit, Mich. Sat. 10-19-46

Several times in these columns we have pointed out that President Truman, despite all the criticism against him, is strong on the race issue. Last week Columnist Drew Pearson said much the same thing and Mr. Pearson is one of the most informed journalists in this country. He gave due credit to the efforts of Attorney General Tom Clark and his aide, Lamar Caudle, both Southerners, who have shown a disposition to do the right thing. He quoted Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr., who said that "Father never stuck his neck out the way Truman does."

As we have stated before, President Truman has been victimized by muddle-head advisers, poor press relations, and the antics of his Missouri friends. The record, however shows that Mr. Truman has gone down the liberal line on the race issue and has spoken out when weaker men would have kept quiet. His appointments of Negroes to high offices have shattered all precedents. Despite this liberal record, many Negroes have swallowed the bunk dished out by the extreme left and the extreme right which makes Mr. Truman look like a dodo.

We do not agree with everything Mr. Truman says or does, and that goes for Mr. Clark and his aides, but we do feel that the administration has gotten a much worse press than it deserves, even in the Negro newspapers. We believe President Truman honestly wishes to carry on the liberal tradition of President Roosevelt and we know from first hand experience that Mr. Truman has stuck his neck out on some issues that would have frightened the daylights out of many others who have sat in the White House.

We do not know what Mr. Truman thinks personally about Negroes, but we do know his record cannot be called, by any stretch of the imagination, reactionary. Yet this is what he is called by those who ought to know better. Apparently these critics have forgotten how difficult it was to get even President Roosevelt to move on the race issue, to say nothing of those before Mr. Roosevelt's time.

The truth is that the whole liberal program of the Truman administration has been shamelessly sabotaged by the reactionary bloc in Congress. The President has said as much in some of his speeches and he has pleaded for popular support. If the voters, and that includes every individual one of us, do not elect a liberal Congress in November, the President will have his hands tied so tightly that his liberal tendencies will avail us nothing at all.

While there are some liberal Republicans who are right on the race issue, none of the Republican big shots who are being touted for the presidency in 1948 fall into that category. The guys who have got the Republican machine tied up are even calling Governor Dewey of New York a parlor pink. You can discount anything they say about President Truman.

TRUMAN ON DISCRIMINATION

Defender Chicago, Ill.

In answering a letter directed to him by Charles G. Bolton, chairman of the American Veterans' Committee, President Truman threw himself into the ranks of those opposing prejudice and discrimination without any reservations. Mr. Truman stated that discrimination was like a disease that must be eradicated.

The President's declaration came after the AVC had praised him for creating a national commission on higher education. Hope was expressed that the new commission would combat the discrimination against Negro and Japanese-American veterans practiced by many of the colleges in America.

Mr. Bolton also blamed Congress for failure to pass measures that would have protected minorities against lynching and would have removed all restrictions against voting and employment.

Sat. 9-21-46

The President concurred wholeheartedly with Bolton. Mr. Truman then cited the sacrifices in blood, suffering and material losses incurred to suppress hatred in the recently concluded war. Yet, it disturbed him greatly to find the same intolerance and prejudice, for which these sacrifices were made, running rampant in America.

He reiterated the belief that his new commission under Dr. George F. Zook would attack discrimination with all the resources at its command. Further pointing out that "the opportunity to vote, hold and retain a job and to secure adequate shelter and medical care is no less than to gain an education compatible with the needs and ability of the individual.

When the titular head of a nation expresses himself so forcefully on the question of discrimination and prejudice as well as on major social reforms, why doesn't the country adopt these progressive measures? The answer lies in the fact that the elected representatives of the people pay no heed to the elected head nor to the citizens who elect them. Neitner are the Congressmen their own masters. Their acts betray them as the tools of the vested interests whose sole purpose is to throttle liberal legislation.

The record of the last Congress is as dismal a record as ever attained by a legislative body. Grade their accomplishments on measures designed to improve the conditions among the common people and their mark will be zero. Fair employment was defeated. Anti-Poll Tax Bills failed to pass. Of course, anti-lynch bills were just a myth as far as Congress was concerned. Further, the Murray-Wagner-Dingle Health Bill together with the Wagner-Ellender-Taft proposal, which would bring housing construction within the reach of veterans and the low-income group, were studiously neglected.

So much for what the law-maker didn't do. Now, let's look at what they did. The phony Price Control Bill was perpetuated against the people. It protected the producer instead of the consumer. An emasculated Full Employment measure was finally pushed through. The United States Employment Service was returned to the states. And, finally, Congress had a field day in passing legislation favorable to big business, all the while condemning labor leaders and all liberals as either Communist or the tools of Communism.

President Truman has shown his stand on the question of rights for Negroes, Jews and other oppressed minority groups. Results have shown, however, that he is powerless against the present make-up of Congress to accomplish any social reforms.

Today the need is greater than ever before to start a grass-roots house-cleaning of all Congressmen based upon their voting record alone. Organizations like the American Veterans' Committee and the CIO-PAC are instructing and blazing the trail for political reforms.

Liberals of all color and tint must unite to elect a progressive Congress in 1946. Unless this is done, instead of witnessing a social "Renaissance" we will see the few gains already made fade before our eyes.

POLITICAL MOOD

The Defender Chicago, Ill. Defender

Negro People Disillusioned

Chicago, Ill.

By EARL CONRAD

NEW YORK—The political mood of the Negro American at the moment manifests itself in the form of an almost total disillusion with the Truman Administration, but a disillusion matched only by an equal mistrust and rejection of the Republican Party. 8-10-46

There is no evidence that the breakaway from the leadership of President Truman and those Democratic reactionaries whom he leads means that this is being followed by anything so simple as a swing of the pendulum over to the Republican Party. Sat. 8-10-46

At a moment when the Negro is actualy voting inside the Democratic primaries in the Southland in fairly considerable numbers, at a moment when a Negro-white Democratic alliance in Georgia actually outvoted Gene Talmadge in a historic primary, there is no consolation for the Republican Party; nothing but complication. There is nothing in the current disillusion of the Negro masses with the Truman cabal to lead the Republican National Committee to suppose that it has any other weapon at its disposal for corraling Negro votes other than the treasury of its public relations committee and the hope that quislingism among certain Negro leaders is as high now as it was in 1944 and that it will continue so. There is absolutely nothing in the Republican Party program or Republican individuals at the moment to convince the Negro people of anything other than that Republicans expect to go on carrying out the provisions of the "gentlemen's agreement" with the Southern Democrats of 1876 as faithfully as they performed this service under Mr. Dewey in 1944.

Defender

Continue Compromise

It is still the hope—a dangerous one right now—that the traditional North-South, Democratic-Republican compromise over Negro rights can be continued in 1948. 8-10-46

That this must be the strategy of the leadership of both major parties is evident in the fact that both parties promised a national FEPC in 1944, and, during the last session of Congress, both conspired to destroy even this modicum of concession to Negro advance. The Republican contribution to the defeat of this measure was so enormous, so unforgivable to Negro leadership, despite demagogic promises, that Republican repudiation appears to me to be as hearty at the moment as the rejection of Truman and Byrnes.

No one in America is clearer than the Negro that America is now dominated by a one-party system, a "Republican Party". Such a machinery that makes it possible for a popular vote to be nullified (Georgia's Talmadge) is now exposed as a dangerous and undemocratic instrument of class rule. The two major parties have operated trickily on a national scale as white supremacy has operated electorally in Georgia. The power of the Democratic-Republican coalition in Congress, defying the entire national will and repudiating Rooseveltism as if it were a disease, has become so evident as a "one-class, one-party" business, that it is no wonder the Negro group was quick to react to labor's intimations of the need for a new party and even to step out ahead of labor in asking for a clean break with the present "two party" combination of anti-labor, anti-Negro, anti-people's policy.

FDR Death A Blow

The current impasse in the Negro community's political direction stemmed directly from the death of F. D. Roosevelt. The dangers inherent in the ascent of a Missourian to the Presidency were feared and expressed at once. An examination of the headlines of the Negro press from that day until this shows a steady deterioration of confidence. There have been brief flurries of support to progressive views expressed by the President. There has been in fact a wholehearted support to movements to keep the Office of Price Administration alive. There was determined participation of the organized Negro in the recent strike wave. There has been, since the death of Roosevelt, a marked manifestation of Negro-white labor unity in the face of a rapid deterioration of national and foreign policy. The Negro has been looking sharply to the CIO, to PAC, to the organization drive in the South. That the Negro has not moved toward the Republicans, but has moved toward the left, has been evident in two main responses: alertness to third party possibilities and recruitment of Negroes in large numbers to the Communist Party. The Communist Party reports that one-third of its recent 15,000 membership gain is Negro. This is an enormous proportion, and it reveals the leftward movement of the Negro and counter-indicates any tendency to go over to the Republicans.

The manner in which the Federal Government has tolerated a resurgence of traditional violence against the Negro as a means of suppressing the Negro's natural and just post-war aspirations to an improved citizenship status, has been equalled only by the determination of Governor Dewey in New York to play compromise with the Negro question again as he did in the spring of 1944 when he succeeded in placating the South by sabotaging passage of the State FEPC. Now Dewey finds himself trying to whitewash the police killing of the Ferguson brothers in Freeport, L.I., even though a united front of Negro and white organizations in New York and throughout the country has urged trial of the policeman who killed the Negro GIs. Dewey has a people's fight on his hands and he has taken a class and party position. He hopes to kill off the case swiftly. If Patrolman Joseph Romeika, the killer, is not punished, Dewey won't get a Negro vote in New York for Governor this fall. What he will do after he kills off the Ferguson case is to make about three new $5,000 a year appointments to the key Republicans in Harlem—if there are any.

Chicago, Ill.

Republican Compromise

I mention in detail the foregoing case because it typifies traditional Republican compromise with Negro lives, and reveals better than any other single issue at the moment why the Negro in the metropolitan area is as sick of Republican politics as those emanating from Democrat Byrnes' State Department. Sat. 8-10-46

If the Democrats have taken little interest in the increased relief case load of Negro unemployed in New York and elsewhere, and the increased cost of living generally which affects Negroes in particular, the Republicans' only interest has been to cooperate with and help fashion Democratic Party sabotage of the people's standard of living. The Negro is full well aware of Republican collusion and joint responsibility for the current Democratic drive toward depression.

It would be a mistake, in my view, to attribute the developments of the past year to Truman's "weakness." Mr. Truman, it appears to me, has been trying to play the same kind of two-policy game as his predecessor, but operating well to the right of that policy. When Roosevelt uttered a left position but performed to the right, he could get away with it because in general he was left of center. When Truman utters a progressive sentiment it no longer carries weight because his practical emphasis is so consistently on the right. The most truthful utterance he ever made was when he said, over the air, "I want no conflict with Congress." He went on to indicate then that he might, he would have conflict with Congress, but it has never developed. What did develop was the calling in of one Republican after another. It was as if Truman, fearful that he would be viewed as a sectional President, hastened to assure Republicans he was for the North too.

Railroad Strike Defender

The removal of both major parties from the common interest was best exemplified in the railroad strike when Truman called for total suppression of labor, which would mean Christ-knows-what for the Negro. That was the pay-off. The Republicans including Dewey, Taft and Stassen distinguished themselves in that crisis by an incomparable display of opportunism. They would destroy the workingman who went on strike but wouldn't put him in the Army as punishment. That was going too far In these not very subtle distinctions between the major parties lies the stalemate at the moment for Negroes, white labor, liberals, farmers and small business. It remains a choice between one party which would have transformed the United States Army, an instrument of national defense, into a concentration camp for striking workers, and another party which would use the Army for its traditional purposes and find other means of strait-jacketing labor. Chicago, Ill.

Is it any wonder that the Negro is eagerly watching what labor, independents and the left will do and what hopes remain for rebuilding the shattered labor-democratic coalition mostly centered in the Northern wing of the Democratic Party?

Atlanta, Ga. Fri. 10-18-46

When the late Huey Long quit his job as a tea salesman he told the sales manager of the McCormick Company:

"I'm gonna be President of the United States. For every man who makes a decent living in this country, there are 35 who just scrape along. I'll help those 35 and they'll help me."

So, Huey Long set out cynically shouting "share the wealth" and "every man a king."

It worked so well that a cold fear crept over the nation and a great sigh of relief went up when Huey Long passed on to that bourne from which no traveler returns.

But, apparently, what he said caused no one to think save the sales manager, Charles P. McCormick, who went back to take the negative side of Huey's statement and revolutionize the tea business. He found that at least some of the 35 had never had a real chance and had not failed because of laziness or incompetency.

One great, dismal, obvious fault which the reactionary persons in our country stupidly fail to see is that in the political field the great majority of those trying to do something about the 35 who "just scrape along" almost always are the Huey Longs.

An exception was Roosevelt, who tried on a national scale. And if you don't think anything was accomplished, take a look at the national income figures. They will demonstrate how many persons have been pulled out of the "below $1,000-per-year" income class in the past 10 years. And the war didn't do all of it by any means.

Maybe I am wrong to toss his name in this at all, but it needs saying. Because we are now in the middle of a national miasma which seems to be saying that all of a sudden this nation has got to make up its mind whether it is going to go to the extreme left or right.

Nothing could be worse for the country than such thinking.

What we need to do is to go ahead on the American highway. If this country ever is persuaded by the smart manipulators that our only choice is between the extremes, then indeed will I move over and sit in the pew with those who think that all is lost.

Liberalism It so happens I always have despised Communism and its methods. I have never thought other than if the people of this country knew about the workings of this ideology and knew its leaders, they would be damaged by them. We are in trouble with them now because they, like the Huey Longs, knew about the 35 who just scrape along and went to work on them. They have taken over several unions, including the crews that run the shipping. It means that a very few persons have great power.

But, again, it must be said the only reason they were able to do so was because of the unintelligent attitude of the rest of us.

The great drive now is on to make the decent, wholesome quality of liberalism seem to be Communistic, or at best, merely a sort of silly, Pollyanna sort of business having no place in a practical world. Or, that all persons with any liberal thought are whooping after Henry Wallace and demanding milk for Hottentot tots.

Party The campaigners seek to say that the Democratic Party has been captured by the Communists and the PAC. Nothing could be more false. The PAC's investigation by a congressional committee reveals the PAC to have been kicked around more times than it won. When it did win it had the good sense to join others in support of a candidate who was good at getting votes. Jim Folsom, of Alabama, is an example. We will get nowhere breaking up the Democratic Party, which always has been one of diverse groups—a Joseph's coat party.

Bosses of the big city machines, Republican and Democratic scrambled for the labor and Negro vote. I have taken a second look and I find that the same bosses are in control. They will ride any vote that comes along, Negro, PAC or radical.

It can't do this country any good to swing back far to the right and resume the Republican concept of the time of Hoover and before of paying attention only to the one person in 36 who is making a decent living. If we do someone is going to take the other 35 and go to work on them. Some will turn to Communism and some will go over to the Hitler line or some other line such as Huey Long was espousing. Before long the country will really be fouled up and we will be in deep trouble.

This country was founded on liberalism. Liberalism believes in the freedom of the indurdued—not a collectivist state.

Pride We used to take a great pride in the fact. We founded it for opportunity of the individual, for the dignity of the individual life, for religious freedom and speech and living.

It will be a very great failure if we let the smart and shrewd propagandists make us confuse a liberal attitude with Communism or the confusion of Henry Wallace's position.

Certainly there isn't an ounce of liberalism to a ton of Communism. But, by the same token, there isn't any in any form of totalitarianism.

McCormick took Huey Long's idea and moved a tea business out of the red into the largest and most successful tea business in the world.

I think we can take the same idea and build the strongest force for democracy and the rights of man ever conceived by the greatest advocates of those rights. It would be a country against which every wave of Communism or totalitarianism in any form would break and fail.

But we won't do it if we allow the campaign of today push us into a hurried, frantic, unnecessary choice of extremes.

We have seen in Russia, Spain and Hitler's Germany what the choice of an extreme eventually means.

Stick to your liberal guns.

Lincoln and the Negro

CLARENCE W. SCOTT, of 3538 Ellis ave., Chicago, wrote to me recently, as a reader of the Defender since its founding, to ask why it was that no writer of today would mention Abraham Lincoln without praising him. Mr. Scott cited several of Lincoln's early statements to indicate that he was not overly-friendly to the Negro, and that he was in favor of colonizing the Negro to Africa. Scott reports that on Aug. 21, 1858, Lincoln said: "I have no purpose, directly or indirectly to interfere with . . . slavery . . . where it exists . . . and I have no inclination to do so." My correspondent adds that Lincoln repeated this statement on March 4, 1861.

Sat. 6-22-46

What Scott says about Lincoln's unclarity about the Negro-white situation before he became President and for some time after he was in the White House is quite true. I think that as late as 1862 Lincoln was in favor of colonizing the Negro to Africa. And any examination of the early speeches of Lincoln will reveal many such compromise statements.

Even so, I, like most students of the Civil War, am a Lincoln man, and I will tell you why . . .

How Abe Grew

HOW FAST LINCOLN moved is a point that I was discussing recently with Dr. Carter G. Woodson, that expert on Lincoln and the Civil War. Dr. Woodson put it to me this way: "By 1864 Lincoln reached the same position as that held by John Brown in 1859."

And that is quite true. In October of 1859 John Brown invaded Virginia and sought, by military means, to start the movement which would liberate the Negro. By the Spring of 1864 Abraham Lincoln commissioned Martin Delaney as a major, making him the first Negro major in the country, and consented to Delany's plan to have Negro troops carry the war into the South. In fact Lincoln urged the formation of a Negro regiment and did all he could to help Negroes free themselves militarily in the South itself. In the early part of his administration he had been reticent to use Negro troops, but he reached that position too.

Now when a man grows you have to give him credit for it.

It is all right to remember a man's origins and weaknesses but his impact on society has to be measured by what he believes and does when he is the stage of influencing society. On this basis Lincoln should be acceptable to progressives.

You know and I know that Lincoln did not see this thing in the simple, honest and forthright way that John Brown and other Abolitionists saw it, yet under Lincoln, chattel slavery was knocked out, the nation was preserved and the Confederates took a blow from which they never fully recovered even in the period of the Restoration of white rule.

THE STORY was told to me only recently that the late Wendell Willkie was very weak on the Negro question as recently as five or six years ago, but he too grew. Just before he died he had more clarity on the issue for our period possibly than Lincoln did for his period. We have to measure Willkie too by what he was saying toward the end and the effect he was having then rather than by his simple vote-getting approach of a few years earlier.

But I am afraid that after Willkie died so did the Republican Party as far as the Negro is concerned. There is nothing left in that outfit as far as I can see for the Negro group or the so-called "common man" but the recollection of Lincoln himself and we can't get rid of Jim Crow with a pleasant memory. At the moment there is also great crisis in the Democratic Party, one half of which is rotten, corrupt and oppressive, and the other half, the progressive- labor-PAC section of which is in a quandary how to make its influence felt inside that machine. It is interesting though that the Democrats do have "wings" as we see in the Georgia vote fight. I hope any friends I have in Georgia will help defeat the fascist-Klan wing represented by Eugene Talmadge.

South Carolinians Seek to Bar All-White Groups

The Afro-American Baltimore, Md. Sat. 10-19-46

CHARLESTON, S.C.—(ANP)—Success of a nation-wide movement to block seating all-white delegates at national conventions of both major parties was reported recently by John H. McCray, chairman of the South Carolina Progressive Democratic party.

Steps have been taken by National Democratic party officials to disbar from the 1948 national convention delegates from States that decline to include non-white citizens in their State parties, as is the case in South Carolina.

The report stated in part:

"I have been informed that necessary steps will be taken at the next national convention to disbar from membership delegations which derty membership in the party on a basis of race and color.

"While it is not expedient now to make public the authority of this information, it can be said that the advice is reported to me after extensive efforts on a nationwide basis which leave little doubt as to its possible occurrence."

Mr. McCray's report said further, it may well affect pending actions in several other Southern States.

Wallace for Mixed Schools

The News and Courier

Hear this, you South Carolinians, senators, representatives and others, from speech delivered in behalf of the New party, "Democratic" party, candidates, in Los Angeles: Charleston, S.C. 10-29-46

"Contending that racism was an unforgivable sin, Mr. Wallace said that in the interests of world peace, as well as domestically, 'there should be no discrimination because of race, color or religion in labor unions, educational and other institutions.'"

There you have a former vice president, a member of the late Mr. F. D. Roosevelt's cabinet, who served a year in Mr. Truman's cabinet before he was displaced, speaking for mixed negro and white colleges and schools. There can be no separate racial schools in the South or elsewhere unless shall be discrimination on account of race.

In the same speech, this Mr. Wallace, referring to opposition in congress of Republicans "as well as Southern Democrats to the FEPC", said that he "was ashamed of the Democratic party in the senate and house of representatives" and was "also ashamed of some Republicans".

The News and Courier is not a member of the party for which Henry A. Wallace is an exponent. Are you?

Inflated Vote Prices

The News and Courier

The variety of explanations of the defeat of the "Democrats", November 5, is countless, there is no cessation of the outpourings of them, and still that one that should be plainest even to the simple-minded statesmen and gazettes is not mentioned.

The Republicans beat the Democrats because the prices of influence and votes, like the prices of steaks and liquors, are inflated. Although money is cheap nothing else is; hence money won't buy elections.

In 1932 money was high-priced and jobs were few. (No one went on strike.). Millions of people were losing the little money they had, in banks that were closing. Money was real, for, if it was paper, gold could be had for it. Everything was cheap except money, and it was very dear.

Mr. F. D. Roosevelt was ushered into office and, after a few weeks became a New Dealer. His government began to spend and spend and continued to borrow and borrow. "Prosperity" arrived. Prices of all things began to rise, and the manufacture of money, which no longer was of gold or exchangeable for it, flourished mightily.

In those days, 1933 and following years, money began to drip and drop for Washington into communities that were poor in commodities except politicians and voters. When $350,000 or $3,500,000 came to a town in which nearly all the houses needed new coats of paint and kitchen sinks, a sufficient number of its people worshipped the New Deal. (It was not a Golden calf.). The prices of steaks and liquors rose, but Washington rained down money. Majorities cared not a continental (look up the meaning of "continental") whence came the money as long as it would buy goods and hire politicians. The number of hired men in government service doubled, trebled, quadrupled, and the hiring halls were, or so it appeared, managed by congressmen.

In a period of depression always is a number of voters on the market sufficient to be the balance of power and decide an election. Charleston, S.C.

The community to which comes a bag of swag from Washington with which to build a postoffice or an airport seldom worries that it will be paid for by their children and grandchildren as well as by themselves. Thurs. 10-14-46

The hour has arrived when money is plentiful and little or nothing else is. The people crave automobiles, the workers in the factories crave good dinners and good clothes which they can't get. "Labor" goes on strike. Thus the scarcity of automobiles persists. There is also scarcity of houses and good beds. Money, or capital is on strike, here and there.

In a depression, anybody or any government that can borrow can buy votes and offices. A person with no charm whatsoever can buy votes, if the people have little money and he has the key to the treasury. Thurs. 11-14-46

Now the price of votes and of communities has become inflated and, cheap as money is, it will no more buy them than it will buy porterhouse steaks and new bungalows with modern conveniences. Hence the New Deal party is writhing in its ruins.

'The Truth, the Real Truth'

The News and Courier

A few days ago The News and Courier commented upon the remarks of a newspaper of the great county of white people, Greenville, descriptive of a wicked and dangerous indifference in its constituency to the recent conquest by the horrible, seven times horrible, Republicans. Charleston, S.C.

The Greenville News, with its accustomed delicacy and cute qualifications, described the reception of the Republican victories by the people of the Piedmont as one of a nonchalance easily transmutable into satisfaction and joy. It said in effect that many people in the Piedmont had arrived at the conclusion that not all Republicans should be hanged as post-war war criminals.

We remarked that in this change of public opinion in that part of South Carolina lurks danger to the party in South Carolina still going by the name "Democratic".

Now comes The Easley Progress, ablest of the Upcountry journals, published in the county in which white people are in greater proportion to negroes than in any other county of the 46, saying, "The truth is, we mean the real truth, that thousands of Carolinians are highly pleased with the outcome of Tuesday's election."

These things being correct, or half true, as diagnosis of opinion in the 13 or 14 counties of the state in which half the white people vote (less than one-third of the state's territory), The News and Courier declares again that there is likelihood, "danger" if the word be preferred, of a political revolution in South Carolina in 1948.

What will happen if handouts shall depend upon the generosity of the Republicans? It will be admitted that the South Carolinians are not disloyal to handouts. Many of them are downright ticklesome.

If the revolution, the house-cleaning, the complete turn-over, shall come to pass—and it would not necessarily be coalition with or absorption by the Republican party—the explanation of it will be that not in many a year has the Democracy of South Carolina had expounders and leaders faithful to the sterling and lasting principles of the grandfathers of the living generation, the Democrats who rescued the state from misgovernment. Wed. 11-13-46

It may be said in extenuation of the remissness of the leaders that they have not learned those principles and do not understand their meaning.

The understanding has been limited to the Handout principle. No leader should be blamed for what he does not know and cannot learn.

To The Courier-Journal Editor:

The Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky.

In a recent article in The Courier-Journal, Frank R Kent, states that the Negro vote was alienated from support of the Republican tickets by the strategy of Mr. Farley, as chairman of the Democratic National Committee, the action of Mrs. Roosevelt in giving the Negro the glad-hand socially and President Roosevelt's appointment of members of that race to office, and extending to them the benefit of relief measures during the depression, and, now that Mr. Farley, Mrs. Roosevelt, and President Roosevelt have passed out of the picture and industrial conditions have taken away the necessity for relief, the occasion is ripe for return of the Negro to the Republican Party and the Republican board of strategy is now formulating plans to recapture the Negro vote and return it en masse to that party. Mr. Kent is in error as to wher and why the Negro vote became alienated from the Republican Party and it is the opinion of this writer that those who formulate campaign strategy for the Republican ticket are mistaken in believing that the Negro will ever be induced to return en masse to that party. Sun. 10-13-46

During the period 1918-1924 the writer served on the bench in Washington, D. C., under appointment of President Wilson, and became acquainted with Negro lawyers, teachers and other leaders of that race. The exodus of the Negro out of the Republican Party started long before Mr. Roosevelt was nominated or Mr. Farley and Mrs. Roosevelt ever came on the scene. The writer knows this is so because he assisted in organizing the movement. The movement got its impulse in the Wilson Administration. The intelligent Negro saw that the policies of that administration were to the best interest of his race as they were to all men and women who eat their bread in the sweat of their faces; and when they learned through official contact with Democratic officials, including those from the South, that those officials, exponents of the will and purpose of that party, were not hostile to their race, but administered the law and their offices with justice and fairness to the Negro, the exodus away from the Republican Party started.

When Republican strategy is based upon the assumption that since Farley, Mrs. Roosevelt and Franklin D. Roosevelt are gone and the occasion for Government relief has passed, the Negro can be led en masse back into the Republican Party like a herd of stray cattle, that assumption discredits alike the motive that induced him to leave that party and also his awareness of the interest of his race.

A Challenge To The Republicans

Defender Chicago, Ill. Sat. 11-16-46

(An Editorial)

The Negro left the Republican Party because of its failure to press for the elimination of the obstacles preventing his legitimate human claims for complete recognition as American citizens.

In the past 14 years, the Republicans have consistently under the leadership of reactionary forces within the party forged an alliance with Southern reactionaries who have stymied the Negro's progress.

The late Franklin D. Roosevelt raised our status in housing, health, jobs, civil liberties and in politics.

1. Negroes obtained the right to vote in the South.
2. Negroes were given an opportunity to break the occupational "caste" system through which they were practically restricted to jobs as porters, maids and other menial tasks. President Roosevelt through the creation of the Fair Employment Practices Committee established the principle that the maintenance of fair employment practice is the responsibility of the Federal Government.
3. Negroes were given a fair opportunity in Federal employment.
4. The first Federal indictments and convictions in lynchings and abuse of civil rights were obtained.
5. For the first time in our history a Negro was elevated to a governorship and another to the Federal bench.

Will the Republicans who now control the Congress continue their sponsorship of the reactionary alliance with Bilbo, Rankin and Talmadge, or will they help to extend the gains thus far obtained?

The Negro's goals are still the same. From the heat of war for the "four freedoms" we have forged the objectives we advocate.

These objectives are:

1. The establishment of a Permanent Fair Employment Practices Committee which will give to the Negro an industrial bill of rights and assure him security and equality of opportunity in our economic system. The same protection should be given all Americans regardless of creed, national origin or race.
2. The passage of an anti-lynching law. Such legislation will guarantee to every American citizen the freedom from fear of violence because of his racial identity. There is nothing sensational nor Communistic about the desire of citizens to feel safe in their homes. Defender Chicago, Ill.
3. The passage of a law destroying the poll tax as an instrument in our elections. Our democracy is predicated upon the freedom of elections. Sat. 11-16-46
4. The unseating of Senator Bilbo. Now that the Republicans have a working majority in both houses of Congress, it is fitting that they not scrap the Bilbo investigations being so ably led by Senator Kilgore, Democrat, of West Virginia.

These are the challenges of the hour. The Republicans now have within their power an opportunity to accomplish these objectives.

Already Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York State who learned a lesson from the 1944 election has taken a stand on some of these vital issues. His stature looms as a star on the horizon for 1948.

It remains to be seen if the Republican Party will carry forward the dreams of Abraham Lincoln and Wendell Willkie.

The Chicago Defender will keep a constant vigilance on these issues that so vitally affect the Negro's status in the American society.

The South and the One-Party System

Washington Post, D.C.

In less than a week from two highly regarded sources have come urgings that the south abandon its traditional one-party system. Times Herald 2-28-46

"The only way to get real representation in the south is to have a two-party system," Tom Stokes, Pulitzer-prize winning Atlantan told members of the Georgia Press Institute in Athens Saturday.

Atlanta Constitution

"I hope that in time a two-party system can be established in the south," Richmond Times-Dispatch Editor Virginius Dabney told eight hundred southern educators here on Monday. "It seems to me that our one-party system is conducive to apathy, decay and bossism and that it stifles the free play of ideas."

What Stokes and Dabney are saying is, of course, nothing new.

Since the days of Grady, practical southerners have realized that this section can expect little from either Democrats or Republicans so long as its support is undeviating and assured.

But we are convinced that the answer lies, not altogether in traditional prejudice, but more in the caliber organization which the Republican party has had in the south and in the type of candidates which it has seen fit to offer for local offices. It will take time and effort, but we are convinced that, properly approached, the south can and will get away from the one-party system which has worked for so long to its detriment.

TWO-PARTY SYSTEM

(Quitman Free Press)

Sound commentators like Tom Stokes, former Georgian and now a Washington columnist, and Editor Virginius Dabney, of Richmond, have recently brought up the matter of a two-party system for the South. It has been discussed from time to time for a number of years. Mr. Dabney says "our one-party system is conducive to apathy, decay and bossism." The Atlanta Constitution, commenting on this, says traditional prejudice is not altogether responsible, that the type of candidates the Republican party presents for local offices has much to do with keeping the one-party system going. 3-9-46

The whole country needs great leaders in government, men who are not so responsive to pressure groups and pork barrel politics. There is something revolting in the spectacle of a great democracy pulling and hauling and scrambling for party and sectional benefits. Party leaders, unions, business interests and at long last that forgotten man, the Southern farmer, regard Washington as a grab bag. We are still starry-eyed enough to believe that the people long for leadership and would rise to it. It would not greatly matter to them whether such leaders were called Republican or Democrat. Eldest Son Of Late President Directs Group

Memphis World, Tenn.

WASHINGTON—(ANP)—Jittery politicians have another worry—they've got to watch Harold Ickes, whom American Negroes remember with warm feelings because of his attitude in the famous DAR-Marian Anderson controversy.

Deserting the Democratic party as such, Mr. Ickes is heading up a group of white and colored artists, scientists and professional people known as the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions.

The national political director of the organization is Jas. Roosevelt, eldest son of the late President. Only last week, Mr. Roosevelt was host at a cocktail party for newsmen in this city.

DESERTS PARTY

Tue. 3-19-46

Ickes does not threaten forming a third party, but he is known for bolting the Republicans in 1912 to follow Theodore Roosevelt and now, after serving 13 years in the cabinet here under Roosevelt and Truman, he announces he never had been a Democrat.

James Roosevelt has been a Democrat, but he told a Philadelphia audience recently that neither the Republican party nor the Democratic party today means anything.

A convincing speaker, with a natural ability, Roosevelt is being groomed to fill somebody's political shoes.

This 1946 Roosevelt-Ickes combination is off to a non-partisan and although it is a liberal group it is not communistic as was charged on the floor of the house last week by that hater of Communists John Rankin, who sees a communist behind every telephone pole in America and has communistic nightmares in his sleep.

ORGANIZE TEN MILLION

The plan is to organize 10 million independent voters of all groups and race to fight the two parties. Ickes has a following and probably no man in Washington during Roosevelt's administration, other than Roosevelt himself, was more influential among some groups of voters than Ickes.

It is significant that some notable Negro artist and authors are on the committee's national board of directors. Tue. 3-19-46

They include Duke Ellington, Hazel Scott, Langston Hughes and Paul Robeson. Other nationally known entertainers of the other group include Eddie Cantor, Frank Sinatra, Walter Houston, Bill Mauldin, and Orson Welles. The national chairman is the famous Jo Davidson, sculptor.

APRIL CONFERENCE

A conference is being called in Washington April 5-6-7 sponsored by 25 members of congress and more than 200 other prominent Americans, according to Representative Adolph Sabath, Democrat, who announced the conference last week. Like Ickes' committee, the April conference includes many prominent Negroes. It includes many liberal Democrats and avowed Communists such as New York City Councilman Benjamin Davis, Jr., Tue. 3-19-46

Will Ickes be the new leader to guide the Negro vote into effective channels where it can elect men to congress who are not controlled by outside influences and who recognize the nature of the serious problems facing Negroes in this country? The committee has its eye on the 1946 congressional elections and will function much in the manner of the PAC in endorsing and working for principles and not parties. If it is successful in this first all-out effort, it may be a strong factor in the 1948 elections. Tue. 3-19-46

At any rate, Mr. Ickes has warned President Truman that a fight is ahead.

Headed by Randolph

Third Party Group Formed

Pittsburgh Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.

CHICAGO—Headed by A. Philip Randolph, a group of liberal leaders laid the foundation for a third political party to participate in the 1948 national elections, in a meeting of "progressives" representing farm and union organizations from sixteen States held here last week.

The seventy-five delegates attending set up a national committee with Mr. Randolph, president of the AFL Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, as temporary chairman. Sat. 4-13-46

PLAN MAY MEETING

A second meeting has been scheduled for May 4 at which time their future plans and policies will be discussed.

Among the notables in civic and labor circles who attended and took part in the discussions were John Dewey, professor emeritus of Columbia University; James Patton, president of the National Farmers Union; Simeon Martin, president of the Michigan Farmers Union; H. L. Mitchell, president of the National Farm Labor Union and Samuel Wolchak, president of the United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes (CIO).

Randolph In 3d Party Move

N.Y. Herald Tribune, New York, N.Y.

Mon. 4-8-46

Representatives of 75 progressive farm and union groups from 16 states met secretly at Chicago over the weekend to discuss formation of a third political party.

A statement issued last night advised that the conference established a provisional National committee temporarily headed by A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, AFL.

The conference was initiated by John Dewey, Professor Emeritus of Columbia University; James Patton, President of the National Farmers Union; Simeon Martin, President of the Michigan Farmers Union; H. L. Mitchell, President of the National Farm Labor Union, and Samuel Wolchak, President of the United 1942. Foley said it would be a stimulant to the building of houses in rural areas, small towns and urban and suburban centers where neighborhood houses are in the $3000 to $3500 price range.

Meanwhile, there were indications that the Senate would be more kindly disposed to the Administration housing program when it comes before it this week. Administration leaders hope to put back in the bill the provision for housing subsidies which the House voted down.

The program, however, was still under fire from the real estate industry. The National Real Estate Foundation, meeting here today has planned a program devoted

End of 2-Party System Called Possibility

Louisville Courier-Journal

Special to The New York Times and The Courier-Journal.

New York, May 29.—President Truman's antistrike program may "open the eyes of labor, farm and co-operative leaders to the impossibility of continuing the wornout tradition of a two-party system in which neither party serves the interests of the people." 5-30-46 Louisville, Ky.

That opinion was expressed today by A. Philip Randolph, president of the A.F.L.-Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and chairman of the recently formed National Education Committee for a New Party.

PRACTICAL POLITICS

While we respect the intelligence of Paul Robeson and other members of the National Negro Congress who denounced the major political parties here last week, we seriously question any program that suggests that Negroes should withdraw from major party politics and rest their case on clipping a reactionary here and there in sporadic fashion.

For one thing nothing would please some of the major party bosses any more than for Negroes to isolate themselves along with a minority group in labor and get out of the mainstream of major party politics. We believe that Negroes should intensify their efforts in the major party machines and make it impossible for either the Republicans or Democrats to advance reactionary candidates and measures. Saturday 6-15-46

Further we agree with Henry Wallace that the laborites and progressives who wish to desert the Democratic Party to form a third party will merely pave the way for a reactionary victory in 1948. Then again, the house of labor in the United States is split down the middle and a third party could not even count on the full support of organized labor.

The most hopeful political development in recent history is taking place in the South today where Negroes, voting in the Democratic primaries for the first time, are joining hands with liberal whites to oust reactionaries. Negro Democrats in the North and South in cooperation with white liberals can make their influence felt in 1948 as never before. Detroit, Michigan

The Negro vote will be sought by both parties to a greater extent in the future. This does not seem to be the time for the Negro to start chasing political rainbows and getting hysterical about some third party which promises everything but can deliver nothing. Staying on the outside of the major parties and making threats which cannot be backed up at the polls strikes us as a waste of time and energy at this juncture in American politics. Sat 6-15-46

For Negro Independence

Times-Dispatch

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:

It is time for Negroes, not only in Virginia, but throughout the nation, to come out of the Democratic and Republican parties and formulate an independent organization of voters. The reasons for this decision are:

(1) The voting power of our group is weakened by division.

(2) Neither party wants us in its ranks. Richmond Va.

(3) The few appointive positions, whether national, international or local, do not advance the masses of our group. Neither do they help economically, which is a vital necessity for the substantial growth and independence of any people. Fri. 9-13-46

Third Parties

The Constitution

Editor Constitution: Your editorial of Oct. 22 was evidently intended to get a rise out of your reading customers. You say, "Third Party Suggestions Are Sophomoric." You do not deplore the repressive election laws in about 40 of the States which exercise birth control on third parties. You tell us "fuzzy" political minds that we gain nothing by running away to third parties.

Was it not the Populist, Prohibition and Insurgent Liberal Republican Parties which developed public opinion for direct election of Senators, Woman Suffrage, and brought about the monetary reforms and the Federal Reserve Bank System? In fact, except for the great unforgettable and unforgivable double cross by William Jennings Bryan of the Populist Party,—it might usefully exist today. And, Tom Watson would be remembered for his younger rather than his latter days.

It is interesting to remember that the Prohibition Party, now practically extinguished by repressive election laws after 75 years of existence, did in 1884 throw New York State from Blaine to Cleveland and set the stage for Theodore Roosevelt, the Progressive Party, and Woodrow Wilson. Atlanta, Ga.

If the Prohibition Party is persistently repressed, we will have another abortive "Anti-Saloon League" just as conscionable as the Ku Klux Klan type of pressure group. As a matter of fact, if the Republican Party takes over after the coming elections, there will be no more real change in management than would happen if Montgomery Ward and Company stockholders bought control of Sears-Roebuck. As far as our economic welfare is concerned, in such event, we would simply stamp the new name over the old catalogue. The people are tired of two-headed, one-bodied political parties. As soon as propagandized fear of Russia proves groundless and unity is no longer felt compulsory,—we should have a coalition government of several parties of varying degrees of liberalism. Wed. J. L. Wallace Demands Equality Of Races

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

'Ashamed' Of Both Parties, He Admits In Speech

Sat. 10-26-46

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 25.—(AP)—Henry A. Wallace told a Negro audience today that he is "ashamed" of both the Democratic and Republican parties for their record regarding racial equality and fair employment practices.

The former cabinet member, at a luncheon winding up a two-day Los Angeles visit, said "we can put the finger of scorn on both parties for not having carried out platform promises."

Referring to opposition by Republicans as well as Southern Democrats to the FEPC, Wallace asserted that "actually, a large percentage of Republicans are for FEPC," and he added he was "ashamed of the Democratic party in the House and Senate and I am also ashamed of some Republicans."

He declared that opposition to FEPC by "big manufacturers" was "strictly from dollar motives, the most ignoble motive of all."

Contending that racism is "an unforgiveable sin," Wallace said that in the interests of world peace, as well as domestically, "there should be no discrimination because of race, color or religion in labor unions, educational and other institutions."

He said he was convinced the progressive delegation in Congress from California "will vote right" on the subject and added that "if California is to continue to be known as a progressive state you must come through on Nov. 5 for proposition 11."

Proposition 11 is an initiative measure on the Nov. 5 ballot proposing establishment of a state fair employment practices law.

FAILURE OF OUR PARTIES

Birmingham, Ala.

To the Editor of The Age-Herald:

A political party, in order to fulfill its intended function, must have certain principles, a program and must have party responsibility. Neither of our two parties meets these tests. The voter can have no idea what the candidate or officer holder believes in regard to pertinent issues as far as party label goes.

Despite the efforts of Stassen and La Follette there is little likelihood that the Republican party will accept a liberal program. The Democratic party is now in the hands of conservatives (in Congress), who out-Taft Taft in conservatism. Where are the liberals to turn?

The best solution would be to submerge both present parties and let them come up conservative and liberal, and let us forget present party allignments. At least then the voter could tell a man by his stripes. Age-Herald

Second best, the Democratic party, traditionally liberal, might accept liberalism openly and with some degree of unity. What then would become of most of the Southern delegation in Washington? Why not let them become Republican in name, since they carry the Republican program consistently. They are in principle and practice Republican anyway. We need a good strong Republican party in the South and they are the men to form it.

Either of the above solutions would enable us to get the real vote of the people on important issues. Imagine those of us who live in the South repeatedly voting for Roosevelt and at the same time casting our votes for others who opposed everything Roosevelt believed in—only because both were Democrats. Sat. 4-6-46

It may be that the people of the South are conservative. Perhaps we never have an expression from the people of the South; maybe the corporate interests and landed gentry (both groups naturally and honestly the most conservative interests to be found anywhere) designedly and cleverly bar many of the masses from the polls and control the others. The poll tax, racial "boogeyman" and machine politics

Dangerous for Upcountry

The News and Courier Charleston, S.C.

Commenting in a tone of sorrow upon the defeat of Carmichael, the nice candidate for governor in Georgia, who received a popular plurality of less than 9,000 in the primary, 100,000 colored "Democrats" having voted as a bloc for him, The Greenville News observes that in South Carolina's state senate each of the 46 counties has equal representation whether the voters be numerous or few, that this is a "county unit system", that it is an "undemocratic system". So it is. The Greenville News would have it changed, but almost tearfully, admits that "the hope of bringing about a more equitable (note that word "equitable") representation in the senate is not bright." (Inequitable means unjust.). Fri. 7-26-46

This newspaper of the Upcountry is democratic. In South Carolina the democrats are of all complexions. The Greenville News, being democratic, would have all sorts and conditions of men and women admitted to participation in the democratic party. A democratic "white man's party" is a ridiculous contradiction in terms.

Our republic was not founded as a democracy; it would not long live were it a democracy, and the democrats would have it revolutionized. The Greenville News, which would have representation in the state senate based on numbers of voters, would also have representation in the United States and the Electoral College so proportioned, and by that system New York would have 14 times, Pennsylvania would have nine times, as many United States senators and presidential electors as South Carolina has. This we say because of the unassailable reputation of The News for logic and consistency. Were its wishes as expressed gratified, South Carolina and all the states of small population would be delivered into the hand of the states ruled by Big Burg machines, by Hagues, Curleys, Kellys, Guffeys, Flynns and Reverend Clayton Powells. 7-16-46

In South Carolina democracy would be of especial profit to scalawags (the raw material of scalawag is abundant in South Carolina) of the Lowcountry counties wherein about three fourths of the colored people live. In 13 or 14 northern and Piedmont counties one half of the white people live and can vote, if they will. They could control the state if they knew how to stick together. That, they seem unable to learn—and never will they learn it under the teaching of their present-day gazettes and "leaders". The need of Greenville is an Alfred Williams and a James L. Orr. The little politicians of little voting counties of the Lowcountry even now have them by the throat, and The Greenville News would have a democratic system whereby the horde of Lowcountry negroes would be properties of Lowcountry scalawags. Friday

The Greenville News is out strong for democracy and, with all its mighty logical powers, it cannot and will not attempt to prove that any man or woman can be excluded from voting in a democratic party on account of race, color or creed. In Georgia, Mr. Carmichael's popular vote would have been a minority of 90,000 had not 100,000 colored democrats voted for him. The county unit system by which the colored democrats were deprived of victory in Georgia is abhorrent to The Greenville News.

Down with democracy! (small "d", you note), say we.

Harvard's John Dewey is honorary head of committee

Tribune Los Angeles, Calif.
Sat 9-7-46

NEW YORK — A. Philip Randolph has been chosen temporary chairman of the National Educational Committee for a New Party, which began a campaign for public support this week. National headquarters have been set up at 112 E. 19th st. here, but will be moved to Chicago shortly, Randolph said.

Although Randolph is the active leader of the new movement, which has Negro and white adherents, John Dewey, renowned philosopher of Harvard university, is honorary chairman. Other names given on the committee's letterhead are: Pearl Willen, temporary treasurer; C. J. McLanahan, temporary secretary; and Mary Martinson, administrative secretary.

In a statement sent persons likely to be prospective organizers of local committees about the country, Randolph rapped the domestic and foreign policies of both the Republican and Democratic parties.

"The people who believe in democracy," he said, "have tried through their own economic organizations to get legislation passed through state and national legislatures for full employment, fair employment practices, equitable tax laws, extension of social security, adequate health protection, etc. We find the two old parties, controlled by vested interests, forming a coalition to defeat these measures."

On the foreign front, Randolph said, the two parties have been equally as inept.

"We live in an age and a world which require the strict limitation of the sovereignty of individual nations in world affairs and the substitution of the principles of cooperation for those of exploitation within and without the national economy if we are to avert another war—a war that might mean the destruction of our civilization. The need for such limitation of sovereignty and thorough-going cooperative action on an international scale has been vigorously emphasized in the outstanding report on atomic energy. And yet in the present crisis, there has been, in general, a tragic failure of world leadership in the fight for a world organization limiting national sovereignty and adequate to the crucial tasks ahead."

"The great social evils of our day have existed for years in city, state and nation under the control of the Republican and Democratic parties," Randolph went on. "These parties have had the power to grapple with these evils and the grave responsibility to do so. They have completely failed, however, to meet the challenge." Tribune

Declaring that the "fundamental issues of our times" can only be "successfully met" by the mobilization of "all progressive and democratic forces", Randolph called for a "new party alignment" of the "progressive forces in all useful groups—labor, farmer, professional, salaried-employee, small business and consumer groups."

These, the statement said, must be "democratically controlled from the grass roots . . . dedicated to thorough-going democracy in industry, government . . . human relations . . . committed to clean, honest . . . efficient government . . . must promote human dignity and freedom and be opposed to totalitarianism in any form . . . must work toward the development of a world organization of free people" Los Angeles, Calif.

The New Deal "was not enough", Randolph said, pointing out that "millions of men and women continued to remain idle (under the New Deal administration) until the coming of World War II.

Frankly stating the Socialist slant of the new party, Randolph, himself a Socialist, went on, "The new party . . . must go beyond the old 'New Deal'. It must see to it that the citadels of power—the giant monopolies and other key industries—are controlled not by the few for the benefit of absentee owners, but by the many for the benefits of the entire community".

Basis for the new party is now being laid, Randolph said. The educational committee, which he heads, was formed last Spring in Chicago. Not political yet, the committee functions as an educational body, advancing the principles of the new party and educating the public to the need for it. Sat. 9-7-46

Colored Man's Party

The News and Courier Charleston, S.C.

The colored man, Philip Randolph, president of the Pullman car porters' union, is decidedly clever, with limitations, he is educated too, and he has "come out for a new modern political party . He accuses both the Republican and Democratic parties of "failure to meet the challenge". The News and Courier will be disappointed if this colored man shall not succeed in forming his new national party. Tri. 8-2-46

School To Teach New Techniques In Political Organizing Planned

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A unique educational institution that aims to unveil the intricacies of professional political campaigning to the average voter will be held at the Willard Hotel in Washington, D. C., for four days beginning June 26, it was announced last night by the National Citizens Political Action Committee, sponsors of the school.

Called the School of Political action Techniques, it will bring together more than 80 specialists in politics, political analysis and public relations to teach 39 courses ranging from "Building Ward and Precinct Organizations" and "Organizing Women for Political Action" to the use of radio, leaflets and posters in political campaigns. It is believed to be the first school of its kind ever conducted in America.

Included in the roster of faculty and discussion leaders are Dr. Elmo Roper, public opinion analyst; Pare Lorenz, motion picture director; Dr. Frank Kingdom, Chairman of National Citizens PAC; Allan Lomax, former librarian of the Archives of American Folk Songs, Library of Congress; Elmer Benson, former Governor of Minnesota; Thomas J. Brandon, President of the Public Affairs Films Production Co.; Sam O'Neal, public relations director of the Democratic National Committee; Verda Barnes, director of the women's division of CIO-PAC; Dr. Hadley Cantril, Professor of Psychology, Princeton University; Robert Heller, Columbia Broadcasting System director; and Dr. Clark Foreman, president of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare and former Defense Housing Administrator.

Although the school will be open to anyone, attendance will be limited to 500 students.

In making the announcement, the school's director, C. B. Baldwin, former Farm Security Administrator and executive vice-chairman of National Citizens PAC, declared:

"This school is a natural outgrowth of a growing political consciousness on the part of the voters of America. We believe that it represents an impourtant forward step in American political life. Politics has been too nearly monopolized by political machines. It is time that it becomes the business of every citizen.

"Equally important, it is time that politics be raised from the amateur to the professional level. Politics is a highly technical business, though it is seldom, if ever, treated as such. Modern methods of economical administration, research and public relations have rarely been applied to politics.

"We hope that this first session of the School will enable us to collect a body of knowledge on the problems of organizing, research, management, finance and public relations which will result in improved operation for independent political organizations throughout the country. Only through effective political action based on issues by the great masses of American people can we hope to achieve the fulfillment of our hopes for peace, opportunity for the individual and security for all."

Courses of the school are organized into five major departments.

Featured in the Department of Political Strategy is a course on Techniques of Dealing with Congress, a discussion that covers methods of effectively informing them on the needs and opinions of their constituents through the use of delegations, personal contact, effective mail and wire campaigns and the holding of unofficial hearings. Among the faculty members for this course are Irving Richter, legislative representative of the United Automobile Workers; Harold Buckles, secretary to Representative Adolph Sabath (D.-Ill.); and Mrs. Katherine Shryver, executive secretary of the National Committee to Abolish the Poll Tax.

Nine courses in the Department of Political Organization and Administration range from methods of organizing a citizens' committee to financing a campaign, training canvassers, registration campaigns and the art of ringing doorbells. Among the faculty members are Sidney Davis, secretary of the American Labor Party; Barney Conal, director of Voters Research, Inc., of New York; Henry Hoke, author of "Blackmail" and "It's a Secret"; Dr. John H. Miller, Director of the Citizens Research Bureau of Chicago; and Orville Olson, director of the Independent Voters of Minnesota.

The Department of Political Groups covers the specialized appeals to rural groups, clergy, youthful first-voters and veterans. Included among the faculty members are James G. Patton, president of the National Farmers Union; Dr. Dwight Bradley, director of the Religious Associates of National Citizens PAC; Leo Krzycki, president of the American Slav Congress; Charles Olson, former director of the Foreign Language Information Service; and Rev. Richard Kuch of American Unitarian Youth.

Discussions and demonstrations of the techniques of polling a district with volunteer workers, the significance of statistics in political work and the use of public opinion polls are among the topics covered by the Department of Political Research. Instructors in this section include Dr. L. M. Birkhead, director of the Friends of Democracy; Dr. Samuel A. Stouffer, former chief researcher for the Army's Information and Education section; and Dr. F. Palmer Weber, director of research for National Citizens PAC.

The Department of Public Relations has a faculty of 34 and includes among its 17 courses sessions on the use of radio, printed matter, mass meetings, sound trucks, films and music for political action. Singers and actors from People's Songs, Inc., and Stage for Action, Inc., will demonstrate how music and the "living newspaper" techniques can be used in a campaign. John T. McManus, movie critic of the newspaper PM, Thomas J. Brandon and Pare Lorenz will teach a course on the use of films in political work.

Students attending the school will not have to wait long to put into practice the principles and skills they will learn. It is believed that the majority of the student body will play an active role in the November Congressional elections.

Jack Kroll Heads PAC Under New Directorate

Jack Kroll, vice president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and winner of the 1944 CIO national award for combating racial discrimination, was named administrative head of the CIO-PAC last week.

Kroll, who is assistant director of the CIO's southern organizing drive and was Sidney Hillman's assistant in the PAC, will execute policies of a newly expanded executive board consisting of secretary-treasurers of four CIO unions.

They are Julius Emspak, United Electrical Radio and Machine Workers; David J. McDonald, United Steel Workers; George F. Addes, United Automobile, Aircraft, Agricultural Implement Workers, and William Pollack, Textile Workers Union.

Follow Hillman Policies

Kroll and the new executive committee selected by the CIO executive board pledged themselves to carry on the policies of the late Sidney Hillman in supporting liberal legislation and political candidates. Chief among these policies was support for greater Negro economic opportunity and for FEPC and anti-poll tax legislation.

Kroll, carrying out the Hillman policies, is expected to work closely with such Negro leaders as Henry L. Moon, director of the Negro division of the CIO-PAC.

Under Hillman, the Political Action Committee has become a powerful force in American political scene today. Tribute to its effectiveness in supporting progressive politicians is the hate and vituperation poured on it by men like Rankin and Bilbo.

PAC Action

Although called "Communist" by its opponents, the CIO-PAC actually represents only the realization of union members and leaders that their economic gains had to be protected from reactionary attacks on the political front.

PAC support already has helped renominate progressive Congressman Hugh DeLacy, of Washington. It was a factor in the nomination of Jim Folsom in the North Carolina gubernatorial race. It helped account for the huge popular vote accumulated by James V. Carmichael in the Georgia race, although he lost in the antiquated unit voting system.

Philip Murray, CIO president who refused to take over the office as was expected, is reputed to be the chief figure in the PAC now although he holds no office.

The PAC committee, also newly enlarged, now is composed of the same men as the CIO executive committee. It is through this link that Murray is expected to wield much control.

The PAC Fails

By George E. Sokolsky

PAC and its adjunct organizations were organized to force the Democratic party and possibly some elements of the Republican party to accept its socialistic program or be defeated at the polls by a mass vote. Its task was to organize Americans into a mass vote, and in that it succeeded only in the city of New York. It made the Case Bill a measure of propriety. Those who voted in favor of the Case Bill were to be defeated; those who voted as PAC dictated on this measure were to be supported by huge campaign funds and a vast propaganda machine. It organized a bloc in congress consisting principally of Democrats but including at least two Communist members of the house of representatives.

PAC has been repudiated at the polls. Some analysts believe that Stalin's endorsement of the PAC was the straw that broke the back of this alien-conceived and alien-minded movement. Actually, it was the un-American character of PAC that made its failure inevitable. And by un-American I do not mean, in any sense, that the individuals in it were, not by birth and right Americans, but rather that the concept of an opportunistic third party that blackmailed candidates into an acceptance of its program and shuttled all over the political map ran counter to the traditions of this country. Such minor parties have played great roles in such countries as France; here they do not fit. Americans vote as individuals, not as a mass.

The principal representative of this group in the administration was Henry Wallace. He has become a ridiculous figure in American politics as a result of this election. Its principal representatives in the senate were Pepper of Florida and Kilgore of West Virginia. Kilgore was reelected by a slim majority and his vote is likely to be recounted; Pepper, who did not run, is reduced in stature as the result of the Republican control in the senate. Its principal representatives in the house were Hugh DeLacy, who was defeated, and Marcantonio, who was elected under

CIO-PAC Candidates Win In Two State Primaries

The Defender Chicago, Ill.

Making direct hits in two states, the well-aimed broadsides of the CIO Political Action Committee were heavily felt last week in Minnesota and Washington.

The hopes for passage of pro-labor and pro-Negro national legislation were raised when five progressive Washington Democrats—all supported by CIO-PAC—won nominations.

Of particular concern to progressive Negroes was the renomination of Representatives DeLacy and Coffee. Both of these candidates gave vigorous support to legislation improving the conditions of American minority groups.

In the hottest contest of them all, Hugh DeLacy defeated Howard Costigan by a vote of 23,271 to 20,464. Costigan based his campaign mainly on "red-scare" tactics. Incumbent Congressmen Savage and Jackson and Senator Mitchell won along with DeLacy and Coffee.

With the support of CIO-PAC, Governor Edward J. Thye defeated isolationist Sen. Shipstead, who cast one of two senate votes against the United Nations, in the Republican primary.

Supporting no single political party, CIO-PAC will back Harold Barker, Minnesota Democratic Farm Labor candidate, in the forthcoming gubernatorial race with Stassen-supported Luther W. Youngdahl.

Minority groups throughout the nation received much encouragement when hearing that in seven Minnesota districts, CIO-PAC supported men were nominated for the Congressional finals.

To Coordinate and What Else

Miami Wire, Florida.

A press dispatch from Washington says that "The Republican National Committee today (March 17th) announced the appointment of Valores Washington, 43, of Illinois as a member of its headquarters staff to coordinate political activities, especially among Negroes." persistently to the effect that the Republican party would profit by past mistakes in dealing with Negro voters of the country. The above news item may be one of the signs that something may be attempted in that direction. Just how much is intended is a question. Upon the answer to the question will depend very largely the extent to which the general run of Negro voters of the country will be interested in the Republican party as such. It may be that Negroes will never be wedded to the Republican party in the sense that they were prior to the awakening which brought them to see that they were being very largely exploited because of their blind and almost reckless loyalty to a party that had strayed away from the principles and practices of great Republican leaders in the past and had come to the habit of using the Negro votes and then neglected them after the election. Sat. 4-6-46

But the Republican party will have to do more than add another member to the staff to cooradinate. The party wil have to do just about the same thing and in the same way to win and hold Negro voters that it does to win and hold voters of other race groups. And coordination is not enough. Voters have to be educated. The Republican party in its national setup understands that and it keeps an organized staff year in and year out to keep the voters educated with regard to all political questions affecting the people, principles and policies which determine the conduct of those in power and those who seek to get into power. And thousands of dollars annually are spent for this purpose. Only not very much is done in that respect among Negro voters. It is understood that voters of the White race and other minority groups in this country are to be educated. But about all that is necessary for Negro voters is to wait until almost election time and then coordinate —at least that has been the practice. And if that is all that is intended now, the leaders of the Republican party may just as well prepare for some disappointments. In the organization, both national, state and county, the leaders of the Republican party may as well understand that the same processes used to win and keep voters n other groups will have to be used to interest and hold Negro voters. In addition to the process of education there must be translation. Many thousands of voters among our group have been planted with the New Deal program in the Democratic party because they have been led to believe that it meant a great deal more to them in their economic and political struggles than what they found under the old program of the Republican party—of being used and then set aside until next election time. Something will have to be done to translate these thousands of voters and transplant them in the Republican party if they are to be used there. Many of them are young voters who started out voting under the New Deal program and practice. And glittering generalities in which the Republican orators delight to indulge may not interest the young voters unless they genuineness. After coordination, education, give concrete evidence of their sincerity and translation, then there must be real integration of Negroes into the Republican party not only as voters but as participatns in the government. They must be led to see that they are no only expected to vote—that they are to be voted for; that they are not only to be seen and heard before election day but be seen and heard after the election is over. No longer can they be won and held by oratory that exhausts itself in mere promises and which leaves no strength for the fulfillment of those promises after election day has pased. Negroes expect not only to be lined up for a program in the Republican party, —they expect to be integrated into the program-making committees and policy-determining groups. In other words if Negroes are to be won back and held by the Republican party, in a real sense they must be made to feel that they are an integral part of the party.. This latest addition then to the National Staff for the purpose of coordination is good as far as it goes. It may be that the leaders are convinced by this time that coordination is just a part of what needs to be done, and that the program must include as with others education, translation, participation, integration and all the rest. Anything less than this is likely to produce misleading and disappointing results. Negro voters of this country will no longer be content to act as fools and be used as tools by the Republican party or any other party. They are ready to play ball but they mean to be mare than mere "pigtails" in the game—The Plaindealer.

NEWBOLD MORRIS

Champion Of The Third Party

Chicago Defender

By EARL CONRAD
(Defender New York Bureau)

NEW YORK—Newbold Morris, the last of the Abraham Lincoln Republicans, this week laments the decay of his one-time great party of liberalism. Sat 2-2-46

Morris, who is about two inches taller than the late Abe Lincoln, has the same honest streak within him that marked the Great Emancipator. He ran for Mayor of New York last fall on a New Deal Ticket. He lost out, but the large vote he got presaged the spirits now developing in both major parties.

Today, Morris is a little like a man without a country. Perhaps he is in worse shape, for he is a political leader and he is actually without a party. Although he remains a member of the Republican Party, he is taboo in these ranks, for he stands very much for the so-called common man, and that man is unpopular with Senators Taft and Vandenberg.

Morale Low

When I called to see him in his offices in the City Planning Commission on the top floor of the Municipal Building, Morris opened up by admitting he wasn't feeling very gay. For a minute I thought he meant he was ailing physically, especially as he said he and his wife had been away on a vacation for a few weeks, but he clarified me: it was a matter of morale. Politically he was feeling low.

The truth is that Morris wants a new, big third party. If one were to develop, he'd get into it up to his neck. But the hesitation among the Democrats about breaking up has infected liberals in both major parties and if Morris or any other single liberal issued a call for a third party, they fear, it might be premature, or it might isolate them. Morris, who symbolizes the dilemma of the liberal, at the moment, as well as anyone, is therefore without political roots and unhappy. Chicago, Ill.

His experience in the last election disillusioned him considerably about professional party leaders and political bosses. I don't know just who he had in mind when he said this, but he told me to make sure to get it in:

"A party boss would rather retain control over his machine than get elected to office," he said.

"Be sure to mention that," he added. Sat 2-2-46

Hits Machine Rule

Morris looked terribly lanky as he sat behind his desk dressed in a gray suit and a striped shirt. He's a very unaffected person in his manner and dress. He discussed the political bankruptcy that is general at this moment in the major parties:

"Because the rank and file voter is not really interested in politics except in times of the direst emergency, professional politicians take advantage of this apathy to gain control of the party machinery. The professional politician is more interested in maintaining control than in providing leadership.

"He takes advantage of the apathy of the independent voter and yields to the potent forces of special interest that close in on him. They back up their special pleading with impressive funds. A war chest, plus a lack of popular interest is all a smart politician needs to keep himself and his friends in power.

Party Politics Ripped

"So the local political leader's state of mind is the foundation of our political system, and it is that state of mind which emerges at the top. The upshot of all this is that you have shabby-minded people determining party policies. They have money to hire expert public relations men who pass on fine words to the public—words that are very rarely followed by deeds.

"Once every generation or so, due to an emergency, people become aroused, find their way to the polls, and express themselves, and so you get a leadership which goes over the heads of the bosses and we get an era of noble thinking and tremendous social progress. Go back as far as Abraham Lincoln; then you wait quite a while until Teddy Roosevelt comes along; you wait another decade, and then Wilson. Then, again, because the world was in a crisis, an FDR. From 1860 until 1944 you have four real outspoken personalities."

Morris dawdled with a pencil as he got into the present political situation:

"I used to think it was a healthy sign when a progressive movement cut across both parties. Now I don't know. In the last few months so much has changed. Right now I would welcome an open alliance of the Republicans and the Southern Democrats. It would provide an outrightly conservative vehicle—and it would give independents and progressives everywhere an opportunity to get together and get over their divisions."

Disgusted With GOP

He expressed his disillusion with the possibility that the Republican Party, as now constituted, can become progressive:

"The Republican Party has had a chance, ever since the death of Roosevelt, to assert itself as a vehicle for progress. A showdown on this possibility will come when the National Committee meets on April 1 to elect a new chairman. It will be interesting to note whether the National Committee selects a chairman whose philosophy represents the point of view of some of the progressives in the party such as Sen. Wayne Morse or former Governor Stassen. I note with apprehension a flying squadron of Bricker men floating into Washington, presumably for advance guard action.

"It is really going to take more than just a minor readjustment to change the traditional Republican tactics from opposition to creative, imaginative, daring leadership. This isn't just because we've been out of power so long. We went out of power because we suppressed progress for so long. All the excesses and abuses of free enterprise were protected by party policies. In fact we almost destroyed the freedom in the free enterprise system in the 1920s. None of the party's policies or energies went for social security, old age pensions, hazards against disease, nor for productive effort generally. Not alone was the mass man unprotected, but the investing class also wasn't protected."

Many Prospects

Back to what all this might mean in the near future, Morris said there were many independent forces at work in society at the moment, if they could crystallize. He mentioned individuals like Harold Ickes and James Roosevelt of the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts and Sciences, the Political Action Committee, and people like Henry Wallace, who, potentially, might go with a big, new people's movement.

"It will take a crisis, apparently, to bring these individuals and forces into motion," Morris indicated.

On the Negro's relationship to the current political picture, Mr. Morris declared: "The Negro's problem is everybody's problem. It's America's problem. A great majority of the people feel that it is going to be solved by evolution, by gradual means, but if I were a Negro I couldn't wait for evolution. It would have to be accelerated for me.

"In a way I believe that a man like Bilbo does a great service to the movement in behalf of the Negro because he helps to dramatize it. And this question needs dramatization."

"Song And Dance" View

Morris feels that the kind of attitude among white Americans that does great injury to Negro advance is what he calls "the song and dance view" of the Negro.

"People who think benevolently of the Negro, who like to think of the Negro as having special qualities do a great deal of injury and most of the injury that is being done. These are the same individuals and groups in society who will support a policy of segregation. They will do it silently, but acquiesce in it."

He told the story of an address he made before a group of Negro school children some time ago. What happened taught him a lot. He had pointed out to the Negro group that despite centuries of oppression, despite the long period without equal opportunity, the Negro was still able to laugh, sing and develop artistic talent. Then a young girl arose and clarified Morris:

Some Tone Deaf

"Mr. Morris," she said, "I think you misunderstand the situation. The people you see, like Bill Robinson and Marian Anderson, they can sing and dance. But there are lots of Negroes who are tone deaf. There are some Negroes who never laugh at all."

That girl, Morris continued, went on to explain to him that he didn't really know the Negro.

"That's the pattern we all fall into. These are the notions that make us overlook the other possibilities and potentialities of the Negro, and finally keep him from getting the right jobs."

I had been with Morris about an hour and then he said he had to get a snack to eat, a glass of milk and a sandwich. This I wanted to see: a milk-drinking Republican leader. I asked if it would be alright if I joined him and we went into the street.

Morris wound up drinking coffee and asking me questions about the restrictive covenant in the New York area.

I left the last of the Abraham Lincoln Republicans feeling that somehow he symbolized the crisis within his party and wondering if he really was a Republican at all.

Negro GOPs Rip Taft; Laud Party's FEP Stand

Chicago Defender

PHILADELPHIA—(ANP) — An editorial in the February issue of the Negro Statesman, a monthly publication sponsored by the National Council of Negro Republicans blasted Sen. Robert Taft (R-O) on his recent remarks against the FEPC bill before the Senate but lauded the action of the 25 Republican Senators who voted for cloture to end the FEPC filibuster.

The editorial, entitled "Mr. Taft Against The Record," termed the Senate's action on the FEPC bill as "sorry a spectacle as democracy has been besmirched with in a long time," questioned Taft's right to speak for the whole Republican party, and stressed the fact that he had a big hand in drafting the 1944 Republican platform that supported fair employment practice legislation.

"We are not prepared, however, to accept the implication that the Republican party, in national convention assembled, deliberately lied to the American voters," the editorial said. "We will not accept the libel against the Republican leadership that it deliberately set out to hoodwink all of those defenseless groups which feel that they would like to have written into living law their right to make a contribution to their nation without discrimination because of their race, or religion.

Rip Taft Double-Talk

"Because of ethical dictates we must tolerantly say that we think Mr. Taft was and is 'mistaken.' That language, however, does not express what Negro Republicans throughout the nation really feel about Mr. Taft.

"From the whole spectacle, however, there looms a mighty truth for the Republican party. That truth, as obvious as the heavens, is that the Republican party, itself, must be fully emancipated from trite and damaging statements in its name. That truth shows clearly that it is dangerous to allow any one man to feel that he owns and may speak for the whole Republican party.

"We defend, boldly, the right of both Mr. Taft and Mr. White (Sen. Wallace H. White of Maine) to oppose any legislation they choose. It is inherent in their American citizenship and the offices they hold; but we label as libelous and deliberate falsification of fact, their assumed right to speak for the entire Republican party; for there are millions of men and women, white and black, in that party who do not talk out of both sides of their mouths at the same time.

Cite GOP Record

"Republicans in both the House Rules Committee and the U.S. Senate supported the principle of governmental cognizance of employment practices. Every Republican on the House Rules Committee voted to bring the measure there to the floor. Twenty-five of 33 Republicans frowned on filibuster in the Senate. That is a matter of brilliant record.

"Of which 'Republican party' Mr. Taft speaks we do not know . . . but it is a matter upon which both 1944 Republican candidates should ask an explanation; for their personal integrity, as well as the party which uses that label, has been attacked."

The editorial was signed by Joseph V. Baker, editor. Allan W. Powell is managing editor of Negro Statesman.

COLUMBIA, S. C. — (ANP) — At the Second Congressional District and Richland County conventions held here last week, I. S. Leevy, Negro, acting chairman in the place of (Tireless) Joe Tolbert, white, of Greenwood, was nominated as the Republican candidate for Congress.

The Tolbert-Leevy faction also designated a full legislative ticket of Republican candidates for the House and Senate in Richland County.

Leevy, formerly an active member of the National Negro Business League, in recent years has trained with the Tolbert faction of the Republican party popularly known as the "Black and Tans." As Tolbert has grown old, Leevy has advanced. He was also a candidate for the House in Richland County two years ago.

If the Progressive Democratic Party should decide to support Leevy as a Negro, even though he is a Republican, there might be a chance to elect a Negro Congressman, observers believe.

His appointment was announced Monday morning, March 18, by Herbert Brownell, Jr. chairman of the national committee.

REPUBLICANS' BILLBOARD CAMPAIGN

The Defender Chicago, Ill.

The Republicans are now conducting a belated billboard campaign with the slogan, "Bilbo, Rankin and Talmadge are voting Democratic, are you?" Sat.

The Republicans obviously are underestimating the political intelligence of the Negro people. We know, and the record speaks for itself, that both Bilbo and Rankin spoke not for the Democratic party but for the Republicans in Congress who have voted with them on issues in which these two mountebanks have consorted to flim-flam the people. 10-26-46

In their recent state convention, the Illinois Democrats in particular have denounced the conspiracy of reactionary Republicans and dissident Democrats, and every senator and congressman who is a party to it, whether he parades as a Republican or Democrat. "We denounce them as enemies of the highest aspirations of this country, and accuse them of undermining the structure of orderly and speedy social and economic reconversion." The Republicans, however, held their state convention about the same time but said nothing about the doings of the Bilbos and Rankins and the Tafts and the Tabers in Congress. If they are so opposed to that brand of un-Americanism, why have they not introduced such a plank in their platform?

Negro people are not fools. They know their friends by their deeds and will cast their votes this fall for the party that has sought to implement the meaning of their citizenship—the party to which Roosevelt and Truman have given able, humane leadership.

TAFT PLEDGES GOP NOT TO HURT SOUTH

The Times New York, N.Y.

Republicans Have Nothing but Sympathy for Southern Needs, He Tells Atlantans

Jrnl. 12-17-46

ATLANTA, Dec. 16 (AP)—Senator Robert A. Taft, Republican, of Ohio, told the South today that it had nothing to fear from the Republican program.

Speaking to the Atlanta Rotary Club and before guests of other civic groups, Mr. Taft pledged that there would be nothing but sympathy for the South among Republicans in Washington.

"The Republicans like the people of the South," he said. "I think you can count on the good-will of the Republican party."

Mr. Taft declared the recent election was waged on the issue of "totalitarianism versus freedom from Government controls." And, he said, the people had given the Republican party a mandate for elimination of wartime controls.

Appeals for End of Controls

The Senator was applauded when he urged elimination of Federal boards and bureaus with wide discretionary powers, and again when he declared: "Basically, by the end of this next session, I believe we should be rid of nearly every war control that still exists."

Federal expenditures, he continued, amid applause, must be cut to $30,000,000,000 annually, "if not this year, then at least by next year."

He pledged the Republican party to comprehensive legislation on labor relations which he said would restore the balance between business and organized labor. Enterprise, he said, must be free.

"It can no more be directed by the power of big business, by the power of labor, than by the Government," he stated.

"The South, through its own initiative, can build up its own wealth," Mr. Taft went on. "What you must have is protection—the complete removal of checks and interference imposed by a totalitarian State; protection from big business, from labor, from railroads or any other source."

Looks to Health, School Aid

The Senator declared Republicans believed the country could "put a floor under the essential services of life" by giving Federal aid in public health and education, but insisted it must be free of bureaucratic control.

"It must not be dependent on the arbitrary decision of some Federal bureaucrat," he stated. "It must be completely under control of State and local government."

In conclusion, Mr. Taft observed wryly that "it is unfortunate that Southerners are not represented in the councils of the Republican party." But, he added, "until you do so on your own initiative, I assure you the South has only the good-will of all the people of the United States." Jrnl. 12-17-46

At a news conference before the civic luncheon, Senator Taft was asked whether he considered himself an active candidate at this time for President of the United States.

Said Mr. Taft: "No."

WASHINGTON (NNPA)—Perry W. Howard, Republican national committee man for Mississippi, last week presented to Sen. Robert A. Taft (Rep., Ohio), who may become the Senate Majority Leader in the 80th Congress, a five-point legislative program which he believes a majority of colored people want enacted. Sat. 11-23-46

"First and foremost," Mr. Howard advocated, "a change in the Senate rules to eliminate the comedy of unlimited debate, and guarantee that a bill when introduced shall reasonably be voted upon."

The other legislative proposals included enactment of a fair employment practice, anti-poll tax, and anti-lynching laws.

Fair Deal Expected

He also urged provisions for Federal aid to education, "with guarantees of a fair and equitable distribution of funds in States which maintain separate schools for the races, thus assuring definite improvements in school facilities for colored people in the South."

Mr. Howard told Senator Taft that he need not remind him that "the responsibility for such legislation has shifted to the Republican party and that colored Republican voters went with us this time on the assurance of a square deal."

A Challenge To The Republicans

Defender Chicago, Ill. (An Editorial) Sat. 11-16-46

The Negro left the Republican Party because of its failure to press for the elimination of the obstacles preventing his legitimate human claims for complete recognition as American citizens.

In the past 14 years, the Republicans have consistently under the leadership of reactionary forces within the party forged an alliance with Southern reactionaries who have stymied the Negro's progress.

The late Franklin D. Roosevelt raised our status in housing, health, jobs, civil liberties and in politics.

1. Negroes obtained the right to vote in the South.
2. Negroes were given an opportunity to break the occupational "caste" system through which they were practically restricted to jobs as porters, maids and other menial tasks. President Roosevelt through the creation of the Fair Employment Practices Committee established the principle that the maintenance of fair employment practice is the responsibility of the Federal Government.
3. Negroes were given a fair opportunity in Federal employment.
4. The first Federal indictments and convictions in lynchings and abuse of civil rights were obtained.
5. For the first time in our history a Negro was elevated to a governorship and another to the Federal bench.

Will the Republicans who now control the Congress continue their sponsorship of the reactionary alliance with Bilbo, Rankin and Talmadge, or will they help to extend the gains thus far obtained?

The Negro's goals are still the same. From the heat of war for the "four freedoms" we have forged the objectives we advocate.

These objectives are:

1. The establishment of a Permanent Fair Employment Practices Committee which will give to the Negro an industrial bill of rights and assure him security and equality of opportunity in our economic system. The same protection should be given all Americans regardless of creed, national origin or race.

2. The passage of an anti-lynching law. Such legislation will guarantee to every American citizen the freedom from fear of violence because of his racial identity. There is nothing sensational nor Communistic about the desire of citizens to feel safe in their homes. Defender

3. The passage of a law destroying the poll tax as an instrument in our elections. Our democracy is predicated upon the freedom of elections. Chicago, Ill.

4. The unseating of Senator Bilbo. Now that the Republicans have a working majority in both houses of Congress, it is fitting that they not scrap the Bilbo investigations being so ably led by Senator Kilgore, Democrat, of West Virginia.

These are the challenges of the hour. The Republicans now have within their power an opportunity to accomplish these objectives.

Already Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York State who learned a lesson from the 1944 election has taken a stand on some of these vital issues. His stature looms as a star on the horizon for 1948.

It remains to be seen if the Republican Party will carry forward the dreams of Abraham Lincoln and Wendell Willkie.

The Chicago Defender will keep a constant vigilance on these issues that so vitally affect the Negro's status in the American society. Sat. 11-16-46

We Say "No" Too, Senator

The Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

Senator Robert A. Taft (Rep., Ohio) said last week that he is "not now" a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination in 1948.

We hope that the Ohio Senator does not change his mind. Were he to gain the GOP nomination, he would most certainly lose the colored vote. Sat. 12-28-46

When we think of Senator Taft, who more often than not has been found on the wrong side of issues directly affecting us—FEPC, poll tax, et cetera—we can't help but recall out to be such a reactionary that Teddy member his father, William Howard Taft, 27th U.S. President, who had supported him for election in 1908, turned against him in 1912, and by organizing the Bull Moose Party, so split the GOP that Woodrow Wilson, the Democratic candidate, was an easy winner.

We don't believe that the pendulum has swung back far enough to permit another Taft in the White House. Whether Senator Taft decides to run or not, our thumbs are down from the start.

They Define the GOP

Daily Worker New York, N.Y.

TWO Republican leaders in widely separated parts of the country made speeches the other day which should help to define the character of that party.

National Chairman B. Carroll Reece, speaking to a South Carolina GOP convention, was highly critical of the Democratic Party.

Sat 8-24-46

Did he, perchance, attack the Democrats of South Carolina because they encouraged lynching? Or because they retained the polltax? Or because they fought the FEPC and price controls in Congress?

He did not! Strangely, he did not attack the Demo-cats of South Carolina at all, even though he was speak-g to Republicans of that state.

He attacked the Democratic Party because there were "radicals" in it, because it was "allied" with the CIO.

In other words, the National GOP Chairman was telling the Southern GOP to fight the Democrats because some elements within it are for FEPC, against the polltax, against lynching, for price controls.

In up-state New York, Gov. Dewey, unburdening himself to a group of farmers, thundered for the end of government "regimentation." He demanded the government "relax" wartime controls.

Sat 8-24-46

What controls, Mr. Dewey? Do you mean price control? Or channeling of building materials to veterans' housing? We challenge you to tell the people of New York just what controls you want relaxed. Or will you let your party's record in Congress speak for you on the subject?

PERRY HOWARD

Reported headed by a young and militant politician, the group spearheading the attack on Howard and Mrs. Booze, argues that Howard has not been a Mississippi citizen for 25 years and that Mrs. Booze has lost her political usefulness.

Howard, who practices law in Washington, is a property owner here and maintains legal residence in Jackson.

Mrs. Booze, daughter of I. T. Montgomery, founder of Mound Bayou, has served as Republican national committeewoman since the office was created by the party organization here.

In some circles belief has been expressed that H. H. Humes, Greenville editor who has been named in connection with the ouster movement, may have erred by urging his group to participate in the Democratic primary on July 2. Howard and Mrs. Booze are reported to be obtaining lists of the colored persons voting in the primary for the purpose of barring them from any link with the Republican party.

Persons who participated in the recent primaries and who plan to vote in the Democratic State-wide primaries next year, legally can be barred from any form of participation in future affairs of the Republican party.

Republican Bid For Vote Called 'Brazen Insult'

The Defender Chicago, Ill.

Coalition Charged With Murdering Progressive Laws

By VENICE T. SPRAGGS
(Defender Washington Correspondent)

WASHINGTON — The Republican bid for Negro support in the coming Nov. 5 congressional elections is a brazen insult to the intelligence of Negro voters when viewed in the light of the party's legislative record in the Seventy-ninth Congress.

Tub-thumping campaigners who seek to sell the Republican party to the Negro electorate either presume them ignorant of the party's reactionary voting record on measures vitally affecting the welfare of the Negro group—credit them with extremely short memories—or, consider them just plain gullible.

Riding in the heat of the do-or-die race for control of the Eightieth Congress, these party political spouters feverishly labor to turn the searchlight of honest evaluation away from their own sordid records by continuously pointing unsteady fingers in the direction of the Democrats.

A close examination of the Republican voting records on such important legislation as housing, health, civil rights, price control and employment, among others, reveal that Republicans have consistently taken the lead in defeating or scuttling bills of decided benefit to Negroes. On other occasions they have followed such "renegade Democrats" as Bilbo and Rankin of Mississippi, long repudiated by the majority of their party, to defeat vital measures.

GOP Obstructs

Because the Democrats were given a Senate majority of only 17 and a House majority of only 43 in the 1944 elections, the Republicans have been able to obstruct many good measures on which there was even a slight Democratic defection.

The shameful record of the Republicans in the field of housing faithfully reflect their concern for the interest of the big-business bosses for whom they have been the "Charlie McCarthys" in the Seventy-ninth Congress. It is a clear example of how Republicans put the financial interests of the National Association of Real Estate Boards before the welfare of veterans.

Defender

The critical housing emergency of 1946 found among the hardest hit some 3,000,000 married veterans. While the situation was serious for all veterans, it was infinitely worse for Negro veterans. Negroes, generally, have been notoriously poorly housed in the United States.

Chicago, Ill.

To meet the crucial plight of veterans, a Veterans' Emergency Housing Act was introduced in Congress. The measure had as its goal the building of some 3,000,000 moderately priced homes and apartments by Dec. 31, 1947. It further sought to protect veterans from outrageous speculation and excessive profits in housing.

Major Defeat

Sat. 10-26-46

The administration suffered a major defeat for the emergency-housing program when Senator Revercomb's (R., W. Va.) amendment to strike out ceiling prices on existing homes carried 41 to 33. An identical amendment offered in the House by Congressman Jesse P. Wolcott (R., Mich.) was adopted by a vote of 246 to 134.

Since Negroes, by and large, have traditionally been handed down abandoned white dwellings, they were disproportionately hurt by the Revercomb-Wolcott amendment.

The Wagner-Ellender-Taft long range housing bill which aimed at replacing substandard homes by assisting in the construction of 1,250,000 homes a year for 10 years was similarly defeated.

Although the bill was passed by a voice vote in the Senate, it was bogged down in the Banking and Currency Committee of the House through Republican plotting.

Republican Congressman Wolcott, Frederick C. Smith of Ohio, John C. Kunkel of Pennsylvania, and Frank L. Sundstrom of New Jersey dragged out the hearings on the bill until the Congress adjourned, and thus prohibited it from coming to the House floor where even Republicans themselves admitted it would have passed.

Body Blow

Negro housing was dealt a body blow in this deal. The Wagner-Ellender-Taft bill provided for the building of 125,000 low-rent public housing units a year for four years.

The greatest gains made in Negro housing have been through the public housing program. Even under the impetus of war, private builders had to be threatened with the withholding of priorities on essential building materials before they could be forced to construct dwellings for occupancy by Negro war workers.

The Wagner-Ellender-Taft bill also contained provisions which assisted potential Negro home owners. It offered government insured mortgages up to 95 per cent of the purchase price of the house, bearing a low rate of interest.

These and other housing gains were lost to Negroes at the hands of the Republicans.

As presently constituted, NHA operates under the war powers of the President, and will cease when the war is brought officially to an end. This will spell the end to public housing. Other housing gains to Negroes will likewise be lost.

It might be pointed out that Senator Taft is the acknowledged Republican leader in the Senate.

On the Democratic side, National Housing Administrator-Expediter Wilson W. Wyatt, immediately following the passage of the Veterans' Emergency Housing Act moved to insure the equitable participation of Negro veterans. He forthwith announced there would be no discrimination in the provisions of the act because of race, creed, color or national origin.

ELECTION POLITICS — H T K —

Race Relations Staff

Wyatt named a Racial Relations staff to advise and assist in the formation and execution of basic policies of the NHA and its constituent agencies — the Federal Housing Administration, the Federal Public Housing Authority and the Federal Home Loan Bank.

Recently Wyatt revised his channeling order covering essential building materials and ordered private builders to construct homes for Negro veterans proportionate to their ratio in the population or have their priorities for materials withheld.

In the employment field, the Republicans have similarly chalked up a record of reaction to the cause of the Negro and other workers.

In the face of rising discrimination in the employment of Negroes and other minority workers whom the Republicans now hope to win to their side, GOP congressmen steadfastly refused to take the initiative in pressing for the passage of permanent Fair Employment Practice legislation.

Defeat Cloture

In the Senate they consorted with Southern Democrats to defeat the move for cloture which would have limited debate on the bill and brought it up for a vote.

In the House, four Republican members on the House Rules Committee played "footsy-under-the-table" with four rabid anti-Negro Southern Democrats to prohibit the FEPC bill from being brought to the House floor. Sticking to a loose "gentleman's agreement," they refused to take a vote on a rule for the bill until every member of the committee was present. They delayed action until Rep. Slaughter, (D., Mo.) could be on hand. The Republican members of the Committee were well apprised that Slaughter opposed the bill, and would vote against it.

President Truman, long an outspoken champion of permanent Fair Employment legislation took the House Rules Committee to task for its double-dealing in bottling up the FEPC bill.

In his message to the nation last January, the President placed the chief support of the Republican overwhelming mass" of American Negro voter. The bill passed the House and Senate during those years enjoyed a comfortable Republican majority, the bill never passed.

Although the Department of Justice has moved to apprehend the guilty parties in recent lynchings, the inadequacy of the present Civil Rights law, the inadequacy of the present Civil Rights statute has given the Federal government little authority.

Atty. Gen. Tom Clark is at present

Republicans double crossed the House Rules Committee.

Minority Leader Joseph Martin that Republicans would invoke cloture.

President Truman again asked Congress for a permanent FEPC bill. When the Seventy-ninth Congress died, the FEPC bill died in the House Rules Committee. The Republicans never delivered on this promise.

Over a period of 12 years, beginning with Republican President Franklin Delano Roosevelt, Republicans have taken the lead in defeating Herbert Hoover, Republican Pres. Warren G. Harding down to President Truman.

On price control as in the areas of health and education, Republicans have been the chief support of the Negro voter.

During this 12-year Republican November elections, hopes for the passage of a stronger Civil Rights bill times the number recorded in the law will be in vain.

Although the bill was passed in the House on June 12, 1945 by an overwhelming vote. However, it died in the Senate when the Republican filibuster-ship condoned the filibuster.

In mid-September, 1943, President Roosevelt, in his message to the nation last January, the President placed the chief support of the Republican overwhelming mass" of American Negro voter. The bill passed the House and Senate during those years enjoyed a comfortable Republican majority, the bill never passed in the Eightieth Congress. It is feared that if the Republicans win the Senator Taft fought the Wagner-Murray-Dingell National Health bill which would provide for the essential health needs of American families at a nominal fee. Taft introduced a bill of his own which was immediately branded inadequate, and smacking of "state rightishness." He likewise introduced a totally inadequate Federal aid to education bill.

It was Taft's amendment to the Price control bill which prompted President Truman to veto it, and give Taft a sound verbal thrashing.

Sore over the President's refusal to approve the Taft-amended bill the Republicans tacked to a new price control bill a large number of bobby-trap amendments beginning with Sen. Kenneth Wherry's (R., Neb.) amendment to decontrol meat, poultry and eggs.

A Republican Senate in the Eightieth Congress is considered only a remote possibility. However, in the event the best predictions go hay-wire, and the Republicans should win the Senate, it might be pointed out that Senator Taft would obtain leadership of the Senate which some observers claim would end the gains made by Negroes under Roosevelt and Truman.

The Republican Effort To Win Back Negroes In Pivotal States

The Courier-Journal
Louisville, Ky.
Sat 9-28-46

By FRANK R. KENT

IT WAS in 1936 that the great Negro vote in the pivotal Northern States, which had been the basic Republican asset since the Civil War, was transferred almost solidly to the Democratic Party through the Machiavellian machinations and low guile of James A. Farley.

For ten years, covering three Presidential and three off-year Congressional elections, the Negroes have remained in the Democratic camp, registering Democratic and voting Democratic, all the way from 75 to 98 per cent. In this year's campaign—the first since the Roosevelt death—the Republicans have real hope of regaining this great group of voters whose defection counted so heavily against them. The Republican sufferings on this score can be easily understood particularly when it is considered that each Negro vote lost counted twice. It not only had to be subtracted from the Republican total but added to the Democratic.

And now the Republicans, after more than a decade of futility, are making their first hopeful attempt to recover this practically indespensable party asset which from 1861 to 1936 helped elect their Presidential candidates and since then has been potent in defeating them. Neither time, money or work will be spared this fall. The effort will be intensive and extremely earnest. All of which makes it pertinent to list, first, the means by which these votes were taken over by the Democrats, and second, the reason the Republicans believe they can get them back now.

It was Mr. Farley, with Mr. Roosevelt's enthusiastic co-operation, who engineered this transfer in 1936. In the order of their importance he would list the means as follows: (1) The W.P.A., then under Harry Hopkins and upon the relief rolls of which an amazing percentage of Negroes were placed. (2) Mrs. Roosevelt, whose fraternization was exceedingly effective. A million copies of her picture taken with a group of male and female Negro students were distributed among Negroes in ten selected States by the Democratic National Committee. (3) Federal patronage, a larger proportion of which went to Negroes in the early Roosevelt days than had been given by any other President. (4) Employment by the Democratic committee of an unprecedented number of Negro teachers, preachers, and speakers who, well paid both as to salary and expenses, travelled the selected States speaking the Roosevelt gospel. (5) The Negro press which, in one way or another, had become strongly pro-Roosevelt.

Hannegan Is No Farley

By these means was accomplished what Mr. Farley, with reason, regards as the most effective coup in the history of national politics. Now, the Republican grounds for feeling this is the time to "right the great wrong" as some have referred to it, are these: (1) Mr. Roosevelt is dead. (2) The W.P.A. no longer exists. (3) The Democratic Party failed to repeal the poll tax or to pass a Federal Fair Employment Practices Act, whereas one was passed by a Republican Governor in New York. (4) The Federal patronage has mostly been distributed. (5) The Negro press, like a number of Negro leaders, has become disaffected and is now largely Republican again. (6) The present Democratic chairman, Mr. Hannegan, is many grades below Mr. Farley in skill, judgment, knowledge and tact.

He appears too busy proclaiming himself a "true liberal" and carrying on his personal feuds within the Cabinet to give the necessary time and attention to blocking this Republican effort or to appreciate what its success will mean to the Democratic ticket in about 10 important and debatable States. Checking the first list against the second, it does seem that the Republicans have about a 60-to-40 chance of achieving their objective in this struggle for the Negro vote this time. It is one of the basic reasons for their general confidence.

NNPA Scribe Reports: Negro Vote is Drifting Toward GOP

The Tribune
Washington, D.C.
Sat 11-2-46

By LOUIS LAUTIER

For the NNPA News Service

The trend of the colored vote in the current Congressional campaign is definitely toward the Republican party, according to polls taken by political analysts in various cities of the east and middle west.

On the other hand, Walter White, secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, who is beating the tom-toms for a new political alignment, sees "little enthusiasm" among colored voters for the Republican party.

Republican campaign workers here have received reports indicating that colored voters in Pennsylvania will vote overwhelmingly for Republican candidates in the State and Congressional elections. There are similar reports from political scouts sent into New York, Michigan and other northern states.

F.D.R.'s Gone

The reason for the falling away of colored voters from the Democratic party which they supported in increasing numbers from the 1932 presidential election through the 1944 presidential election, is not clearly indicated by these polls. But an underlying cause is believed to be the death of the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt, who proved that the colored vote could be weaned away from the Republican party without causing a split in the Solid South.

Another major contributing cause is believed to be "Bilboism." Senator Theodore G. Bilbo, Democrat, of Mississippi, has been the most blatant demagogue in preaching "white supremacy" and disfranchisement of colored voters. His rantings against colored people have been particularly vitriolic during filibusters in the Senate against fair employment practice and anti-poll tax legislation. Besides colored people, he has insulted other minority groups.

But Mr. White, writing in The Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, said that the overwhelming majority of colored people "prefer an out-and-out Bilbo or Talmadge to other politicians who make florid promises with no notion of keeping these pledges."

Negro Vote Potent

If substantial numbers of colored voters return to the Republican fold this year, there will be no doubt about Republican Congressional gains, resulting in Republican control of the House in the next Congress and probable control of the Senate.

In the last Congress there were fifty-six Democratic Senators, thirty-eight Republican Senators, one Progressive, and one vacancy. In the House there were 237 Democrats, 192 Republicans, one Progressive, one American Labor, and four vacancies.

A net gain of eleven seats give the Republicans forty-nine Senators and majority control of the Senate. A net gain of twenty-six seats would give the Republicans 218 Representatives and majority control of the House.

Mystifying Politics

Pittsburgh Courier

GOP, Having Played Losing Politics for 14 Years, Continue To Puzzle Colored Voters

Pittsburgh, Pa.

By JOSEPH D. BIBB

(The views expressed in this column are those of the writer and do not necessarily express the editorial opinion of The Pittsburgh Courier.—The Editors.)

Sat. 4-13-46

THINGS happening in the Republican party bewilder and befuddle the colored voters of this Republic. Voters and workers who have carried the GOP banners during the lean and weary years, tell us that they are mystified by the actions and apathy of the party leaders. When Herbert Brownell Jr., former National Republican Committeeman, made his final statement to the committee last week, he urged the Republicans to increase their efforts among the colored voters. He said, "They have a powerful influence on the results in thirteen States." He listed these as Pennsylvania, Illinois, New York, Kentucky, Maryland, Ohio, California, Michigan, New Jersey, Missouri, Tennessee, Indiana and West Virginia.

Mr. Bibb

But when the National Republican Committee set about to elect a new chairman to succeed Brownell, he having resigned to practice law, they chose the Hon. Carroll Reese of Tennessee. Because Reese hails from a Southern State, does not of itself brand him as being unfit to activate the colored vote. But there is no denying that he is viewed with suspicion and trepidation. Not only is Reese a Southerner, admitting that his district is located in a rock-ribbed Republican stronghold but he is also reported to be of the conservative, Hoover-Taft brand of politician. Colored Republicans are not only not attracted to such leadership, but also in the past repelled it.

PARTY leaders like Willkie, like Lafollete of Indiana, maybe on the Stassen side, are sadly needed to lure the colored voters into the Republican ranks. It is mystifying to this commentator to comprehend why the wise men of the party are not aware of this. It confounds us to witness the stupidity of the Grand Old Party in not recognizing the powerful effect of the colored electorate. Old age pensions, unemployment insurance, ceilings on rents, fair employment practices, minimum wages, emergency relief, resulted in good will for the Democratic party. That good-will has not been shattered even by such renegades in the party as Bilbo, Eastland, Ellender, Cox, Rankin and the notorious members of the Southern bloc. Not even the discriminations in the Armed Forces and the filibusters against the poll tax, FEPC, the anti-lynching bills, and the opposition to most liberal measures has alienated the colored vote from the party of Roosevelt, Sidney Hillman and Henry A. Wallace. And President Truman is not held so cheap, either. Notwithstanding Mr. Brownell's declaration that he was "the weakest President this Nation has had since Franklin Pierce." The President's appointment of Judge Mollison, of Judge Hastie as Governor of the Virgin Islands and his skillful, but unconvincing stand for the FEPC and the minimum wage bill have done him no harm. The Republicans need strong and liberal leaders to overcome this good-will. Willkie demonstrated that it could be done with a fearless, intelligent and sympathetic approach.

REPUBLICANS like Taft of Ohio, whose father astounded the colored voters of this Nation by his disconcerting stand against appointing colored people to office, have no appeal to the colored voters. When President Taft stated shortly after his election, "I will appoint no colored people to office in the South to offend the Southerners," he weakened the GOP's stranglehold upon our vote. His son, now Senator from Ohio, has done no better by fighting the FEPC and fostering the new chairman, Carroll Reese of Tennessee. The Taft leadership, like the leadership of Governor Green of Illinois, is more than negative, it is repulsive. Sat. 4-13-46

If the Republicans are serious about recapturing the colored vote, they should start out, at once, and approximate the attitudes and opinions of this electorate. They should begin by taking a poll of opinion now. A superficial investigation will show that the colored Republican leaders, who are now, for the most part, without patronage, are considered fossilized and atrophied. The writer shares in this opinion. The party needs progressive thinkers, dynamic workers, skillful publicists, forceful speakers and to cast aside the scheming, obsequious gentry, both colored and white, who have participated in bringing the Grand Old Party to its low estate. Work must be done in '46. More work in '48.

True. The Negro people being drowned in the filth of the American capitalist system, but to show the Republican Party as their Good Samaritan is carrying political partisanship too far. A look at the voting record of the past Congress will show just how Republicans have time and time again allied themselves with Rankin and Bilbo? Would friends of the Negro people even stoop to say hello to these Ku Kluxers?

Negroes Given Lesser Positions

The major positions went to the minority whites and the lesser positions were handed the race. F. Henry Williams, realtor, was named second vice chairman; D. M. Tells Harlem Audience That the Democrats Betray Negro

The Times

New York, N. Y.

Representative Clare Boothe Luce last night charged "consistent betrayal of the Negro by the Democratic party" at a Harlem Republican rally. She backed Grant Reynolds for Congress from the Twenty-second District against Representative Adam Clayton Powell.

"Tonight Mr. Powell is busy as a beaver getting votes in Harlem to keep in power" the anti-Negro Southern Democrats and Communists, Mrs. Luce told her audience at the Greater Bethel A. M. E. Church, 132d Street near Seventh Avenue. Sat. 10-26-46

The Communist party, she said, "is exploiting the discontent, impatience and despair of our 13,000,000 Negroes," while Mr. Powell is a Democratic party bedfellow of "the rancorous race-baiters like Bilbo."

Republican Leader Scores Gov. Green

Sat. 8-24-46

CHICAGO — Reading Ex-Congressman Oscar DePriest out of the Republican party in Illinois was labelled as "very stupid" this week by R. R. (Bob) Church, chairman of the Republican American committee, in a statement issued here on the recent action.

DePriest was allegedly ex-communicated by the party high command for making the statement that Mayor Edward J. Kelly had done more for colored people than any Chicago mayor since William Hale Thompson. Interviewed at the East-West baseball classic here Sunday, Church, national Republican leader, took a sideswipe at Illinois Gov. Dwight Green, when he called the action a "gigantic political blunder," saying:

"All that I know about the matter is what I have read in the press. I have not seen Oscar DePriest, nor had any contact with him directly or indirectly in more than two years.

"Speaking only for myself, I think the action taken by the Illinois Republican organization was very stupid, for the reason that if the Republican organization is sincere, and really wants to win in Illinois, the organization cannot afford to put any Republican out of the party, particularly a man like Oscar DePriest, whom colored people, Democrats as well as Republicans, look upon as a Republican, and as a fearless champion of their cause.

"Dwight Green as governor, is the head of the Republican organization, and I do not know who his advisor is on colored affairs, but whoever he is, or whoever advised him to permit the organization to take this action certainly pulled a gigantic political blunder.

"What the Republican organization in Illinois needs to do is to force Governor Green to do something that will get colored Republicans back into the Republican party, and not take it upon themselves to put anybody out of the Republican party."

Ohio Man Named To Young GOP Executive Post

Defender

BELPRE, Ohio — Evermont Robinson was elected national vice chairman of the Young Republicans Federation at a convention last week in Charleston, W. Va.

The new national officer of the Young Republicans has been interested in politics for 12 years. Since leaving high school he has held a number of public jobs, beginning with bridge inspector for the state highway department. Until two years ago he was a member of the public relations staff of former Governor John W. Bricker.

He is now employed in the office of the Secretary of State at Columbus. 6-1-46 Sat

Active for many years in the organization of Young Republican clubs, Robinson this year was elected vice chairman of the Ohio League of Young Republicans, in addition to the national post. He has been a member of the Washington County Republican Executive Committee for eight years.

Chicago Ill.

Born here in 1912, Robinson is a graduate of Belpre High School. He is a trustee and steward of the AME church here, and in 1944, was elected national vice chairman of the Layman's Association at a Philadelphia Convention.

The vice chairman lives at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard R. Robinson. He is married and has two sons.

Negroes Planning To Force Howard, Booze To Retire

A group of young and politically-minded negroes in this state has launched a movement to force the retirement of Perry W. Howard as Republican national committeeman for Mississippi and also Mary Booze as Republican national committeewoman.

Also, it is rather amusing to note, many of the negroes who have joined in the fight on Perry Howard and Mary Booze have been very loudly vocal in demanding the right to participate in Democratic primaries and quite a number of them actually did vote in the primary on July 2nd.

From an authentic source it is learned that Perry Howard and Mary Booze are now obtaining lists of the negroes who voted on July 2nd, obviously for the purpose of seeing to it that they are barred from further participation in the affairs of the Republican party in this state.

The chief argument advanced in the fight on Perry Howard is that he is no longer a citizen of Mississippi, and has not been for 25 years. He is practicing law in Washington but maintains a legal residence in Jackson and is a property owner here.

Mary C. Booze, Republican committeewoman, is a negroes led by H. H. Humes, for- ville negro editor, want to grab control of the black-and-tan organization and pick their own delegation to the next Republican national convention.

Perry Howard, veteran politician that he is, is not likely to be caught napping. Those negroes who participated in the recent Senatorial and Congressional primaries, and who are planning to vote in the state-wide primaries Democratic next year can be legally barred.

However, the story behind the story is that some ambitious young

NEGRO STUDENTS DANCE AT LILY-WHITE MEADOW ACRES BALLROOM AFTER MANAGEMENT SOUGHT TO DENY THE ADMITTANCE. ENTIRE CONVENTION ENDORSES ACTION OF PRESIDENT IN RACIAL INCIDENT DURING DAY SESSION.

Topeka, Kans.—The Collegiate Division o fthe Kansas Young Republican Clubs let it be known publically here during their 2-day convention held October 4 and 5 that as a collegiate organization at any dance or business they were not going to discriminate because of race, creed or color.

As a part of the convention program the organization planned and held a banquet on the exclusive roof garden of the Kansan Hotel and followed it with a dance at the famous Meadow Acres Ballroom just south of Topeka on highway 75. At the banquet Negro members and their guests mingled freely with their fellow Young Republicans and took an active part in the festivities without the slightest discrimination or segregation. The principal speaker was John Robinson of Lexington, Ky., who made a scathing attack on the New Deal and the Democratic party, and called upon them to adopt programs of a specific benefit to Kansas. Other speakers on the program denounced the Democratic nominee for Governor in Kansas for his wild promises and dishonest campaigning and lauded Frank Carlson the Republican nominee for his sincereity and honesty and endorsed the Republican platform.

Following the banquet about 600 young Republicans and their guests went to Meadow Acres to attend the dance. Although the dance was open to the public, it was sponsored by the organization, they having guaranteed the cost. Negro students who arrived early were denied admission to the dance by the wife of the owner of the ballroom although it had been understood that there would be no discrimination to cause such an embarrassing situation. The refusal of admission was based upon what Mrs. Vern Sperry, wife of the owner termed "policy." Upon learning of the incident Robert Groom, Chairman of the organization and a student at the University of Kansas and Jack Byrd a Washburn student of Yates Center and Young Republican National committeeman tobether with Glen Cogswell, Bob Gatewood acted immediately and forcefully informing the management that such action had not been expected and would not be tolerated and that either all attended the dance and the orchestra would be stopped and the dance terminated then and there. Carrying their fight further, Groom took the micraphone interrupted the orchestra and informed the crowd of what had taken place and received the unanimous support of the crowd to gain admittance for all. Words flew thick and fast with the Young Republicans standing their ground and Negro members and their guests were admitted. Persons were then sent to bring back those who had been embarrassed by being denied admission, and left. The dance then continued with Negroes in attendance and all enjoying themselves. Those who came following the incident had no trouble and were treated just as anyone else. Negro Young Republicans were high in their praise of the positive stand taken by their collegues in the matter. This is believed to be the first time that Negroes have entered this dance hall which is known to be lily-white and permitting no Negroes to enter for amusement purposes.

At the Saturday morning business session of the convention, Groom related the incident in detail to the convention proper and after informing them of his actions asked for an endorsement. The convention voted unamiously in not only endorsing the action of Groom and his collegues but voted to serve notice publically and openly that the organization would not tolerate any discrimination at its dances, business sessions or any other activities. This was done by news release to the Associated Press and local daily papers.

Ambrose P. Woodard Jr., son of Attorney Ambrose P. Woodard of Wichita and a Washburn student was active in convention affairs and in charge of ticket sales to the dance and banquet. Woodard, together with Jim Woodson, another Washburn student and vice-chairman of the Young Republicans played no small part in the activities of the convention and clearing up the incident.

Fri. 10-11-46

The convention composed mainly of college students backed the stand taken by the Republican party on prohibition after a hot debate and favored resubmission. After commending the Republican party on its stand in exhibiting its belief in the fundamental principle of democracy that the people themselves have the right to vote on controversial issues, they charged Woodring the Democrat nominee with conducting a malicious and dishonest campaign and with having repeatedly made promise after promise which everyone knows or should know that he cannot fulfill. It was pointed out that only Frank Carlson had presented a program to the state which was capable of getting the prohibitory amendment repealed.

Negroes here hailed the action of the Young Republicans on their stand and action in their behalf. It demonstrated clearly and dealt with them in positive and convincing manner in order that the rights of all will be protected. Such action on their part makes mandatory our support of Frank Carlson and the entire Republican ticket to insure a continuation of fair play.

Good Jobs Make Republicans Of Louisville Negroes

The Louisiana Weekly
New Orleans, La.
Sat. 11-3-46

(By The Associated Negro Press)

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 30.—Louisville and Jefferson County Republican leaders have found the magic key to lead Negro voters through the Republican doors—good jobs. "The Republicans have brought us up out of the basement," declare Louisville Negro leaders. No longer are they confined to the basements of county and city government buildings. Today, for the first time in history, Negroes hold several high offices such as deputy state fire marshal, and membership on the state alcohol beverage control board. In addition, there are highway maintenance workers, guards and attendants for state institutions.

Traditional supporters of the Republican Party, Negroes left the fold and turned to the Democrats during the active days of the WPA. Outside of relief, the only political jobs open to Negroes were as janitors, charwomen and elevator operators. This was the situation up until a couple of years ago when Jouett Ross Todd, national committeeman from Kentucky and chairman of Louisville's Republican City-County Committee, decided that something must be done. If relief jobs took the Negro vote away, then substantial and lasting jobs should bring them back again.

Four years ago, Todd called the faithful Negro supporters together and outlined a plan to give them a proportionate share in the management of the government of Louisville and Kentucky. A separate Republican City-County Committee was organized with Negro officers and word then spread among the colored residents what the Republicans planned to do. The wisdom of this move became apparent in 1943 when the Republicans were successful in electing Simeon S. Willis Governor.

Willis made his promises good to appoint Negroes to prominent posts, and in 1945, with most of the county and city offices at stake in the municipal election, Todd callled a meeting of the Republican candidates in the presence of the Negro leaders, and told the candidates that he expected them, if elected, to appoint Negroes to key positions in his department and give them their share of political patronage. Every candidate agreed, and in the election, Republicans carried every Negro precinct in the city.

As a result of this Negro support, the Republicans won most of the Jefferson County offices, control of the board of aldermen, and fell only 221 votes short of electing their candidate for mayor. Among the successful candidates was the first Negro alderman in the history of Louisville, Eugene Clayton.

Negro leaders here see in this experience a pattern for other sections of the country to follow.

Charge $50,000 Purge By GOP

The Defender
Chicago, Ill.

Plan To Defeat Dawson, Two Others

Sat. 10-19-46

WASHINGTON — Charging that Republicans have put $50,000 into a purge fund for the political scalp of Rep. William L. Dawson (D., Ill.), and two other Chicago Congressmen, Rep. Adolph Sabath (D., Ill.), dean of the House disclosed last week that he will ask the House Campaign Expenditures' Committee to make a full investigation.

The veteran Illinois liberal said he learned from indirect, but reliable sources that Republican leaders have picked 100 districts in which they intend to spend $5,000,000 this year, including three in Chicago. They are the predominantly Negro first, now held by Representative Dawson; the third, and the ninth, held by Reps. E. A. Kelly and A. J. Resa.

Charges "Election Buying"

He also charged that three southern Illinois districts, where Republican control is shaking, have been set aside for special treatment. Sabath, who recently made a ringing indictment of the reactionary record of the 79th Congress, labeled the alleged plan as "in perfect line with the Republican policy of buying elections wherever possible."

The House dean indicted Republican financiers for deliberately manipulating the recent plunge of the New York Stock Market. The move was a deliberate attempt to enrich GOP campaign chests and embarrass the administration, he added. "The big boys are saying we might as well give them a little whirl and make some money. . . . At the same time they are trying to make people jittery and undermine the administration," Representative Sabath continued.

Hannegan Blasts "Sit-Down"

Elsewhere on the political front, Democratic National Committee head, Robert Hannegan accused the Republican party of staging a 13-year legislative sit-down strike against progressive laws. He named Sen. Robert Taft (R., Ohio) as the guiding spirit behind the strike.

The Postmaster General said Republicans appropriated the label of liberalism, but have taken no constructive legislative stand. Failure of the GOP to fight for renomination of such men as Senator LaFollette (Wis.), Representative Baldwin (N.Y.), and Representative LaFollette (Ind.) indicates a planned purge to eliminate all trace of forward thinking from the party, Hannegan charged. Concluding his indictment, Hannegan defied House Republican Leader Marin (Mass.) to "point to one single constructive action his party proposes for the government of this country."

Republicans and the South

The Thurs and Courier
Charleston, S.C.
Tues. 11-5-46

Today is election day in the United States, and excitement is high in states where are close party contests. It is said that when and if the Republicans win control of congress they will begin the end of the New Deal. The outcome of the election will have profound historic effect on all the inhabitants of the United States; yet on this day the South Carolinians, like most Southerners, are passive spectators.

The decision already has been made in Democratic primaries and today the Southerners have no part in determining the line their government will follow. By their abstinence, the states that are "in the bag" have taken a stand. They have elected to refrain from participating in the two-party system which in some quarters is regarded as a foundation of American democracy.

Actually, the South is not as far off the two-party track as might be surmised on the surface. Some of the South Carolina representatives, though bearing the label of the Democratic party, are a long way from present day Democratic principles of controlled economy and FEPC. On the negro issue, most of the Southerners already are in revolt. On the OPA, L. Mendel Rivers, the first district congressman voted with OPA, as the president said, Rivers and the Republicans, whom Harry Truman villified, to abolish the OPA. Senators Johnston and Maybank voted in favor of some of the Democratic column. Even if the Republicans do not win Senator Taft's amendments to price control legislation. If Taft is guilty of wrecking the merical control of congress in today's elections, they will find conservative Democrats to vote with them in restoring basic principles of American government. Only by intelligent decontrol all along the line they can allay the suspicions and fears of pre-Roosevelt Republicans, and possibly deliberate, stupid and reprehensible demagoguery will they be able to alienate the Southern conservatives, and that will be in appeals for negro and radical support in the large Northern cities.

The Republicans thus could force wavering Democrats back into the New Deal fold.

G.O.P. Effort to Win Negro Support Failing

Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky.

By GEORGE GALLUP

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 15.—Recent Republican efforts on behalf of F.E.P.C. legislation in the Senate once again highlight the longstanding Republican Party problem of winning the Negro vote back into the G.O.P. fold.

These efforts naturally are concentrated upon Negro voters outside the Southern states, since the vast majority of Negroes in the South do not cast ballots.

There is no evidence today that Republican efforts are winning over any great proportion of Negro voters in the states outside the South. 1-16-46

Negroes Favor Democrats.

In fact, a poll just completed throughout the nation, which included a cross-section of Negro voters, finds the Negro voters favoring the Democratic Party today over the Republican Party by a vote of 3 to 2.

The fact that Negro voters continue to prefer the Democratic to the Republican Party can be explained in large part by economic factors.

Here are the figures of Negro voters and white voters in comparable occupation groups.

Choice of Parties Asked.

The figures are based on the question:

"If a presidential election were being held today, which party would you vote for—the Democratic or Republican?"

	Democratic	Republican
Negro voters	60%	40%
White voters in same occupations	58	42

1-16-46

The figures above are of those with opinions on the subject. Three out of every 10 colored voters, about two out of 10 white voters in the comparable group, had no opinion.

As was mentioned earlier, the above figure of 58 per cent Democratic for white voters in the same occupation groups as the Negro voters, represents the opinion of white voters in the skilled, semi-skilled, and unskilled occupation category.

Little Headway Evident.

The Republican Party is preferred by a majority of white voters in business and professional and farm groups, outside of South, and the two parties are about equally strong among the white-collar workers.

This is not to say that race will not at times be more important as a determining factor than economic status, but the evidence does indicate that until the present economic cleavages give way, or until the Republican Party can convince voters in the middle and lower economic income groups that it represents their best interests, little headway in winning the colored vote is likely to be made. 1-16-46

At the present time, surveys find, only about one out of every ten in the lower economic groups think that the Republican Party represents his best interests.

P.M. New York

THEY DON'T MEAN IT. The ironic thing about Lincoln's birthday this year is that it falls only four days after the FEPC was again done to death in the Senate of the United States. That is a good reason for writing off beforehand the inevitable speeches that will be delivered at the Lincoln Day dinners and the inevitable hogwash that will flow plentifully. The fact is the gentlemen don't mean it enough to back it up with either their passion or their action.

The Democrats are the only liberal party we have, but they have to drag along with them the carcass of Southern reaction. The Republicans lay legal claim to Lincoln as their own, but in spirit they are as far from Lincoln as the slaveholders of his own day. The "peculiar institution" the Southern tories cling to is white supremacy. The "peculiar institution" the Republican tories cling to is the supremacy of corporate Big Money. Both of them throttle freedom. Lincoln belongs only to those Americans who are willing to make a fight against the "peculiar institutions" of our own day. 2-12-46

REFLECTIONS ON RANKIN. The pre-Lincoln Day oratory in the House yesterday brought up this gem from Rep. Rankin. Walter Winchell, said Rankin, "a sly mongrel kike," and "if Lincoln were alive today Winchell couldn't get in his back door." This is not the first time that fascist fascism has openly been spoken in the House, by Rankin and a small minority of others. It was in the cards all along that after a decade of fascist brutality all over the world, some Americans should have become infected, and that trickles from the fascist gutter should run even in the halls of Congress. What hurts is not so much what Rankin says as the fact that the decent fellows in Congress don't dare stand up to him choosing—and not of your enemy's.

REPUBLICANS DROP OSCAR DEPRIEST

CHICAGO—(By ANP)—Oscar DePriest, Alderman and Third Ward Committeeman here, last week was notified that he had been dropped from all County Republican subcommittees because he allegedly said: "Mayor Kelly is the best mayor Chicago never had." The Democratic mayor is under fire in connection with Chicago school scandals.

NEW NEW TESTAMENT. Will King James, after reigning three and a half centuries, now be dethroned? That is the question that has been raised by the "revised standard version" of the New Testament, which comes to take the place of the classic King James version.

Will it? One's first impulse is to push the brash invader aside, and defend what we have come to know and love. In the King James version, for example, the famous passage in Corinthians reads: "Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal." The new version changes charity to love, and ends: "I am a noisy gong or a clanging cymbal." Shorter? Yes. Clear? I doubt it. Better? Well, I feel a little as I do when Shakespeare is translated into Esperanto or Plato into Basic English.

This isn't a matter of clinging to the archaic. The King James translation has become one of the great achievements of our literature—great works of literature need no modernizing. The Bible committee puts up a stiff defense by saying that the Bible is "God's word to men" and that word must "stand forth in language that is direct and clear and meaningful." No doubt they are right, and given their lights as professional religionists they had to do what they have done. But let me doubt strongly whether men fail to act in the Christian spirit today because the language of the Bible has haunting rhythms and sounds slightly old-fashioned. As for myself I shall remain an unreconstructed follower of King James. If I forget thee, o sounding brass and tinkling cymbal, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth.

JESTER INTO STATESMAN. The Capitol dopesters seem to think that George Allen's nomination for the Reconstruction Finance Corp. will get through the Senate because Allen's jokes had the Senators laughing. One could be an indignant moralist, and shout that political cynicism had reached a pretty low low. Or one could take a cold anthropological look at ourselves, and note that it probably had to be this way. Three outstanding things about our American civilization are the promoter, the fixer, and the wisecrack. Allen combines all three. He's therefore a natural for any high office we have. Evidently the trouble with the Harding Administration was that the Ohio Gang didn't include a master of the wisecrack.

STALIN'S SPEECH. Stalin's speech to the electors at the Bolshoi Theater has raised the temperatures of the professional Russia-baiters. They see in his remarks about the relation of capitalist crisis to world war a deliberate slap at America. But that is the sheerest nonsense. It is the stock in trade of capitalist leaders to glorify the capitalist free market economy, and it is the stock in trade of socialist leaders to glorify the planned socialist economy. What Stalin is saying is not a "new line," as some political Nostradamuses seem to think. It is the old Stalinist line, on which Russia has been so successful: the line of "building socialism in one country."

LOGIC AND WAR. Is there a relation between Stalin's speech and what is going on in the UNO debates and in the clashes of power all over the world? I think there is. As I understand Stalin, he is saying that if a war happens again, it will not be due to "Russian aggression," but to the deep forces of crisis and planlessness inside of capitalism. On the record, that is hard to deny. He is also saying that, if necessary, Russia can develop the economic strength and the scientific advances to get along on its own. That, too, on the record is hard to deny.

There is nothing wrong with Stalin's logic. There is only this to add. Whatever may have been the root causes of the last war, it engulfed socialist Russia as well as the capitalist countries. And granted Russia can stand on its own, what use is it to push science and industry if they will all be destroyed in the next war? Russia's stakes are also ours: to build a world authority so strong that a planned capitalism and a planned socialism can carry on their rivalry within it.

Washington Calling

Washington Post
Washington, D.C.

By Marquis Childs

Clare Booth Luce's Speech

LONG RESIDENCE in Washington is likely to induce a corrosive cynicism concerning human motives. It may be that this is merely an occupational disease of politicians and those who associate with politicians, accentuated in the Capital, where politics is the chief occupation.

CHILDS

In announcing that she had been received into the Catholic Church, Clare Boothe Luce apparently felt it necessary to add that she was retiring from political life lest her action be interpreted in some way as a bid for votes.

Like so many others before her, Mrs. Luce has discovered that it is difficult in politics to get one's serious utterances taken seriously. Her final decision to retire may have had some connection with a drama of disillusionment that took place 10 days before the announcement of her religious conversion. Times 2-21-46

The Congresswoman from Connecticut put a great deal of time and stress on a speech to be delivered at the annual Lincoln Day banquet of the Republican members of the House and the Women's Republican Club of the District of Columbia. The speech dealt with the Negro in America.

MRS LUCE HIT hard at injustice and discrimination. It was a long way from the traditional Lincoln's Day speech paying lip service to Republican dogma on the Negro.

Running through the speech was the theme of the brotherhood of man; the profound belief that underlies the Christian faith, more often honored in the breach than in the observance.

"As Christians," said Mrs. Luce, "we know that there are no such things as 'Negro rights' or 'white rights.' There are only human rights which Negro and white and brown and yellow all claim equally as members of the human family and children of God. In every way the Christian approach to the problem is the soundest, the truest and the safest."

Mrs. Luce's well-dressed, well-fed audience was startled. They had expected, from her, wit and sarcasm as the expense of the Democrats.

As she warmed to her theme, she went even further. She attacked Senator Bilbo of Mississippi directly by name, a violation of "congressional courtesy."

"It has been said," Mrs. Luce declared, "'If any man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar.' Against this supreme charge, Senator Bilbo must find himself defenseless, now and eternally. Let us try as best we can to stay out of this dreadful docket with him, for unhappily all of us have, to some extent, failed our brothers."

Times 2-21-46

THIS WAS CALLING a United States Senator a liar, even though it was done by way of the Bible. When Mrs. Luce finished her speech, there was only a faint pitter-patter of perfunctory applause. Several choleric Republicans are said to have left the dining room in the middle of the address.

Representative Charles LaFollette of Indiana, a liberal Republican, and one of the few at the dinner who heartily applauded Mrs. Luce's courage, offered to have the speech put in the Congressional Record. It was discovered, however, that this could not be done without deleting the references to Bilbo, in deference to congressional courtesy, and Mrs. Luce refused to permit her remarks to be edited.

The press carried almost no reference to the speech. Altogether, her most earnest effort since she has been in Washington was ignored, leaving her to the unhappy conclusion that, whereas a wisecrack will make page one, virtue must be its own reward.

Disillusion was compounded for Mrs. Luce when she learned that those who had been annoyed with her speech were explaining it away by saying that she was merely bidding for the Negro and the labor vote in her district. This was the unkindest cut of all.

There has been so much double talk about the "Negro problem." That may be one reason for the reception given Mrs. Luce's hard-hitting speech.

But this cynical Capital is always looking for hidden motives. The game of political poker, as it is played in Washington, takes nothing for granted.

Declare New Leader Has Unbiased Record

Sat 4-13-46

CHICAGO.—William E. King, second ward Republican committeeman, and Dr. J. B. Martin, president of the Negro American Baseball League, endorsed B. Carroll Reece of Tennessee as national chairman of the Republican Party last week.

Both recalled his backing of the FEPC bill, anti-poll tax bill, anti-lynching bill and other progressive measures. They also said their personal knowledge of him was favorable.

No Comment From Leaders

Although it is rumored they are in favor of the new GOP chairman, Val Washington, Oscar DePriest and Robert R. Church, leading Republicans have not been reached for comment. Sat 4-13-46

Mr. King and Dr. Martin agreed that colored people will not relish the idea of naming a native of Tennessee to lead the party, but added "that is because they don't want Reece."

St. Louis Has 1st Negro On School Board

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill. (ANP)—Unprecedented numbers of Negro voters at the polls here last week elected Marion Stallings the first Negro member of the board of education and repudiated machine-controlled politics by defeating the ticket of Dan McGlynn, white, self-styled political boss.

The Republican Challenger organization, an all-Negro political group, worked against McGlynn's machine to elect 11 out of 18 committeemen on their slate. Much of the success in the primary campaign has been attributed to Thomas Lewis, local business man, who matched dollar for dollar with white politicians. Lewis is chairman of the board of directors of the Challenger organization of 6,500 members.

Solid South Will Have A Lot To Say In 1948

By MARQUIS CHILDS

NEW ORLEANS — Coming East by the Southern route, you pass through the solid South. It is solid enough for this election, at any rate. But what will happen in 1948, and after, is causing some speculation even in the deep South where the Republican Party is a tame ghost mortgaged to Robert A. Taft.

You get a question here that is the same question Democrats in the North are asking. They want to know whether President Truman will be the candidate of his party for re-election in 1948.

Certainly, the President will be challenged within his own party. That is not hard to foresee. Moreover, the challenger is likely to be Henry A. Wallace, with the political power of the PAC, whatever that may be two years hence, behind him. This is the prospect which makes old-line Democrats in the South a little uneasy as they contemplate the future. It is why they can discuss seriously whether or not the South will continue to vote Democratic as regularly as election time rolls around.

The question, it seems to me, more or less answers itself. The Democrats of the South exercise a great deal of control over the party machinery. By virtue of the seniority system they run the House and Senate. They are going to have a lot to say about the Democratic nominee in 1948.

Both loyalty and tradition dictate renomination for President Truman. Conceivably, he might find a way to step out. But no matter what the reason it would be taken as a confession of failure. Then, too, by stepping out he would precipitate the feud within the party which is only held in abeyance because he represents a compromise between the two wings of the party.

Potency Of A Name

With one shattering exception, the Democratic Party in Louisiana has been in the conservative, traditional pattern. Huey Long took this State on the wildest spree that had ever been seen, either in Louisiana or anywhere else. In the decade since Long's assassination, Democratic leaders have been trying to recover from the hangover. Both in the State administration and in New Orleans, reform governments have fought the crookedness that was the base on which the Kingfish built his success. It has not been easy.

You can close down the obvious vice and the gambling. You can fire the crooks out of office. But the habit of corruption induced by dictatorship goes very deep. That is the deadly thing about a dictatorship, whether on the Louisiana scale or the German scale. It strikes at the fiber of political decency.

What made the Long experience so full of meaning for the South was the background against which it occurred Louisiana had lived in contented indifference to the kind of changes that had transformed North Carolina. For example, in schools, roads, hospitals and so on, the State was near the bottom of the list. The Kingfish built the schools and the roads and the hospitals. They cost ten times as much as they should have cost and the difference went to enrich the members of the Long gang. But the buildings were there for the people to see and that is what they remember today.

The visitor is told that back in the canebrakes, in the rural counties, the name of Huey Long still invokes veneration. That is why some people think that Long's son, Russell, a young man with a good war record, may one day be a political power in the State. The potency of the name might be enough to put him on top here.

Progress Only Solution

The State, however, is recovering from the Long debauch. Native pride has done a lot to kindle the recovery program. The people of this City, for instance, are proud that this is a port of entry for trade by air and sea with Latin America. They are doing everything they can to attract Latin-American visitors. A handsome new clubhouse, recently completed, offers facilities for businessmen from south of the border.

It is the kind of courtesy other cities could well afford to copy, but for the South the lesson of Louisiana is the golden opportunity that lay ready and waiting for a man of Huey Long's ruthless ambition and brilliance. The cure lies in progress. That is the only effective vaccination against the disease of dictatorship.

The Kingfish's rise and fall has meaning not for the South alone, but for the whole country. We seem now to be entering a period of reaction. If the pendulum is pushed back too far and all change is stifled, then the way will be open for a violent counter-reaction. We will have created a golden opportunity for a Huey Long not on a State, but a National scale.

Liberalism: Alabama Style

Birmingham Ala News

An Editorial in The Gadsden Times

Will I. Martin, the dean of The Gadsden Times staff, whose journalistic memory goes back some five decades or more, wrote recently in his "Fifty Years Ago in Gadsden" column of the attempts of the Etowah County Republicans to fuse with the Populists to swap votes for McKinley.

It was just about 50 years ago that the Populists bought the old Gadsden Tribune from a Democratic editor and whooped it up for radical reforms at which The Gadsden Times, then a "Goldbug Democrat," turned a critical eye and an abusive editorial voice.

Those were rough-and-tumble political and journalistic days in this part of Alabama—and indeed throughout the South and the West. For what a young Kansas editor called "the ragtag and bobtail," the small farmers and small merchants and such industrial labor as existed, were banded together in swelling protest against the "status quo" leadership in both the Democratic and Republican parties. . . .

Fifty years ago in Alabama the Democratic party was the conservative party. It was controlled, for most part, by the rich landowners, and it was in the backwash of the War Between the States that the planters of the Black Belt in Alabama began their shenanigans to dictate the party's politics, even to controlling the conventions and, later, the primaries.

Today, long after the threats which were dangerous in the reconstruction era, the Alabama Black Belt, with a small part of the state's population, actually controls the Legislature, while the people of North Alabama sit about in mild wonder at how it's done.

There is no doubt that the great mass of Alabama white people are really rebels against status quo systems they feel are holding back progressive democratic programs. And, indeed, as shown by the rise of Populism, the seed always has been here—especially in this part of Alabama. . . .

Today the Democratic party is undergoing great change in Alabama, as it is throughout the country. Hundreds of Alabamians are tied to the party through tradition—and because there is no place else to go—who do not want to stomach the things for which it stands. Fri. 4-5-46

Because the Southern Democratic party for so many years has been identified as a Bourbon party, described as conservative or reactionary, depending on which side of the fence one stands, many Southerners, and even students in far-away places like Maine and Vermont, are stumped. They cannot figure it out. They see what many call "radical reforms" being supported by Southern Democrats, while the very name, Southern Democrat, conjures up a picture of a Sen. Claghorn, a Yankee-baiting, Republican-hating old gentleman who hates progress as much as a Southern gentleman is supposed to love mint juleps.

But the truth always has been that the South is made up of a lot of people, only a small portion of them representative of the landed aristocracy and what-not. And most of the Southern people have been small farmers or workers or little business men who forever in their hearts have yearned for economic change which might better their lot. They have merely been too timid at times to seek that economic change through politics. . . .

So when William G. Carleton writes in the Spring issue of The Virginia Quarterly an article like "The Conservative South—a Political Myth," and Dr. Clarence Nixon, of Vanderbilt University, tells a political science group in Philadelphia that the South actually is liberal, observers must be moved to wonder why the South clings to its illusion of "conservatism."

Immediately after the War Between the States the Southern Republican party was the poor man's party—and with him for a time were the newly freed slaves.

Then came Populism. It was a ferment of the times. It was rebellion by the "have nots" and a scattering of poor landed gentry and a few intellectuals, with the sympathetic support of small business men.

The old congressional district embracing Gadsden sent a Populist to Congress for two terms. At one time the Populists held nearly every elective office in Etowah County. The same thing held true in many Southern "hill counties." Fri. 4-5-46

Oddly enough—or not odd at all—many of the "radical" changes expounded by the Populists were nearly 40 years coming. They came with Franklin Roosevelt and the New Deal. And though a large segment of Southerners had professed such political programs four or five decades ago, when the New Deal reforms came they came with the brand of Yankeeism.

The Republican party is no longer the poor man's party in the South. Most Southern Republicans are men of means, and they have as spiritual brothers old-line Democrats who just cannot bring themselves to break with tradition. They vote Democratic in local issues and either fume and fret and hold their noses in national elections, or go fishing. Some of them actually vote for the Republican presidential candidates, but with a sense of guilt. The old ties are hard to break.

Most Alabama white people do not vote. The poll tax and the old suffrage laws, made originally to keep Negroes from voting, work against them. Alabama's voting regulations are the most complicated in the country.

The conservative political thinkers in Alabama are the smartest. And they work harder at the game of politics than do the more liberal elements. They even work with more zealous feeling. Fri. 4-5-46

For years after the War Between the States the South was looked upon as—and indeed was—a destroyed feudal land, a conquered nation whose wealth disappeared with the old order. It was in that period that Southerners emotionally learned to cling fast to the glories of the past and to try to make up in dream stuff what they lacked in material comforts and tangible security.

There still remains in most of us Southerners some of those old dreams, clouded by change and by time, dreams that confuse us when we attempt to look at political movements we deem strange and new, but which really are not so strange and not so new, but only made to appear so because we have learned to live with illusions that have become a very part of feeling and thinking.

Many well-to-do Southerners are genuinely conservative. But most Southerners are neither well-to-do nor conservative. They are merely frustrated in their political thinking, because they sometimes find economic yearning and emotional-traditional thinking at odds with each other. So they vote the straight Democratic ticket, often cuss the administration for radicalism, but pull for tangible reforms that meet the eye and understanding.

The conservative South is like the South of Aunt Jemimah, the South of Col. Blackstock, the South of Sen. Claghorn—it exists only in healthy and colorful imagination.

The only trouble is that bright human minds have not yet been able to coin the exact words to describe Southern liberalism, just as New England housewives and Iowa farm wives have never learned to fry chicken Southern style. Fri. 4-5-46

The word "liberal," as defined by Webster, is no more illustrative of Southern liberalism than sweetened cornbread is like Alabama hoecake.

Tom Stokes, at Athens, Tells South What It Needs Is 2-Party System

Atlanta Constitution Atlanta, Ga.

Sun 2-24-46

By CLARK HOWELL JR.

Constitution Staff Writer.

ATHENS, Feb. 23.—Tom Stokes, native Georgian and Washington columnist whose column appears daily in The Atlanta Constitution, fired a broadside at the "do or die" Democratic southern conservatism, speaking today in the white columned antebellum university chapel here.

"The only way to get real representation in the south is to have a two-party system," Stokes told Georgia editors and their guests at the 18th annual Georgia Press Institute.

"Herbert Hoover carried four southern states in 1928—North Carolina, Florida, Texas and Virginia. I realize that this breaking of the Solid South was hinged perhaps largely on other than economic issues—religion and prohibition were powerful influences," Stokes continued.

"But I do believe that many people in the south in that year voted on the basis partly of economic issues and were glad of the opportunity.

"It's too bad Hoover was unable to carry through his ideas of reform to establish a really effective Republican party in the south, but there is no reason why it shouldn't be tried again."

The chapel was filled to capacity with Athenians and students of the University of Georgia who had come to hear the liberal Tom Stokes curse the discrimination and prejudice left over from War Between the States days.

"Conservative interests of the south should have an opportunity to leave the Democratic party, and progressive people should have an opportunity to elect men or women who would carry out progressive ideas," Stokes said. "The issues should be fought out on the basis of their merits, not on the basis of an outworn tradition.

"Of course it will never be possible to fight the issues out on their merits until and unless every citizen in the south has an opportunity to participate in elections. So that all the people have a voice in choosing those who represent them in congress. This is restricted now in the south by disfranchisement of Negroes, and in some, but to a lesser degree, by poll taxes. Those things are very familiar to you, and I need not elaborate." Sun 2-24-46

Hereupon, one of the staunch Daughters of the Confederacy rose in disgust and, seizing the hand of her child, lest it might be contaminated, stalked conspicuously from the historic chapel.

A low murmur arose as many of the Athenians drew on their dwindling reserves of composure and prepared to listen somewhat unwillingly to the remainder of the address.

The students, seated in the balcony, glowed with obvious delight, appreciating thoroughly, as they did, the unspoken and conflicting views boiling in the minds of their elders below.

Stokes continued, "This lack of true representation of all elements of the population in congress, coupled with the one-party system in the south, and the seniority rule in congress, works out in the minority control of the Democratic party that exists today.

HOW IT OPERATES

"It comes about this way: Some southern members do not truly represent their constituencies. They, in fact, represent a minority that does not go along with the philosophy of the Democratic party as it is today. They maintain their seats in congress through this minority control in their home constituencies and through the one-party system.

"Through the seniority rule in congress, they move up to the key places, so that, in the end, you find control of the Democratic party in congress lodged in southern members who are not in accord with the program of the party."

A gasp of indignation surged up and down the aisles.

"Isn't it true that all this trouble about the FEPC bill was stirred up by some damn Yankees who don't know anything about what they are saying?" blustered one white-haired rebel waving his cane in indignation.

STOKES UNFLURRIED

Stokes, calm and composed, continued: Sun 2-24-46

"One of the most needed of all changes is to modify or abolish the seniority system because it works out practically to vest control in a minority, whichever party is in power. When Democrats are in power, the south controls. When Republicans are in power, the midwest controls, for the midwest is the year-in-year-out backbone of the Republican party and the seniority rule operates to entrench its men in the places of power.

"This disproportionate midwest influence was a factor in the isolationism of the Republican party in the critical years before our entry into the war, for example," Stokes explained.

"I hope I am not too pessimistic about the Democratic party situation in congress today," Stokes continued. "There are some bright and encouraging signs in the south, particularly here in our own state. Gov. Arnall has given this state a fine, progressive administration that has attracted attention all over the country and very much so in Washington where people are very conscious of rising new political figures.

ALL ASK ABOUT ARNALL

"Everywhere I go I am asked about Gov. Arnall. He has done much to enhance the prestige of our state elsewhere. Outside the borders of the state, he has aroused most interest perhaps on two matters, one touching on political freedom, the other on economic freedom. The first is his leadership in repeal of the poll tax as a voting requirement. The other is his fight for fair freight rates for the South.

"I believe the south is inherently progressive and all it needs is the chance to express its progressivism. It needs to shake off a few more of the encrustations of tradition and the Civil War complex," he said.

OPPORTUNITY IS HERE

"Until the south does free herself, until her whole people, white and black, can share in government and share in the fruits of her industry and agriculture, I don't believe she can realize the great destiny that certainly is hers. The opportunity is here, but she cannot accomplish her full development as long as any part of the population is suppressed and held down, denied equal opportunity.

"The per capita wealth must be raised, and that will only occur when all her people can share the advantages of education; when they have an equal chance in the economic system; when they can enjoy the full privileges of citizenship.

"There is nothing radical about any of this. It is something that is taken for granted in other parts of the country and in other forward-looking nations."

Stokes was introduced by H. H. Trotti, vice president of The Atlanta Constitution.

Earlier, Rear Adm. Harold Blaine Miller, Navy director of public information, told the editors and publishers that next spring's atomic bomb tests in the Pacific may be broadcast throughout the world in a "play-by-play" account.

Adm. Miller also told newsmen that "if we can get" the planes, both still and newsreel cameramen will photograph the actual explosion and fly their pictures back to Kwajalein after the tests so pictures could be transmitted immediately to San Francisco by radiophoto.

The admiral said approximately 200 press representatives would be permitted to witness the tests --the first to be held in May and the second in June.

The armed forces, he added, have received 3,500 requests from newsmen to accompany the expedition.

Most of the press, he said, would witness the tests from a ship anchored about 10 miles from the scene of the blasts. Ninety-seven ships will be used as bomb targets, with approximately 150 more ringing the scene as observers.

'Solid South' Poll Favors Two Parties

'Taken For Granted,' Voters Complain

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N. J., June 25—Would the South be better off if, instead of having one dominant political party, it had two strong parties?

Many Southern intellectuals have claimed that their section would benefit by more party competition, and the average Southern voter is inclined to agree with that, especially if he lives in one of the less solidly Democratic States of the South.

In a special poll of Southern opinion in 13 Southern States, interviewers for the institute questioned a cross-section of the voting population as follows:

"Do you think the South would be better off, in general, if there were two political parties of about equal strength instead of one strong party as there is at present?"

Opinion Expressed

The same question was asked in three previous polls dating back to 1939. The trend of sentiment among those expressing an opinion follows:

	Yes, two parties	No, one party
1939	57%	43%
1943	59%	41%
1944	64%	36%
Today	62%	38%

In the last two surveys one person in every five (20 per cent) expressed no opinion.

Many Southern leaders feel that the South would get more attention from Washington and have greater say in Democratic party councils, if it were less solidly Democratic on election day. Too many Democratic administrations, they argue, have "taken the South for granted."

While the South shows no evidence of leaving the Democratic fold on election day, it is noteworthy that in the less solidly Democratic parts of the South, sentiment in favor of a two-party line-up is considerably stronger than elsewhere in the South. In short, the more taste a Southern State has of an effective two-party system, the more it likes that system.

In the less solidly Democratic Southern States taken as a group—North Carolina, Virginia, Florida, Kentucky, Oklahoma and Tennessee—the vote favoring a strong two-party system is 69 per cent. In the other States, South Carolina, Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas the aggregate vote is 51 per cent in favor.

Analysis of replies shows, however, that majority of Democrats with opinions in the survey favor the idea of a strong second party. This is shown in the table below giving the vote on the question among Democratic and Republican voters:

	Dem. voters	Rep. voters
For two parties	53%	86%
Against two parties	47%	14%

The main reasons given by voters who favor a stronger two-party system are that competition, in politics as well as in business or private enterprise, is essential to a sound democracy.

"Competition helps build ideas, and the South could sure use some new ideas," says one typical Southern voter polled.

How Solid Is the South?

The following table showing the percentage of Democratic vote of the Democratic-Republican total in each of the 13 Southern States for the last four presidential elections gives a picture of the extent to which the South is a one-party section.

	1932	1936	1940	1944
Alabama	86%	87%	86%	82%
Arkansas	87%	82%	79%	70%
Florida	75%	76%	74%	70%
Georgia	92%	87%	85%	82%

GROUP URGES SOUTH TO FORM 3D PARTY

Arkansas Democratic Body Says It Could Hold Balance —Governor Opposed

By HAROLD B. HINTON

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Aug. 21—A plan for the Solid South to gain the balance of national political power in the Presidential and Congressional elections of 1948 will be offered to the State Democratic Convention when it meets here Sept. 6. Its sponsor is the Democratic Committee of Phillips County, of which Helena is the seat.

In essence, the proposal would form the Democratic organizations of the twelve Southern States into a third party, to be called something like the Democratic party of the South."

In national affairs, it would throw its weight to either the Republican or Democratic party as it considered the interests of the South to indicate.

While the movement probably has as little chance of success as that of the Texar Regulars of 1944, is is symptomatic of the hard care of extreme conservatism which lies behind Democratic organizations throughout the South.

There appears to be little chance for some years that a new political generation will work into political leadership in this part of the country, where practical politics has always been the domain of the experienced expert, with carefully-built alliances.

Complains of National Party

The Helena committee, in the resolutioin which it will present to the State convention, complained that there was no national political party which sponsors policies agreeable to "a great majority of southern white people." The Democratic party, born in the South, was now treading the "sophisticated primrose political path," in the words of the resolution.

"It enjoys and participates," the resolution said, "in the society of, and associates with, the Communists, pink Socialists, and other fellow travelers who revel in their hatred of the South, and who have by every means in their power, through magazines, the public press, the radio and motion pictures, pursued a persistent and determined policy of undermining all the things the South holds sacred."

The sectional and racial implications o fthe resolution appeal to that large segment of Southern public opinion which fears and mistrusts Federal enactment of many proposals. Among these are the Fair Employment Practices Commission, anti-lynching laws, prohibition of poll taxes and Federal Court interference with segregation of Negroes and insistence on their voting rights.

'White Primary' Facing Change

Arkansas has just gone through its first "white primary" intended to conform to Federal Court rulings on constitutional prerogatives of Negroes in Southern elections.

As it turned out, the primaries for the State and local nominations, which were held separately, two weeks after the primaries for the Federal offices, were anything but "white."

In the heat of political competition, some of the candidates who had been most active in obtaining legislative enactment of the "white primary" law found themselves in ned of Negro votes and the whole idea went by default. It is expected the law will be repealed at the next session of the legislature.

The Arkansas plan embodied roughly what Eugene Talmadge and Senator Theodore G. Bilbo advocated for the voters of Georgia and Mississippi.

In all three states, however, negroes voted in the Democratic primaries in considerable numbers without noticeably affecting the results, and without provoking the violence which had been predicted by various campaign orators.

Economic Pickup in the State

A condition which may operate against preservation of the extreme conservatism of the Arkansas Democrats is the accelerating change in the State's economic life, featured largely by an influx of small industry and by the substitution of livestock for cotton as the State's leading agricultural crop. The CIO is attempting to organize the workers in the new industries, while the AFL has not become particularly active as yet.

The workers in the oil, glass and aluminum industries are fairly solidly enrolle- the appropriate CIO unions, while the AFL is still represented only in the skilled crafts, especially the building trades.

According to figures just released by H. E. Thompson, Collector of Internal Revenue, Federal income-tax collections in Arkansas are up about 4 per cent over the same period of last year, while the collections in the country as a whole are down 7 per cent. He made no effort to assign causes for this trend in Arkansas.

Local analysts are inclined to credit this to the establishment of more than enough new small industries in the State to offset the shutting down of its war plants.

White Supremacy Is A Fact, Not Political Theory, Says Dubose In Congress Drive

Atlanta Ga. Daily World 1-30-46

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. —(SNS) — Violently advocating "white supremacy" as a fact and not a political theory, Hugh Dubose, candidate to unseat liberal Congressman Luther Patrick, declared in Radio News last week and over WJLD, Bessemer Radio station last Sunday that the "march on the courthouse" by Negro veterans seeking to register to vote had inspired the organization of the Ku Klux Klans.

Robert Umback, assistant manager of WJLD, when interviewed by the World following the broadcast, apologized for the remarks made by Mr. Dubose, stating that they did not represent the broadcasting policy of WJLD. He said that he did not represent the broadcasting hearing several immediate protests against it, would assure the public against future occurence. He promised to censor Mr. Dubose and if need be, cut him off the air if he departs from submitted script.

Mr. Dubose said that "a known communist" was behind the march. He stated further that "good and humble Negro leaders" know to leave politics to white people.

A few years ago, Victor Bernstein, feature writer for the newspaper PM, New York City, wrote an expose on Mr. Dubose which were similar to the ideas expressed on the air Sunday and in Radio News Saturday by Mr. Dubose.

High Court Postpones Negro's Vote Appeal

The News Birmingham, Ala.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 20—(AP)—Arguments on a Macon County Negro's appeal for registration as a voter were postponed by the State Supreme Court yesterday until Nov. 26.

The postponement was granted on request of Arthur Shores, Birmingham attorney, who informed the court he had a similar appeal from Jefferson County and wanted to argue the two cases simultaneously. Wed. 11-20-46

The Macon County Negro, Payton H. Williams, claims he was denied registration as a voter by the County Board of Registrars at Tuskegee, and appealed to Circuit Court under a state law which provides for such procedure.

The petition was directed against Mrs. George Wright and Virgil M. Guthrie, former members of the Macon County Board of Registrars, who also are defendants in a $5,000 damage suit filed by another Tuskegee Negro in Federal Court. Both Mrs. Wright and Guthrie resigned from the board after the litigation began.

Judicial Status Is Favored By Sparks For Registrars

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. Sun. 10-6-46

Gov. Chauncey Sparks contends that County Boards of Registrars should be given judicial status and allowed to pass on "civil rights" just as other courts determine "property rights."

He expressed this opinion after revealing that he had received a request to appoint Negro registrars to succeed members of the Macon County Board of Registrars who resigned this Summer.

The registrars submitted their resignations to the State Board of appointment over a situation which G. A. Smith of Tuskegee, one of the last members to serve, described as a "hot potato."

"Boards of Registrars," the Governor said, "should be given judicial authority and protected from law suits such as one now pending against two former Macon County registrars."

He disclosed that he received a letter recently from an organization called the Tuskegee Civic Association asking him to consider the appointment of qualified registrars in Macon County.

"Never while I am governor will I consent to the appointment of a Negro to such a position," he added.

Now pending before the U. S. Supreme Court is a $5,000 damage suit filed by a Negro, William P. Mitchell, against two former Macon County registrars, Virgil M. Guthrie and Mrs. George O. Wright.

Asks Injunction

Mitchell seeks a permanent injunction against the former voting officials and a declaratory judgment against what he termed the "policy, custom or usage" of refusing to register members of his race because of their color.

The Montgomery Federal District Court dismissed his petition on grounds that it lacked jurisdiction and Mitchell had not exhausted his remedies in State courts.

From this decision the State appealed on a writ of certiorari to the U. S. Supreme Court.

Qualifying his stand today, Gov. Sparks explained that Macon County officials estimate there are about 1,800 qualified white voters and 200 Negro voters in the county. He said he understands that "around 2,000" Negroes recently crowded around the courthouse on registration days seeking to add their names to the voting list. Montgomery, Ala.

"This is the situation," he said, "which led up to the resignations by the registrars."

The Governor recalled that he has appointed 10 members to the Macon County board during his administration and all have either resigned, declined to qualify, or refused appointment. Sun. 10-6-46

"I don't much blame them under existing circumstances," he said.

Court Dismisses Vote Case in Ala.

The Afro-American Baltimore, Md. Sat. 7-13-46

BIRMINGHAM — (ANP) — Judge Whit Windham, July 3, dismissed the vote appeal case of Forrest A. Hawkins, one of 21 veterans appealing from registration denials in January. Action in the other cases was postponed. 7-13-46

Over vigorous objections by Arthur D. Shores, attorney, representing the petitioner, Judge Windham sustained the demurrer of Deputy Solicitor Willard McCall on grounds that the petition "is not sufficient" and "not in the proper form."

Mr. Shores contended that he had corrected in the petition the defects assigned in the Boswell case, which he presented before the State Supreme Court a few years ago. The Supreme Court ruled adversely in this case. 7-13-46

Registration Chief Quits, Says Board Is Kicked Around

The News Birmingham, Ala. Fri. 10-18-46

Dr. Vines Declares Negroes 'Used' For 'Selfish Reasons'

Dr. J. B. Vines, a figure prominent for many years in Jefferson County political circles, has submitted his resignation as chairman of the Board of Registrars here to Gov. Chauncey Sparks because the work of the board "has become a football for the organizations that seek to use the colored people for selfish reasons," it was learned today.

"Life is too short for me to contend with the situation as it now exists," Dr. Vines said in his letter, dated yesterday, to the governor. "I know of no solution that can be given under the present law. The only solution to my mind is to give the Board of Registrars the same standing as a court or judicial body."

The resignation of Dr. Vines came shortly after the entire Board of Registrars in Macon County submitted their resignations to the governor because of a court suit instituted against them by a Negro applicant.

THE LETTER OF DR. VINES pointed out that there is a suit pending in Federal District Court for $5,000 against each member of the board for refusing registration to a person whom the board did not think qualified and further stated that he had been informed a large number of other suits are threatened.

"The Board of Registrars are continually being harrassed in the press by letters that are in my opinion libelous," the letter stated. "Other libelous items have been placed in certain newspapers that have tended to inflame the minds of large groups of colored people against constituted authorities, and to mislead other citizens who do not know the real facts."

Dr. Vines, who lives at Vinesville in the Bessemer Cutoff, was appointed by Gov. Sparks for a four-year term as chairman of the Board of Registrars on Oct. 1, 1943. He served one term on the old County Board of Revenue and two terms after the County Commission was created.

Other members of the Board of Registrars are J. P. Creel and Mrs. Eva Whitfield.

DR. VINES' LETTER follows in full:

"I hereby tender my resignation as chairman of the Board of Registrars of Jefferson County to be effective as soon as your excellency accepts this and appoints my successor.

"I have endeavored to perform my duties according to the law as I understand it. The work of the Board of Registrars has become a football for the organizations that seek to use the colored people for selfish reasons. It has been the custom of these organizations to bring groups of colored applicants for registration to the office a few minutes before closing time and demand that each and every one be registered before the office is closed. On other occasions agitators have marched large groups of colored people to the courthouse, and created such disorder as to necessitate the calling on the sheriff to furnish deputies to maintain order.

"THERE IS A SUIT PENDING in the Federal District Court for $5,000 against each member of the Board of Registrars for refusing registration to a person whom the Board of Registrars did not think qualified. I have ben informed that a large number of other suits are threatened. The Board of Registrars are continually being harassed in the press by letters that are in my opinion libelous. Other libelous items have been placed in certain newspapers that have tended to inflame the minds of large groups of colored people against constituted authorities, and to mislead other citizens who do not know the real facts.

"Life is too short for me to contend with the situation as it now exists. I know of no solution that can be given under the present law. The only solution to my mind is to give the Board of Registrars the same standing as a court or judicial body.

"I wish to thank you for your cooperation during the time that I have been chairman and I wish to assure that I have at all times performed my duties sincerely and honestly."

PAC Takes Alabama In Vote Contest

5,000 Negroes Cast Ballots As Folsom Wins

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — More than 5,000 Negroes went to the polls here this week as James E. (Big Jim) Folsom, 37-year-old war veteran who advocated repeal of the poll tax, was swept into the governor's seat.

Backed by the CIO-Political Action Committee, Folsom defeated Lt. Gov. Handy Ellis with surprising ease in the run-off for Democratic nomination for governor, equivalent to election.

During the bitterly contested campaign, Ellis charged that CIO-PAC interference would "upset" racial segregation which he said was responsible for the "harmonious" relations between Negroes and whites and force the FEPC on the South.

It was revealed, however, that Ellis had sought CIO support upon announcing his candidacy for governor, but was rejected because his platform did not contain planks as liberal by the labor organization. It was also disclosed that CIO-PAC had held down by discriminatory application of education tests for poll tax and had asserted a Folsom victory would mean the state would be run by Sidney Hillman, CIO-PAC chairman, and CIO

"race against race" and "religion against religion."

Mobile Negro Fights For Vote

By ENOC P. WATERS JR.

MOBILE, Ala.—It is becoming increasingly apparent to me, as I move from community to community observing the struggle Negroes are making to qualify as voters, that the southern Negro is developing a higher respect for the ballot than his northern brother who has been exercising his franchise for years.

Indeed, I feel there is no group within the boundaries of the United States, white or colored, with a greater appreciation for the right to vote than southern Negroes.

A retired longshoreman, with dirt ground indelibly into his calloused, work-deformed hands, enlightened me.

Out For The Vote

"Down here there's one sure way of knowing the value of something—the willingness of the white man to let the Negro have it. There ain't nothing I know of the white man would rather keep from the Negro than the right to vote. That's why I'm out to get it, hell or high water."

He is representative of one of the types of Negroes here making an all out fight to vote—a type one might suspect would not be willing to exert himself unduly in this direction.

Only the educated and enlightened ones a few years ago yearned for the right to vote freely. And that yearning was expressed more in words than in action.

Great Awakening

This great awakening was not brought about by federal edicts wiping out the lily white monopoly of local elections. Rather, it was the refusal of the white man to capitulate gracefully, and his resistance to the efforts of Negroes to qualify as voters that provoked the campaign.

Where else in the country will men and women stand in line for hours—as much as a half day in some instances—to fill out a registration blank?

Certainly not in New York City where hundreds who could qualify in five minutes fail to do so.

Where else will people submit to indignities, abuse and humiliation to get their names on the registration lists?

Not in Chicago where invitations to participate in elections are declined by scores.

Where else would people take a part of their low incomes and pay for the right to vote?

Certainly not in San Francisco where the free right to vote goes begging.

Here in Mobile, and in other poll tax states of the South, hundreds of Negroes have paid as high as $37.50 for the right to cast their first vote.

One of the highest prices paid here for helping others to qualify as voters was paid by wealthy, 72-year-old Napolean Rivers.

Martyr To Cause

Rivers, highly respected, retired hauling contractor, was severely beaten, his skull fractured and his jaw broken in the Mobile County courthouse while serving as voucher for Negroes seeking to register.

To date (June 23) he has spent 10 days in the hospital and five week abed in his home under the care of a physician and has yet to face charges of disorderly conduct and resisting arrest on July 10.

The viciousness of the attack upon the old man, whose son Dr. Napolean Rivers is professor of languages at Miner Teachers College in Washington, aroused the indignation of the entire Negro populace here and of many whites whose sense of humanity was outraged.

A local requirement for registration here is that the prospective voter be accompanied by a qualified voter who can vouch for him or her.

As a part of its registration and voting drive, here, the joint NAACP-Elks committee enlisted a group of qualified Negro voters who voluntarily take turns as vouchers at the courthouse for Negroes seeking to register.

The "slow-down" technique employed by the local board of registrars to discourage Negroes, has made the task of voucher very difficult. For long hours, they must stand around waiting to be summoned by a prospective voter.

Grows Tired

Mr. Rivers, weakened by old age, grew tired and asked permission of Policeman Edward Bartlett to go into one of the offices to rest. The request was brusquely denied.

Unable to stand any longer, the old man started from the building. In the corridor he stopped to talk to Rev. B. B. Williams, pastor of St. Louis Street Baptist Church. Bartlett urged him to move on, and when the old man didn't move fast enough the officer attacked him.

One of a number of affidavits submitted to the Department of Justice as a part of a formal complaint by the local NAACP asserts that Milton Snell, chairman of the County Board of Registrars who was present, cried, "Why don't you hit him in the head," as the policeman beat the old man with his stick.

The NAACP complaint charges Bartlett with violation of section 20 of the United States Criminal Code that deals with the mistreatment of persons in custody.

Every strategem that has been employed elsewhere in the South to discourage heavy Negro registrations has been employed effectively here by white registrars with a few local variations.

Only 700 Registered

As a consequence only 700 of the several thousand Negroes who have sought to qualify have been registered. In the county there are 15,000 potential Negro voters. The poll tax has prevented a large number of the older Negroes from attempting to qualify.

Veterans, exempt from payment of poll tax, have responded well to the drive. However ten complaints involving rejected veterans have been filed with the Department of Justice. These raise the total of known charges brought against registrars in the state to 57. Two are pending in federal courts; 45 in state courts and the remainder have been lodged in Washington.

Until January 12 of this year, the bar against Negro participation in the local Democratic primary was absolute. Unlike Jefferson County (Birmingham) where a few Negroes have always been permitted to vote, not a one could cast a ballot here.

FBI Investigation

It was through the complaints filed on behalf of these persons by the NAACP with the Department of Justice that an FBI investigation was launched here. This resulted in the final capitulation of the state Democratic party executive committee this year.

Success of the drive can't be measured by the number of persons registered. The real accomplishments are the vote consciousness of the masses and the actions taken against the county board of registrars that are expected to remove the barriers to large scale registration on the part of Negroes eager for the ballot.

Dr. Vines To Stay On Registrar Board

Birmingham, Ala.

Dr. J. B. Vines, of Birmingham, continued as chairman of the Jefferson County Board of Registrars today after withdrawing his resignation, which he submitted to Gov. Chauncey Sparks 10 days ago.

In his letter of withdrawal, according to an Associated Press dispatch from Montgomery, Dr. Vines warned that unless the Boswell amendment is adopted it might be "well sigh impossible" to get registrars in the future.

In submitting his resignation to the governor, Dr. Vines declared "the work of registering voters has become a political football for the organizations that seek to use the colored people for selfish reasons."

His action in withdrawing the resignation followed a request from Gov. Sparks that he reconsider his decision to resign. 10-29-46

Sparks Rules Out Negro Registrars

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 5. (AP) — Recommending that Alabama's next legislature set up county boards of registrars as judicial bodies, Gov. Chauncey Sparks disclosed he has been requested, but "never, while I am governor will" appoint Negro registrars.

"Boards of registrars," he added, "should be given judicial powers to protect their members from law suits as the one now pending against two former Macon County board members.

"There is no reason why registrars should not sit as courts to decide 'civil rights' just as other judicial bodies determine 'property rights'," he contended.

Receives Letter

The governor said he had received a letter from an organization called the Tuskegee Civic Association asking him to consider the appointment of qualified Negro registrars to replace members of the Macon County board who have all resigned.

"Never while I am governor will I consent to the appointment of a Negro to such a position."

Sparks explained that Macon County officials estimate there are about 1800 qualified white voters and 200 Negro voters in the county. He said he was informed that "around 2000 Negroes recently have congregated around the courthouse on registration days seeking to have their names added to the voters' list.

"This is the situation," he said, which led up to the resignations by the Macon County registrars."

The governor reminded that he has appointed ten members to the Macon County Board of Registrars since he has been in office and that all of them either resigned, failed to qualify or refused appointment.

Didn't Blame Them

He said he didn't much blame them under extisting circumstances."

A $5000 damage suit, filed by a Negro, William P. Mitchell, is pending before the U. S. Supreme Court against two former members of the board, Virgil M. Guthrie and Mrs. George C. Wright, both of Tuskegee.

Mitchell asked for a permanent injunction against the officials and a declaratory judgment against what he termed the "policy, custom and usage" of refusing to register members of his race because of their color.

His petition was dismissed by Federal District Judge C. B. Kennamer in Montgomery on grounds his court lacked jurisdiction and that the Negro had not exhausted his remedies in state courts.

The U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals at New Orleans overruled Kennamer's decision and ordered the case reopened. The state then appealed under a writ of certiorari to the U. S. Supreme Court.

Dallas Registrar Resigns Position

The Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala.

Mrs. Julia S. Phillips, chairman of the Dallas County Board of Registrars, notified the governor's office yesterday that she was resigning because of ill health.

She was the second board chairman to quit in four days.

Dr. J. B. Vines, chairman of the Jefferson County Registrars, announced his resignation Friday because, he said, the work "has become a football for organizations seeking to use the colored people for selfish reasons."

Gov. Chauncey Sparks returned Dr. Vines' resignation to him along with a request that he continue to serve on the board.

Several months ago all members of the Macon County Board of Registrars resigned and one member said the situation was "a hot potato." Suits are now pending in Federal courts against registrars and former registrars in Jefferson and Macon counties on grounds that they refused to register persons because of "race, colored or creed." Wed. 10-23-46

Gov. Sparks explained several weeks ago that the "hot potato" in Macon County was an organized attempt at mass registration of Negro voters. He said he was informed that approximately 2,000 Negroes had been assembling around the county courthouse on registration days seeking to qualify as voters.

County officials indicated there are only about 1,800 qualified white voters in the county.

In Selma, H. F. Crandell, another member of the Dallas County board, said, "As far as I know no suit has been filed against the board or any of its members."

So True, So True

The Atlanta Daily World

Charles N. Feidelson, columnist for the Birmingham News, in his piece January 7, scored the "McCorvey Plan," which is the infamous "Boswell amendment" as a way of regulating voting in Alabama to comply with the Supreme Court ruling opening the Democratic primary to Negro electors.

Atlanta Ga 1-17-46

The Jefferson County Democratic Committee, with one member reserving, has voted to support the "plan" recommended by Gessener T. McCorvey, state chairman of the Alabama State Democratic Committee. In Jefferson county, Negroes have always voted in the Democratic primary. In Jefferson county, what the "Boswell amendment" proposes to do, has always been done illlegally to Negroes.

We on the Birmingham World suspect that the small-vote politicians realize that they dare not resort to such illegalities to prevent white veterans, white trade unionists and the plain white people from increasing their strength, so they want to make legal those practices which have worked well illegally to prevent qualified Negro citizens from registering to vote. 1-17-46

The McCorvey-Boswell "plan" would amend the Alabama constitution to require that vote applicants be able to "explain and understand" the constitution. Such is no valid test. The United States constitution was never intended to be used this way. Better would it be for the politicians to be educating themselves to live up to the United States Constitution, especially the 13th, 14th and 15th amendments.

Here are Columnist Feidelson's comments:

Jefferson County members of the State Democratic executive committee met Friday, approved the Gessener McCorvey plan, and declared their support of the Boswell amendment. What is the McCorvey plan? To preserve the primary system while giving the effect of heeding a U. S. Supreme Court decision carrying out the constitutional requirement as to race, color and previous condition of servitude? What is the Boswell amendment? To enlarge the authority of local boards of registrars to the point of making them monarchs of all they survey. In other words, very high-mindedly, you respect the law by inviting everybody who is qualified to vote, while, very realistically, you see to it that qualification comes harder than ever. In other words, you provide a new version for the old Biblical injunction: When thou doest politics, let not thy left hand know what thy right is doing. 1-17-46

This is traditional Black Belt doctrine, and McCorvey is its prophet. From representatives of a community like ours, one might have expected some hint of a more progressive philosophy. But that was not to be had. Everything else goes by the board when "white supremacy" is being sought. And the worst of it is that the dodge recommended by Mr. McCorvey will not stand up in the long run. Instead of facing up to the issue boldly and broadly, we keep on running from stump to stump, inviting the dislodgement which is inevitable in the course of time.

If these executive committeemen had said something about getting rid of, or even modifying, the poll tax, if they had shown some awareness of the extent to which our state and county affairs are determined by a minority of potential voters, they could have been forgiven for following Mr. McCorvey as bellwether. But one looks and listens in vain for independent or creative thinking. And that is the way things stand throughout the state. Instead of seeking valid qualifications to be honestly administered, Alabama politicians persist in taking the line of prejudice, barring more white citizens than colored from the electorate, and, by implication, challenging the federal government to clean up the mess we have made. 1-17-46

Alabama to Let Negroes Vote But Seeks New Law

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 12 (UP)—The Alabama Democratic Executive Committee today removed a 75-year-old specification that only white persons can vote in the party's primaries.

But at the same time the committee indorsed and urged voters to ratify an amendment to the State Constitution in the general election next November that would limit voting privileges to those who met certain "qualifications." Among them is the ability to read, write and interpret the U. S. Constitution. This undoubtedly would exclude many Negro voters.

Keep the Record Straight.

Before the vote is taken on this amendment, however, the 1946 Democratic primary will be held on May 7, and under today's ruling, Negroes would be allowed to vote.

Behind the action was a Federal Court ruling that "white primaries" are unconstitutional.

Alabama party leaders hastened to put the record straight about their action. 1-13-46

"The federal law prevents our excluding Negroes from our primaries and we must abide by it," said Gessner T. McCorvey, Mobile, committee chairman. But he emphasized that "white folks will run the state like they always have—and always will." Only a few Negroes will vote in the coming elections, he said, "and they will be more intelligent Negroes."

Alabama Primaries Opened To Race

Journal-Guide

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—For the first time in the history of Alabama politics the Democratic Party opened its primaries to Negro voters by a decision of the state executive committee here on last Saturday. The committee voted overwhelmingly to permit qualified Negro voters to participate in the party primaries.

Norfolk, Va.

The committee revised the regulations pertaining to the party primary and adopted a resolution specifying the qualifications for party candidates for various state offices omitting the historical "white primary" phrase. 1-19-46

According to Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey, of Mobile, who had announced he would urge adoption of the change, explained that the resolution was necessary because of the United States Supreme Court decision in the Texas case.

The Texas decision was that it was unconstitutional to bar Negroes from primaries conducted under state law solely on account of their race. 1-19-46

Other changes were voted through by the committee including the Boswell amendment designed to increase the requirements for registration. The amendment, which will be voted on in the November general election, would drop the constitutional provision that ownership of $300 worth of property qualifies a person to register.

The amendment substitutes the provision that a prospective voter will have to be able to "understand and explain" instead of merely to read parts of the Constitution.

THE BOSWELL AMENDMENT

Birmingham News, Ala.

In many cases, it is not the law which is unjust, but the application of it.

The proposed Boswell amendment to the Alabama constitution, providing that a prospective voter must be able to read and understand any clause in the United States Constitution to qualify, offers a possibility of such a case. 1-24-46

Who is to judge whether the applicant understands the clause or not? The Supreme Court has been disagreeing for many years over the meaning of the constitution.

Interpretation itself, however, is beside the point. A general idea of what the clause deals with should be enough to qualify a voter.

The difficulty is that the official who qualifies or disqualifies under this requirement may do so at will, if he is corrupt. If he is a victim of racial prejudice, he may bar Negroes from the vote. If he knows and disapproves of the political views of the applicant, he may deny them expression through the ballot.

The only protection of the public against corruption in this case would be some means of keeping the identity and color of the applicant secret from the examiner; a screen, for instance, between the two, like the curtains which surround the ballot box at well-conducted polls.

With such a precaution provided, the Boswell amendment could do much to promote more enlightened voting in Alabama. Maybe the buyers of votes, when faced with the problem of explaining the entire constitution to the ignorant folk whom they corrupt every election year, would give up and try honest ways of winning.—Huntsville Times.

'Unusual Political Activity' Charged To Negro By Board

Atlanta Daily World

MOBILE, ALA., Feb. 1.—(AP)—The Mobile County Board of Registrars today followed up criticism of a Negro postal employe by filing a complaint with the Postmaster and United States Attorney accusing him of violating Federal Civil Service regulations in aiding Negro vote registrants. 2-1-46

The complaints, signed by Board Chairman J. Milton Schnell, said that J. L. LeFlore, who also is executive secretary of the Mobile branch of the citizens committee, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, had engaged in "unusual political activity."

Schnell said yesterday LeFlore "has persistently insisted upon entering the Board of Registrars' office for the purpose of coaching other Negroes who were being examined by board members as to their fitness to become registered voters."

He reported that the Mobile branch of the NAACP had filed a complaint with the Department of Justice that the Board of Registrars was discriminating against Negro vote registrants. 2-1-46

The Board has reported a big pickup in the number of Negro vote registrants since the Alabama Democratic Executive Committee opened its primary elections to qualified Negro voters last month.

Ala. Bias and Ruin Policy Set in N.Y. By Steel Trust

Daily Worker

New York

By ROBERT MINOR

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Feb. 12.—The wage differential between North and South is a major policy enforced by the steel mills and their captive coal mines. And for 39 years these policies have been determined, not in Alabama, but in the offices of the Steel Trust in New York.

In 1907 practically the whole of the steel and coal industry of Alabama passed into the hands of U.S. Steel. It was during the "Bankers' Panic of 1907" in Theodore Roosevelt's second administration. J. P. Morgan, head of the United States Steel Corporation, was given permission by Theodore Roosevelt to "end the panic" by absorbing its last formidable rival—the Tennessee Coal & Iron Co. 2-13-46

PRESS ECHOES TRUSTS

By some strange coincidence, ever since then the press of Alabama has tended more and more to forget the old struggle against the trusts of the time when Alabama went wild for William J. Bryan, and to support every single policy wanted by the United States Steel Corporation.

The corruption of Alabama journalism is evidenced, in one kind, by an Alabama weekly in a recent editorial, entitled Our Stand on Politics (quoted in the Washington Post, Jan. 25). The Alabama weekly said:

"We are of the belief that when a candidate pays his announcement fees to this newspaper and advertises in its columns, he is our client and it would be an injustice to him to accept his money on one hand and then fight him on the other."

The Steel Trust is the main source of loose cash in Alabama politics. It rules, and the candidates that buy their way to office have a way of voting for what the Steel Trust has decided is policy. Unfair employment practices are one of the main sources of the huge profit that is sucked out of Alabama to Wall Street banks. 2-13-46

Powerful corporations know how to rule even where the people are allowed to vote. But it is easier when 86 out of every 100 potential voters can be kept from voting, as they are in Alabama. The greatest uneasiness arises out of the fact that all returning Alabama veterans legally have the right to vote without paying the polltax.

THREATEN VETERANS

Most of these have never voted before, are greater in number than the total of voters in the last election. The main struggle to prevent the returned veterans from voting, and most particularly the Negro veterans.

One of the little Birmingham papers toadying to the Steel Trust, a weekly called Radio News publishes open threats to murder Negro veterans if they demand the right to vote. The editor of the paper, Hugh Dubrose, wrote last week:

"Negroes marching on Jefferson County Courthouse in a 'we'll register or else' attitude. It's bad business . . . dangerous business, especially for Negroes who participate in such demonstrations.

"The best proof that I have to offer is that our Committee of Public Information comes up with the report that within a few hours of the Negro march on the courthouse, plans were under way to organize, or reorganize, the Ku Klux Klan.

"My judgment is that if the Negro of the South wants to live and do well it would be wise to keep out of politics and refrain from any semblance of demand for what the agitators call social equality.'" 2-13-46

But the smaller and less "respectable" papers that makes these open and crude threats of murder are the least important. Far more efficient is the service the trust-bred reaction gets from the three daily newspapers of Birmingham. There is a division of labor between them.

Ala. Vote Test Stumps Both Races

MOBILE, Ala. — (SNS) — Alabama's stiff registration laws were clearly demonstrated here Monday when more than 30 Negroes went before the Mobile County Board of Registrars seeking to qualify as voters. Chairman Milton Schnell described the number seeking to register as "unusually large."

Schnell said the applicants were given a written examination testing their ability to read and understand the United States Constitution. The tests require about one hour and a half, it was stated.

According to the board chairman, both Negroes and whites who had little educational background were given the tests.

1-22-46

Schnell cited Alabama registration requirements that the voting applicant be able to read and understand any section of the Federal Constitution, that he reside in the county one year and in he state two years and in the ward three months; that he be 21 years old and own real or personal property valued at $300.

Hannegan Asked to Act in Ala. P.O. Case

Washington, D.C. Sat 2-23

WASHINGTON

Thurgood Marshall, NAACP attorney, has requested Postmaster General Robert E. Hannegan to dismiss charges against St. John L. LeFlore, postal employe and NAACP secretary in Mobile, Ala., who is under fire because he directed colored people how to register and vote.

The NAACP told Hannegan that the charges constitute "spite action" in an effort to "intimidate an American citizen in the exercise of his citizenship rights." LeFlore challenged policies of the registrar Milton Schnell which the NAACP has protested.

Negro Files Discrimination Charge Against Mobile Board

admitted

MOBILE, ALA., Jan. 31.—(AP)—An official of the Mobile branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said tonight the Mobile group had filed a complaint with the Department of Justice that the Mobile County Board of Registrars was discriminating against Negro vote registrants.

J. L. Leflore, Negro postal employe and executive secretary of the Mobile branch of the citizen committee of the NAACP, declared, "our organization has called the attention of the Federal authorities to the dilatory tactics of the Mobile County Board of Registrars" in examining Negro registrants. 2-1-46

He made the statement after Milton Schnell, chairman of the Mobile County Board of Registrars, announced he was protesting to Postmaster William B. Taylor against alleged political activity by Leflore in connection with registering of Negro voters.

"Leflore has persistently insisted upon entering the Board of Registrars office for the purpose of coaching other Negroes who were being examined by board members as to their fitness to become registered voters," Schnell said. 2-1-46

Schnell denied that there was any discrimination against Negroes and said that written examinations to test ability to read and understand the United States Constitution were given uneducated whites as well as Negroes.

The board chairman said that since the Alabama Democratic executive committee opened its primary elections to qualified Negro voters last month, a record number of Negroes had sought to register. He estimated that "about 500" Negroes, most of them returning servicemen and school teachers, had sought to qualify during the present registration period, ending tomorrow.

"I have appeared before the Board of Registrars as a voucher and witness for several colored persons whom I have known for a long time," Leflore said. "I deny that I have violated the Hatch Act for Federal Civil Service rules in any manner."

If these executive committeemen had said something about getting rid of, or even modifying, the poll tax, if they had shown some awareness of the extent to which our state and county affairs are determined by a minority of potential voters, they could respect the law, be invited to vote, while, very realistically, have been forgiven for following Mr. McCorvey as bellwether. But one looks and listens in vain for independent or creative thinking. And that is the way things stand throughout the state. Instead of seeking valid qualifications to be honestly administered, Alabama politicians persist in taking the line of prejudice, barring more white citizens than colored from the electorate, and, by implication, challenging the federal government to clean up the mess we have made.

Negro Charges Bias in Ala. Vote Test

Sat 2-16-46

The Mobile (Ala.) County Board of Registrars has filed a complaint against J. L. LeFlore, U.S. postal worker and executive secretary of the citizens' committee of the Mobile branch, NAACP, alleging that he has violated federal Civil Service regulations.

Specifically, Mr. LeFlore is accused of "unusual political activity" as a result of his attempts as an NAACP official to encourage and aid colored citizens seeking to register as voters.

Some time ago Mr. LeFlore had filed with the U.S. Justice Department a complaint charging that the Mobile board was discriminating against colored registrants. The board's action thus constitutes a cross-complaint, which never would have been filed had the board not been called on the carpet.

This is pretty petty stuff, even for Alabama. The Mobile board is evading the direct issue and attempting to cloud it through persecution of Mr. LeFlore. No less a voice than the Montgomery Advertiser has deplored the action of the board calling attention to the fact that this is no time to soft-pedal the fact that, as a result of court decisions and education, the South is experiencing a social evolution.

Ala. Bias and Ruin Policy Set in N.Y. By Steel Trust

Daily Worker

By ROBERT MINOR

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Feb. 12.—The wage differential between North and South is a major policy enforced by the steel mills and their captive coal mines. And for 39 years these policies have been determined, not in Alabama, but in the offices of the Steel Trust in New York.

In 1907 practically the whole of the steel and coal industry of Alabama passed into the hands of U.S. Steel. It was during the "Bankers' Panic of 1907" in Theodore Roosevelt's second administration. J. P. Morgan, head of the United States Steel Corporation, was given permission by Theodore Roosevelt to "end the panic" by absorbing its last formidable rival—the Tennessee Coal & Iron Co. 2-13-46

By some strange coincidence, ever since then the press of Alabama has tended more and more to forget the old struggle against the trusts of the time when Alabama went wild for William J. Bryan, and to support every single policy wanted by the United States Steel Corporation.

The corruption of Alabama journalism is evidenced, in one kind, by an Alabama weekly in a recent editorial, entitled Our Stand on Politics (quoted in the Washington Post, Jan. 25). The Alabama weekly said:

"We are of the belief that when a candidate pays his announcement fees to this newspaper and advertises in its columns, he is our client and it would be an injustice to him to accept his money on one hand and then fight him on the other."

The Steel Trust is the main source of loose cash in Alabama politics. It rules, and the candidates that buy their way to office have a way of voting for what the Steel Trust has decided is policy. Unfair employment practices are one of the main sources of the huge profit that is sucked out of Alabama to Wall Street banks. 2-13-46

Powerful corporations know how to rule even where the people are allowed to vote. But it is easier when 86 out of every 100 potential voters can be kept from voting, as they are in Alabama. The greatest uneasiness arises out of the fact that all returning Alabama veterans legally have the right to vote without paying the polltax.

THREATEN VETERANS

Most of these have never voted before, are greater in number than the total of voters in the last election. The main struggle to prevent the returned veterans from voting, and most particularly the Negro veterans.

One of the little Birmingham papers toadying to the Steel Trust, a weekly called Radio News publishes open threats to murder Negro veterans if they demand the right to vote. The editor of the paper, Hugh Dubrose, wrote last week:

"Negroes marching on Jefferson County Courthouse in a 'we'll register or else' attitude. It's bad business . . . dangerous business, especially for Negroes who participate in such demonstrations.

"The best proof that I have to offer is that our Committee of Public Information comes up with the report that within a few hours of the Negro march on the courthouse, plans were under way to organize, or reorganize, the Ku Klux Klan.

"My judgment is that if the Negro of the South wants to live and do well it would be wise to keep out of politics and refrain from any semblance of demand for what the agitators call social equality.'" 2-13-46

But the smaller and less "respectable" papers that makes these open and crude threats of murder are the least important. Far more efficient is the service the trust-bred reaction gets from the three daily newspapers of Birmingham. There is a division of labor between them.

Ala. Vote Test Stumps Both Races

MOBILE, Ala. — (SNS) — Alabama's stiff registration laws were clearly demonstrated here Monday when more than 30 Negroes went before the Mobile County Board of Registrars seeking to qualify as voters. Chairman Milton Schnell described the number seeking to register as "unusually large."

Schnell said the applicants were given a written examination testing their ability to read and understand the United States Constitution. The tests require about one hour and a half, it was stated.

According to the board chairman, both Negroes and whites who had little educational background were given the tests.

1-22-46

Schnell cited Alabama registration requirements that the voting applicant be able to read and understand any section of the Federal Constitution, that he reside in the county one year and in he state two years and in the ward three months; that he be 21 years old and own real or personal property valued at $300.

Hannegan Asked to Act in Ala. P.O. Case

Baltimore, Md. Sat 2-23

WASHINGTON

Thurgood Marshall, NAACP attorney, has requested Postmaster General Robert E. Hannegan to dismiss charges against St. John L. LeFlore, postal employe and NAACP secretary in Mobile, Ala. who is under fire because he directed colored people how to register and vote.

The NAACP told Hannegan that the charges constitute "spite action" in an effort to "intimidate an American citizen in the exercise of his citizenship rights." LeFlore challenged policies of the registrar Milton Schnell which the NAACP has protested.

Negro Files Discrimination Charge Against Mobile Board

Montgomery, Ala.

MOBILE, ALA., Jan. 31.—(AP)—An official of the Mobile branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said tonight the Mobile group had filed a complaint with the Department of Justice that the Mobile County Board of Registrars was discriminating against Negro vote registrants.

J. L. Leflore, Negro postal employe and executive secretary of the Mobile branch of the citizen committee of the NAACP, declared, "our organization has called the attention of the Federal authorities to the dilatory tactics of the Mobile County Board of Registrars" in examining Negro registrants. 2-1-46

He made the statement after Milton Schnell, chairman of the Mobile County Board of Registrars, announced he was protesting to Postmaster William B. Taylor against alleged political activity by Leflore in connection with registering of Negro voters.

"Leflore has persistently insisted upon entering the Board of Registrars office for the purpose of coaching other Negroes who were being examined by board members as to their fitness to become registered voters," Schnell said. 2-1-46

Schnell denied that there was any discrimination against Negroes and said that written examinations to test ability to read and understand the United States Constitution were given uneducated whites as well as Negroes.

The board chairman said that since the Alabama Democratic executive committee opened its primary elections to qualified Negro voters last month, a record number of Negroes had sought to register. He estimated that "about 500" Negroes, most of them returning servicemen and school teachers, had sought to qualify during the present registration period, ending tomorrow.

"I have appeared before the Board of Registrars as a voucher and witness for several colored persons whom I have known for a long time," Leflore said. "I deny that I have violated the Hatch Act for Federal Civil Service rules in any manner."

FUTILE DODGING

The Mobile (Ala.) County Board of Registrars has filed a complaint against J. L. LeFlore, U.S. postal worker and executive secretary of the citizens' committee of the Mobile branch, NAACP, alleging that he has violated federal Civil Service regulations.

Specifically, Mr. LeFlore is accused of "unusual political activity" as a result of his attempts as an NAACP official to encourage and aid colored citizens seeking to register as voters. Sat 2-16-46

Some time ago Mr. LeFlore had filed with the U.S. Justice Department a complaint charging that the Mobile board was discriminating against colored registrants. The board's action thus constitutes a cross-complaint, which never would have been filed had the board not been called on the carpet.

This is pretty petty stuff, even for Alabama. The Mobile board is evading the direct issue and attempting to cloud it through persecution of Mr. LeFlore. No less a voice than the Montgomery Advertiser has deplored the action of the board, calling attention to the fact that this is no time to soft-pedal the fact that, as a result of court decisions and education, the South is experiencing a social evolution.

Jefferson County Democratic executive committee had approved the Gessner McCorvey plan, and the McCorvey plan? To prevent the McCorvey primary system while giving the proceeding a U. S. Supreme Court trying out the constitutional requirements to race, color and previous servitude. What is the Boswell amendment? To enlarge the authority of registrars to the point of making them monarchs of all they survey, with words, very high-minded, law by inviting everybody to vote, while very realistically, that qualification comes harder than other words, you provide a new law for the old Biblical injunction: "Thy left hand politics, let not thy right hand doing."

This is traditional Black Belt doctrine, and McCorvey is its prophet. From representatives of a community like ours, one might have expected some hint of a more progressive philosophy. But that was not to be had. Everything else goes by the board when "white supremacy" is being sought. And the worst of it is that the dodge recommended by Mr. McCorvey will not stand up in the long run. Instead of facing up to the issue boldly and broadly, we keep on running from stump to stump, inviting the disposition of the constitutional requirement, which is inevitable in the course of time.

If these executive committeemen had said something about getting rid of, or even modifying, the poll tax, if they had shown some awareness of the extent to which our state and county affairs are determined by a minority of potential voters, they could have been forgiven for following Mr. McCorvey as bellwether. Defeated Drys Blame Unexpected Race Vote

Pittsburgh Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.

Writer in White Church Paper Yells "Fast-and-Black Maneuver" as Negroes Flood Polls in Alabama County

Sat. 5-11-46

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—The Negro vote, balance of power in two important elections held recently in Georgia, has been credited with deciding the Colbert County (Ala.) special liquor election. The Wets won by a majority of 336 votes. Drys polled 2,540 and the Wets counted 2,876.

Results of the election caused considerable comment. Most noise was made by a white church paper, the Alabama Christian. Behind the big noise was W. Earl Hotalen, executive secretary of the Alabama Temperance Alliance. In his vicious article, he says:

BIRMINGHAM — (ANP)—Letters of protest, showing inaccuracy of material as well as inflammatory racial content of the recent Alabama Christian Advocate article, "Negro 'Balance-of-Power' Vote Wins Wet Majority," by W. Earl Hotalen, were received here last week by editors of the paper and the Alabama Temperance alliance.

"For the first time since Reconstruction days, Carpet-bagger and scalawag politics have been revived and white men have raised an army of Negro voters to decide an issue at the ballot box . . . white men have regimented Negroes together and marched them to the polls to capture an election result they wanted when they knew they could not win that result with white men's votes.

LOOKED ON HELPLESSLY

"The Negroes of Colbert County are concentrated mostly in Sheffield where, for many years their total vote has been about 200 . . . Wet campaign workers hauled Negro war veterans into Tuscumbia, herded them into the courthouse and registered them for the next day's voting. As discharged soldiers, they were exempt from payment of poll tax, of course.

"On election day, Drys looked on helplessly while these same Negro GIs were transported to Sheffield's voting places in groups of four or five . . . In this way the Wets piled up a total of 1,131 votes in Sheffield's six boxes. Drys polled only 491 votes in the same boxes. Sat. 5-11-46

DRYS WON IN 1942

"It is estimated by careful calculation that if these Negro veterans had not registered in the last hours of the campaign . . . the Drys would have carried Colbert County again by a margin of approximately 450 votes, as compared with the dry majority of eighty-six votes in 1942.

"Drys were completely taken by surprise when the Wets hauled in their huge Negro vote at Sheffield. Such a thing had not been done in Alabama, or anywhere in the South, since the Reconstruction days following the Civil War. Drys just could not believe that whites would do such a thing."

QUITE ALARMED

The writer is somewhat alarmed and warned his readers: "One thing seems sure: There is more than just the liquor question involved in what happened at Sheffield. White citizens all over Alabama must now face the actual appearance of Negro determination of election issues."

It was a "fast-and-black maneuver" in the words of the writer.

Signing off, he wrote: "Perhaps God has allowed this thing to happen in Colbert County in order to wake up the white people all over Alabama." Sat. 5-11-46

REPUBLICAN VOTING IN ALABAMA

To the Editor of The Age-Herald: Age-Herald

In 1920 Mr. Harding polled 74,690 votes for president in Alabama, and since then the state's population has steadily increased and women now participate in the elections.

In the presidential elections for 20 years preceding 1936 the Republicans polled an average of 27.13 per cent of the total democratic and Republican vote in Alabama; and excluding 1928, when 47,000 Alabama Democrats voted for Mr. Hoover, this average would be 21.77 per cent. 5-27-46-Mon.

Hence it is reasonable to assume that there are now more than 70,000 Republican voters in Alabama. Birmingham Age-Herald

The reason the Republican candidates now poll about 30,000 or 40,000 votes in presidential elections in Alabama is because most Republicans now participate in the democratic primaries and abstain from voting in the general elections. Birmingham, Ala.

This general participation of Republicans in democratic primaries commenced in 1934, when a circular letter signed, "Central Republican Committee," was sent out to leading Republicans throughout the state, advising them to participate in the democratic primaries that year, and to vote for Col. Graves. B'ham, Ala.

The response to this call is evidenced by the fact that the vote in the primary that year increased from 196,708 in 1930, to 305,178 in 1934; and the Republicans have generally participated in the democratic primaries ever since—usually with a slate in some races, thus giving them the balance of power in the democratic primaries in Alabama.

It has been estimated that Mr. Dixon received nearly 85 per cent of this vote in 1938. In 1942 Mr. Sparks' majority was so large that the Republican participation was not a decisive factor.

Alabama

Republicans now also hold the balance of power in the democratic primaries in a number of counties, including Jefferson, which with half a million population, now has upwards of 10,000 Republican voters.

President Roosevelt declared that the participation of Republicans in democratic primaries was "politically immoral," but in Alabama it is more than that—under the Alabama election laws it is a clear violation of the law for anyone but a Democrat to vote in a democratic primary. 5-27-46

Primaries are party elections in which members of the party holding the primary select their party's candidates for the general election, and when the voters of other parties participates in the democratic primaries, such primaries cease to be primaries or democratic; and such illegal participation of the Republicans not only defeats the sole purpose of the holding of the primary, but it penalizes the loyal democratic candidates and rewards the self-serving democratic candidates who collaborate with the political enemy.

These lawless and fraudulent conditions can be best remedied by a law providing for the registration of party affiliations, such as is now in effect in most other states.

Under such a law a voter is not required to register his party affiliation or membership, but unless he is registered as a member of the party holding the primary, his name is not included in the list of voters for such primary and he cannot vote therein.

Not only do the rank and file of Democrats overwhelmingly favor such a law, but many Republican leaders, realizing the demoralizing effect of the present conditions on their own party, favor such a law as indispensable to an honest two-party system in Alabama. Birmingham Age-Herald

In 1938 a party registration bill, offered by Sen. Weatherford of Franklin County, was favorably reported by a Senate committee but, needing some amendments, it was allowed to die on the Senate calendar. Birmingham, Ala.

There has never been any open opposition to such a law, but the elected party leaders have by inaction and silent consent long failed in their duty to the democratic party, and the democratic rank and file, to seek the enactment of such greatly needed legislation, and thereby to restore the integrity of the democratic primaries in Alabama.

If the ballot box is the cornerstone of liberty, it is hypocrisy to talk of the sanctity of the ballot box, and supremacy of the law, while 40,000 Republican votes are permitted to be openly, notoriously and unlawfully cast in the democratic primaries in Alabama.

A law to provide for the registration of party affiliations would remedy such conditions and greatly help to protect the votes of the democratic voters of Alabama; and it would promote respect for the election laws and a return to fair and lawful primary elections in this state.

The next governor of Alabama will have an opportunity to secure the enactment of such a law and also to appoint the registrars of voters.

Mobilians Back Reactionary; May Force Runoff In Alabama

Daily World Atlanta, Ga.

Sat. 8-10-46

By JOHN L. LE FLORE

MOBILE, Ala.—(ANP) — The blind loyalty of Mobile Negro voters to the causes of a reactionary may force a run-off in Alabama for the Senate seat of the late John H. Bankhead.

In last Tuesday's special Democratic senatorial primary, 45-year old Rep. John J. Sparkman, of Huntsville, led a field of five candidates for the vacancy caused by the death of Sen. Bankhead several months ago. He has apparently won the nomination, according to an unofficial tally of votes from throughout the state.

However, the issue must be settled by the State Democratic Executive committee on August 8. That body will officially canvass the vote Thursday to determine if a run-off between Sparkman and State Sen. James A. Simpson, who ran second in the contest, will be necessary. Sparkman, Democratic whip, had the support of organized labor and other progressive groups in the state. The CIO-PAC, the AFL United Mine Workers, the AFL executive committee, and the Southern Conference for Human Welfare endorsed his candidacy. The Birmingham NAACP urged Negro voters to support labor's choice in the primary.

In Mobile, A. S. Crishon, chairman of the local NAACP's Citizens' committee, charged that Negro voters in this city added to the muddling of the contest "by giving a reactionary the bulk of their votes. Someone or some group is definitely responsible for the blind support Negro voters here continue to give to candidates who do not represent the best interests of the Negro citizens," he said.

NEGRO VETERANS of Birmingham and Jefferson County last week made an appeal to the public for fairer consideration of their rights to vote. 6-23-46

The appeal was issued in the form of advertising in local daily and Negro weekly newspapers, which was sponsored by the United Registration Committee, composed of the local N. A. A. C. P., Progressive Democratic Council, United Negro and Allied Veterans of America, Southern Negro Youth Congress, Southern Conference for Human Welfare, Citizens Veterans' Committee, Birmingham Business League and civil liberties department of the Elks. NAZI TACTICS

To the Editor of The News: News

Horace Wilkinson's belief that by any means whatsoever we must forever keep the Negro from voting and having a rightful share in government is not good sense. When he says the ignorant should not be permitted to vote, that is good sense. Sen. Bilbo, on his platform of race hatred, is kept in office by unthinking white voters. Sues.

If your wish is for wise-thinking voters, have a specified course of study for any youth before admission to a written examination, passing of which gives voting rights. That is perfectly legal and constitutional; also a good thing.

According to Horace Wilkinson, the one aim and objective of the colored man is social equality and intermarriage. Go North, Horace Wilkinson, to find out that any law man may make does not change the physical antagonisms existing between the races. White persons, unless compelled to do so, do not care for social equality or intermarriage. The few instances are rare indeed even in the North.

When the colored man rightly feels that no matter what his educational and other qualities, personal rights and freedoms come not from the federal constitution, but as a gift from his white neighbors, then you are always going to have trouble. Taxation without representation is wrong whether for white or colored. Birmingham, Ala

A real educated colored man, like a real educated white man, is a reasonable person to talk to. When our public schools turn out more of each, then we will have less race trouble. Joe Louis is admired by all, white or colored. 9-10-46

The half-educated of self-seekers of both races, Horace Wilkinson, make 90 per cent of our race troubles. Using Nazi tactics will not settle our very real race problems. More real education and common sense will.

Tell It To Old Grandma

WORTHY NEGRO CITIZENS

Editor, The Advertiser The Advertiser

Our great State has produced sons of both races who have honored the State by notable achievements. I wish to call attention to a few native sons of the Negro race who have thus contributed. Their contributions have been in the fields of religion, education, medicine, science, music, law, politics, and athletics.

The late Dr. L. K. Williams, vice-president of the World's Christian Alliance; Dr. T. K. Lawless, dermatologist, a graduate of the University of Paris and internationally known; Dr. Percy L. Julian, a Montgomery boy and recently referred to in Reader's Digest; W. C. Handy of "St. Louis Blues" fame; William L. Dawson, of the famed Tuskegee Choirs; Oscar DePriest and Arthur W. Mitchell, congressmen from the First Illinois district; Judge Miles Paige, Montgomery, and now of New York; Joe Louis, Jesse Owens, and Dave Albritton, world famous in boxing, running and high jumping. We might also mention the adopted sons of our beloved State, viz: Booker T. Washington and George W. Carver. There are many others too numerous to mention here. Montgomery, Ala. Tues 10-8-46

We are thinking that if the learned and Honorable Attorney Wilkinson, of Birmingham, had his way none of these persons could qualify as citizens of Alabama, although this State is the place of their birth, and they have brought honor and distinction to the State. Sad but it seems true, this gentleman, whom the Constitution of the United States guarantees the right of freedom of speech which enables him to vilify and denounce a whole people, would deny such citizens as we have named the right to vote and sustain that constitution. And this after thousands of years of Christian civilization. It's very alarming to say the least. However, we do thank God for men who speak out for right and justice.

U. S. Judge To Hear Negro Voting Case

The News Birmingham, Ala.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 15—(AP)—A suit by a Negro who charged the Macon County Board of Registrars refused to registed him to vote because of his race, is scheduled for rehearing in U. S. District Court here in the near future.

Federal Judge C. B. Kennamer, who dismissed the action originally on grounds that the Negro, William P. Mitchell, had not exhausted his rights in the state courts, said he would set a new hearing "before long." Tues. 10-15-46

The U. S. Supreme Court refused yesterday to review the case, thus sustaining a ruling by the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans which remanded it to Judge Kennamer.

Mitchell filed suit against two members of the Macon board on the contention the board refused to register him "solely because of race or color." He asked $5,000 damages, a permanent injunction against the voting officials, and a declaratory judgment against what he termed the "policy, custom or usage" in refusing to register members of his race.

Negro Vets Denied Voting Privileges Fail In First Appeal Effort

Twenty-one Negro veterans denied voting privileges by the Jefferson County Board of Registrars in the recent primaries today had lost the first round in their fight to bring an appeal before a Circuit Court jury.

Circuit Court Judge Whit Windham in a ruling this morning sustained the state's demurrer which contended the petition was not in proper and legal form. The plaintiff sought to have the qualifications issue decided by a jury.

The veterans had been denied the voting privilege on the grounds that they did not possess the necessary elector's qualifications.

Following the board's ruling Atty. Arthur Shores, representing the veterans, filed an appeal to a Circuit Court, but the state intervened with the demurrer contending that the plaintiff's suit was insufficient.

THE CASE OPENED yesterday and was continued today following Judge Windham's ruling, with the plaintiff's attorney arguing grounds for an amendment and rehearing on the original suit.

Following a brief hearing on further motions Judge Windham declined to take further action at this time and Atty. Shores declined to commend and filed notice of an appeal to the Supreme Court.

The state is being represented by Assistant Solicitor Willard McCall.

Meanwhile, a suit for $5,000 damages filed by Atty. Shores in behalf of another litigant was headed for a Federal Court trial following Judge Clarence Mullins' dismissal of the state's motion to dismiss. This particular case also resulted from the Board of Registrars' denial of voting privileges to another Negro. The trial date is pending.

Gov. Sparks Calls On Vines To Reconsider His Resignation

The News Birmingham, Ala.
Sun. 10-20-46

MONTGOMERY, Aal., Oct. 19—(AP)—In an interest of "continued and orderly administration" of Alabama laws, Gov. Chauncey Sparks today requested Dr. J. B. Vines, of Birmingham, chairman of the Jefferson County Board of Registrars, to reconsider his resignation.

The Jefferson County official yesterday announced he had resigned because the board's work had become "a football for the organizations that seek to use the colored people for selfish reasons."

Gov. Sparks indicated he was returning the resignation along with a request that Vines withdraw it.

"We are having, and have had, difficulty in filling the office of registrars in some counties in Alabama," the governor wrote, "and personally I should regret to lose the services of one whose experience and character insure the fair and just administration of our registration laws."

THE LETTER CONTINUED: "I agree with you, we need to strengthen our registration laws and to give the registrars judicial authority. If we have lost faith in mankind, then we have no right to continue faith in democracy. Democracy is the government of the people, and if we say they haven't the integrity to administer their laws, we have lost faith.

"An orderly adjustment of our racial relations is absolutely necessary. It may be we have been negligent in the past in not extending gradual franchise to qualified Negroes. It is too late to right this wrong by mass registration which our present laws will permit.

"I may ask that you withdraw your resignation in the interest of continued and orderly administration of our law for your action might be contagious and cause resignations throughout the state."

IN CONCLUSION Gov. Sparks expressed hope that voters will ratify Constitutional Amendment No. 4 (the Boswell Amendment) next month so the Legislature can provide "rules, regulations and interpretations of a judicial nature to relieve registrars of a present embarrassing and hazardous situation."

A $50,000 damage suit is now pending in federal court against two former members of the Macon County Board of Registrars. It was filed by a Tuskegee Institute Negro professor who charged in his complaint that the registrars refused to register him "solely because of his race."

The case was appealed to the U. S. Supreme Court which recently ordered the Federal District Court in Montgomery to reopen it.

All members of the Macon County Board of Registrars resigned several months ago.

Boards Of Registrars

The News Birmingham, Ala.

Undoubtedly the responsibilities confronted by Boards of Registrars in these troubled days of controversy are very complex and burdensome. It is not difficult to understand something of how Dr. J. B. Vines, chairman of the Board of Registrars of Jefferson County, feels in submitting his resignation to the governor.

The problems and pressures facing such officials are numerous and heavy. Dr. Vines charges that "the work of the Board of Registrars has become a football for the organizations that seek to use the colored people for selfish reasons." He says $5,000 suits are pending in the Federal Court against each member of the board and that a large number of other suits are pending. He says that the board is "continually being harassed in the press by letters that are in my opinion libelous" and that "other libelous items have been placed in certain newspapers that have tended to inflame the minds of large groups of colored people against constituted authorities and to mislead other citizens who do not know the real facts." Sat. 10-19-46

Dr. Vines says he knows of no solution that can be given under the present law and that to his mind "the only solution" is to give the board "the same standing as a court or judicial body."

This paper is not disposed to question that the board has been subjected to certain excesses of the kind mentioned by Dr. Vines. But whatever excesses have occurred, the fact remains that under the best conceivable conditions boards of registrars in Jefferson and other Alabama counties would have to deal with many hard and trying questions.

The whole problem of registration standards is difficult and involved.

Surely most Alabamians agree that reasonably qualified citizens should be registered.

Surely no solution is to be found in arbitrary denial of any applicants on grounds not in keeping with the constitution of the United States.

This paper sees only an aggravation of the problem in any such program as that contemplated by proponents of the Boswell amendment.

Such broad and loose authority would not make for less, but more, of the kind of difficulties mentioned by Dr. Vines.

The suggestion of Dr. Vines that boards be given the standing of a court or judicial body is worthy of thorough consideration. Having such a standing they might be in much better position to withstand unjustifiable harassment. Likewise, as such, they might have the advantages of more clearly definite and uniform standards and processes respecting registration and this might well give greater satisfaction all around.

As it is, the boards have wide authority, but practices and standards and conceptions vary widely in this field. The result is much of confusion and conflict. If the authority of the boards were implemented with more precise stipulations with respect both to qualifications and procedure and if a way could be established assuring uniformity of application of these procedures, a definite advance might be made.

Certainly the present situation is unsatisfactory from various standpoints.

Certainly mere repression is not the solution.

A just and creative dealing with the situation offers the highest promise and should be sought.

Two Errors For Poole

Joe Poole, Alabama commissioner of agriculture and industries, made at least two errors in his statement announcing support for the Boswell amendment. One is an error of fact. The other was the error of using a department, tax-financed publication for making his statement.

If the Boswell amendment fails, say Mr. Poole, according to an Associated Press dispatch, boards of registrars will be compelled by a United States Supreme Court decision to register "practically everyone who applies." The Supreme Court decision to which Mr. Poole presumably refers says nothing about registration. It merely says that Negroes shall not be denied the effective use of the ballot through being barred from primary elections. The decision was not aimed at registration and does not affect registration. It was concerned only with voting.

The Supreme Court ruled, in effect, that Negroes could not be barred by their color from voting in Democratic primaries. The purpose of the Boswell amendment goes farther than that; it would provide the means by which Negroes (and anybody else) could be kept from registration for voting in any election. It is true that the Supreme Court ruling has helped to stimulate Negro registration by encouraging Negroes to hope for a larger voice in choosing their public officials. But it in no wise affected registration laws, and attempts to make it appear that it did are misleading.

The other error lies in the use by Mr. Poole of Alabama Farmers, a publication of the Department of Agriculture and Industries, for presentation of his views on this issue. Alabama Farmers is supported by tax funds and its columns should not be used to promote opinions that are in widespread controversy. A highly controversial matter, over which there is division running up to the top levels of government, should not be given one-sided presentation in a publication paid for by the taxpayers.

The More It Changes New Republic

The State Democratic Executive Committee voted today to open party primaries in Alabama for the first time to qualified Negro voters. . . . The committee also endorsed an amendment requiring prospective voters to be able to "understand and explain" instead of merely to read parts of the federal Constitution.

White Registrars Seek Revenge on Postal Employee for Making Vote Denial Charges

Sat 2-23-46

MOBILE, Ala.—Colored citizens and liberal whites last week rallied to the defense of J. L. LeFlore, postal employee and militant civic worker, in his fight against charges of "unusual political activity" filed with U.S. postal officials by the Mobile County Board of Registrars.

J. L. LeFLORE,

In the meantime, Mobile's Postmaster, William B. Taylor, has referred to the Post Office Department in Washington a letter from Milton Schnell, white, chairman of the Board of Registrars, in which the accusation was made.

LeFlore, an official of the Alabama State and Mobile branch NAACP, was charged with violation of both the Hatch Act and the Civil Service Code, because he encouraged colored citizens to register as voters.

Schnell is said to have made the charges in retaliation for charges filed with the Department of Justice by LeFlore, as executive secretary of the Mobile NAACP, accusing the Board of discriminating against colored voters.

Sat 2-23-46

Alliance Backs LeFlore

Ashby B. Carter of Chicago, president of the National Alliance of Postal Employees, said that his organization stood wholeheartedly behind LeFlore, in a statement made at Memphis.

Carter, now on a southern tour, said that his organization would work relentlessly to "expose" the motives behind the "trumped-up" charges made against this "courageous and fearless leader."

Leslie Perry, NAACP administrative assistant in Washington, was scheduled to confer with Postal Department officials in the nation's capital this week.

The CIO Council, the Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance and Mobile citizens, in a mass meeting last week, pledged to stand behind LeFlore. Several white citizens in the audience offered to "provide moral and financial assistance if the case takes an unfair turn."

Dailies Censure Board

Two Alabama newspapers, the Montgomery Advertiser and the Birmingham News, have censured the Mobile County Board of Registrars in their editorial columns for the action taken against LeFlore.

Postmaster Taylor, in turning Schnell's letter over to the Post Office Department in Washington, requested that it make "whatever investigation it thinks proper." He also suggested that he be advised as to what procedure he should follow. 2-23-46

Observers assert that Taylor has not approved the militant action LeFlore has been taking against local registration officials.

LeFlore, who has made no statement for publication, is known to have been subjected to subtle pressure, ridiculous charges, and potential traps by persons in or out of the post office over a period of years.

500 Now Registered

Approximately 500 colored persons were registered in Mobile County during the three months the Board of Registrars held daily sessions. More than 400 of the number became voters in January.

A new interest in suffrage was manifested by colored citizens here after the State Democratic Executive Committee voted on Jan. 12 to permit colored electors to participate in party primaries. The action followed the Supreme Court decision in the Texas primary case.

Officials of the NAACP here asserted that perhaps 1500 or more colored residents would have registered as voters during the past three months if the board had not imposed discriminatory educational tests and used dilatory tactics in dealing with colored applicants.

Poll Racket In Land of Filibuster

By ROBERT MINOR

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Feb. 1.—In the Jefferson County courthouse last Wednesday forenoon, there were two lines of people waiting on the two sides of the door of the office for registration of voters. And here is the racket: 2-2-46

In one line, for whites only, were 86 people, of whom 15 were women. In the other line, "for colored," were 47 people, of whom five were women. In both lines the proportion of young war veterans appeared to be well above 25 percent. A large number wore discharge buttons, some were in full uniform with overseas insignia.

The people in the line on the left of the door, "for white," were being admitted rapidly, the Negroes very slowly.

Holding my watch, I saw that five white persons were being admitted in seven minutes, while Negroes were being admitted at the rate of one in about eight minutes. Sat.

At 10:47 two Negroes were admitted, and 4½ minutes later another Negro, while four white persons were admitted from the other side of the door. In the next 8½ minutes, seven white persons and no Negroes. 2-2-46

A young man in a checkered coat reached the head of the line on the Negro side of the door at 11 o'clock. He stood at the head of the line 27 minutes while 18 white persons were admitted ahead of him from the other line. The face of this very intelligent-looking young man was a study. He stood in military rigidity as he watched the first 12 or 14 white persons passing in to be registered. At first glance you would have thought his face was without expression; but study it and you could see he was boiling inside.

People at the tail end of the line of Negroes, seeing the white line moving up rapidly for nearly half an hour while their line moved not at all, came up front to ask why. They clustered around the door. The uniformed policeman told them they would have to go back to the end of the line. They moved about six inches. A man in shirtsleeves wearing a badge and pistol came out, looked around and went back into the registrars' office. 2-2-46

A clerk came quickly to the door and admitted six from the Negroes line. Then the small crowd that had come up from the rear moved back again to await their turn.

About 15 percent of the qualified Negroes are being registered, as far as can be judged at this stage, and about 85 percent of those entitled to vote and asking to be registered are being fraudulently rejected. It is crookeder than stuffing ballot-boxes.

But most of those entitled to vote under the so-called law of the state are in practical fact not allowed even the right to ask to be registered. Men and women who work must first of all take a day off, which they can't afford. Then they must come to the courthouse and those who are not veterans must pay a poll tax of $1.50 for one year or for each of several years that they haven's paid since their 21st birthday. Some would have to pay $36 in accumulated poll tax due from the ages of 21 to 45. One woman actually paid $30 poll tax to be able to vote for Roosevelt in 1944.

Then they spend the day standing in line. Some sit on the cold stone floor. They don't know whether they will get in at all that day, or, if they get in, whether they will be registred. They have to do without eating, and wait, without knowing when or how it will end.

When they get inside, if they get in, a white official asks them to read a section of the Constitution. Then to explain it. Some are asked to "repeat" the constitution—which not one of the registrars could do. And "what kind of a government have we got?" Or "what kind of judges?" No matter what the answer is, it is called wrong, the Negro is ordered out. The few exceptions are "token" registrations to make the general disfranchisement more easily accomplished.

Out of 1,614,654 Alabama citizens 21 years or more of age, only 222,338 voted in the general election in 1944—which is 14 percent. There are almost twice as many white people disfranchised as colored people. Of the nearly 1,400,000 Alabamans of voting age who didn't vote in 1944, about 900,000 are white and 500,000 colored.

Strangely enough, the smallness of the number of voters of the past may prove to be an Achilles heel for the gang that rules the state.

The number of young veterans returning to Alabama—and they are not required to pay the poll tax—is actually larger than the total number of persons who voted in the 1944 election. About a quarter of a million Alabama veterans are returning, and most of them have never voted before. Practically all of the Negro veterans have never voted—about 100,000 colored citizens of voting age, all able to read and write by U. S. Army standards, and free of the obligation to pay the polltax. 2-2-46

The monied interests—mainly the steel trust—are resorting to every fraud and intimidation to prevent the enrolment of these thousands of young men as voters—even publishing open threats of murder of Negro veterans who attempt to register. And since they think it is easier to fight Negroes because of the heritage of slavery, the center of gravity in the fight is shifted heavily to the struggle against the registration of Negro veterans. A little show of solidarity of white veterans with the colored veterans would go a long way. 2-2-46

The time for the payment of the polltax expires today. Non-veterans who did not pay cannot vote unless the polltax law is overthrown by a fight before election day.

But this does not apply to the quarter of a million veterans. Their fight for the right to be registeerd is just reaching its height. Among them by far the most active are the colored veterans, and I have never seen a finer lot of young leaders than they are producing.

NEGRO VOTERS Mobile Alabama News

To the Editor of The News:

I am a young voter and for the past several days I have been reading in magazines where Negroes of this state are not receiving fair treatment in becoming registered voters.

I have read under the Alabama law where a person may qualify to vote if he can either show that he holds a certain minimum amount of personal or real property or if he can read and write.

In one magazine I read where the Board of Registers is trying to discourage qualified Negroes in Mobile from becoming registered voters. I have also read where Negroes who went to the Board of Registers must spend hours, where his white fellow citizen stays only a few minutes. 2-3-46

In Birmingham, Capt. H. C. Terell, head of the veterans' voter registration committee of the Southern Negro Youth Congress, is trying to get as many as 15,000 Negroes, who have served time in the war, to pay poll tax, with the aid of his associates, although he knows that under the Alabama law veterans are not required to pay poll taxes.

As for my opinion, I think these poll should be opened to everyone, so that we all can live up to the laws and that this country can have a true democracy.

Talladega, Ala. WALTER L. PHILLIPS.

Alabama Democrats Take Action

Announcement has been made by the Alabama Democratic executive committee that it will, at its January 12 meeting, abolish the white primary, in effect since 1870.

Qualified Negro voters will vote in the state elections in May if they subscribe to the primary pledge to support the nominees. Thus Alabama announces it has abandoned efforts to "find a way out" of the supreme court decision which ruled that in state primaries, financed by the state, nominees of which have no opposition in the general elections, qualified Negroes may not be barred.

Alabama has, we think properly, submitted a constitutional amendment which will be voted on in the November election. It will tighten the registration laws and enable registrars to determine the literacy of prospective voters, white and colored. Georgia already has such a law which, if the state wished, could be strengthened by amendment. The Democratic Executive Committee of Georgia, facing a similar problem made more acute by a state ruling by a Georgia-born jurist, in addition to the supreme court decision, would do well to study the Alabama plan. There actually is no way to by-pass the supreme court decision, but strict interpretation of qualifications would prevent turning this, or any other state, over to undesirable, illiterate majorities.

Is This Constitutional?

The Mobile County Board of Registrars is giving written examinations on the United States Constitution to applicants for registration as voters. According to the board's chairman, Milton Schnell, the tests on ability to read "and understand" the constitution are being given uneducated white persons as well as Negroes.

The Alabama Constitution does not require any such test. Section 181 of the constitution sets up as a qualification for voters the ability to "read and write any article of the Constitution of the United States in the English language." Specifically exempt from this requirement are those unable to read or write solely because of physical reasons. There are also certain property qualifications for suffrage.

The present State Constitution says nothing about ability to "understand" the constitution as a prerequisite for voting. The nearest approach to any such provision is in Sec. 180 of the constitution where it is declared that, except for those specifically disqualified, the right to vote shall be given "all persons who are of good character and who understand the duties and obligations of citizenship under a republican form of government."

Do these sections of the Alabama Constitution give a board of registrars the right to demand that applicants for registration undergo a written examination on the Federal Constitution? Does ability to explain the constitution fall among the "duties and obligations of citizenship" in this country?

If that ability is required as a sine qua non of citizenship, then Alabama has no need of the so-called Boswell amendment which would limit the franchise to those "who can read and write, understand and explain any article of the Constitution of the United States in the English language." But if the present law does not demand ability to explain the constitution as a prerequisite to registration, then what right has a board of registrars to give written, or oral, examinations on the constitution?

The loose, and sometimes autocratic, attitude taken by some Alabama boards of registrars toward their duties is a repudiation of constitutional law. It often, as one might expect, leads to a denial of justice.

It begins to appear that a basic reason for the proposed Boswell amendment is to give the color of legality to something boards of registrars are already doing. Perhaps what we need more than any new law on the subject is a higher sense of duty on the part of registrars, more devotion to the principles of justice, and more fidelity to practices of impartiality and fairness.

Federal Court To Hear Case

Appeal from a Federal District judge's action in dismissing a suit charging the Macon County, Ala., board of registrars with refusing to register a Negro voting will be heard by the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals at New Orleans April 12.

Assistant Attorney General W. W. Callahan said yesterday he had been advised of the date.

Federal Judge G. B. Kennamer last Oct. 12 dismissed a suit by William P. Mitchell charging that the board of registrars denied him a registration "solely because of race of color." Judge Kennamer held that Mitchell had not exhausted his rights in state courts.

Defendants in the suit, which asked a declaratory judgment, a permanent injunction against the alleged discrimination, and $5,000 damages, were Mrs. George C. Wright and Virgil M. Guthrie, members of the board of registrars.

Ala. Registrar Ousts Negro Voters' Witness

By FRED ATWATER
(Defender Staff Correspondent)

MOBILE, Ala.—Despotic rule by the Mobile County Board of Registrars against Negro citizens continued unabated this week.

Latest victim of the board's fraudulent contrivance to bar Negroes from use of the ballot is Rev. E. T. Taylor, pastor and businessman.

Rev. Taylor, active in the Mobile NAACP's campaign to get Negroes registered as voters, was disqualified from further serving as a voucher or witness for suffrage applicants. Milton Schnell, white, chairman of the board, concocted the scheme to deprive the minister of the right to continue contributing his services in that capacity.

The Board of Registrars in Mobile County requires a qualified voter to personally appear with a would-be-registrant, and the two under oath fill out their respective parts of the qualifying form.

Negro Vets Register

Last Monday the board held the first meeting of its new semi-monthly sessions to register war veterans who hold poll tax exemption certificates.

Rev. Taylor was there with five Negro war veterans. Schnell is reported to have said, as he did about J. L. LaFlore: "Every time I look up this blankety blankety n - - - - - - r is here. He is getting in my hair!"

The minister looked on as Schnell put the colored war vets through the third degree with oral tests, including the reading of selected difficult sections of the Constitution. At the same time whites were permitted to register without any questioning whatever, as usual.

Assist With Illiterates

In a number of instances white persons who could not write had consent of the board to have their witnesses fill out the application forms for them. Members of the board are said to have obligingly rendered such service for illiterate whites.

Two of the war veterans accompanied by Rev. Taylor had their applications rejected by Schnell because they could not read well enough to suit him. Two were okayed as voters.

With the fifth applicant the board chairman asked Rev. Taylor: "Preacher, where does this boy live?" Thinking that the young man still resided at the address from which he was inducted, the clergyman unhesitatingly offered that street and number. It was revealed, however, that the vet's family had moved to a new address while he was in the Army.

Disqualify Taylor

Schnell eagerly seized the mistake as cause to disqualify the minister.

The Mobile County Board of Registrars has been charged with practicing racial discrimination in an effort to discourage and curb Negro voting. The Mobile NAACP recently filed such complaints with the Department of Justice and requested an immediate investigation.

Between 400 and 500 Negroes were registered as voters during the three-month daily sessions of the board. NAACP officials contend that unfair educational tests and dilatory tactics employed by the registrars against colored people prevented approximately one thousand or more others from obtaining the ballot.

Liaison Link Authorized For State Negro Vets

MONTGOMERY, Ala., July 2—(AP)—Employment of a liaison officer to work with the state's 85,000 Negro veterans has been authorized by the Veterans Affairs Board.

C. C. Norton, state service commissioner, says the new officer will travel throughout the state to acquaint Negro veterans of their rights and opportunities under the GI bill.

The board has also approved appointment of Walter C. Head, Jr., of Bessemer, as an assistant state service commissioner.

Negroes Lost First Round Of Vote Trial

A group of Negro war veterans denied the right to register in Jefferson County lost their first legal move toward a trial by jury.

Circuit Judge Whit Windham yesterday sustained a state demurrer contending their appeal for the trial by jury was not in proper legal form. The 21 Negroes carried their fight into court after being denied registration by the Jefferson County Board of Registrars.

Arthur Shores, attorney for the group, said he would appeal the judge's ruling direct to the State Supreme Court instead of amending his bill.

Terrell pointed out that the purpose of the movement was to increase the number of registered voters and to stimulate the interest of Negro veterans in Government.

Other local leaders who accompanied the veterans were E. O. McKaine, field representative of the Southern Negro Youth Congress; Malcolm C. Dobbs, Alabama secretary of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare; the Revs. J. L. Ware, pastor Trinity Baptist Church; John W. Goodgame, pastor Sixth Avenue Baptist Church and W. Wilson, Shiloh Baptist Church.

Since Alabama registration law merely requires ability to read or write, court action against the three-man registration board is expected following the ten-day registration drive of veterans. The demonstrations are being sponsored by the Veterans committee of the Southern Negro Youth Congress, of which Henry O. Mayfield is chairman.

Alabama Negroes Face Rigid Vote Requirements

Chicago Defender Sat 1-26-46

Chicago, Ill.

By JOHN Le FLORE
(Defender Staff Correspondent)

MOBILE, Ala. — The Mobile County Board of Registrars this week tightened their list of requirements to discourage Negro voters.

Alarmed over the possibility of an increase of about 200 Negro voters, Milton Schnell, board chairman, is said to have issued a distorted statement of requirements to the daily press. Meanwhile the board has been accused of invoking unorthodox tactics in receiving applicants, subjecting many of them to tests that board members themselves are not capable of passing.

Negroes Led By Elks

Negro registrants here have been led by Alex Herman, exalted ruler of the Gulf City Lodge No. 244 IBPOE, Order of Elks. The Elks have undertaken a campaign to have all of their 300 members registered and qualified voters.

National Association For The Advancement Of Colored People officials have also been diligent in encouraging Negroes to register.

Registrants Must Pay

In order to become a qualified voter under Alabama's cumulative poll tax system a registrant must pay all tax in arrears from the 21st to the 45th birthdays. The Department of Justice has been asked to investigate alleged unlawful practices imposed upon Negro vote applicants by the Mobile County Board of Registrars.

War veterans have made up about three-fourths of the persons registered to date. They are exempt from the state's poll tax which has squelched Negro voters in large numbers throughout the deep South. Sat 1-26-46

Applicants Tested

A petition to Atty. Gen. Tom C. Clark specifically charged that a number of Negro citizens of unquestionable character who applied to register were compelled to write, read and explain to the satisfaction of the Board of Registrars any section of the U. S. Constitution designated by its members.

"Failure to be able to do so," the statement added, "resulted in their being denied the right to the ballot.

"Alabama law requires that a person be able to read and write any section of the Constitution or own $300 worth of real or personal property," the attorney general added.

So far as is known no whites have been forced to take any kind of test regardless of illiteracy. It is believed however, that the board would insist upon a few being made to read and write a section of the Constitution if a Justice Department investigation loomed imminent.

Prosecute Man For Negro Aid

Daily Worker New York N.Y.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 1.—Veterans in the Southern Negro Youth Congress have condemned the persecution of J. L. LeFlore, of Mobile, Ala., for helping prospective Negro voters register for elections.

Henry O. Mayfield, spokesman for the Veterans Committee of the SNYC criticized the effort to prosecute LeFlore on a complaint by the Mobile Board of Registrars. LeFlore, who is executive secretary of the Citizens Committee of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People declared, "he had appeared before the Board as a voucher and witness for several colored persons whom he had known for a long time." Sat 3-2-46

Mayfield's statement said: "LeFlore was only doing his duty towards his felow men when he was trying to help them to register to vote. The Board of Registrars which is trying in every way to prevent Negroes from exercising the right to vote should be the ones to be investigated." Sat. 3.2.46

Mayfield added: "We Negro veterans are trying to become bona fide citizens by registering to vote, but we are turned down by the undemocratic Board of Registrars by the hundreds."

Mayfield announced that Negro veterans in Alabama will hold a statewide conference in Birmingham, Ala., on March 8-10.

Religion And Politics

Birmingham, Ala.

Our hat is off to the Rev. W. Glenn Bartee of the First Methodist Church of Sheffield for his fine letter to The Alabama Christian Advocate protesting against the charges made by W. Earl Hotalen concerning the recent Colbert County election on the liquor issue. Mr. Hotalen did not like the fact that the election had gone against his side. He undertook to interpret the event in The Advocate by saying that the wets won because of the Negro vote. age Herald

Mr. Bartee tells the story of what really happened in a way which demolishes the Hotalen myth. For it must be understood that this minister is not exulting. The election went against him too. But he believes in democracy, he believes in telling the truth and he cannot bring himself to be silent when an effort is launched to make an issue of a non-existent Negro issue. So he explains that, even if Negroes had not voted, the election would have gone as it did. Even though he doesn't like the result, he feels bound to declare, it "would not have been changed had no Negroes voted." That testimony from such a man, on the ground, is conclusive.

When he faces up to the wrong inherent in Mr. Hotalen's stirring up of race feeling the Sheffield minister takes a truly exalted position. "One thing is sure," he asserts, "we cannot hope to win on one moral issue at the expense of another, which is certainly no less vital. Sound reason and earnest persuasion, not belligerency and prejudice, are avenues to ultimate victory. In these anxious days, the church and its correlated agencies must hold high the spirit of fraternity and goodwill among men, else I shudder at what the future may bring." Sat 1-26-46

That is a noble statement, and deserves to be inscribed on the doorpost of every church and every home in Alabama. It is the true Christian principle, forgotten by too many. The church should be immune from the abuse to which exploiters would subject it. "The church and its correlated agencies" should not lend themselves to urging intolerance and hatred. If the church feels under a compulsion to intervene in politics for the sake of one moral issue, it should certainly forego doing so at the expense of another equally vital moral issue. That is the best of good doctrines. Alabamians should be grateful to Dr. Bartee for his timely and eloquent call for truth and consistency.

Largest Primary Vote In State's History Forecast

Birmingham, Ala. Ledger Sun. 5-7-46

350,000 To 375,000 Total Is Expected; Veterans Swell List

The largest primary vote in the history of Alabama was believed under way today.

Thousands of voters, including some Negroes and a great many veterans, began flocking to the polls soon after they opened. Negroes were voting for the first time in a primary as the result of a Supreme Court ruling that they cannot be barred. Veterans had taken advantage of the exemption from payment of poll tax.

This latter factor, plus the accelerated interest in elections since the termination of the war, led party officials to predict a turnout of between 350,000 and 375,000 voters which will be unprecedented in this history of the state. The 1942 primary polled 279,000 votes.

The Negro vote was expected to be small, due to the fact that the state's cumulative $1.50 a year poll tax would require some to pay as much as $36 before voting and also because the time limit for payment of the poll tax expired Feb. 1. Voters of the age of 45, however, are exempt from paying a poll tax. The traditional "white" party label was discarded by the Democratic committee only a few days before the Feb. 1 time limit.

Registration, which has been brisk in the past few weeks, took a final lively spurt yesterday when between 400 and 500 residents of Jefferson County registered.

YELLOW CERTIFICATES were given the last minute registrants. Poll officials were instructed to recognize these certificates whether or not the names of the new voters were on the lists.

In Birmingham the polls opened at 8 a.m. and will close at 6 p.m. Polls in the county will close at 5 p.m. Sun. 5-7-46

Absentee ballots, which in the past have been counted beginning at 9 a.m. on election day will not be counted until 6 p.m. today. This is in compliance with a ruling made last week by State Atty. Gen. William N. McQueen.

While the gubernatorial race was the biggest issue at stake in the state, Jefferson County was taking tremendous interest in the congressional race and in the selection of a state senator and members of the lower house of the Legislature.

In the fifth congressional district, the U. S. Congress election was throwing the spotlight on the potency of the Political Action Committee of the CIO. This organization was backing Rep. Albert Rains. It supported Rains two years ago when he was defeated by Joe Starnes, then vice chairman of the Dies Committee. Starnes is now trying to unseat Rains.

The threat of showers in the county and the state was not expected to keep voters away from the polls. Rain was falling in parts of the southern section of the state when the polls opened, but this was not a factor in slowing up the casting of ballots. Intermittent showers were in the northern section.

Voters in Bibb and Talladega Counties were voting today.

Montgomery Ala Herald 5-8-46 Democratic primaries

DR. JAMES G. BALL voted yesterday for the first time. He paid $36 back poll taxes in order to be eligible to cast a ballot. Yesterday's balloting was the first in an Alabama primary that had been open to Negro voters. All previous Democratic ballots had carried the word "white" on the ballots.

Seeks Device To Stop Negro Vote

The Call Kansas City Mo. 5-17-46

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (ANP) —Seeking a return to the traditional "white primaries," Alabama last week considered a constitutional amendment to make more stringent vote qualifications in the hope of eliminating Negro votes here.

Before the Negro may vote, in keeping with a supreme court decision outlawing the bar on grounds of race or color, he must register. Qualifications for registration are up for amendment, according to present plan.

The bill, which says that all registrants must "understand and be able to explain" the Constitution, will be voted on in the general election in November.

County boards of registrars will be the sole judges of a prospective voter's qualifications, with their word law unless questioned in court procedure.

The proposed act, although it makes no mention of race, has been announced as "essential to white supremacy" by an Alabama legislator. Party Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey refers to it as an "effective way of keeping Negroes from voting in primaries in the future." (Pitts)

The proposed amendment has brought some opposition. Richard T. Rives Jr., Montgomery attorney and politician, argues that enactment would "encourage Negroes to go to court to enforce their right to vote," and that court action "inevitably breeds bad feeling between the races." Rives cited such a suit, now pending in the federal court. 6-04-46

The Negro vote in the May 7 Democratic primaries was reported negligible because of several reasons. One was the fact that the state committee's failing to register between then and the end of the month was barred from the primaries by the Feb. 1 deadline on payment of poll taxes. The age span for the poll tax is 21 to 45, with veterans only exempt. 6-14-46

Efforts to repeal the poll tax so far have been of no avail. The legislature blocked a move to abolish the levy during the 1945 season.

Negro Ballot Ruling Before Top Tribunal

Macon Registrars Seek To Stop Reopening Of Proceedings

A Negro vote suit against members of the Macon County, Ala. Board of Registrars, once dismissed in federal court but later ordered reinstated, has been appealed to U. S. Supreme Court.

Federal Judge C. B. Kennamer who last October granted a dismissal motion by the State of Alabama, said yesterday the registrars had filed a petition for a writ of certiorari seeking to overturn an Appellate Court's order that the case be reopened.

The suit was instituted in Federal Court here by William Plum Mitchell, Macon County Negro charging two members of the Board of Registrars with refusing to register him for voting on the ground of his race or color. This refusal was alleged in the complaint. From these facts it appeared in substance as follows:

The defendants refused to register him (Mitchell) and others, solely because of "race, color and previous condition of servitude." The Negro asked $5,000 damages, a permanent injunction and usage of the defendants, a declaratory judgment against the voting officials and Mitchell went to the U. S. Court of Appeals in Newton, solely on the ground of their Tri-race or color. This refusal was taken pursuant to the policy, custom and usage of the defendants, its machinery, to deprive Negroes of the right to vote in Alabama." Mitchell had no remedy under the law and that, therefore, his complaint lacked jurisdiction.

Kennamer, admitted all of the well-pleaded facts alleged in the complaint. From these facts it appeared in substance as follows:

The defendants refused to register him (Mitchell) and others, solely because of "race, color and previous condition of servitude." The Negro asked $5,000 damages, a permanent injunction and usage of the defendants, its machinery, to deprive Negroes of the right to vote in Alabama." Mitchell had no remedy under the law and that, therefore, his complaint lacked jurisdiction.

The Circuit Court, in its opinion, held that "the State intervened and asked authority to dismiss, as a matter of right to vote in Alabama." The case was remanded to the lower court for "proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion."

Ala. Registrar Quits Board, Afraid of $5,000 Suits

The Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—(NNPA)—J. B. Vines, white, chairman of the Jefferson County, Birmingham Board of Registrars, resigned on Oct. 18, and cited two reasons:

1. Colored people not permitted to register under recent Supreme Court decisions, are filing suits for $5,000 damages.

2. Colored people are registering in such large numbers that they keep the Board in session after hours. Sat. 11-2-46

Suits Pending

Vines said already one suit of $5,000 is pending against him and every other member of the Board; life is too short for him to contend with that kind of situation.

At Mobile, Ala., these suits against registrars who have barred colored people from getting on the rolls have been so frequent that Gov. Chauncey Sparks appointed eight out of ten new registrars and all of them declined.

This emboldened colored people themselves to ask to have three colored registrars appointed.

Fear Black Belt

What riles some Alabamans is that colored persons out-number white five to one in Macon County, for example, where Tuskegee is, and in 17 or 18 other counties in what is called Alabama's black belt. Afro-American

There the white people have the vote and whites have all the county jobs. The Macon County Board of Registrars also resigned recently. Baltimore, Md.

Even in Tuskegee itself, where the institute and the officials own millions of dollars worth of property to a few hundred thousand owned by whites: where 99 per cent of the population is colored even at Tuskegee town, the whites have all the jobs, such as sheriff policemen, coroner, etc. Sat. 11-2-46

Meanwhile, under consideration is the Boswell Amendment, which would deny the franchise to thousands of Alabamans of all classes groups, and stations of life, such as farmers, laborers, trade unionists, ex-service men and women and small business men.

The Amendment calls for the final decisive power as to who shall vote to be vested in the hands of registrars, and eliminates the requirement that registrars accept without question anyone who can prove he owns $300 or more in real or personal property.

TO THE VOTERS OF ALABAMA:

Notwithstanding the criticism which has been directed at our State Democratic Executive Committee from some sources, it is the purpose and intent of our Committee to see to it the people of Alabama are fully advised as to the very great importance of giving their active and vigorous support to the campaign for the adoption of the prposed Amendment to Section 181 of the Constitution of Alabama, known as the Boswell Amendment which amendment will be voted upon at the time of the General Election on Tuesday, November 5th, and will be known as Proposed Amendment Number 4 on the Ballot.

The Supreme Court of the United States, in a far-reaching and precedent shattering opinion has held that any qualified voter, whether he be white or colored, has the legal right to vote in any party Primary supported by State funds. The effect of this drastic decision, reversing the former decisions of our highest Court, is to destroy the White Primary which our Committee, under its slogan of "WHITE SUPREMACY", is pledged to maintain. This Court decision has opened the way to a flood of negro registration and negro domination, at the polls of Alabama,—especially in our Black Belt Counties,—which our present election laws are powerless to prevent.

Section 181 of our Constitution as it now stands contains an obsolete provision permitting a person to register as a voter merely by reason of the fact he or his wife has real or personal property of the assessed value of $300.00. No educational requirements whatsoever are required under our Constitution as it now stands, and a prospective voter does not have to be able to read and write, and it is not even necessary that he know under what form of government he lives, if he has property of an assessed value of $300.00. This was all right back in 1901, when our present constitution was adopted, as at that time practically no one except substantial citizens had as much as $300.00 worth of property assessed to them.

However, in this day and time there are literally thousands and thousands of citizens who have an old, second-hand, rattle-trap automobile assessed at as much as $300.00, who will possess very few of the qualifications which we consider important for a citizen to possess before being permitted to vote. Unless we tighten up our registration laws, we are going to see our poll lists flooded with thousands of voters who have not yet fitted themselves to participate in our government. There are any number of Counties in Alabama's "Black Belt" where within a comparatively few years there will probably be only negro City and County Officials unless we do something to tighten up our registration laws. In many of these "Black Belt" Counties the negroes out-number the white people from five to one to ten to one.

Obviously, neither the State of Alabama nor our State Democratic Executive Committee can defy the Government of the United States. But the State of Alabama, acting within the law, can by action of its people surround the exercise of suffrage in Alabama with such legal safeguards as will protect our State from the veritable flood of Negro registration and negro domination, which the Supreme Court decision has released.

It is not the intent of Proposed

Rule By Minority

The News Birmingham, Ala.

This month's general election in Alabama called out only about half as many voters as did the May Democratic primary. A total of 365,513 votes were cast in the primary. The final figure for the general election of Nov. 5 was 166,006.

That is only about 6 per cent of the total population, or 11 per cent of the population of voting age, or 35 per cent of the number of registered voters. Any way the matter is considered, therefore, the Nov. 5 election represents rule by minority in Alabama.

However, the vote this month was the largest ever cast in Alabama in a general election when a president was not being named, with two exceptions. In 1930, when B. M. Miller, the Democratic nominee, was opposed by Hugh A. Locke, independent, 250,776 votes were polled after one of the warmest campaigns in the state's history. The 1934 general election drew 177,192 votes. Four years ago the vote for governor in the general election drew only 77,627 voters. In 1938 the vote was 131,485. Mon. 11-18-46

The Boswell amendment was in large part responsible for bringing out the comparatively strong vote this time. That is shown in Jefferson County, where the amendment polled 31,932 votes, for or against, a figure that was exceeded only by the 31,939 votes cast in the governor's race. The other amendments drew much smaller totals, the heaviest being on No. 2 (hospital amendment), which polled 26,835 votes.

These figures are disturbing to persons who believe that the best interests of the state call for broadening the electorate and inducing more persons to participate in elections. Fewer than half of the white persons of voting age in Alabama are qualified to vote. More persons should participate in elections. That is not a racial issue. It is much bigger than that.

It is not the most desirable manifestation of democracy in Alabama when only 11 per cent of the persons of voting age determine fundamental constitutional questions.

Negro Wants $5,000 From Ex-Board In Macon

A Negro's complaint that he was denied registration as a voter in Macon County, Ala., solely because of his race is scheduled for a new hearing in Federal Court here on Dec. 5.

Date for reoping of the $5,000 damage suit filed by William P. Mitchell of Tuskegee was announced Monday by U. S. District Judge C. B. Kennamer, whose decision to dismiss the case a year ago was later overturned by the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals. Tues. 11-12-46

The petition, originally filed in August, 1945, charges two former members of the Board of Registrars in Macon County with refusing to register Mitchell "solely because of race or color."

In addition to the $5,000 damages, it asks a permanent injunction against the voting officials and a declaratory judgment against what the Negro termed "the policy, custom or usage" of the registrars in denying the ballot to Negroes.

After Judge Kennamer dismissed the suit on the grounds that Mitchell had not exhausted his remedy in State courts, the plaintiff appealed to the Circuit Court and the Appellate body ordered the case returned here for new action.

Later the U. S. Supreme Court refused to review the case.

In its ruling, the appellate tribunal noted that Judge Kennamer dismissed the suit on motion of the State of Alabama and held that the motion itself "admitted all the . . . facts alleged in the complaint." It ordered the suit reopened for "proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion."

Since the suit was filed, the defendants, Mrs. George C. Wright and Virgil M. Guthrie, resigned from the Board of Registrars.

Supreme Court Returns $5,000 Damage Case

Sat.

WASHINGTON — (NNPA) — The United States Supreme Court, in effect, last Monday ordered a lower court to hear a suit challenging the practice of the Board of Registrars of Macon County, Ala., in excluding colored voters from registration. 10-26-46

In declining to review the case, the court sent it back to United Federal Judge Charles B. Kennamer of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

At Montgomery last Monday Judge Kennamer said the litigation would start all over.

State Courts Not Exhausted

William P. Mitchell instituted the suit against two members of the Board of Registrars, but Judge Kennamer dismissed it on the grounds that Mitchell had not exhausted his remedies in State courts.

Mitchell charging the board with refusing to register him because of race, asked $5,000 damages, a permanent injunction against the voting officials, and a declaratory judgment against what he termed the "policy, custom or usage" of refusing to register colored persons.

MOBILE, ALA., Dec. 19.—(AP)—A Negro group organized to help members of the race qualify for voting privileges under the newly-adopted Boswell Amendment announced today it would hold its first class on the Federal Constitution next Monday night.

President J. J. Thomas of the Negro Voters' and Veterans' Association said the first classes would be small, and confined to association membership, but later they would be thrown open to the general public.

"Several weeks hence others will be permitted to take advantage of the opportunity to better qualify themselves to meet tests to register as voters through the constitution study program," he said. Fri. 12-20-46

Vote Denial Because Of Race Denied By Former Registrars

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

Sat. 12-7-46

Taking the stand after a Federal judge ruled against their request for a jury trial, two former members of the Macon County Board of Registrars denied yesterday that they refused to certify a Tuskegee Negro as a voter "solely because of race or color."

Virgil M. Guthrie and Mrs. George C. Wright, defendants in a $5,000 damage suit filed by William P. Mitchell, testified that they applied the same vote qualification tests to Negroes and whites alike, and Guthrie said the complainant was turned down because he failed to complete the examination.

Their testimony was taken during a hearing before U. S. District Judge C. B. Kennamer and came after attorneys for Mitchell, in order to avoid having the case heard by a jury, agreed to accept "nominal" damages instead of the $5,000 originally asked.

Trial Dec. 18

Judge Kennamer set Dec. 18 as the date for trial.

The court's ruling on the jury question followed a motion by Defense Attorney Richard T. Rives of Montgomery asking for a jury trial and seeking to strike from the complaint everything but the matter of monetary damages. The petition also sought an injunction against the voting officials, a declaratory judgement, and a "class action" in behalf of other Negroes.

Judge Kennamer held that a jury would not be impaneled unless the plantiff insisted on damages other than "nominal." Mitchell's attorneys agreed to ask only that.

Decision Withheld

On the other questions, the court ruled against the petition for a class action, and withheld a decision on the injunctive relief and a declaratory judgement until all the evidence is heard.

Guthrie, who said he took Mitchell's application at the board's regular session in July, 1945, testified that the Negro did not comply with a requirement that would-be registrants have a "voucher" sign their application papers.

A "voucher," he said, was a voter known to board members who would attest to the applicant's residence qualifications. Under Alabama law, a voter must have lived in the state two years, in the county one year and in the voting precinct three months.

Voucher Required

The former board member, who resigned after the litigation began in August last year, told the court that all applicants, white and Negro, were required to produce a voucher, and that his own sister and brother-in-law were made to conform to that when they registered while he was in office. The Advertiser

He said Mitchell listed two persons as reference, as required on the application blank, but that neither appeared in his behalf, although he said one of them, G. W. A. Johnson, also a Negro, vouched for several other persons at the same board session.

Both Guthrie and Mrs. Wright testified it was the policy of the board to reject all applications where the printed form was not filed out in full.

Blanks Introduced

Mitchell's application blank was introduced in evidence along with 17 others the defense said were approved during the July, 1945, session, and of the 17, all but seven were for Negroes.

The defendants said those were the only voters certified during the five-day meeting, and Rives emphasized that 10 of them were Negroes. How many Negroes were turned down, the former registrars said they could not tell.

Guthrie and Mrs. Wright insisted they felt Negroes should not be discriminated against and that as far as they recalled, none was ever denied registration "if he had the proper qualifications."

They denied that any questions were asked of Negro applicants that were not propounded to white persons and that they were not required to wait any longer in the board office than members of the white race.

Both testified that they paid little attention to applicants' ability to read and write the U. S. Constitution, one of the qualifications set out in the state's basic law, and Guthrie said:

Made No Difference

"If they answered the questions intelligently and could sign their names, we registered them. It didn't make any difference whether they were black or white." Montgomery, Ala.

As to the property ownership qualification—the State Constitution until last month gave the right of ballot to anyone who possessed tax-paid property worth $300—Mrs. Wright said, "we usually took their word for it. If we doubted it we could look it up in the tax assessor's office."

After the hearing was concluded, Rives said he would renew his demand for a jury trial, contending that his client was entitled to one on the grounds the proceedings are both equitable and legal. Sat. 12-7-46

Mitchell's counsel, Arthur D. Shores and Frederick H. Douglas of Birmingham and Robert L. Carter of New York, attorney for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, attacked the jury request on the issue that the suit was not a matter of law, but strictly one of equity.

Second Time

It was the second time Judge Kennamer has had the suit in his court. After it was filed in August, 1945, the judge, at the motion of the State of Alabama as an intervenor, dismissed the complaint on the grounds that Mitchell had not exhausted his remedy in state court.

Alabama law gives an applicant the right to appeal to state courts if denied registration, and Mitchell took his direct to federal court.

The U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed Judge Kennamer's ruling, however, and ordered the cast returned here for further action. The U. S. Supreme Court refused to review the case, thus in effect upholding the appellate tribunal's decision.

Macon Registrars Seek To Stop Reopening Of Proceedings

A Negro vote suit against members of the Macon County, Ala., Board of Registrars, once dismissed in federal court but later ordered reinstated, has been appealed to U. S. Supreme Court.

Federal Judge C. B. Kennamer, who last October granted a dismissal motion by the State of Alabama, said yesterday the registrars had filed a petition for writ of certiorari seeking to overturn an Appellate Court's order that the case be reopened.

The suit was instituted in Federal Court here by William P. Mitchell, Macon County Negro, charging two members of the Board of Registrars with refusing to register him for voting solely because of "race, color and previous condition of servitude."

The Negro asked $5,000 damages, a permanent injunction against the voting officials and a declaratory judgment against what he termed the "policy, custom or usage" of refusing to register members of his race because of color.

The State intervened and asked dismissal, and Judge Kennamer granted the motion on the grounds that Mitchell had not exhausted his remedy under state law and that, therefore, his court lacked jurisdiction.

Mitchell went to the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans and the Appellate Tribunal directed that it be taken up again in the court here.

The Circuit Court, in its majority opinion, held that "the motion to dismiss, as a matter of law, admitted all of the well-pleaded facts alleged in the complaint. From these facts it appears in substance as follows:

The defendants refused to register him (Mitchell) and others, when they applied for registration, solely on the ground of their race or color. This refusal was pursuant to the policy, custom and usage of the defendants, acting under color of state authority, to deprive Negroes of the right to vote in Alabama."

The case was remanded to the lower court for "proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion."

Colored and white applicants took the Boswell quiz recently; but the questions can be juggled and asked in such a way as to confuse and trick an applicant. The local NAACP said the list of questions asked by registrars was as follows:

2. "Has Byrnes power to veto?"
3. "Name the five great powers."

Negro's Suit Against Two Ex-Registrars Dismissed By Judge

The News Birmingham, Ala.

Thurs. 12-19-46

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 19—(AP)—A suit by which a Tuskegee, Ala., Negro sought to win a declaratory judgment against what he said was a registration board's "policy, custom or usage" of refusing to register Negroes as voters was dismissed in U. S. District Court here yesterday.

U. S. Dist. Judge C. B. Kennamer, ruling at the conclusion of a one-day trial, held that the plaintiff, William P. Mitchell, has failed to show that two former members of Macon Couuty Board of Registrars discriminated against him.

Before handing down his ruling, the jurist observed, however, that it is a well-settled law that under the Federal Constitution, "you cannot discriminate against a group because of race or color or previous condition of servitude."

MITCHELL, IN ADDITION to seeking an injunction and a declaratory judgment against the Macon County board, also asked that damages in his favor be assessed against the two former board members, Mrs. George C. Wright and Virgil M. Guthrie.

There was no immediate announcement from Mitchell's attorneys as to whether the verdict, delivered after a non-jury trial, would be appealed.

Judge Kennamer, in finding for the defendants, cited testimony that every applicant for the franchise was required to have a witness vouch for him, and said that Mitchell failed to comply with this regulation.

ARTHUR D. SHORES, the Negro's attorney, touched on this requirement during his final argument, declaring that it was merely devised for today but was postponed one day beause of the possibility that Judge Kennamer, who has been holding court in Dothan this week, might not be back in time.

Two defendants in a Tuskegee, Ala., Negro's vote registration suit have been subpoenaed to appear in Federal court when the complaint is heard before U. S. District Judge C. B. Kennamer here Friday.

The hearing was originally set in an appeal to the U. S. Court of Appeals, which directed a reopening of the case.

Negro Claims Damages

Thurs. 12-5-46

Two defendants in a Tuskegee, Ala., Negro's vote registration suit have been subpoenaed to appear in Federal court when the complaint is heard before U. S. District Judge C. B. Kennamer here Friday.

The hearing was originally set in an appeal to the U. S. Court of Appeals, which directed a reopening of the case.

Judge Kennamer, who has been holding court in Dothan this week, might not be back in time.

Mrs. George C. Wright and Virgil M. Guthrie, defendants in the $5,000 damage suit filed by William P. Mitchell charging he was denied registration as a voter in Ma con County "solely because of race or color."

Mrs. Wright and Guthrie were members of the county boards of registrars at the time the Negro alleges he was denied registration, but both have since resigned.

Filed In 1945

They were summoned to court by attorneys for Mitchell.

The suit, which also asks a permanent injunction against the voting officials and a declaratory judgment against what the plaintiff terms the "policy, custom or usage" of denying the ballot to Negroes, was first filed in August, 1945.

It was dismisesd by Judge Kennamer on the grounds that Mitchell had not exhausted his remedy in State court, but the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals directed the district judge to reopen the case. Later the U. S. Supreme Court refused to review the proceedings, which in effect upheld the action of the appellate tribunal.

In its decision, the Court of Appeals held that the motion to dismiss, filed by the State of Alabama as an intervenor, "admitted all the . . . facts alleged in the complaint." It remanded the case for "proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion."

An attorney for the defendants, Richard T. Rives, of Montgomery, said he would contend at Friday's hearing that as a result of the Appeals Court's findings, the only question remaining was that of damages. He said he would take the position that the questions of injunctive relief, a declaratory judgment and a class suit in behalf of all Negroes had been ruled out.

Rives said he would demand a jury trial and that counsel for Mitchell opposed this.

one of them. He declared it to be a subterfuge "to get around the registration of Negroes. Apparently fair on its face but administered with an evil eye and an unequal hand." Sat Sat. 12-7-46

In the original suit, Mitchell had asked $5,000 damages, but at a hearing before Judge Kennamer on December 5, his attorneys including Shores and Robert L. Carter, of New York, of the NAACP legal staff, agreed to accept nominal damages in order to avoid a jury trial. Defender 12-28-46

When the suit was first filed in 1945, Kennamer dismissed it on the grounds that the plaintiff has not exhausted his remedy in state courts. Chicago, Ill.

An appeal may be taken to a higher court in the present instance of Judge Kennamer's ruling.

MORE WHITE VOTERS? The News

Democratic State Chairman Gessner McCorvey, Gov. Chauncey Sparks and former Gov. Frank Dixon were successful in selling the majority of the limited Alabama electorate that the Boswell law will keep the Negroes from gaining political power in several of the Black Belt counties. Granting that these leaders are sincere in their endorsement of a measure which makes it mandatory for an Alabama voter, white or Negro, to be able to "understand the Constitution of the United States of America," and thereby keep thousands of Negroes from the polls, what do they propose to do about the disfranchised white people? Birmingham, Ala.

According to George Bender, Ohio congressman-at-large, the poll tax and registration laws disfranchise 25,000,000 Americans. Seven white persons to every three Negroes are barred. It's these non-voting white people that North Alabama residents are particularly interested in having given to them their birthright of citizenship. Wed. 11-27-46

In the general election last week less than 8,000 Cullman County citizens marked ballots. With a population of nearly 50,000, this shows that less than one of five residents in the county voted.

If Mr. McCorvey, Gov. Sparks and Mr. Dixon want to render outstanding service to our state, they will now begin a campaign for more white voters.—Cullman Tribune.

No Discrimination, Says Judge To Negroes Denied Ala. Vote

Defender Chicago, Ill. Sat. 12-28-46

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—The fight of Alabama Negroes to win the right to an unrestricted ballot received a setback last Thursday when Federal District Judge C. B. Kennamer returned a verdict in favor of two former Macon County Board of Registrar officials and ruled that the colored plaintiff was not entitled to damages.

The suit was filed by William P. Mitchell, of Tuskegee, against Mrs. George C. Wright and Virgil M. Guthrie, both white, who were charged with systematically preventing Negroes from voting by barring them from registration. It is regarded by the colored group as one of the most uniform methods adopted in the deep South to deny Negroes the ballot. The flagrant practice is widespread in Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and other states in this section.

However, in this case the defendants succeeded in "impressing" the federal court that they had not discriminated against Negroes. Judge Kennamer also rejected Mitchell's appeal for a permanent injunction and a declaratory judgment against the "policy, custom or usage" of refusing to register Negroes.

The defendants said that they required every applicant for registration to have a witness vouch for him, and that Mitchell failed to comply with that rule. Further, that the two vouchers whose names the complaint gave the board members when he applied for registration told the court they did not appear before the registrars, and that the board would not certify anyone as a voter unless he appeared with a qualified voter to vouch for him.

Kennamer said in his decision that "it is a well settled law that under the Federal Constitution, you cannot discriminate against a group because of race, color or previous conditions of servitude" but held, however, that Mitchell had failed to show the registrars had resorted to racial discrimination.

Arthur D. Shores, of Birmingham, attorney for the complainant, charged that since the enactment of Alabama's 1901 constitution, "various schemes have been devised to prevent Negroes from voting," and that the voucher requirements imposed on complaints was

Ala. County 80% Negro, Allow 2% to Register

Daily Worker New York, N. Y. Thurs. 12-26-46

A recently concluded law suit brought by William Mitchell, Alabama Negro, against two registrars of Macon County showed that while 22,000 of the county's population of 27,650 were Negroes, less than two percent of them had been registered. Over 47 percent of the white voters were registered in July, 1945.

The suit was dismissed on Dec. 18 by Judge Charles Kennamer of the United States District Court for the Middle District of Alabama, on the ground that the evidence presented showed no discrimination against the plaintiff as an individual.

Ninety-three Negroes and seven whites presented themselves to the registrars during the July period. The whites registered forthwith. Ten Negroes were registered, 23 failed outright, and application blanks for the remaining 60 who attempted to vote wore certified as qualified by Mrs. Wright, the chairman of the registration board.

The registrars failed to place these 60 Negroes on the registration roll, however, giving as an excuse the fact that they had failed to produce the necessary persons to vouch for themselves. Actually, evidence was produced to indicate that vouchers for some of these applicants had presented themselves to the board, but were not permitted to vouch for the Negro applicants. The evidence also showed that any one was permitted to vouch for a white applicant, although the registration board insisted that all Negroes know the person who vouch-

ed for them. 12-26-46

One white witness stated that he had merely given the names of several persons to the registration board who could vouch for him, although he never consulted these people about it and had no idea which of the persons had signed his form in the registration office.

As counsel, the defense had the services of E. C. Boswell, the author of the infamous Boswell Amendment to the Alabama Constitution. It requires applicants for registration to be able not only to read and write any section of the Federal Constitution, but be able to understand and interpret any section to the satisfaction of the registrar—a method of disqualifying otherwise qualified Negro voters.

Battle For Vote Unites Negroes

Chicago, Ill. Sat. 6-29-46

By ENOC P. WATERS JR.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — The southern Negro's struggle for the ballot is universal. Previous apathy and unconcern about issues which did not appeal to the mass of the people, is gone.

Five years ago, Negro teachers themselves could not be united in a fight for equalization of teachers' salaries. Last week in a few days, in this city, Negroes raised more than $1,000 to run large ads in four papers telling of their grievances against the Jefferson county board of Registrars.

Negroes along teeming 4th ave., are intelligently discussing the registration and voting campaign. They are planning to defeat the Boswell amendment, passed by the state legislature and up for referendum in November, which would require prospective voters to interpret sections of the state constitution to qualify. Purpose of the amendment, openly bragged of, is to get around the federal court ruling prohibiting the barring of Negroes from registering and voting in the primaries.

Militancy Increases

That the Negro's militancy increases right along with the opposition,, is shown here in Birmingham and Jefferson county. Whites in attempting to steal Negro's franchise have unwittingly given the registration and voting drive its greatest impetus.

A rigidly controlled number of Negroes have always been permitted to vote, as a condescending favor by whites to a select few. Now that the lily-white primary has been ruled out, the whites have paradoxically begun open opposition to the whole idea of Negro ballots.

Ironically two-thirds of the estimated 3,000 eligible Negro votes in the county qualified before the white primary was illegalized. This is a low number of voters for a Negro population of 179,150 (1940), due to Board of Registrars opposition to the black vote, and the poll tax, which has hopelessly disfranchised many older Negroes. The campaign is being concentrated on young people and veterans, exempt from the poll tax because of military service.

Began In January

The registration campaign began full force last January, when the Southern Negro Youth congress, after several months' effort, marched 100 veterans quietly through Birmingham to the courthouse to register.

The effect was electrical.

White supremacists immediately began to warn of the black threat. White registrars, rejected all but a handful of the veterans. The war was on. Negroes arose in indignation. Young Louis Burnham, of the congress, got affidavits from the rejected vets, turned them over to Arthur D. Shores, Alabama's only active Negro attorney and chairman of the legal redress committee for the local NAACP.

Burnham and Shores, aided by Wilbur R. Hollins, young realtor, and Eugene H. Murphy, insurance official and veteran, capitalized on the indignation to set up the United Registration committee, representing almost every Negro group in the city and county. Their drive, the most intensive ever known, simultaneously touched off a similar drive by whites, and awakened Negroes in other parts of the state.

Macon County Acts

In Macon county, rebuffed veterans gave Shores 25 affidavits. He now has 47 cases pending in the courts against registrars, who refused Negroes, the first group set for hearing June 23 in Jefferson county. During the registration campaign, 10,000 windshield stickers, 25,000 handbills were distributed, while speakers appeared at almost every Negro meeting. At registration clinics in churches, thousands were instructed in how to qualify. More than 10,000 swamped the registrar's office in efforts to qualify.

Only 1,500 of these were allowed to register. The majority were refused because of color. At one time 10 whites were registered for each Negro. Again only one Negro per hour was allowed to fill out a blank, which normally takes a few minutes. Negroes were commonly told their application was "under consideration." That was the last they heard.

Ads Hit Like Bomb

The Negroes demonstrated their small numbers knew how to use the vote. In one precinct Big Jim Folsom, endorsed by the Progressive Democratic council and the CIO's Political Action committee garnered 220 of 241 Negro votes cast. In other contests, although their man lost, Negro votes followed the council recommendation with huge majorities.

The ads protesting the denial of the vote, headed "Qualified to vote but denied the chance" hit the streets like an atom bomb. Comments by whites and colored were encouraging. The ads were an eye opener to some liberal minded but unaware whites, and brought out the fighting spirit of many Negroes.

One significant incident marked the ad campaign. When the $1,000 was raised, one man at the registration committee meeting opposed the ads, saying he knew some "good white folks," and with the money could guarantee "no more trouble with the registrars." He was thrown out of the meeting.

There is a new order among Birmingham Negroes today.

DELAY GRANTED NEGRO VOTE CASE

Answers To Be Filed October 9, New Trial Date Set For Case.

County Attorney Robert Culpepper said this week that a delay had been granted in the case injunction brought by a group of negroes against the Mitchell County Board of Registrars to have their names restored to the voters books of the county.

Mr. Culpepper said that Federal Judge Hoyt Davis had granted permission to return the answer to the injunction petition on October 9th, the original date set for either hearing or trial of the civil action. At the time the attorney's file their answer a new date will be set by the Judge for trial or hearing of the case.

County Attorney Robert Culpepper together with O. B. McElvey, of Pelham, are representing the Mitchell County Board of Registrars in this civil action. Joining together with Early county, Attorney A. B Conger, of Bainbridge, has been engaged to represent jointly the two counties in their suit before the federal court.

Last week Attorney Robert Short, representing the Baker County Board of Registrars, filed the answer for that county with the court and asked that the court dismiss the case on the grounds that none of the charges were true, that hearings had been conducted, voters notified, and purging of the list accomplished strictly according to law. They also pointed out that one of the defendants named in the petition was not a member of the Board of Registrars.

Worth County, the fourth county named in the joint civil action brought by the Negroes, likewise has filed an answer through an Albany attorney and asked that the suit be dismissed on the grounds tht the charges in the petition are false. Worth county represents the action of their board of registrars to be strictly according to the state laws and no basis for the suit can be found.

Macon Registrars Resign; Call Position 'Hot Potato'

The Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala. Fri. 10-4-46

TUSKEGEE, ALA., Oct. 3 —(AP)— Resignations of all members of the Macon County Board of Registrars were disclosed today as a result of what one of them termed a "hot potato," but in Montgomery the Governor's office said none of them have been accepted.

Tuskegee is the county seat of Macon County.

The Governor's Secretary, George Bliss Jones, said letters of resignation were received from each member of the three-man board in June.

"Technically, however," he said, "there is no vacancy on the board because the State Board of Appointment has not accepted any of the resignations."

Don't Like Job

G. A. Smith, one of the last members of the board, said "folks down here just don't like the job" and declined to amplify the statement.

(Records in the Governor's office showed four persons have been appointed to the board since August, 1945, when William T. Mitchell, a Negro, filed a $5,000 damage suit against two of the board members.)

In the suit, which is now pending before the U. S. Supreme Court, Mitchell charged the registrars with refusing to register him "solely because of race or color."

The board members named in the litigation, Virgil M. Guthrie and Mrs. George C. Wright, both of Tuskegee, resigned shortly afterward. The third member of the original board named in 1943, W. W. Edwards, had not been replaced when the suit was instigated.

Smith, one of the three registrars who resigned in June, explained that he agreed to serve on the board only "to clean up a bottleneck" of war veterans who wanted to qualify as voters.

He said he was asked to serve on the board by Rep. Henry Neill Segrest of Macon County and did so for "about two months." During this time he estimated about 25 qualified voters were added to the voting list.

The other two members of the board, J. J. Jolley of Chesson and S. W. Tally of Auburn, could not be reached for comment.

A spokesman for the State Board of Appointment said members of the board (Chauncey Sparks, State Auditor John Brandon and Agriculture Commissioner Joe Poole) are attempting to find properly qualified persons who will agree to serve on the board.

The Negro's suit against the former registrars went to the Supreme Court of Appeal from a ruling by the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals at New Orleans.

The Appellate Court ordered the suit reopened by Federal Judge C. B. Kennamer at Montgomery, who previously had dismissed it on grounds his court lacked jurisdiction.

The Advertiser

In his suit, Mitchell also sought a permanent injunction against the registrars and a declaratory judgment against what he referred to as the "policy, custom or usage" for refusing to register members of his race because of color.

Montgomery, Ala.

Judge Kennamer dismissed the petition at the request of the State of Alabama, which intervened, contending that Mitchel had not exhausted his rights in state courts.

Fri. 10-4-46

When the Appellate tribuna ordered the case re-opened in Federal District Court, the stat then asked the U. S. Suprem Court for a writ of certiorari t overrule the Appellate tribunal verdict.

Beating Victim In Alabama Fined $150

The Defender
Chicago, Ill.

By FRED ATWATER

MOBILE, Ala. — Terrorism against Negro voters was given the green light here last week, when 74-year-old police brutality victim, Napoleon Rivers, was fined $150 and costs in Recorder's Court on charges filed by Policeman Edward Bartlett, his assailant.

The aged Rivers, a retired contractor, who suffered a fractured skull and a broken jaw when he was clubbed at the Board of Registrars office by Bartlett, was found guilty on charges of disorderly conduct and resisting arrest.

20 Defense Witnesses

More than 20 Negro and white citizens testified for the defense in the two and a half hour hearing. Only two witnesses appeared for the prosecution. They were Milton Schnell, chairman of the Board of Registrars and one of his women aides. Courtroom spectators gasped when Judge Norvelle R. Leigh III, widely known for anti-Negro rulings, announced the fines. Defense attorneys, C. M. A. Rogers and D. R. Coley, both white, immediately filed notice of appeal.

Beaten During Campaign

Rivers was struck down and beaten by Bartlett, May 6, during the primary election campaign. At the time the aged gentleman, one of Mobile's most progressive citizens, was vouching for Negro war veterans attempting to register. He asked permission of Bartlett, who was on duty at the time, to go into the registrars' office to speak to another voter who was acting as a reference. The policeman refused him in an abusive manner, according to witnesses. When Rivers paused in the corridor to speak to a minister who was seated near the segregated line of Negro applicants witnesses stated that Bartlett seized him and shoved him toward an exist where a long line of whites was waiting. Bartlett clubbed the feeble old man when the latter asked him not to tear his clothes.

Admits Attack

Bartlett admitted that he struck Rivers in the stomach, adding that the aged man made a motion as if to strike him. It was then that he struck the blows which fractured Rivers' skull and jaw, Bartlett said.

Schnell in testifying for the prosecution, stated that the dignified old man was insolent and abusive to the policeman. His woman aide corroborated her boss' statement.

Witness Disqualified

James Dial, Negro eyewitness, who overheard Schnell goad Bartlett into striking Rivers was disqualified as a witness by city attorney Harry Seale. Prominent white character witnesses called to the stand spoke highly of Rivers. Obviously disturbed by the large number of citizens sympathizing with Rivers, Judge Leigh told defense attorneys, "This is an ordinary case, (but) for some reason it has some notoriety. We have many such cases every month." He told attorneys to be brief as possible because of a "heavy docket."

Rivers, who has not completely recovered from the terrible beating given him by Bartlett appeared very weak throughout the hearing.

There is a great deal of resentment to the biased court decision here, and many persons declare that evidence given by Negro and white eyewitnesses should have sent Bartlett to jail for assault with intent to murder.

EDUCATIONAL TEST FOR VOTING

Editor, The Advertiser: The Advertiser

Please allow me the space in Grandma's column to reply to Allie Sansom who took me to task for advocating an educational test for all applicants for registration to vote in this state. I think Mr. Sansom's letter appeared on Oct. 10th and my letter a few days earlier.

I want Mr. Sansom to know that I am stronger in my belief that this test should be given to all prospective voters than ever. And that I also claim there is no excuse for ignorance or illiteracy in the State of Alabama in this day and time, for schools are available to all, and any one, no matter how hard they have to work or how poor they are, can acquire a primary—or as it is called today—"A Grammar School education." An ignorant or illiterate person is out of step with events in this day and time, and regardless of his honesty he should not be allowed to vote even if he is a property owner, for the simple reason that he refuses himself an education which is paid for by taxation. We will have to impose an educational test some day—sooner or later—why not begin now? The illiterate voter always has to call on someone to inform him of the issues during a political campaign, or find out who is the best man to vote for, and is more likely than not to go to some smooth and fast-talking political crook for his information and thereby vote against his own interest. I have seen a lot of this kind of work. Montgomery, Ala.

So many of the people of poor education cannot or will not seek information from honest and well informed people. I do not think that a person guilty of buying votes should be allowed to vote or run for office. I think he should be, before allowed to stand for office, required to make a solemn oath, that he had never sold his vote.

To my mind, the person who will buy votes or sell his own vote, is the lowest type of a human being on earth. Nothing evil or unlawful is beyond them if they think they can get by with it. Sat. 10-26-46

ROY L. THORNTON

Three Notch, Ala.

But This Is No Remedy

Few, if any, Alabamians would contend that the present situation in this state with respect to the registration of voters is wholly satisfactory.

There are very real problems in this phase of our political life. In some respects these conditions are bad.

On the one hand, there is the fear that great numbers of voters really not adequately qualified for suffrage will get on the poll lists.

On the other hand, there is the insistence that many really qualified citizens are not being admitted to registration.

This makes for tension, fear and a dangerous state of controversy.

The resignation of the Macon County registrars, followed by that last week of Dr. J. B. Vines, chairman of the Jefferson County Board of registrars, testifies to the seriousness of the situation from one angle.

Gov. Sparks, in asking Dr. Vines to reconsider, declared that he agrees that "we need to strengthen our registration laws and to give the registrars judicial authority." But the pressures and problems confronting registrars emerge, of course, from a very deep feeling among Negroes that fair and constitutional registration procedures have not been consistently followed. In his letter to Dr. Vines, Gov. Sparks declared: "It may be we have been negligent in the past in not extending gradual franchise to qualified Negroes."

Obviously there are two distinct aspects of the dissatisfaction with the present situation. The proposed Boswell amendment is no solution of the problem in either aspect.

We have no doubt that it would be declared unconstitutional. It would greatly intensify the dissatisfaction among Negroes and consequently would increase the tensions and dangers in the total situation. It would add new dangers of abuse in the exercise of the wide authority of registrars. This is no remedy at all. It would only make a bad situation worse.

But neither will rejection of the amendment meet all the problems. It would only eliminate the dangers of a bad way of dealing with those problems. Those are very real dangers, and it is very important, in our opinion, that the amendment be rejected. But if it is, there will still remain the problem of strengthening our registration system and making it more just.

The Supreme Court's decision which has aroused so much concern held that Negroes could not be barred from primaries merely because of color. Gov. Sparks speaks of "extending gradual franchise to qualified Negroes." Obviously there is nothing in the Supreme Court decision which throws open the way to registration without reference to qualifications. We believe the fears of mass registration of unqualified voters under present constitutional provisions are exaggerated. But that does not mean that we regard present provisions and procedures as satisfactory.

Indeed, the whole situation calls for thorough reexamination. Defeat of the Boswell amendment might well be followed by such a resurvey at the instance of the Legislature.

WELL, WHAT DO YOU THINK?

Editor, The Advertiser: The Advertiser

Being young and inexperienced, I can not understand why my neighboring registrars are resigning from their public duties. Please help me through this trying period.

Do these resignations mean that we have lost our endurance, initiative and courage? Do they mean that we face the end of white supremacy unless changes in our laws are made? Or are they a means to an end?

Is it possible for one's courage to seep out overnight? Is it possible for the white man's leadership to crumble without cause? Do our white citizens of the Black Belt no longer have the intelligence to protect their own interests? Montgomery, Ala.

Grandma, if you would only lend me some of your serenity, foresight and acumen, so that I could better judge for myself these questions, I would be very grateful.

Negro Vets Demand Vote in Ala.

MARCH ON BIRMINGHAM POLL BOARD

Daily Worker New York

Special to the Daily Worker

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 25. — One hundred Negro World War II veterans marched on the Jefferson County Courthouse here last Wednesday to demand that they be registered as voters.

Their demand was rejected by the Board of Registrars.

The contingent marched through the main streets of this city with large placards advertising their demands for equal rights. Heading the group were Captain H. C. Terrell, US Army chaplain on terminal leave, and Henry O. Mayfield, Southern Negro Youth Congress Veterans committee chairman. Some of the slogans were: "Veterans Join Us to Register! Bring Your Discharge Papers!"

Shortly after the group arrived at the registration place, two MP's escorted Captain Terrell to the military police station in the basement. They informed him they had received complaints that he was leading a protest political demonstration.

They warned the chaplain "not to use the Army uniform for any political purposes." When Capt. Terrel pointed out that the purpose of the movement was part of the 10-day registration period sponsored by the SNYC and was aimed at increasing the number of registered voters as well as to stimulate the interest of Negro veterans in government, he was released.

The treatment accorded the Negro veterans who sought to register with their discharge papers, were typical of the "white supremacy board of registrars.

Jesse L. Dennis, proud wearer of the Bronze star and Phillipine Liberation ribbon and star was asked: "What is the government?" When he answered "The government is the people" he was rejected and told to try again in April—the next registration period.

Veteran after veteran was turned down for refusal to "interpret the U. S. Constitution." Alabama law merely required ability to read or write as a condition of registration. Typical quetsions asked by the three-man board are: "What is the constitution made of? Can you read the Constitution? How does the US operate? How many departments are there in the U. S. Government? What does Congress consist of? How does a man get to be President?

Louis E. Burnham, SNYC organizational secretary, announced that the Veterans Committee will promptly file appeals in the circuit court "for every veteran whose citizenship is being denied by the fascist-like practices of the white-supremacy board of registrants."

He further stated: "The question involved is whether men who fought to save this democracy shall have the right to vote in it. We expect that white veterans with whom Negroes shared the battle overseas will join us in this fight on the home front."

Among the GIs who have already authorized the SNYC Vets committee to file appeals in their behalf are: John Jones, Pacific Theatre veteran with 22 months overseas service; Leonard Cook, just arrived in the US from Okinawa after 32 months in the Pacific; Fred Douglass McCray, Marine Corps veteran of the battles of Saipan and Iwo Jima; John A. Forrest with three bronz battle stars for the campaigns of Naples-Foggia, Rome, Arno and North Appenines. S. T. Jennis, a coal miner hospitalized for six months during his 22 months of service.

White employes at the county building jammed the windows and officials, including Sheriff Holt McDowell, gathered in animated groups as the veterans massed on the courthouse for a picture. Above the ex-soldiers on the facade of the building was inscribed the quotation of Thomas Jefferson "Equal and exact justice to all men of whatever state or persuasion."

As the veterans left the courthouse determined to continue the fight, one of the vets was heard to remark: "They didn't ask us all those questions when we were drafted!"

Accompanying the group were E. O. McKaine, field representative, and Malcolm C. Dobbs, Ala. Sec'y of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare; Rev. J. L. Ware, pastor of Trinity Church John W. Goodame pastor, Sixth Ave. Baptist Church and W. Wilson, Shiloh Baptist Church.

Throng Crowding Registrar's Office

Throngs crowded the office of the Montgomery County Board of Registrars Monday, in fact the largest one day crowd in the history of the Board and there were many Negroes, openly avowed CIO members, and scores of ex-soldiers, more than 250 asking for registration during the day.

In many store windows in Montgomery and in the daily newspapers and over the radio, notices have called the attention of would-be voters to the registration deadline Feb. 1. The cards in the store windows and on telephone and other poles are signed by "The Alabama Committee". That means the Alabama Committee for the Southern Welfare Conference.

It is learned that registration in Montgomery County has been very heavy, comparatively speaking, for the last thirty or more days. Most of those appearing have been avowed CIO members or ex-soldiers. Some Negroes have asked for registration.

Unless conditions change since it was announced that the May primary will be open to Negroes, the rush on the Board of Registrars is expected to continue.

If the voters of Alabama adopt the Boswell amendment in the November general election, the Board of Registrars will have to eliminate the 300 dollar property qualification for voting and will have to determine to some extent the intelligence of those applying for the certificate of registration.

Negro Registration Heavy In Mobile

Montgomery, Ala.

MOBILE, ALA., Jan. 15.—(AP) —Twelve Negroes were registered as qualified voters today as the registration seekers in that group continued to appear before the year-old specification that only white persons can vote in the party's primaries.

But at the same time the committee endorsed and urged voters to ratify an amendment to the State Constitution in the general election next November that would limit voting privileges to those who met certain "qualifications," among them the ability to read, write and interpret the registration seekers in that group moved a 75-United States Constitution. This would undoubtedly exclude many Negro voters.

The committee also endorsed a resolution setting up qualifications for candidates for State offices, but leaving out the customary "white primary" phrase.

Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey said that the resolution was made necessary by the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Texas case, holding that Negroes could not be barred from State primaries solely because of race.

Mobile County board of registrars in what Chairman Milton Schnell described as "unusually large" numbers. 1-16-46

The board chairman said the negroes now seeking to get their names on the list of those eligible to cast ballots in the coming state elections are school teachers and returning servicemen. Many in the latter category he asserted, were attending Negro colleges before they entered the armed forces. 1-16-46

Four of some 30 Negroes who sought to register today were rejected after taking written examinations to test their ability to read and understand the United States constitution, Schnell reported, adding that many of the group could not be reached before the office closed for the day.

Negroes who are college graduates are not required to take the examination, but any white person or Negro whose ability to read and understand the national constitution is in question must pass the test, Schnell said.

The chairman expressed the view that when Negro school tachers of the county have completed their efforts to register, only returning servicemen will remain among the group of Negroes aspiring to gain the voting privilege.

Schnell attributed the pickup in Negro registration efforts to the action of the State Democratic Executive Committee in opening its primary elections to qualified Negro voters, and also to the poll tax exemption granted ex-servicemen.

4,000 New Ones Posing Large Question Mark For Primary In May

1-29-46

By ATTICUS MULLIN

An intriguing question in political circles is "What voting attitude will the approximately 4,000 new voters of Montgomery County take in the May primary?

When the Montgomery Board of Registrars closes books at 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon of this week, it is expected that somewhere around 4,000 names will have been added to the qualified voter list since the last primary in 1944.

Since the Board of Registrars started a new session after the middle of October it is believed that the records of Clerk Allen will show nearly 3,000 registrations. And courthouse officials believe that there were at least 1,000 registrations before that period.

As the writer has said on other occasions many of the people who have applied for registration openly expressed themselves as CIO adherents. These included soldiers just returned from the war as well as civilians. Five or six hundred Negroes have applied for registration. And it is learned that some of them have qualified for registration and will vote in the Democratic primary of May if they are willing to vote under the Democratic rooster and under his crowing words "White Supremacy."

A reformer won for Mayor of New Orleans by a majority of less than 5,000. There was a trifle more than 18,000 new registrants in New Orleans and it is evident that the new voters voted for the reformer by a large majority. Now, the question is "For whom will the 4,000 new voters in Montgomery cast their ballots?" That is a puzzling question for the politicians.

But whether the politicians like it or not, these 4,000 new voters may be the difference between defeat and victory for many a candidate in the forthcoming primary. And don't forget that other counties have had new registrations in the same population proportion. 1-29-46

MOBILE NEGROES SEEK SUFFRAGE

MOBILE, Ala., Jan. 14—(AP)—Chairman Milton Schnell reported today that more than 30 Negroes appeared before the Mobile County Board of Registrars here today seeking to qualify as voters.

Schnell said the number was "unusually large." He attributed the pickup to the action of the State Democratic Executive Committee Saturday in Montgomery in opening its primary elections to qualified Negro voters.

All of the applicants were given a written examination testing their ability to read and comprehend the United States Constitution and Schnell said that only one of three applicants whose papers had been graded qualified as a registered voter.

The tests require about an hour and a half, he said.

In the group of Negroes were several veterans. Under a 1945 state law, veterans are exempted from paying the state poll tax but must meet registration requirements.

Schnell said that Negroes and whites alike, who had little educational background, were given the Constitution test.

Present registration requirements in Alabama are, he said, that the applicant be able to read and understand any section of the Federal Constitution; that he reside in the county one year, in the state two years and in the ward three months; that he be 21 years old and own real or personal property valued at $300.

Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey of the State Executive Committee estimated recently that only 275 of the approximately 19,000 registered voters in Mobile County were Negroes.

Feb. 1 is the registration deadline.

Negro War Veterans March On Courthouse To Register To Vote

Birmingham Herald

Birmingham, Alabama

A number of Negro war veterans, including members of a group of about 50 which marched through downtown streets to the Courthouse only to find they were unable to file voting applications because of long lines already formed there, reappeared today at the office of the Board of Registrars.

Military police yesterday took a Negro Army captain, identified as H. C. Terrell, out of the registration line. Capt. Charles Lasser, assistant provost marshal for Birmingham, said he had warned the Negro that "it was against Army regulations for anyone to use an Army uniform for any political activities." 1-16-46

Terrell was one of the leaders of the group and was identified by Capt. Lasser as an Army chaplain now on terminal leave.

As the group marched on the courthouse, he carried a placard reading: "Join Us to Register—Bring Your Discharge Papers."

The group paused on the courthouse steps to have its picture taken by a Negro photographer before joining the voting line inside the building. There was no disturbance reported as they stood in line until employes of the Board of Registrars informed them that the office was crowded to capacity and they already had more applications than they would be able to handle before the office closed at 4:30 p.m.

Separate lines were formed by white and Negro applicants.

The voting registration period opened yesterday by the board of registrars, of which J. B. Vines, is chairman, will continue through Jan. 31. Board members said that "more than a dozen" Negroes had been accepted as voters yesterday morning. 1-25-46

LEWIS BURNHAM, ANOTHER LEADER of the delegation, who is Birmingham secretary for the Southern Negro Youth Congress, estimated that "15 out of 100" Negro voting applicants were being turned down by the registrars. Burnham, himself a registered voter, said that he expected all of the group which he headed to be accepted.

The organization expects to file Circuit Court appeals, Burnham said, in those instances in which applicants have been turned down because of their inability to interpret the constitution. Burnham said that his group is opposing ratification of the Boswell amendment which would make interpretation of the constitution a requisite for voting.

NEGRO VETS ASK VOTE PRIVILEGE

Birmingham Age Herald

Parading through downtown streets on their way to the courthouse, a group of about 50 Negro war veterans appeared yesterday afternoon at the County Board of Registrars' office, but few of them were able to file voting registration applications before the office closed for the day because of long lines already formed there.

A Negro Army captain, who was identified as H. C. Terrell and who had been one of the leaders of the veterans' delegation, was taken into custody by military police. Later he was released by Capt. Charles Lasser, assistant provost marshal for Birmingham, who said he had warned the officer that it was "against Army regulations for anyone to use an Army uniform for any political activities."

On their way to the courthouse, the Negroes carried a placard reading: Join Us To Register — Bring Your Discharge Papers."

White and Negro voters formed separate lines as they waited to file their voting applications.

The registration period opened yesterday by the Board of Registrars will continue through Jan. 31.

Members of the board, of which J. B. Vines is chairman, reported that "a number" of Negro war veterans had been accepted as voters prior to the appearance of the group. 1-24-46

Another leader of the delegation, Lewis Burnham, who is Birmingham secretary for the Southern Negro Youth Congress, estimated that the board was rejecting "15 out of 100" Negro war veteran applicants. Burnham himself a registered voter, said that he expected all of the group which he headed to be accepted. Birmingham Ag.-Herald

Burnham said it was planned to file appeals in Circuit Court in those instances in which applicants were turned down because they could not interpret the constitution. He said that his organization is opposed to the Boswell amendment, which would require interpretation of the constitution as a voting requisite.

Mobile Negroes Seek Voting Qualification

The Birmingham News

Birmingham, Ala.

MOBILE, Ala., Jan. 15 — (AP) — More than 30 Negroes went before the Mobile County Board of Registrars yesterday seeking to qualify as voters. The number was described as "unusually large" by the board's chairman, Milton Schnell.

The applicants were given a written examination testing their ability to read and understand the United States Constitution. The tests require about one hour and a half, Schnell said. 1-15-46

Schnell explained that both Negroes and whites who had little educational background were given the tests.

Alabama Opens Primaries To Race

Journal - Guide

THE Alabama State Democratic Executive Committee, in the light of the United States Supreme Court decision, outlawing the infamous "white primary,' rendered in the notorious Texas case, last week voted to open party primaries in the state for the first time to qualified Negro voters.

At the same time, the committee unanimously endorsed a proposed amendment designed to tighten voter registration requirements by abolishing the constitutional provision that ownership of $300 worth of property qualifies a person to register, and substituting a provision that would require prospective voters to be able to "understand and explain" instead of merely to read the constitution. Norfolk, Va.

In reference to state elections, the Alabama Democrats have decided to eliminate the customary phrase, "white primary," which has been so effectively used to bar Negroes from voting in the state, but to have incorporated into the constitution the phrase 'understand and explain" is a literary test which must be satisfactorily met by the prospective registrant. 9-19-46

The proposed amendment, to be voted on in the general election in November, if adopted, and there is every indication that it will be, unless surrounded by provisions which have not yet been made clear, is subject to ready employment as a vehicle to bar Negroes from voting, or at least holding the electorial strength to an insignificant minimum.

In fact the action of the committee seems to indicate that Alabama Democrats fear that with their elections no longer labeled "white primaries," the constitutional provision that ownership of $300 worth of property qualifies a person to register, would prove to be easily surmountable by the masses, hence the proposal for an "understand and explain" the constitution test.

The committee has voted to leave off the "white primary," but there is nothing in its action to convince anybody that it is converted to the idea of the moral rightness of the Supreme Court decision.

As the Journal and Guide said editorially in our issue of Dec. 22, in commenting on suffrage reforms proposed for Virginia:

"With a reasonable and fairly administered literacy test there can be no quarrel." But a test that places within the discretion of the registrar the determination of the correctness of one's understanding and interpretation is not exactly a fair test.

To "understand and explain" the constitution of Alabama, or any other state for that matter, would be more than a literacy test. It would be a test of legal scholarship, and one in which the most able constitutional lawyers are perenially finding themselves at odds. Strictly administered, such a test would disfranchise more than half of Alabama's present white voters, many of whom are the individuals that would be designated to pass upon the voter's ability to understand and explain the constitution.

AND NOW COMES ALABAMA

Atlanta (Ga.) Daily World

Since the U. S. Supreme Court opened the "white man's exclusive" Democratic primary to Negroes in Texas two years ago there has been a gradual reformation of political apathy toward Negroes in most of the southern states. 1-18-46

Perhaps much of this can be credited to the fact that when Negroes did vote as Democrats in Texas, in large numbers in Arkansas at the same time and late last year in one section of Georgia, the declaration of long standing among certain elements of white people that civil and racial strife would result was put to the lie.

In 1945 Florida and Georgia, by court suits, were compelled to temper their restrictions against Negro Democrats, bringing to four the number of southern states which have enfranchised Negroes within two years. But now comes Alabama with a plan which extends the reformation to 1946. Just now Alabama is considering opening the Democratic books and primary to Negroes provided they take the pledge to support nominees of the primary in the subsequent election - the pledge required of white party members. 1-18-46

It could be that Alabama is considering this action out of the "bigness" of her heart but it would rather seem that the series of incidents from that state in recent months make it clear that soon Negroes will crash down the walls and their voting as Democrats is inevitable. It could even be that Alabama Democrats fear the uniting and rising up against them of Negroes who would concentrate on the general election and, wtih alliances, nullify effects of the primary.

Whatever the reason,, a giant welcome is extended Alabama. Left now in an ever decreasing membership are, South Carolina, Mississippi and Louisiana white Democrats.

Ala. Paves Way For Negro To Vote

Atlanta Daily World

Atlanta, Georgia

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (SNS)— In conformance with recommendations by party leaders, Alabama democrats abolished the traditional "white' primary, Saturday, paving the way for Negroes otherwise qualified by law to vote in party elections. 1-18-46

Gessner T. McCorvey, committee chairman of Mobile urged that the white primary be discontinued to meet the conditions set out in a decision of the United States Supreme Court and the executive committee went on record as favoring the adoption of more stringent requirements for registration.

The proposed amendment would require the applicant for registration to be able to understand any section of the Constitution, as well to read it as now required, and would eliminate a $300 property ownership clause.

Four candidates for governor and several others for lesser officers have filed formal declarations for the May 7 primary.

21 Negro Applicants Seek Jury Verdict On Vote Restriction

Birmingham News

Fri 2-22-46

Alleging their registration applications had been denied by the County Board of Registrars, 21 Negro war veterans yesterday filed appeal suits in which they asked that Circuit Court juries determine whether they are qualified to vote.

Jury trials were demanded in each of the cases, which were filed by Arthur D. Shores, Negro attorney, under a section of the 1940 Alabama code which permits an appeal to Circuit Court, where "qualifications to register may be determined by a jury."

THE SUITS were directed against Dr. J. B. Vines, Mrs. Eva Whitfield and R. J. Creel as members of the Board of Registrars.

It is alleged in the complaints that the Board of Registrars denied applications of the 21 Negroes when they appeared to register on Jan. 24. The plaintiffs further allege that they are able to read and write in the English language any section of the constitution and are otherwise qualified as voters.

The applicants, according to the complaints, read sections of the constitution when they appeared before the board and presented their discharge certificates from the armed services, but the applications still were denied. Presentation of the discharge certificate permits veterans to claim a waiver of poll tax.

DESPITE all the public stir, debate, misgivings, apprehension and the decision of the U. S. Supreme Court, this Spring's primary election will be conducted along business as usual lines.

The court ruled, on the basis of a Texas case, that a State could not conduct a "white" primary inasmuch as public funds were used to pay for such elections and that the Negro was thus excluded.

A cry went up that the White Primary in Alabama was no more. That, as far as I can discern, is not even true on a basis of what's in a name. Inquiry among Alabama leaders of the Democratic Party establishes that all who vote in the May primary will vote under the sign of the rooster and the slogan — WHITE SUPREMACY, FOR THE RIGHT (see accompanying cut). 2-17-46

As matters stand, there is, I have been told in a most emphatic fashion, no disposition to remove the label from the rooster, emblem of the Democratic Party in Alabama. In fact, it became plain as inquiries were made that nobody had ever thought about the label.

There will be one difference in this year's primary from those of the past. Because of the court decision proscribing "white" primaries, the State Democratic Executive Committee issued its call for the primary without using the word "white." It simply called for an election by Democratic electors.

* * * *

MYSTERY ROOSTER

An incidental point of interest about the chanticleer and his cry is that a diligent effort to establish his origin failed completely to reveal anything. How, when and where the rooster and the slogan came to be adopted is something, surprisingly enough, that all the king's horses and all the king's men couldn't establish.

First, I asked Gov. Sparks, who is uncommonly well-grounded in Alabama's political history.

"Say," he said with a start, "I don't believe I know. I wish you'd let me know when you find out."

Miss Agnes Baggett, chief clerk in the Secretary of State's office, was similarly stumped. Likewise Bob Goodwyn of the County Democratic Committee, who said: "You know, I'm so darn used to that thing I never thought about its origin."

I searched Fleming and Moore, two very thorough Alabama historians, and there was naught of the rooster. Thence to the State Department of Archives and History, whose officials either know everything or can tell you which tome on which rack contains the information. The quest was fruitless.

It's difficult to understand how any rooster that has crowed so long and so loud could be a mystery rooster, but that's the way it is.

Alabama law requires that:

"Each political party shall . . . adopt, prepare and file with the Secretary of State, at least 60 days before each election for State officers, by engraving or otherwise, at least 150 copies of an emblem. . . ."

Since there is such a general lack of knowledge about the natal circumstances of the rooster and his christening, one is left to guess that he broke his shell sometime after Gov. Houston drove the carpetbaggers from the capitol in the 1870's.

What I suspect (and hope) is that some elder statesman of the party or bright young student of its history is going to sit down and write us a biography of the rooster.

* * * *

POLLS POLLS 2-17-46

But as I say, the Spring elections will apparently be conducted as before. A relatively few Negroes will participate and that will be that.

It has never been disclosed before, but about two years ago Gov. Sparks sought to learn just how many Negroes there were in Alabama qualified to vote. Accordingly, he wrote the probate judges of all counties. Of the 67 counties, some 51 responded.

When Gov. Sparks totaled the figures he had a figure of something like 3,500. It should be made clear that this count is an approximate total as there was no way to establish it with complete accuracy. Although 16 counties did not give their figures, it is to reject. not believed that their tallies would add much to the total. So to be conservative, you might say that Alabama has around 5,000 Negroes privileged to vote. 2-17-46

Considering this, it is hard to appreciate the apprehension some of our party leaders feel about a growing Negro vote. Nevertheless, at the meeting here of the State Democratic Executive Committee, party leaders adopted without debate a resolution urging adoption of the Boswell Amendment. This amendment provides that, to qualify to vote, an applicant must be able to "understand" the U. S. Constitution. This amendment is offered and endorsed with the frank and clearly expressed motive of making it easier for registrars to reject applications they wish which would make it increasingly difficult for Negroes to register.

The action was taken, largely through necessity, as the state committee formally designated May 7 as date for the 1946 state and local primaries and June 4 as the run-off date, and was followed by the formal entry of three candidates for governor. 1-13-46

Three Put Hats In Ring For Governor's Seat; Voting Requisites Meanwhile May Be Stiffened

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 12—Alabama Democratic Executive Committee members, with but one outspoken dissenter in the group, Judge Elbert Boozer filed their today removed traditional barriers against "qualified" Negroes voting declarations of candidacy with the same time unanimously urged State Chairman Gessner McCorvey, of Mobile, at the conclusion of the Boswell constitutional amendment of the state committee meeting.

Alabama Public Service Commission President Gordon Persons announced that he would mail his papers to the state chairman immediately. 1-13-46

A POSSIBLE FIFTH CANDIDATE for governor, James E. (Big Jim) Folsom, of Cullman, did not qualify and continued largely noncommittal regarding his candidacy plans.

By its action today the executive committee departed with apparent reluctance, from the long established custom of permitting only white persons to vote in Democratic primaries. State Chairman McCorvey recommended the step as a means of complying with a recent U. S. Supreme Court ruling that Negroes cannot be barred from voting in Democratic primaries when the cost is paid from public funds. 1-13-46

Despite McCorvey's explanation that the action was necessary if Democrats are to continue to conduct primaries for the nomination of candidates and his assurance that the Boswell amendment would guarantee continued control of party affairs by white people, T. H. Maxwell, veteran committee member from Tuscaloosa dissented.

Maxwell said he approved the resolution designating May 7 as the primary date and fixing qualifications of voters and candidates but added that he objected to removal of the word white in describing the Democratic primary.

We can't defy the U. S. Supreme Court, McCorvey replied.

A moment later McCorvey put the question and the resolution was adopted. 1-13-46

Previously McCorvey had explained the court ruling and its effect upon Democratic primaries in Alabama and added that we should go ahead and bow to the law as constructed by the Supreme Court. Even if we do permit qualified Negroes to vote, he added, "it won't amount to a row of pins. In come counties there are only two or three registered Negro voters and in Mobile County there are about 200 Negro voters against 19,000 white voters. The white people are going to run things. They always have and always will."

The Boswell amendment, he added, gives county boards of registrars enlarged powers to grant or deny applications by Negroes to become registered voters.

While Maxwell and one or two others voted "no" on a voice vote when the primary resolution was adopted, the state committee apparently voted unanimously in adopting a resolution calling on voters to support ratification of the Boswell resolution next November.

County Delegation Pushes Move For Negro Vote In Primaries

A majority of the Jefferson County members of the State Democratic Executive Committee will support the state chairman's recommendation, at a meeting of the state body in Montgomery next Saturday, that the word "white" be stricken from the regulations on qualifying voters, thereby giving Negro voters the right to participate in the Democratic party primary elections next May.

Six of the county's eight members of the state committee held a caucus at Hooper's Cafe last night and agreed to support recommendations of Gessner T. McCorvey, of Mobile, chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee, that all voters believing in Democratic party principles and agreeing to support party nominees be allowed to vote in the primaries.

Voting to support the recommendation were H. M. Abercrombie, chairman of the county's delegation to the state committee; Clarence Pinson, Albert Boutwell, Bob Bell and Roy Phipps. Lawson Gambill attended the caucus, but reserved his vote on the matter until Chairman McCorvey's resolution comes before the entire state committee at next Saturday's meeting at the Jefferson Davis Hotel in Montgomery.

TWO DELEGATION MEMBERS were absent—J. B. Aird, on account of illness, and Talbot Ellis, who was out of the city.

The six county delegation members were unanimous in agreeing to support a resolution, expected to be offered at the state committee meeting next Saturday, endorsing the Boswell amendment to the State Constitution. The proposed amendment would change qualifications for vote registration, removing the clause allowing any person with $300 in assessed property to register. The amendment gives boards of registrars in all counties more authority in qualifying voters.

State Chairman McCorvey has circularized all county delegations urging repeal of primary regulations restricting voting to "white electors." He said the U. S. Supreme Court decision in the Texas case—known as the Smith versus Allwright case—made it imperative that Alabama's primary regulations be changed.

YESTERDAY'S CAUCUS ALSO adopted a resolution to allow all service men, whether in or out of the United States now, to qualify to run for public office, if they so desire.

It was pointed out that, although definite dates will not be set until the state meeting next Saturday, the state committee is expected to set March 1 as the final qualifying date, May 7 as the primary date and June 4 for the run-off date.

The county delegation, actually the Ninth District's representatives, agreed to renew that section of the rules for qualifying candidates for public office which requires that a person qualifying to run for a judicial position must be a lawyer and also in good standing with the State Bar Association.

The meeting also adopted a resolution allocating to the Jefferson County Democratic Executive Committee a pro rata share of the qualification fees of circuit judges and circuit solicitors.

Mr. Phipps succeeds A. D. Maddox, who died two years ago, as a member of the county's delegation to the state committee.

MAN IS ACCUSED IN VOTE DISPUTE

Birmingham Ala. Age Herald

MOBILE, Ala., Feb. 1—(AP)—The Mobile County Board of Registrars today followed up criticism of a Negro postal employe by filing a complaint with the postmaster and United States attorney accusing him of violating federal and civil service regulations in aiding Negro vote registrants. 2-2-46

The complaints, signed by Board Chairman J. Milton Schnell, said that J. L. LeFlore who also is executive secretary of the Mobile branch of the citizens committee, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, had engaged in "unusual political activity."

Schnell said yesterday LeFlore "has persistently insisted upon entering the board of registrars' office for purpose of coaching other Negroes who were being examined by board members as to their fitness to become registered voters."

He reported that the Mobile branch of the NAACP had filed a complaint with the Department of Justice that the Board of Registrars was discriminating against Negro vote registrants.

The board has reported a big pickup in the number of Negro vote registrants since the Alabama Democratic Executive Committee opened its primary elections to qualified Negro voters last month.

'Constitution Test' Stumps 2 Out Of 3

MOBILE, ALA., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Chairman Milton Schnell reported today that more than 30 Negroes appeared before the Mobile County Board of Registrars here today seeking to qualify as voters.

Schnell said the number was "unusually large." He attributed the pickup to the action of the State Democratic Executive Committee Saturday in Montgomery in opening its primary elections to qualified Negro voters.

All of the applicants were given a written examination testing their ability to read and comprehend the United States Constitution and Schnell said that only one of three applicants whose papers had been graded qualified as a registered voter.

Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey of the State executive committee, estimated recently that only 275 of the approximately 19,000 registered voters in Mobile County were Negroes.

Feb. 1 is the registration deadline.

NAACP IN MOBILE ENTERS PROTEST

Birmingham, Ala. Age Herald

MOBILE, Ala., Jan. 31—(AP)—An official of the Mobile Branch of the National Association for the advancement of Colored People said tonight the Mobile group had filed a complaint with the Department of Justice that the Mobile County Board of Registrars was discriminating against Negro vote registrants.

J. L. LeFore, Negro postal employe and executive secretary of the Mobile Branch of the Citizens Committee of the NAACP, declared, "our organization has called the attention of the federal authorities to the dilatory tactics of the Mobile County Board of Registrars" in examining Negro registrants.

He made the statement after Milton Schnell, chairman of the Mobile County Board of Registrats, announced he was protesting to Postmaster William B. Taylor against alleged political activity by LeFore in connection with registering of Negro voters. 2-1-46

"LeFore has persistly insisted upon entering the Board of Registrars office for the purpose of coaching other Negroes who were being examined by board members as to their fitness to become registered voters," Schnell said.

Schnell denied that there was any discrimination against Negroes and said that written examinations to test ability to read and understand the United States Constitution were given uneducated whites as well as Negroes.

The board chairman said that since the Alabama Democratic Executive Committee opened its primary elections to qualified Negro voters last month, a record number of Negroes had sought to register. He estimated that "about 500" Negroes, most of them returning service men and school teachers, had sought to qualify during the present registration period, ending tomorrow. 2-1-46

"I have appeared before the Board of Registrars as a voucher and witness for several colored persons whom I have known for a long time," LeFore said. "I deny that I have violated the Hatch Act or federal civic service rules in any manner."

The Ballot in Birmingham

Mon. 3-11-46

Apocryphal though it was, the story had wide circulation in Birmingham, Ala., last week: A Negro college graduate, taking a voters' registration test, fully explained an intricate section of the Constitution, translated on sight a difficult passage in French, and then read from a Greek newspaper. "It says here that niggers can't vote in Alabama." Whereupon the registrar said, "You sure have caught on, son," and slammed down the window. Newsweek

But the story was not without its origins. Last month from the heart of Birmingham's Negro business district, scene of Octavus Roy Cohen's Florian Slappey stories, 60 Negro war veterans marched to the Jefferson County Courthouse. Patiently they took registration tests; patiently they received the news that they could not register. Last week the veterans had high hopes that their march might still accomplish something: 21 of them filed suit in Circuit Court, alleging not racial discrimination but an illegal act by the County Board of Registrars in denying applications to qualified citizens.

NEGRO VOTERS

To the Editor of The News:

I am a young voter and for the past several days I have been reading in magazines where Negroes of this state are not receiving fair treatment in becoming registered voters.

I have read under the Alabama law where a person may qualify to vote if he can either show that he holds a certain minimum amount of personal or real property or if he can read and write. pm. 3-12-46

In one magazine I read where the Board of Registers is trying to discourage qualified Negroes in Mobile from becoming registered voters. I have also read where Negroes who went to the Board of Registers must spend hours, where his white fellow citizen stays only a few minutes.

In Birmingham, Capt. H. C. Terell, head of the veterans' voter registration committee of the Southern Negro Youth Congress, is trying to get as many as 15,000 Negroes, who have served time in the war, to pay poll tax, with the aid of his associates, although he knows that under the Alabama law veterans are not required to pay poll taxes.

As for my opinion, I think these polls should be opened to everyone, so that we all can live up to the laws and that this country can have a true democracy.

Tell It To Old Grandma

"BURY IT DEEP"

Editor, The Advertiser: The Advertiser

Will Alabama on Nov. 5 vote into its Constitution an amendment of deception, and falsehood to mislead and corrupt its future citizens? Montgomery, Ala.

How can we have an honest and truthful people if our fundamental law carries a ruse, a subterfuge which pretends to be for one purpose, when in fact, it is for an entirely different purpose? How can we develop good will and peaceable relations with an amendment that is based on hate and prejudices? Sun. 11-3-46

The adoption of the Boswell Amendment would destroy all democratic freedom in Alabama and make this the most corrupt State in the Union, politically. A good woman told me she was refused the privilege of voting years ago, when it was known she had voted against Al Smith. The same prejudice would have included me as well as the most God-fearing people in America.

If I were one of the big bosses, under such an amendment, I would ask Mr. Boswell, and other Democratic committee members to "explain the due process of law" clause in the Federal Constitution, and most of them would go home without voting. It is not meant as a general voting qualification, and therein lies its mendacious character, which makes it unworthy of any serious consideration. It is unthinkable that the people will resort to such an insincere, indirect and evasive scheme to reach an unworthy end.

The present law has not sent the State to the "dimnition" bow wows, and if it needs strengthening, let us do it in an honest, constructive manner, and not clothe ward heelers and corrupt politicians with authority to exclude everybody from the polls who may have offended their totalitarian highness.

One advocate of this nefarious amendment says in the Grandma Column: "It is imperative to understand that the uninformed self-conscious masses, responding to pressure groups — will never spell out representative government."

Oh, Yes, the "uninformed, self-conscious masses" can't be trusted. That is what demagogues and ward heelers have always said. We have had some politicians who could not trust the masses. It turned out that the masses did not trust them. It will be so again next Tuesday. The "uninformed self-conscious masses" can go to war, fight our battles, till our soil, run our factories, work our mines, but it never would do for them to vote; so a board of three lordly commissioners must have authority to decide who are the "uninformed, self-conscious masses" that should not vote. The people will not be fooled by this cry of corrupt politics. They said that about Thomas Jefferson's democracy, but the people won and they will win again.

To demand that voters shall explain constitutions about which Supreme courts constantly disagree is too absurd for serious consideration. I know the spirit of Alabama people, among whom I have gone for twenty years, pretty well, and I am banking on their sober, honest judgement to reassert their political freedom next Tuesday. This wail from political bossism cannot turn back the tide of progress and scuttle the rights of the people. They will bury that amendment too deep for resurrection.

STATEMENT FROM JOE N. POOLE

Editor, The Advertiser:

In your issue of October 29, 1946, you accused me of making an improper use of the state's money. Specifically, you found fault with me for using the front page of The Alabama Farmer's Market Bulletin to tell its readers why I am for the Boswell Amendment and why I think they, too, should support it. In your editorial you did not indicate how much of the state's money I used. To make the record complete, let me say that the amount involved was $163.14. The front pages of two issues of The Bulletin were used and the cost of one page is $81.57.

I have no apology to offer. I am just as much in favor of the Boswell Amendment today as I was yesterday and if I deem the Boswell Amendment's passage important to the welfare of the farmers of Alabama, whom I am commissioned to serve, and elect to say so on the front page of The Bulletin, it is strictly a matter to be decided by myself. I made the decision and that is that.

It is true, as you went on to point out in the same editorial, that I am a defeated candidate for Governor of Alabama. The fact causes me less in regret than it appears to afford you in satisfaction. I was not the only candidate defeated in the gubernatorial primary; but that is beside the point. I am getting at something else and it causes me more grief and more concern than any reverses in a party primary can cause. This is what grieves me:

I came up in a day when many of us in Alabama looked to the editorial page of The Advertiser for wise counsel and guidance. are intelligent men who think for themselves.

Then it seemed that good and strong hands steered it through the issues that arose. Major Screws, Captain Sheehan, Mr. Hall seemed like giants to many of us. Sometimes we disagreed with them but they never let us down. It was like a difference of opinion as between gentlemen. I think perhaps that was because they did not gloat when they won a victory and did not complain when they lost.

My skin is as thick as another's and criticism does not hurt me. Brickbats turn out to be roses before they hit their mark, some times. I am just disappointed and feel like something has been lost to the state when editorials in The Advertiser are degraded with personal thrusts and gloating references, that the gentlemen who used to write them would no more think of using than they would think of using obscenities.

I think, too, that The Advertiser is becoming somewhat intolerant, although it has for as many years as I can remember, preached tolerance. It has lately taken up the practice of picking to pieces the motives of men who do not agree with it. I know little about a newspaper, but this is a practice I had never associated with a gentleman.

Now, the Advertiser's editorial page talks piously about a misuse of state's funds. I can remember the time when some members of The Advertiser's reportorial staff accepted handouts from various of the state's departments in the form of remuneration for writing articles for those departments and having them printed in The Advertiser.

In those days The Advertiser's management was not as opulent as it is today. Furthermore, it was doing a good job for the State and some of us who did not consider this form of subsidy exactly proper were content to let it go on. We felt that it was the State's way of helping The Advertiser get out a good paper by helping its reporters to enjoy a living salary. I always understood that the management was aware of the practice. If that be true, I do not see how The Advertiser's editorial writers can now raise complaints when other publications carry articles with which they disagree. The pot never had much ground to stand on when it called the kettle black.

I am what I am and the present-day editorial writers of The Advertiser will never change me very much. I repeat, though, that I feel a sense of loss, since the once-fine editorial writers of this century-old newspaper, have adopted new and lower standards than those observed by the giants of the editor's chair who made it what it was a decade ago.

FEARS POLITICAL MACHINE

Editor, The Advertiser:

In the discussion of the proposed Amendment No. 4 — the Boswell Amendment — on which we are to vote Tuesday, there has been little said, publicly, at least, of the possibilities should the Amendment be ratified, of the building up of a political machine second to nothing we have seen in Alabama. The fact that the so-called politicians of the State appear to be solidly behind the Amendment, and the apparent liberal use of funds by the Democratic Executive Committee (if we may believe the statements in the press), seems to indicate to the writer that there may be more to the Amendment than appears on the surface.

It could easily be that the attempted control of the Negro vote is only a smokescreen to hide the real purpose. Should the Amendment carry it will be entirely possible for "the powers that be" to build up a political machine, giving a strangle-hold on the State.

The language of the Amendment is quite clear. Under no circumstances would I voluntarily place myself in a position where the whims of a registration board, or those controlling it, could legally deny me the right to cast my ballot. I have yet to learn of an instance where the vast majority of professional politicians in any State seriously exercised themselves for the sole benefit of John Q. Public.

PRAISES MINISTERS

Editor, The Advertiser:

I was pleased to read in The Advertiser the public statement of 80 clergymen against Amendment No. 4.

It is a very healthy thing for ministers, who are also citizens, to express their views on public affairs, particularly on a matter as vital to Alabama's future as Amendment Number 4. One editor has criticized the clergymen for taking a stand against the amendment, but what kind of religion is it that would try to ignore the problems of the day and avoid taking any stand on controversial issues? These clergymen are to be commended, not criticized, for their outspoken statement of opposition to Amendment No. 4.

Any suggestion that anybody is using these ministers is of course absurd. They

WHAT KIND OF VOTERS?

Editor, The Advertiser: The Advertiser

Forty years ago a great statesman said there were three hindrances to good citizenship in the United States. He called them indolence, private self-interest, and party spirit. Montgomery, Ala.

The opponents of the B-A are mistaken when it is stated that too much authority is given to the County Registrars. The opposite is true. It is imperative to understand that uninformed self-conscious masses, responding to pressure groups, under leaders who aspire to office for self only, and merely by reason of promise to satisfy their special self-interest, will never spell out REPRESENTATIVE GOVERNMENT.

Care must be exercised not to over-politicalize our government. While it is more than a policeman, it is much less than a philanthropist. The pioneers who cut this civilization out of a wilderness, risking their lives in the task, were urged onward by a purpose and a spirit entirely different from that of those who today look upon this government, a blood-bought treasure, merely for what it may advance to them as a common right, and without any thought of the cost and the sacrifice implied; which at some future time, they — the would-be voter — may be called upon to pay in full and at the supreme cost.

If this form of government is to be preserved in its strength, the voters of tomorrow must have more than the example of our honest labor and civic sacrifice. The right of suffrage should be predicted on personal virtue and individual intelligence and Christian behavior. Tri. 11-1-46

Like Saint Peter who will refuse many applying at the Pearly Gates for admittance; so I, as a Registrar, Boswell Amendment or no amendment, would be most careful to keep unstained the membership of my party. WANTS PEOPLE TO SPEAK OUT

I have read with a great deal of interest your debate with Dixon, editorials, and letters in the Montgomery Advertiser, concerning the Boswell Amendment. I especially enjoyed letters by two Methodist ministers and heartily agree with every word they said. I feel that it is high time that we have some red-blooded citizens, who are not afraid to speak out loud in the interest of "liberty and justice for all," against "discrimination because of race, creed, or color," and against disfranchising those, whose cultural opportunities have been limited. My text is: "Love thy neighbor, as thyself," "Be ye kind one to another," and "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you." These are Christ's own Commandments to us. How can we expect to prosper and be happy if we do otherwise?

RESENTS COL. AYERS' REMARKS

Editor, The Advertiser: The Advertiser

Being an old line Democrat of reconstruction days, and knowing what I am talking about, I resent the remarks made by Mr. Harry Ayers of Anniston (Advertiser of Oct. 30). I was here, when Anniston was Mr. Ayers' souls in saving Alabama from the rule of man's rule, Alabama would probably be in Scallawags, Carpetbaggers and ignorant negroes. If they had not defended white-NOT the RED up to this day. Mr. Ayers' remarks will add many votes for the 4th Amendment in the Black Belt counties.

Dixon, Dobbins Argue On Boswell Amendment

The News Birmingham, Ala.
Fri. 10-18-46

ATHENS, Ala., Oct. 18—(AP)—The proposed Boswell amendment, a restrictive vote registration measure upon which the people of Alabama will ballot on Nov. 5, was both lauded and pilloried in a debate here last night between a former governor and a newspaper editor.

Frank Dixon, of Birmingham, the ex-governor, said the amendment was needed to forestall abolishment of segregation laws, and to prevent Negroes from being elected to the State Legislature and other public offices.

Charles G. Dobbins, editor of The Montgomery Advertiser, argued on the other hand that adoption of the amendment would bring "shame to the white race," and would invite "harsh federal legislation."

THE AMENDMENT would make registration requirements more stringent by requiring that each registrant be of "good moral character," and be able to "understand and explain" any section of the U. S. Constitution.

"It is my firm belief," said Dixon, "that we face the elimination of our segregation laws, of our zoning laws; that we will see our children in mixed schools of whites and Negroes, our Legislature with strong Negro minorities, our juries of mixed races; many of our city and county governments either manned by Negroes or largely dominated by them, should we fail to pass the Boswell amendment."

If the amendment fails to win adoption, he continued, the state will witness the "mass registration of 200,000 unqualified electors, capable only of being willing tools in the hands of unscrupulous men."

DOBBINS, IN CALLING for the amendment's defeat, said passage of the measure would give "every radical and unfriendly group in the nation" a prop upon which to "condemn us and to use us as an object lesson in demanding legislation such as the FEPC or a bill freeing voters from state restrictions in federal elections."

"That, my friends, would be hard to handle," he added, "but if we permit passage of this amendment . . . then we really are asking for trouble."

He argued that present safeguards are fully adequate to prevent wholesale registration of unfit voters.

Some 300 persons heard the debate, which was sponsored by the Athens Rotary Club. There were no debate judges, and no winner was chosen.

POOLE SUPPORTS BOSWELL PLAN

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 8—(AP)—Agriculture Commissioner Joe Poole appealed to Alabama voters today to support the Boswell amendment — Amendment No. 4 in the array of amendments that will be voted upon in next Tuesday's general election—he replied: 10-31-46-Thurs.

"I am for the Boswell amendment because I don't want my great-grandfather, who drove the Carpetbaggers and Negroes out of the State Capitol in Montgomery, to be ashamed of me."

Edward Asbury O'Neal, according to Thomas M. Owen's History of Alabama, returned from the War Between the States with the rank of brigadier general, with an enviable military record, resumed his practice of law in Florence, taking a great interest in politics, and "devoted all his energies, in 1874, to the fight which restored the Democratic party to ascendency and the white race to supremacy in Alabama."

Mr. O'Neal is here for the Alabama Farm Bureau convention. It will be recalled that he headed the Alabama organization before being called out of his home State to direct the destinies of the American Farm Bureau Federation. Montgomery, Ala.

Asked if he cared to comment on his reason for voting for the Boswell amendment, he replied:

"I am for the Boswell amendment because I don't want my great-grandfather, who drove the Carpetbaggers and Negroes out of the State Capitol in Montgomery, to be ashamed of me."

Writing in the current issue of Alabama Farmers, a publication of the Agriculture Department, Poole declared in part:

"I am for the Boswell Amendment because if we adopt the amendment, we . . . through our boards of registrars will be able to determine who will vote in our primaries."

But if it fails, he added, the boards will be compelled by a U. S. Supreme Court decision to register "practically everyone who applies." He referred to a ruling that Negroes cannot be barred from voting in a party primary solely because of their race.

The Boswell plan, which will be decided upon in the Nov. 5 general election, would require prospective voters to be able to "understand and explain" any section of the U. S. Constitution to the registrar instead of merely reading and writing it.

In addition, it would repeal the present provision which gives the right of ballot to anyone who owns $300 worth of property.

The agriculture commissioner emphasized that "I am not a Negro baiter and I am not a Negro hater," but that he did not think it would be "to the best interest" of the Negro to be given a blanket franchise.

He insisted, however, that "all citizens who appreciate the Negro for his real worth should see to it that the best Negroes are allowed to register and vote with their good white folks."

"Otherwise," he declared, "we will force all the good Negroes away from their white folks into a party sponsored by Republicans, renegades, a few well-meaning but misguided people and a lot of left-wing intellectuals.

"This in my opinion would prove a calamity for Alabama."

Alabama Voters To Determine Fate Of Nominees, Controversial Issues

Democratic, Republican Candidates Matched In Interest By 'Boswell Amendment,' Others

BY HUGH W. SPARROW
News Staff Writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 2—Besides expressing their choice between Democratic and Republican nominees, Alabama voters Tuesday will decide the fate of nine proposed amendments to the constitution, including the much debated and controversial "Boswell amendment" and three other proposals of statewide importance.

One of the three would lengthen legislative sessions by substituting 36 "legislative day" sessions for the present 60 "calendar day" biennial sessions. Another would permit the state in cooperation with counties and cities to build and operate hospitals and the third would permit the state to build and operate airports.

The five other amendments on Tuesday's ballot are largely of local importance and non-controversial.

Topping the list of amendments, from the standpoint of public interest, is the Boswell proposal which appears as "Proposed Amendment No. 4" on Tuesday's ballot.

HERE IS THE WAY the amendment is phrased on the ballot:

"Proposed Amendment No. 4. Shall Sec. 181 of the Constitution of Alabama be amended to read as follows?

FOLSOM AGAINST NO. 4—

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 2—(AP)—Gov.-Designate James E. Folsom will make two statewide radio broadcasts in opposition to the Boswell amendment Monday night, the Citizens' Committee Against the Amendment announced Saturday.

A Critical Decision For Alabama

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. Sun

The Advertiser, from the outset, has attempted to oppose Amendment Number 4, the so-called Boswell Amendment, entirely on the basis of calm judgement and established fact. If, after the emotional tensions of six years of war the peoples of the world are unwilling so to base their decisions, then there is little hope for the preservation of our civilization.

Some will say we err in viewing this suffrage battle in Alabama from a broad world perspective. But no man who has served in the late war, and viewed first-hand the misery and privation wrought by fear and suspicion among the nations, can fail to see that all the frauds, the compromises with decency for the sake of temporary advantage, the willingness to sacrifice "just a little" of democracy's integrity for the benefit of special interests—all add up to the certainty of final catastrophe for the American way of life.

This vote in Alabama on Tuesday is significant not just for Alabama—it is one of the symptoms that tell whether in the world's greatest democracy we are bolstering our defenses against attacks from Communism and other competing philosophies of government, or whether, instead, we are in fact steadily eroding our democracy, permitting a gradual weakening of democratic principle that in the end will make us an easy prey to our enemies.

Here Is The Document

A number of readers have asked that we publish the actual Amendment Number 4, in order that they may study it objectively as a legal document. Here is the Amendment, with black type used to show those portions of the law which would be added by a "Yes" vote on Tuesday:

The Advertiser

Section 181. After the first day of January, nineteen hundred and three, the following persons, and no others, who, if their place of residence shall remain unchanged, will have, at the date of the next general election, the qualifications as to residence prescribed in section 178 of this article, shall be qualified to register as electors provided they shall not be disqualified under section 182 of this constitution: those who can read and write, understand and explain any article of the Constitution of the United States in the English language and who are physically unable to work and those who can read and write, understand and explain any article of the Constitution of the United States in the English language and who have worked or been regularly engaged in some lawful employment, business, or occupation, trade, or calling for the greater part of the twelve months next preceding the time they offer to register, including those who are unable to read and write if such inability is due solely to physical disability; provided however, no persons, shall be entitled to register as electors except those who are of good character and who understand the duties and obligations of good citizenship under a republican form of government.

(In addition, the Amendment would eliminate the right to register by reason of the ownership of property, as provided in Section 181 of the present Constitution.)

Offers Faulty Qualifications

We oppose passage of this Amendment Number 4 on the principle that the right to vote in Alabama or in any other state should be regulated by honest, measurable qualifications. We submit that the qualifications here added—two of them in particular—are not subject to accurate appraisal by Boards of Registrars, no matter how able or how fair they may be.

One of these added qualifications is that an applicant must "understand and explain" any article of the Constitution of the United States. Obviously this requirement is subject to abuse. No two lawyers in Alabama would agree precisely on an interpretation of law. Clearly the intent here is to give Registrars arbitrary power to approve or disapprove any applicant. The same opportunity is provided in the requirement that a man must be of "good character," for the law offers no standards for the evalution of "good character."

The clear intent of the proposed Amendment is revealed by the various claims of its supporters. Mr. Horace Wilkinson, of Birmingham, says if he were a Registrar under this law he would simply look at a man and decide by his color whether the man could, or could not, qualify to vote. Mr. Gessner McCorvey, of Mobile, says the Amendment would give the Registrars "discretion." Mr. Joe Poole says "adoption of the Boswell Amendment will simply mean a continuation of what we are doing at present."

From these three statements it is obvious that in effect the registration law of Alabama, under the Boswell Amendment, would mean whatever the dominant political faction in the state desired it to mean. This would not mean democracy in Alabama, but totalitarian power for a few men.

The potential evils in such a system of registration are several. The contributor of a letter on this page sees in it the invitation to machine domination. Albert A. Carmichael, Attorney-General-nominate of Alabama, sees in it an adroit maneuver to hold back in small, easily controlled numbers, the white electorate of Alabama, of whom there are under present laws more than 500,000 disqualified men and women of voting age. These are valid contentions which must give pause to any thoughtful voter.

Good People On Both Sides

Yet The Advertiser is not disposed to impugn the motives of all the proponents of Amendment Number 4. There are many citizens of decent spirit and honest conviction who support the proposal. They are persuaded that the imminent dangers of violent upheaval in Alabama justify a "Yes" vote even on a law which many of them admit is crude and vulnerable.

To them we say it is better to stand by a law that has served us well since 1903 than to adopt a carelessly phrased law that holds multiple dangers.

To them we say once again what every informed Alabamian knows — that this State is not in danger of Negro domination. This is not to deny that with the slow education and economic advance of the Negro, and with the strong Federal support of fair opportunities for all, there is likely to be a gradual increase in the number of Negro voters all over the South. That is inevitable, regardless of whether or not Alabama throws up a hasty temporary iron wall—a wall obviously vulnerable before the Supreme Court of the United States. But the increase under present law will be slow, it will be under provisions that have stood the test of time and the U. S. Supreme Court, and it will make possible the recognition of those Negroes who, by their educational attainments and their correct deportment, have earned their right to full citizenship.

Some say the Amendment is aimed only at Negroes; some say it is aimed only at the low-income white people; still others say it is aimed at both groups. This newspaper cares not whether the target is either or both groups. We oppose the arbitrary infringement of suffrage rights for any group of good, qualified citizens whether white or black, Protestant or Catholic, Democratic or Republican, rich or poor. This is fundamental American principle, and it is this newspaper's confident expectation that no matter how much money is spent, or how many scare stories are told, the people of Alabama will stand on that principle Tuesday by voting "No" on Amendment Number 4.

A Former School Teacher Speaks Out

Editor, The Advertiser: The Advertiser

When John Hancock signed the Declaration of Independence, he wrote in large, bold script so that George III could read it without spectacles. In like manner, lest Mr. McCorvey and Committee think this be "whispering," I am expressing my views over the loudspeaker of Grandma Advertiser. Perhaps it is because Mr. McCorvey is as hard of hearing as he is of understanding the principles of democratic government that he thinks the shouts of protest from those who oppose him are whispers.

If the Boswell Amendment passes, practically unlimited power will be delegated to boards of registrars, which, as you know, are appointed by the Governor, the Auditor, and the Commissioner of Agriculture and Industries (Mr. Joe Poole, present incumbent). This power to appoint gives the governor and board far-reaching power. In fact, it gives them, through those they appoint, virtual power to say who can vote and who cannot. These registrars determine not only what new voters can register, but they also decide every two years whose names shall remain on the poll lists and whose names shall be purged. Both of these are necessary functions, but with the arbitrary power that the Boswell Amendment will give them, or require of them, our boards of registrars can become so many Star Chambers and Courts of Inquisition.

From what I know of some of the present boards of registrars—those who recently resigned in Macon County, for example—I feel no more inclined to accept their interpretation of the Constitution of the United States or their judgement as to what constitutes "good character" and the "duties and obligations of good citizenship under a republican form of government" than I feel inclined to accept Cotton Mather's interpretation of the nature of Divinity, Michael Wigglesworth's views on infant damnation, or Judge Sewall's verdicts in the Witchcraft Trials. One is about as out of date as the other. Montgomery, Ala.

Would Make Task More Difficult

This is not a blanket indictment of all registrars, but I must say that I do not share Governor Sparks' blind "faith in the people of Alabama who will be selected as registrars, that they will be fair and honest." The Boswell Amendment will make it more difficult for them to be fair and honest. It is perfectly obvious that interpretations of the Constitution vary radically. Opinions as to what constitutes a "state of grace" in good citizenship vary even more widely. Conceivably there are some among us who might at some time be registrars who could not under their oath allow for instance, Horace Wilkinson or Frank Dixon to vote under the "duties and obligations of good citizenship." Since the Boswell Amendment will substitute the "elected" from the "damned" when it comes to the ballot. I ask you, Grandma, and sentiments they have expressed recently. In his speech before the Athens Rotary Club, Dixon sounded dangerously like Bilbo. I, for one, do not consider that we are committing the power of choosing government for these pertinent facts: Who are our registrars in Montgomery County? How long have they served as such? I wonder what their special qualifications are. Perhaps they are admirable, but I believe that in general we need to raise the qualifications of our registrars. Perhaps they should be Constitutional lawyers, sociologists, anthropologists—real anthropologists, too, complete with college degrees, not the spurious self-styled variety we hear so much from—to say nothing of their being men and women of good will. We will want to be very sure that they themselves understand "the duties and obligations of good citizenship under a republican form of government."

Sat. 10-26-46

The Call For Heflin

As for the threatened mass resignation of boards of registrars, I see nothing alarming in that. I do not know, but I am asking the question: Could it be that this is part of the scare strategy being used by Mr. McCorvey and the Democratic Committee? Any cause that is desperate enough to call on Heflin to beat his tom-toms is desperate enough to resort to just such a device. But whether these resignations are spontaneous or part of a larger plan, I believe that Alabama could not only survive, but stands to profit by more resignations.

At this point I cannot help observing that I have never heard of a member of a draft board resigning because he had to draft a Negro; I have never heard of a tax collector resigning because he had to collect money from a disfranchised Negro citizen.

Alabama is passing through a great crisis. She stands on the eve of what can be an era of great progress and prosperity—and I do not mean in the material sense alone. We will soon have two liberal United States Senators and a liberal Governor, the first time we have had all three liberal in many years—perhaps ever. We can go forward with Hill, Sparkman, and Folsom in our domestic policy, or we can go back into the night of feudalism and Bourbonism with the McCorveys, Wilkinsons, Bonners, Sandersons, Pooles, Dixons, and Heflins. We can follow these reactionary men—and one of the strongest arguments against the Boswell Amendment is a roll call of its supporters—and take our place right there beside Mississippi and become more and more provincial, backward, and oppressive in our government and in our economic and social philosophy. Or we can listen to the wiser, more reasonable, more moderate counsel of such men as Lister Hill, Jesse Hearin, Charles Dobbins, Col. Rives, John B. Nichols, and others who oppose this oppressive legislation.

Object Lesson In Democracy

With all the statesmanship, with all the sense of responsibility and social consciousness of mice playing with matches, the members of the 1945 Legislature set off this conflagration of the Boswell Amendment. But I believe good will come of it in spite of them. The whole affair will serve as a powerful object lesson in getting down to the grass roots of democracy. It will make us realize the importance of selecting with greater care the state senators and legislators, our Democratic Committee, our Commissioner of Agriculture and Industries, as well as our officials holding "bigger" offices.

Above all, the issues involved in the Boswell Amendment have called for a showing of hands as nothing else has in Alabama for years. We have examined our own consciences. We know better where we stand; and we know who stands for what. Never has there been a more clear-cut division between the progressive and the reactionary elements in the State.

If Mr. McCorvey thinks I'm whispering, I suggest he borrow some of those funds of the State Democratic Committee while he still has access to them and go out and buy himself an ear trumpet.

Boswell Plan Changes Cited By McLendon

Differences in the wording of Section 181, State Constitution, as now written and as it would appear should be Boswell amendment be adopted were explained yesterday by Clyde F. McLendon, member of the teaching profession and student of constitutional law.

If the amendment should be adopted, he said, differences in the wording following, as indicated by parentheses:

"Section 181.—After the first day of January, 1903, the following persons, and no others, who, if their place of residence shall remain unchanged, will have, at the date of the next general election, the qualifications as to residence prescribed in section 178 of this article, shall be qualified to register as electors, provided they shall not be disqualified under section 182 of this Constitution: those who can read and write, (understand and explain), any article of the Constitution of the United States in the English language and who are physically unable to work, and those who can read and write, (understand and explain), any article of the Constitution of the United States in the English language, and who have worked or been regularly engaged in some lawful employment, business, or occupation, trade or calling for the greater part of the twelve months next preceding the time they offer to register (including) those who are unable to read or write if such inability is due solely to physical disability; (provided, however, no person shall be entitled to register as electors except those of good character and who understands the duties and obligations of good citizenship under a republican form of government").

Part Omitted

Also the following part of said section 181 as it now appears in the Constitution will be left out, to-wit:

"or, second, the owner in good faith in his own right, or the husband of a woman who is the owner in good faith, in her own right, of forty acres of land situate in this State, upon which they reside; or the owner in good faith, in his own right, or the husband of a woman who is the owner in good faith, in her own right, of real estate situate in this State, assessed for taxation at the value of three hundred dollars or more, or the owner in good faith, in his own right, or the husband of a woman who is the owner, in her own right, of personal property in this State assessed for taxation at three hundred dollars or more; provided, that the taxes due upon such real or personal property for the year next preceding the year in which he offers to register shall have been paid, unless the assessment shall have been legally contested and is undetermined."

Now, if the Boswell proposed amendment be not adopted, all the provisions set out above, except those enclosed within the parentheses, will remain as Section 181 of the Constitution, with the word "and" in place of "including" in the third pair of parenthesis; and also the provisions regarding property set out next above.

It will readily and clearly be seen that, if the Boswell proposed amendment be adopted, its provisions for registering will be quite similar, in a number of respects, to the qualifications thought necessary and wise by the United States Congress when those two bodies enacted the following, a few years ago, to-wit:

"No person shall be naturalized . . . unless such petitioner . . . is a person of good moral character, attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United State, and well disposed to the good order and happiness of the United States."—8 U. S. C. A., sec. 707.

Rains, Fifth and Pete Jarman, Sixth, will go back for new terms without opponents.

Rep. Sam Hobbs of the Fourth District is opposed by Roger S. Bingham, (R); Carter Manasco's GOP rival in the Seventh District is M. H. Woodard, and Laurie C. Battle, (D), and J. C. Bass, (R), and the Ninth District nominees.

The Republicans have a slate although Democratic nomination is tantamount to election.

The voters also will elect hundreds of county officials and 141 members of the state legislature.

The Amendments

Here, in the order in which they appear on the ballot, are the nine proposed constitutional amendments to be voted on in Tuesday's general election:

No. 1—To permit the cities of Decatur and Cullman to levy a special tax for educational purposes and permit Morgan County to impose a special tax for hospital purposes.

No. 2—To authorize the state to build, operate and maintain hospitals to get around present constitutional prohibition against state engaging in works of internal improvement.

No. 3—To authorize the city of Haleyville to increase ad valorem taxes.

No. 4—Boswell

No. 4—The Boswell Amendment. Would require prospective registrants to be able to "understand and explain" instead of merely to read and write any section of the U. S. Constitution, and would remove present provision which gives right of ballot to anyone who owns $300 worth of property.

No. 5—Would authorize an increase up to 1 1-4 per cent in the ad valorem tax rate of any municipality whose tax-levying powers are limited below that amount.

No. 6—Would put the state legislature back on a 36-legislative day basis instead of the present 60 calendar day limitation, and would give members an expense allowance in addition to their $10 a day salary.

No. 7—Would authorize the state to build, equip and maintain airports, and offer end for same reason as amendment No 2 for hospitals.

No. 8—Would require the governing body of any county except Mobile and Montgomery to call an election on petition of 100 or more voters to decide whether to levy a tax to build a county hospital. The tax could not exceed 10 mills in each $100 valuation of property.

No. 9—Would give Mobile County the right to extend its present constitutional debt limit for construction of public buildings, roads and bridges.

Unopposed for the late John H. Bankhead's Senate seat is the Democratic-nominee, House Majority Whip John Sparkman.

A light vote of not more than 175,000 is anticipated in the off-year election. Montgomery, Ala.

Newest development in the battle of words over the Boswell Amendment came yesterday in a charge that advocates of the proposal had violated the State Corrupt Practice Act.

Richard T. Rives, Montgomery attorney and leader in the citizen's committee against the Amendment, said his group had filed a financial statement in accordance with the law but that none had come from any committee on the other side.

The Secretary of State's office confirmed that. Sun. 11-3-46

The Boswell plan is one of nine proposed changes in the state constitution which will be voted on in Tuesday's election. The others would permit the state to build and operate hospitals and airports; would give members of the state legislature more time in which to meet and more money; and would make changes in local government financing.

Sparks Defends Boswell Plan

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 22—(AP) — Predicting passage of the Boswell amendement at the polls now on Nov. 5, Gov. Chauncey Sparks insisted today that it would not endanger the franchise of persons registered in Alabama since 1903.

Opponents of the plan to tighten up on voter registration requirements have contended it would be retroactive to 1903 and that anyone who has become an elector since that time could be compelled to re-register under the new law.

The amendment, which advocates say is designed primarily to prevent a flood of negro balloting, would require prospective voters to be able to "understand and explain" any section of the U. S. constitution.

The opening words of the amendment are the same as those in the present section of 181 of the state constitution, "after the first day of January, 1903, . . . ". The requirements for voting are set out following that.

Opponents claim that because of the wording, the amendment would go back to 1903 and would affect anyone registering after that date. Gov. Sparks, however, told reporters today that in his opinion the legislature has established safeguards against forcing re-registration, and that the constitution as amended would be no more retroactive than it is now.

He cited a legislative act which provides for a biennial purge of the voting list to remove only the names of persons who have changed their place of residence, those who have died, and those who have been convicted of a vote not crime or committed to a mental institution.

Although he said he believed the amendment would pass, the governor predicted the margin would be "slight," and the total vote would not be more than 150,000 or 175,000.

The Nine Amendments

The News BY J. F. ROTHERMEL Birmingham

The attention paid to the Boswell amendment has tended to obscure the fact that the amendment is only one of nine proposed changes in the Alabama Constitution which are to be voted on in the general election Nov. 5. Six of the amendments are statewide in their application. All nine amendments were passed at the 1945 session of the Legislature, but were not submitted to the electorate in the election of that Fall in order to permit voters to give undivided attention that year to the question of disposition of the surplus in the state income tax. It was considered inadvisable to link that matter with other issues, which might fail or succeed because of the attitude toward the income tax question. Ala.

A similar situation may prevail now, however, as a result of which the widespread opposition to the Boswell amendment may jeopardize other amendments, most of which are unquestionably sound. Voters should differentiate clearly between the amendments, however, and not cast negative votes on all amendments simply because they feel the Legislature erred in submitting the Boswell amendment. Fri. 10-18-46

Amendment No. 1 applies only to Morgan County, the city of Decatur and the city of Cullman. It provides that elections shall be held to determine whether the voters in the local governments affected want additional taxes to be used for educational and hospital purposes. The amendment imposes no new taxes. It merely gives the communities named the right to vote more taxes if they wish. Voters of Alabama almost without exception have approved of similar permissive amendments.

Amendment No. 2 would permit Alabama to participate in a federally supported public hospital program. Congress has approved a $378,000,000 expenditure for a study of hospital and health needs and construction of facilities designed to assure all persons of hospital services regardless of financial position. It has authorized an expenditure of $75,000,000 the first year. Of this amount, Alabama will get $2,888,700, plus $62,422 for survey and planning. State and local communities must cooperate in this program to benefit by it. The matching formula adopted takes into consideration the financial condition of the states as well as their populations. On that basis, Alabama is highly favored in the size of the federal assistance, ranking sixth from the top in per capita aid.

But the Alabama state government and Alabama local governments cannot avail themselves of this assistance under the existing law. The proposed amendment would grant this authority. The amendment appropriates no money. It, too, is merely permissive.

Amendment No. 3 would permit the city of Haleyville to impose an additional tax for local purposes. The amendment is purely local in effect and only permissive.

Amendment No. 4 is the so-called Boswell amendment (named for the Coffee County legislator who introduced it in the Legislature, but largely authored by Gessner T. McCorvey, chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee). The amendment would require all applicants for registration as voters to be able to "read and write, understand and explain" the U. S. Constitution, and to be of good character and understand the duties of citizenship under a republican form of government. Objections to this amendment and opposition to it are widespread. Many of the state's leading Democrats, including Gov.-Nominate Folsom and the senior U. S. senator, Lister Hill, are opposed to it as dangerous and unnecessary.

Amendment No. 5 provides that any municipality in the state whose annual ad valorem tax rate is now limited to less than 1¼ per cent of the value as assessed for taxes may increase the rate up to but not exceeding 1¼ per cent, provided its voters authorize the increase. It is also provided that any local election on the subject must specify the purposes for which the increase in taxes will be spent. Approval of this amendment means no more taxes except in communities which vote for them.

Amendment No. 6 calls for a change in the time and length of legislative sessions. It would provide for a short session of 10 consecutive calendar days in January after the election in November, for purposes of organization, appointment of committees, and providing for inauguration of other state officials. It shall then recess until the first Tuesday in May, when it will meet to remain in session for 36 legislative days. A biennial session, as now, is provided.

The present system provides for the short organization session and then in May a session of 60 calendar days. The calendar system was an innovation of the Dixon administration, and was adopted because it was believed that the legislators would accomplish more and save the taxpayers money by a calendar-day basis. Previously, under the old system, legislators had strung out their sessions for four or five months, holding sessions only twice a week and giving over the rest of the week to committee meetings and other affairs.

Opposition to the calendar-day system was strong in both legislative sessions held under it. The lawmakers felt that the system gave them no leisure for consideration of measures, that it compelled them to act in haste on many measures, with nothing to guide them but statements by the authors of the bills, and that the money saved in expenses was lost in ill-considered legislation. Inasmuch as the calendar-day system was given a trial by two sessions, and in both cases found unsatisfactory, there is a strong argument for a change back to the legislative-day basis.

Amendment No. 7 would permit the state to engage in the construction, improvement, repairs and maintenance, and operation of public airports when so authorized by the Legislature, with funds derived from a tax on aviation gasoline. The amendment is necessary to permit Alabama to participate in the $500,000,000 federal-aid airport program approved by Congress last May. The amendment places no burden on the state; it merely removes a barrier which now bars the state from participating in airport construction and operation. Proponents of the amendment point out that the people of Alabama in times past have approved amendments which made possible construction of highways and the improvement of the port of Mobile. Similar concern for air facilities, they argue, is called for.

Amendment No. 8 would permit all counties, except Mobile and Montgomery, to hold special elections on an additional tax to be used for acquisition, construction, operation and maintenance of county hospitals. The election can be called only on a petition by voters, and the vote of the people in each county will determine whether the additional tax is imposed. This is a companion measure to Amendment No. 2. Under both amendments, local communities may avail themselves of state and federal funds for construction and maintenance of hospitals.

Amendment No. 9 applies only to Mobile County. As explained by Mobile County Attorney William V. McDermitt, the amendment would do two things: (1) Clarify the existing county debt limit; (2) authorize a sort of revolving bond issue by permitting the county to have a total amount of outstanding bonds issued continuously equal to 6½ per cent of the total assessments in property. The changes could not take effect, however, until the voters of Mobile County had had a chance to pass upon them. The generally accepted practice of courtesy in local matters called for approval by the state of this amendment.

To sum up: Amendments 1, 3 and 9 are entirely local in character.

Amendment 5, while general in application, provides only for more taxes when locally approved.

Amendments 2, 7 and 8 would permit state and local governments to participate in federal-aid hospital and airport programs.

Amendment 4 is the Boswell amendment.

Amendment 6 changes Legislature sessions from a calendar to a legislative-day basis.

The Wrong Remedy

Often human beings, facing difficult and pressing problems, turn more or less desperately, to unsound methods of remedy. It seems that way with advocates of the Boswell amendment. Now that decision on the issue is near at hand in the election Tuesday, the amendment advocates, in the long discussion, have established only this—that they have not put forward the right answer to the problem of registration which concerns them so much.

Many of these advocates have often appeared to be near to recognizing as much themselves—particularly in admissions that they do not regard their plan as "perfect." What human plans are perfect? What they really may have come to realize is that their plan is not a good plan. Far from being a good remedy for any existing problems, its adoption would make conditions worse.

The fundamental and very great weakness of the proposal is that it is in profound conflict with the Constitution of the United States and the demands of justice. This conflict arises out of the flagrant fact that the plan looks to an effort to discriminate against a whole group of citizens.

Some supporters of the amendment have upheld it on the ground that they favor a general discrimination against Negro applicants for registration. Others, at least realizing how untenable any such position is, say they favor registering some Negroes. State Democratic Chairman McCorvey was quoted as saying last week that his idea was "that any intelligent Negro or any intelligent white person would be registered without question." If that is his attitude, why has he been so ardently supporting the amendment? There was nothing in the Supreme Court decision in the Texas case making it easier for "unintelligent" persons to register. It merely held that Negroes could not be barred from voting in Democratic primaries simply on account of color.

Mr. McCorvey specifically disavows any intent to bar all Negroes from registration. He doubtless would say that he believes boards of registrars should have wider latitude in passing on "intelligence" than they now possess.

But, in the first place, relatively few Negroes have been registered under present requirements, which set forth as tests ability to "read and write any article of the constitution," unless inability to do so is due solely to physical disability, and a recognized occupation.

In the second place, is a test of ability to "understand and explain" the constitution necessary in order to pass on the "intelligence" of an applicant?

Of course an intelligence test is itself a matter about which there might be widely different ideas. A loose provision of that kind would not be satisfactory. What is needed in the law are more specific standards, which lend themselves more readily to uniform application.

It is uniform application which is one of the essentials of a fair registration system. It is because the Boswell amendment would so readily lend itself to misuse, to arbitrary control of registration, that it is so dangerous.

Besides involving a power which many would obviously favor using in arbirtrary and unconstitutional discrimination against a whole category of citizens, it would present positive dangers of abuse and control affecting other citizens.

Able lawyers have even presented the contention that the registration of all citizens since 1903 might be subject to reexamination under this broad provision.

It may fairly be said in summary, The News-Age-Herald believes, that no impressive reasons have been advanced in behalf of adoption of the amendment, while strong reasons have been advanced against its approval.

That is the substance of the issue as we see it.

We believe that Alabamians have increasingly come to this same general view. We have been heartened by the expressions of opposition indicating a deep and growing sentiment against this unsound, essentially unconstitutional device.

There is, of course, a registration problem. It is not exactly that described by the Boswell amendment. We do not believe Alabama is greater danger.

The way to cure disease is not with the wrong method. That can be a way of killing the patient. The way to solve registration problems is not by wrong methods in basic conflict with the Constitution of the United States.

That way lies the tled by sheer repression. We many extremist supporters of amendment. Unless there fundamental rights to Negro citizens, there can be hope for an orderly, gradual settlement of the whole problem in time. It will not be set-

States.

The system that has prevailed is not satisfactory. The standards set forth are not specific enough. The $300 property qualification, though it apparently is seldom used, should be eliminated.

The whole matter should be subject to a thorough reexamination in a fair-minded study of the many aspects of the problem. That study should be firmly grounded on the principle of registration for all reasonably qualified voters and uniform application of standards to all applicants.

The rejection of this amendment would clear the way for a wiser and sounder dealing with registration problems.

The alternative is further confusion in the whole situation, intensification of racial tensions and, we feel sure, the ultimate rejection of the amendment by the Supreme Court.

Facing these choices, it should not be difficult for Alabamians to decide how to vote on this issue. Fair play, a due regard for American principles and sound judgment and foresight should overwhelmingly repudiate this misconceived and highly dangerous proposal.

DEMOCRATS MUST JOIN RANKS

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

The people of Alabama have approved the Boswell Amendment by some 80,000 "yes" votes as against some 70,000 "no" votes. The margin of victory for the amendment is convincing, though the very substantial opposition vote is evidence of the people's doubts concerning the wisdom of this change in the Constitution of Alabama. Sun. 11-10-46

The Advertiser concedes defeat without bitterness or regrets. We opposed the amendment on principle, being convinced that its adoption instead of solving problems, would compound them. We believe the future will prove the soundness of this position.

Now that the issue has been settled at the polls, however, it is time for Democrats to join ranks again and work as a united party. The smashing Republican victory in national elections portends many problems for the Democrats both on the State and national level. The national defeat may well bring about greater Democratic unity. Such a unity would be enhanced if, during the Republican trend some of Alabama's Republican-spirited Democrats would go over to the Republicans and vote their real convictions.

The chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee, Gessner T. McCrovey, of Mobile, is to be commended on his call for renewed Democratic unity in Alabama, and for a fair administration of Alabama's newly adopted suffrage law.

Mr. McCrovey has sent the following message to Alabama's next Governor, James E. Folsom:

Congratulations and all good wishes to our new Governor on his sweeping victory. We must not permit any honest differences of opinion among loyal Democrats on such issues as the Boswell Amendment to cause any rift in our party ranks. I know that you will find all Alabama Democrats anxious to do everything in their power to make your administration one of the finest that Alabama ever had. All of us feel absolutely confident that you and our good friends, Haygood Paterson and Dan Thomas, in selecting our new Boards of Registrars, with the added discretionary powers now conferred on such boards, will use splendid judgment and only appoint to these all-important positions men and women of judicial temperament who will be fair, honorable, upright, just and reasonable in the consideration of the applications of those seeking to register, to the end that no injustice be done to any of our citizens, whether they be white or colored. Alabama will then continue to have an electorate of which we all may well be proud. I sincerely believe that our new registration provisions, when some minor objections have been ironed out, will give Alabama the most workable and satisfactory suffrage laws of any Southern State, and that we will be the envy of our neighbors, with no race friction, bitterness or hatred and with all classes of our citizen realizing that the privilege of the ballot will be extended to them just as soon as they have qualified themselves to vote intelligently. Best regards.

This statement from Mr. McCorvey is wise and in fine spirit. It is good that he admits "some minor objections" to the new law which should be ironed out. All citizens of Alabama will back him up in the suggestion that Boards of Registrars should be composed of men and women of unimpeachable character. Without such officials, justice cannot prevail in the administration of even the best of laws.

Montgomery Attorney Believes Measure Constitutional

Albert J. Pickett, Montgomery lawyer and author of the widely used and authoritative legal treatise on "The Wife as Surety for the Husband," is opposed to the Boswell Amendment but unlike most of the opponents of the amendment, he believes that it would stand a test in court on its constitutionality.

Mr. Pickett was asked by The Advertiser some time ago to write an article analyzing the arguments of speakers on both sides of the question and he finds some reasonable argument on both sides. He believes that instead of the Boswell amendment, the State ought to go about the matter of white supremacy like South Carolina has done, viz: by divorcing the primary from State control in any manner. His article follows:

Rarely has an issue not involving personalities aroused more interest among the electorate of Alabama than has proposed Constitutional Amendment No. 4, popularly known as the Boswell Amendment. The fact is especially astonishing because so little fanfare attended its passage by the Legislature in 1945.

To begin by detailing the words of the Boswell Amendment would be to lay emphasis on form rather than substance. What does not meet the eye is more important than what does; that which is unexpressed is vital and that which is expressed is incidental. The Boswell Amendment itself, the history of what preceded it, and the arguments on both sides are all studies in indirection. So confused have become the issues that it is common now to see contentions advanced by one of the opposing sides which might more appropriately be expected from the other.

In 1944 the Supreme Court of the United States decided the case of Smith vs. Allwright. The gist of that decision is that a Federal statute (8 United States Code, section 31) which provided that "All citizens of the United States . . . . qualified by law to vote at any election shall be entitled and allowed to vote at all such elections, without distinction of race, color, or previous condition of servitude" applied to a Democratic party pgrimary in Texas in view of the manner in which party primaries were held and regarded by Texas law. A nine-year-old decision to the contrary (Grovey vs. Townsend, also arising in Texas) was over-ruled. The sudden reversal caused Justice Roberts to dissent in Smith vs. Allwright, and it was in this case that he used his famous expression that adjudications of the Supreme Court had come to be regarded as in "the same class as a restricted railroad ticket, good for this day and train only." But he was alone.

Closely Regulated

Although in Texas the State paid no part of the expense of holding a party primary, the cost being assessed against the candidates, the manner of holding primaries was regulated closely by law and was so tied in with the operation of the general election laws as to make the primary system part of a unitary scheme for the selection of officers. Hence, said the Supreme Court, a primary was an election within the meaning of the Federal statute quoted, and no qualified voter, including the Negro, could be excluded from voting therein.

The Legislature of Alabama met the situation thus presented not by altering its primary laws but by proposing an amendment designed to alter the qualifications of electors at all elections. For 43 years section 181 of the Constitution (together with sections 178 and 182, mentioned in section 181) had prescribed the qualifications of electors. The Boswell amendment would change those requirements with the purpose not alone of excluding certain persons from voting in Democratic primaries, an end therefore deemed sufficient, but from voting in general elections as well. This result it was deemed necessary to accomplish in order that those whose vote was not desired in a Democratic our present laws will permit," he declared.

"May I ask that you withdraw your resignation in the interest of continued and orderly administration of our law for your action might be contagious and cause resignations throughout the State," Gov. Sparks wrote Vines.

In the letter to the Chief Executive, Vines said: Sun The Advertiser

"Life is too short for me to contend with the situation as it now exists. I know of no solution that can be given under the present law." Montgomery, Ala.

Negro Vote Is Top Issue In Alabama

The Courier-Journal

State to Decide On Plan For Testing Eligibility

Louisville, Ky.

Montgomery, Ala., Nov. 2 (AP)—A referendum on a constitutional amendment admittedly designed to make it more difficult for Negroes to vote will be a red-hot Alabama issue in Tuesday's general election. Sun. 11-3-46

Alabama voters will express their choice for a Governor, U. S. senator, nine representatives, and scores of lesser officials, but little interest centers in this balloting. The candidates generally already hold the Democratic nomination —tantamount to election.

Top Ranks of Party Split.

The Negro-vote issue is another matter. It has split wide open the top ranks of the Democratic Party in the state, Governor Chauncey Sparks supporting the proposed amendment and his successor, Governor-nominate James E. "Big Jim " Folsom opposing it.

What is known as the Boswell Amendment was submitted to the people by the 1945 Legislature as a result, proponents said, of the U. S. Supreme Court ruling that Negroes cannot be barred from taking part in party primaries.

It would:

1. Require prospective voters to be able to "understand and explain" instead of merely read and write any section of the U. S. Constitution and to be of "good moral character."

2. Eliminate the present provision under which anyone who owns property taxable at $300 can vote regardless of whether he can read and write.

Proposal Called Dangerous.

Backers of the amendment declare it is necessary to prevent a "flood of Negro registration," now that the Democratic Party has discarded its traditional "White-primary" label.

Opponents, however, contend the proposal is dangerous in that it gives arbitrary power to the County Boards of Registrars who would decide whether an applicant satisfactorily explains the Constitution.

They argue that the same weapon used to disfranchise the Negro could be employed to deny the right of ballot to "entire groups" of white men and women.

Sparks and other proponents say anyone regardless of race can qualify under the present requirements and that if Negroes are registered en masse it will set up a Negro against a white party.

Sparks Likes Boswell Plan For Alabama

Says Almost Everyone In State Able to Meet Standards

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 7—(AP)—Coming out publicly in favor of the Boswell amendment, Gov. Chauncey Sparks declared today that Alabama's present voting standards can be met "by almost everyone of whatever race," and must be changed.

The system in use now qualifies an applicant for registration if he can read and write the U. S. constitution or owns $300 worth of property.

The amendment, to be decided on in the Nov. 5 general election, would require prospective voters to be able to "understand and explain" the constitution, and would eliminate the property ownership clause.

The present system, Gov. Sparks said in a statement, is leading to "unrestricted registration" because illiteracy has "almost disappeared in Alabama."

He cited a 1945 State Department of Education report that only 230 white persons and 434 Negroes 20 years of age in the state cannot read or write.

The governor declared that to give blanket franchise to a group "not altogether qualified" would be "just as tragic today as it was 80 years ago" when Negroes voted en masse during reconstruction days following the War Between

Alabama Chooses Progressive Governor

The Worker New York, N.Y. Sun. 10-28-46

SCARED BOSSES, LANDLORDS NOW TRYING TO TAKE AWAY RIGHT TO VOTE

By Mary Southard

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—Wedged in between Talmadge in Georgia and Bilbo in Mississippi, the people of Alabama have managed to vote into office the first progressive governor since Reconstruction.

James E. Folsom, now governor-designate, stumped the state from the Gulf to the hills of north Alabama. He dug away at the grass roots with a program of peace, abolishing the polltax, repealing the Bradford anti-labor act, and breaking through the walls which have kept the majorit of the people shut from the political life of Alabama.

And Folsom got out the vote, the largest in Alabama history. With more than 330,000 ballots cast, he got 191,424.

Alarmed industrialists and big planters are striking back with an assault on the right to vote. They seek to disfranchise even further the people of Alabama, who are already in effect 80 percent voteless, and to pare the electorate down to a controllable group of political hangers-on.

Their scheme is the Boswell amendment to the Alabama Constitution, to be voted on Nov. 5.

This amendment, if passed, will give Alabama the most reactionary registration laws in the South and in the nation.

UNDER THE TERMS of the amendment, the county boards of registrars would have unlimited powers to determine who shall vote and how many shall vote in Alabama. A prospective voter must convince a three-man board in his country not only that he can read or write, but that he can "understand and explain" any section of the U. S. Constitution, and that he is a person of "good character."

The registrars are not elected. The offices are handed out by the governor, state auditor and commissioner of agriculture and industries.

Further, the powers conferred on registrars by the amendment are retroactive to 1903. Thus voters now on the lists are threatened if the registrars decide that the new qualifications have not been met.

The Boswell Amendment has brought out into the open the sharp political struggle going on in Alabama. The Democratic Party, held together in spite of various rifts during the Roosevelt administrations, has split publicly into two opposing camps.

SENATOR HILL and Governor-designate Folsom have attacked the amendment. Last month a state-wide committee of some 35 leading citizens, influential in public affairs, was organized to conduct a campaign among the voters to defeat the amendment. This committee was formed in protest against the decision of the State Democratic Executive Committee to use $3,500 of Party funds to campaign in support of the amendment.

On the other side Governor Sparks recently joined with the 72-man State Democratic Executive Committee, headed by Gessner T. McCorvey, and Horace Wilkinson, Birmingham attorney and most shameless white supremacist in Alabama in a vicious campaign to ramrod the amendment down the throats of the voters.

Senator Hill charged publicly that three of the biggest corporations in Alabama—the Tennessee Coal Iron and Railroad Co., Republic Steel and Alabama Power—were supporting the amendment, and to date there has been no effective denial.

THE AMENDMENT was hatched back in the 1945 legislature as an effective way to throttle the electorate in the event that the polltax should be abolished and an equally effective way to thwart the Texas white primary decision without going through the illegal farce of "removing" the primary from state control, as was done in South Carolina.

The dimensions of this political plot can be outlined in severe and simple figures. There should normally be about 520,905 Negro voters. Actually there are about 6,000 (accurate figure are not available) or 1/100 of these qualified to vote.

Yet in ten of the 67 counties, Negroes form more than 70 percent of the population; in eight, more than half; and in 12, more than one-third. In three leading cities, the steel and iron towns of Bessemer and Fairfield, and the Black Belt cotton center of Selma, they number more than half the population.

The big steel and textile companies see in the amendment a way to throttle the growing political activity of the unions. There are over 300,000 union members in Alabama. During the crucial political campaigns of the past six years, the unions, in spite of hesitations and stumblings, have moved into the state political arena as a force to be reckoned with.

If these 300,000 union men and women were registered voters, the present electorate of Alabama would be almost doubled.

Wilkinson Gives Views On Voting Qualifications

The News Birmingham, Ala. Thurs. 10-17-46

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 17—(AP)—If he were a member of the board of registrars, says Atty. Horace Wilkinson, he "would not ask any question of a white voter I knew possessed the (voting) qualifications prescribed by law."

The Birmingham lawyer said, on the other hand, that if a Negro sought to register and "I did not know the Negro possessed the qualifications prescribed by law, I would ask any question necessary to demonstrate that he was not qualified to register."

Wilkinson's views came in response to a query from Columnist Grover C. Hall, Jr., of The Alabama Journal. Hall asked him what type of questions he would propound to a prospective voter if the Boswell amendment became law.

The amendment, which Wilkinson is supporting, would require applicants for registration to be able to "understand and explain" any section of the U. S. Constitution.

State Legislator Says He Will Vote Against Boswell Amendment

News-Age-Herald Birmingham, Ala. Sun. 10-20-46

"I'm going to vote against the Boswell amendment because I think it is a bad approach to the problem they are trying to solve," declared John B. Weaver, of Double Springs only Republican member of the Alabama House of Representatives.

Interviewed while on a visit to Birmingham Friday, Judge Weaver as he is familiarly known in Winston County where he was probate judge for 12 years, is now serving a two-year unexpired term in the Legislature, to which he was elected after the resignation of Judge Frank M. Johnson.

A CANDIDATE FOR REELECTION and nominated by the Republican Party without opposition, Judge Weaver said he felt confident that he would be returned to office. "I've never been defeated in a county election," he said, "and I was defeated for public office only once, when I ran for Congress against William B. Bankhead in 1936."

He would not elaborate a great deal concerning his opposition to the Boswell amendment except to say that he thought "it will disenfranchise thousands, and the preset constitutional law on voting is all right. I'm for no change until we get a new constitution, which I believe will be within four or five years."

DISCOUNTING HIS TWO opponents for the House seat in the November election, Judge Weaver said he would support Folsom's program for the most part.

He wrote an outline of his platform as follows:

1. Old-age pensions of $40 a month for all 65 years old or over who do not have an income of that amount or more.
2. One hundred fifty dollars a month and up for teachers.
3. Reapportionment as required by the constitution.
4. Let the poll tax remain until a new constitution is adopted.
5. Favors local self-government in all counties and cities.
6. Agrees that sales tax tokens should be abolished.
7. For every aid to veterans of World Wars I and II.

He said also that he favored increasing the pay of election officers and jurors to $5 a day.

Judge Weaver had five sons in the service during the war.

He is a farmer.

Alabamans Drag In Intermarriage Issue

Sat. 9-28-46

MOBILE, Ala.—As the intermarriage bugaboo was being used to drum up support for the Boswell amendment at the forthcoming November 5 elections, one of the state's big guns sounded off in opposition to the proposal that would disfranchise thousands of Negro voters and endanger the votes of many whites.

The big gun was liberal U. S. Senator Lister Hill, who speaking last week in Arley, charged that several big corporations in the state were major advocates of the proposed amendment.

The senator pointed out that the Boswell amendment would prohibit voting by those whom the big mules do not approve." The power of such companies would be increased, he forecast, to the extent that they would control Alabama elections.

Cites Fear of Vets

Hill further intimated that reactionary political dictators are using the Negro issue as a smoke screen to curb the growing political power of war veterans and labor.

If the amendment is approved by the electorate at the usually tame general elections in November, registrars will have arbitrary power to deny the ballot to any prospective voter who in their judgment is not qualified.

Meanwhile advocates of the amendment, hitting below the belt and making an appeal for backwoods support, are making capital of the fear of intermarriage.

Their opponents, they say, "want to whiten their skin—and with the

McCorvey Probed in 1944

In 1944 McCorvey was questioned by the Department of Justice for denying Negroes the right to vote in the Democratic primary of that year. It was also reported at that time that Attorney General Francis Biddle had planned bringing criminal action against McCorvey and other Democratic leaders in the state, but that the action was dropped as result of an "understanding" that there would be no further interference note that they hope to obtain political and social equality and force intermarriages between white and black races, the privilege for Negro men to marry white women is their ultimate goal . . ."

Chief advocate of the amendment, who publicly admits that its purpose is to circumvent the U. S. Supreme Court decision opening the Democratic primaries in the South to all voters, is Gessner T. McCorvey, chairman of the state Democratic executive committee.

Some Democratic leaders who with rights of Negroes to vote, favored the amendment, have since shifted because of the type of propaganda being used to put it over.

A Black Belt Minister Speaks Out

Editor, The Advertiser: The Advertiser

I have followed with considerable interest editorials and letters in two of Alabama's leading newspapers during the discussion of the Boswell Act. And just yesterday the State Democratic Committee wasted enough money to send me propaganda favoring proposed Amendment Four. Montgomery, Ala

I could write briefly to say I consider the Boswell Act undemocratic, unfair, unreasonable and un-Christian, all of which I believe it to be, and stop with that. However, like most preachers, I feel the urge to amplify my feelings, and must preach for a moment. And, as preachers usually do, I need to make a few observations before getting around to the real point this letter hopes to establish.

Nothing Communist About It

The issue of communism has been dragged into this discussion by those who favor proposed Amendment Four. The use of the word Communist as an epithet to apply to opponents of the Boswell Act is silly and childish. To designate a man who disagrees with you as a Communist has come to the point now where it has lost its meaning. I know many persons who oppose the Act fervently, and there is not a "meanie" among them. They are good solid citizens of this State. They are persons who are proud of Alabama's progressivism and its sensible political decisions in the past few years, and they want to see Alabama continue its leadership in representing the best the South can offer. Tues. 10-22-46

Several days ago the first page of the Montgomery Advertiser carried news articles which contained candid admissions of political leaders in two great Southern states, in which they openly confessed that they fully intended to keep the colored population of their state in a political ghetto. If we did not know the situation to be sadly true, one would think he were witnessing a Gilbert and Sullivan "take-off" on American democracy. It would be amusing if it were not pure tragedy. For such leaders, the word is written with a capital first letter: Democracy, not democracy. It is not the rule of the people that interests them, but the rule of a hand-picked group of individuals. They insist that they are trying to preserve "supremacy." We might do better to seek superiority. Superiority cannot be legislated. Superiority is not a matter of law; it either exists or it does not, and if it exists it does so without having attention drawn to it or laws thrown around it like a coffee-dam. The Nazis were supreme, but definitely not superior.

If the Boswell Act should become law, who is going to examine the registrars to see if THEY are fit to serve their office? I gathered enough first-hand experience when my wife and I were being registered as voters to question seriously the fitness of some registrars to handle matters on which the nine justices of the Supreme Court seldom agree. The registrar who asked us the routine questions about birthdays, etc., was not even able to copy correctly in his scarcely legible hand data that he had written himself but one minute previously. Anyhow, however good their intentions or education may be, it is not right that several hundred Alabamians should control the franchise of hundreds of thousands of their fellow-citizens.

Would Favor the Well-to-Do

If fair educational benefits had always been enjoyed by all Alabamians, city and rural and white and black, if economic benefits had been distributed more equitably, thus making higher education available to more people, then to put such a registration law into effect might be justified; but until economic and educational opportunities have been provided on a wider scale than they have been until this time, such a law will disfranchise those whose cultural opportunities have been limited. The law, enacted, will favor the well-to-do, the aristocracy of Alabama. It is class legislation as well as a race legislation, and both are sinister.

It is obivious that the lines are drawn between those who believe in extending political democracy in Alabama and those who wish to continue the political oligarchy we have had. Those who favor abolition of the poll tax, and who favor staying in the Union that operates under the Constitution of the United States are distinguished from those Alabamians who, seeing inevitable abolition of the poll tax and federal insistence on giving the vote to the people, are casting about to find means to keep the electorate small in order that it may be controlled as easily as heretofore.

The main effect of the Boswell Act, if it should pass, would not be racial, but would be accentuation of class distinction in the state. We already seethe inside when the backwardness of the South is mentioned, but a large measure of the retardation of the South is the direct consequence of our own pronounced intention to retard the political and economic development of large fractions of our population. Booker Washington was on the beam when he said that if the white man wants to keep the Negro in the ditch he must stick close by to see that he stays down. The same holds true of the prosperous white man's attitude toward the poor white man. The progress of the whole South will be in direct proportion to the progress of the disinherited white and the large colored segment of our population. Economically, politically, physiologically—our corporate progress will be determined by that meted out to the underpriviliged whites and all the colored population.

Should Read Emerson

Supporters of the Boswell Amendment should read, before voting, Ralph Emerson's "Essay on Compensation." Quoting briefly from several points, we get the theme of the essay: "I shall attempt . . . to record some facts which indicate the path of the law of Compensation. Polarity, or action and reaction, we meet in every part of nature . . . Nature hates monopolies and exceptions. This law writes the laws of cities and nations. It is in vain to build or plot or combine against it. Things refuse to be mismanaged long. Though no checks to a new evil appear, the checks exist, and will appear. While thus the world will be whole, and refuses to be disparted, we seek to act partially, to sunder, to appropriate . . . All infractions of love and equity in our social relations are speedily punished. They are punished with fear. Whilst I stand in simple relations to my fellow-man, I have no displeasure in meeting him. But as soon as there is any departure from simplicity, and attempt at halfness, or good for me that is not good for him, . . . there is war between us, there is hate in him and fear in me. There is a third silent partner to all bargains."

The Boswell Act, or proposed Amendment Four, by confession of its promoters, is an expedient, a policy designed to block extension of the ballot to the whole voting population of the state. Henry Thoreau once made some pertinent remarks that bear recalling. He asked: "Will men never learn that policy is not morality—that it never secures any moral right, but considers merely what is expedient?" Writing on "Slavery in Massachusetts," he said: "I wish my countrymen to consider, that whatever the human law may be, neither an individual nor a nation can ever commit the least act of injustice against the obscurest individual without having to pay the penalty for it. A government which deliberately enacts injustice, and persists in it, will at length even become the laughing-stock of the world." The same may be said of ballot slavery in Alabama. Tues. 10-22-46

When we try to allocate political privileges on some basis other than rightness, we are tampering with the scales of Divine justice. To avowedly attempt to circumvent the law of the nation, so as to favor a particular group in society, will in the long run cause more misery than will fair treatment of all at the time that it is due. Calamity will fall upon Alabama tomorrow if we today thwart the cosmic drive toward justice and freedom for all citizens who are truly qualified.

And what is the text? "Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me." Yes, a radical named Jesus said that.

Demo Head Urges 'Judicial' Enforcement Of Boswell Law

The News Birmingham, Ala.
Sat. 11-9-46

With the near-complete count giving a margin of more than 11,000 votes in favor of the Boswell amendment, the State Democratic Executive Committee chairman Saturday urged that men and women of "judicial temperament" be named to enforce the newly adopted provision.

Seeking to unite Alabama Democrats who were in opposite camps during the fight over the amendment, Gessner T. McCorvey, Mobile, state committee chairman, dispatched a telegram to Gov.-Elect James E. Folsom suggesting such a course, and adding:

"In the consideration of the applications of those seeking to register . . . no injustice (should) be done to any of our citizens, whether they be white or colored."

As governor, Folsom will appoint one member of each county's three-member Board of Registrars. The other two will be appointed by the incoming commissioner of agriculture, Haygood Paterson, and the incoming state auditor, Dan Thomas.

McCorvey congratulated Folsom on his election last Tuesday, and said he felt certain the three appointive officials would use "splendid judgment" in establishing the new Boards of Registrars.

"I sincerely believe," the party executive told Folsom, "that our new registration provisions, when some minor objections have been ironed out, will give Alabama the most workable and satisfactory suffrage laws of any Southern state." He added:

"WE MUST NOT PERMIT any honest differences . . . on such issues as the Boswell amendment to cause a rift in our party ranks."

McCorvey supported the amendment and Folsom opposed it.

McCorvey said he had a plan which would make the state's voting laws "more workable," and would outline his views on the matter at a later date.

The proposal was designed to prevent mass registration of Negroes.

A TALLY OF 2,117 BOXES out of 2,362 showed 84,285 votes for the measure and 72,718 against it. The uncounted boxes were about evenly divided between sections for and against it.

Its opponents, including Gov.-Elect Folsom, argued it was undemocratic, and said it could be used to disqualify white persons as well as Negroes.

They also insisted that existing statutes were sufficiently broad to prevent the registration of persons unfit for the franchise.

The Boswell law repealed a provision conveying eligibility to register to persons who either owned $300 or more taxable property, or were able to "read and write" any provision of the U. S. constitution.

WINSTON DEMOCRATIC

DOUBLE SPRINGS, Ala., Nov. 9—(AP)—Winston County, usually the lone Alabama county to be found in the Republican column, broke with tradition last Tuesday by favoring James E. Folsom (D.) over Dr. Lyman Ward (R.) in the governor's race.

The official canvass showed 1,538 Winston votes for Folsom and 1,088 for Ward. Folsom also carried the other 66 Alabama counties.

Winston won the name of "The Free State of Winston" in 1861 when it seceded from the state after Alabama became a part of the Confederacy. Last Tuesday, as customary, Winston returned a full slate of Republican county officers.

Boswell Bill Still In Limelight

The News Birmingham, Ala.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 9—(AP)—Although the interest was not confined to Montgomery, the top news of the week in the capital was the apparent ratification of the Boswell amendment, and observers settled back today to watch for the reaction.

Proponents of the constitutional change to tighten uu on voter qualifications in Alabama argued prior to last Tuesday's election that it was necessary to prevent a "flood of Negro registration."

Those who led the fight against the amendment, however, contended it was dangerous in that it would give "arbitrary" powers to county boards of registrars, and some of them predicted it would not survive a test in court.

Nov. 15.

The official canvass by the governor, attorney general and secretary of state must be made within 15 days after the election, but another statute requires that congressmen and senators be certified within 10 days. Both canvasses probably will be made at the same time. Of course, no suit can be filed in court over the Boswell amendment until county boards of registrars have had an opportunity to put it into effect. They meet on Nov. 18 and if the results of the election proclaimed by then anyone seeking registration will be subject to the new requirements.

an elector since that time could be compelled to re-register if the act passes.

Such is not the case, Governor Sparks said. The amendment which requires that registrants be able to "understand and explain" the United States Constitution, is merely a safeguard for the future, he explained.

He pointed out that the legislature had the authority to set up safeguards against forcing re-registration and that had been done. He cited a law at present on the statute books that requires a purge of voting lists every two years of names of persons who have died, changed residence, been convicted of a crime or committed to a mental institution. The Advertiser Tues.

Governor Sparks reiterated his advocacy of a gradual registration of qualified Negroes. Supporters of the amendment say it is designed to prevent a flood of Negro voting. Montgomery, Ala

McCorvey Raps Hill's Talk On Boswell Plan

The News Birmingham, Ala.
Fri. 9-13-46

MOBILE, Ala., Sept. 13—(AP)—An Alabama Democratic Party official finally has said publicly what many a Southern Democrat has discussed in private.

Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey, of the State Executive Committee, after rapping a statement by Sen. Lister Hill (D., Ala.), said that "the Democratic Party in the South and the Democratic Party nationally, on some propositions, are entirely different animals."

McCorvey's statement was in response to one made by Sen. Hill at Arley, Ala., in opposition to the Boswell amendment to the state constitution.

Hill said the amendment was designed to prohibit voting by those "whom the big mules do not approve."

The amendment, which will be voted on in the Nov. 5 general election, would tighten registration requirements by eliminating a provision permitting a person to vote if he or his wife can show possession of property valued at $300 and requiring a voter to interpret the U. S. constitution.

After referring to the senator's remark as "all buncombe," McCorvey observed that the Southern party and the national party "stand for entirely different principles, although we have been loyal to our party's nominees."

The state chairman also observed that "the overwhelming majority of our state committee took the position that we should be militant Democrats and continue to fight for white supremacy in our state, regardless of the position taken by some of those who stand high in the councils of our party nationally."

Colored Minister Opposes Amendment

The Advertiser Sat. 10-19-46
Montgomery, Ala.

In a ringing appeal to his fellow colored ministers of Alabama, the Rev. N. A. Troutman last night asked that all preach and work against the Boswell Amendment from now to Nov. 5.

"Wake up, you colored ministers in Alabama that are so-called race leaders," he wrote. "From now until Nov. 5, preach to your hearers and tell them what it would mean to them if the Boswell Amendment is adopted.

"I want you to tell all of the qualified (Negro) voters that can vote to go to the polls and vote 'No' with the good white people."

Troutman expressed doubt that Negroes would be elected to office in Alabama, should the Boswell Amendment be beaten, because "there are enough good white men for the high offices."

Hill Stand On Boswell Plan Said 'Buncombe' By McCorvey

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.
Fri. 9-13-46

MOBILE, ALA., Sept. 12.—(AP)—The Alabama Democratic Party chairman lashed out at Senator Lister Hill today for his stand on a proposed voting law amendment with the assertion that "the Democratic Party in the South and the Democratic Party nationally, on some propositions, are entirely different animals."

Gessner T. McCorvey, chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee, described as "all buncombe, pure and simple" a statement by Hill that the aim of the Boswell amendment was to prohibit voting by those "whom the Big Mules do not approve."

"The overwhelming majority of our State committee took the position that we should be militant Democrats and continue to fight for white supremacy in our State, regardless of the position taken by some of those who stand high in the councils of our party nationally," McCorvey declared in a statement.

"The Democratic Party in the South and the Democratic Party nationally, on some propositions, are entirely different animals, and stand for entirely different principles, although we have been loyal to our party's nominees."

The Boswell amendment, which will be voted on in the Nov. 5 general election, would tighten registration restrictions by requiring that a voter be able to interpret the United States Constitution. It also would eliminate the provision permitting a person to vote if he can show that he or his wife possess property valued at $300.

McCorvey's statement was in response to remarks made by Hill yesterday to a group at Arley, Ala.

Recalling that the State legislature approved submission of the measure to the people by a "unanimous, or almost unanimous vote," McCorvey said in part:

"No so-called 'Big Mule' suggested to me, either directly or indirectly, or to any member of the committee, so far as I know, the advisability of having the people of Alabama adopt such an amendment to our constitution."

FOR BOSWELL AMENDMENT

To the Editor of The Age-Herald:

On Nov. 5, 1946, the Boswell amendment will be ratified, or it will be defeated. Its language and its meaning have been discussed recently so fully pro and con, that I shall not now deal with that phase of the question. I want to deal with consequences.

If it is adopted, few, very few Negroes will register. For each applicant for registration must satisfy a board of registrars that he is able to understand and explain any article of the constitution of the United States; that he is of good character, and that he understands the duties and obligations of citizenship under a Republican form of government. Admittedly, these requirements are high; but not too high, if it takes that to guarantee white supremacy. Lower them, and our plight is that of hapless Georgia where about 140,000 Negroes are now registered.

To defeat the Boswell amendment is to lower the registration level to that prescribed by Section 181 of the present constitution. Under it about 6,000 Negroes can legally register now in Wilcox County, while we have only 2,550 whites registered, and not one Negro. Defeat the Boswell amendment and Lowndes and Greene Counties can legally register four times as many Negroes as whites; Macon and Dallas twice as many; Montgomery and Barbour 40 per cent; Jefferson County 30 per cent.

We are not naive enough to believe that we in the Black Belt can continue to hold the line against an onrushing black horde without a change in our fundamental law; especially, when we realize that horde is spurred on by radicals in the North, aided and abetted by some of our leading daily newspapers, and (I blush for Alabama when I say it) a U. S. senator named Hill, Lister Hill. The man who at Arley this week sought to array class against class; the man who said, in substance, that this amendment was supported by big corporations who would "milk Alabama and give nothing in return;" the man who listed Alabama Power Co. as one of such corporations, and yet its president, Tom Martin, says he has never read it, never discussed it; therefore does not know whether he is for it or against it.

We in the Black Belt need the help today of every white person in Alabama; I plead for that help. I say to you solemnly: our only hope for white supremacy, our only hope for peace, our only protection against a race war is in the adoption of this amendment.

J. M. BONNER.

Camden, Ala., Sept., 14, 1946.

DEMOCRATS AND DEMOCRACY

To the Editor of The News:

You are to be commended for your stand against the Boswell amendment. The Democratic Party has disfranchised enough good people in Alabama and the South. If this thing goes on, before long nobody can vote in Alabama but college graduates and millionaires.

I would suggest that the leaders of the party go down to Montgomery and go into the Capitol Building and turn the faces of George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, Andrew Jackson and Woodrow Wilson to the wall and hang crepe on the rest who called themselves Democrats. Then let the Legislature pass a resolution changing the name of the Democratic Party to something more appropriate.

As far as the colored people are concerned, any Negro who votes the Democratic ticket in any state of the Union ought to be disfranchised. In the North and East the Democrats would never think of offering any such amendment. Why? Because up there they want the Negro vote. Before any Negro in the North and East votes Democratic, he should stop and think about the treatment accorded his race in the South where we have but one party.

We have 150,000 white people in Alabama who cannot vote today because of an old, out-of-date poll tax law here. Any man who takes his gun and fights to defend this country in time of war, and at the same time pays taxes to support this government, should have the right to vote, regardless of whether he ever spent one day in school, or regardless of his race. That is democracy. J. L. ADERS.

A HOAX AND A DECEPTION

To the Editor of The News: The News

The proponents of the Boswell amendment are attempting to make the public believe that its opposition is led by men who are engaged in a nationwide "leftist" plot to overthrow the government and sell the country to the Communists. They know that this is dishonest argument, but they hope the public is too ignorant to find it out. They are as aware as the opposition that the success of their campaign depends on the moral and intellectual ignorance of the electorate whose baser passions they are doing all they can to inflame in order to blind them to the lucidity of the truth. Birmingham, Ala.

Speaking of plots, the shoe belongs on the other foot. Who started this row anyway, the proponents of the Boswell amendment or the opponents? The opponents are seeking to establish nothing new. They are trying to overthrow nothing. They seek merely to maintain the rights which they, as citizens of the state, already have. The proponents are making a determined effort to destroy these rights. So who's plotting?

It's the old, old, but nevertheless despicable story of the offender trying to pass off as the defender. In order to keep our thinking straight we must remember that the one who begins aggression is the aggressor, not the one who resists it. Thurs. 10-17-46

It will be argued, of course, that in this case aggression is necessary, offense is the best defense, and that the only purpose of the Boswell amendment is to keep the mass of Negroes from voting. If the amendment is enforced, it will affect the white race more disastrously than the colored, for the white race already has the ballot and the colored does not; and it is not to be supposed that the mass of white people can understand the constitution when the Supreme Court cannot always agree on its interpretation. If the amendment is not going to be impartially enforced, then the whole thing is a hoax and a base deception—a mere legal screen for illegality. If we're going to legalize dishonesty, we'd better remember that the worm sometimes turns. CARMEL PRESLEY.

DEMOCRACY OR DICTATORSHIP?

To the Editor of The News:

We hear so much both pro and con about the Boswell amendment that we hardly know what to believe, but I would like to call attention to Joe Poole's statement in The Alabama Farmers Bulletin of Oct. 15. Mr. Poole lambasts CIO-PAC, the Communists and all other left-wingers.

I would say most good Americans are against the Communists, but how Mr. Poole can see things so much different now than a few weeks ago when he supported and was all-out for this same group, is hard to understand.

Then he speaks about the Republican renegades, a few misguided people and a lot of left-wing intellectuals. The way Mr. Poole sees it, if the Boswell amendment is defeated, the Negroes and a few CIO-PACs will send a delegation to the convention and nominate Henry Wallace for president.

I wonder how many Republicans in this good state of ours would be able to read, interpret and explain the Constitution of the U. S. Consider seriously before casting your vote on Nov. 5. Do we want democracy or dictatorship? A vote for the Boswell amendment is dictatorship. L. M. DOROUGH.

MORE VOTERS NEEDED

The News Birmingham, Ala.
Sun. 10-20-46

To the Editor of The News-Age-Herald:

So far the advocates of the Boswell amendment have not given one single factual reason why we need the amendment. They say they don't want the Negro to vote, but the amendment doesn't say so. Neither does it say there will be no white boys and girls denied the right to vote.

We have too many loopholes in laws now. Too many laws are written like this amendment, with its real meaning and purpose camouflaged with white supremacy.

Mr. Housal, in a lengthy comment for the amendment, pleads for a superior race. Hitler did the same thing, and where is Hitler now and where is his superior race? No man, set of men, no nation can stifle the voices of the people and hope to build upon an enduring foundation. Someone has said, "Give the people light and they will find their own way." What we need in Alabama is more government by the people and less of boards and machine cliques.

The fact we have the Boswell amendment is proof that there are some cliques and machines that haven't as much power as they want and are afraid of a government of the people, for the people and by the people. Yes, they have heard a voice coming from the ranks of the great commonwealth of Alabama and they realize the end of machine politics in all political parties is near, so they camouflage their real purpose in a well-worded document called the "Boswell amendment." But they forgot that out in the hills and hollows of Alabama there are hundreds of good, honest people who are able to look beneath the chouflage because they seek divine guidance when the cast their votes.

The great need in Alabama is not fewer voters but more voters, fewer cliques and less rottenness in elections. If we would spend as much time and money for a people's government as is spent to take the government away from the people, we would think more of ourselves and would build a greater civilization.

BOSWELL AMENDMENT, BY A NEGRO

To the Editor of The News:

Many citizens of Alabama, white and colored, thank you for uncovering the hidden aims and objectives of the much-discussed Boswell amendment to the Alabama Constitution. You, Sen. Hill, Mr. Rives, Mr. Clark Coleman, whose letter appeared in The News of Sept. 18, and all of the people who are saying no to the adoption of this undemocratic measure, are taking the proper course, and we trust that a majority of the Alabama electorate will follow you in helping to defeat this law.

The majority of the State Democratic Executive Committee claims that, through the adoption of this amendment, they seek, and will get, a more intelligent suffrage. If that is what they seek, all well and good, provided the scheme shall be applied to all citizens alike. Under this amendment all registrants are required to understand the constitution and be able to explain any paragraph to the satisfaction of the registrars. The applicants also must know and answer any historical data that the registrars care to ask them. The News says such amendment "gives the registrars sweeping power to prevent the registration of any person who may be in any way offensive to the registrars." It seems that, as this majority of the committee wants to "tighten up our registration laws," they mean to cut out or prevent the registration of such citizens as they do not want, whether such citizens be intelligent or illiterate, and vice versa if the registrars want them.

I remember quite well the year 1901, when the powers-that-be called a constitutional convention to revise the electorate (disfranchise the Negro) of Alabama. They made it very hard for any Negro in Alabama to register. However, a few came through the mill by answering hundreds of irrelevant questions (the writer was one of them). I have wondered ever since that time why those in authority in Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi and other states of the South don't want the Negro to vote or take any part in the government which rules over him, and do not want him to take part in any civic activities of the state. Without the ballot no one can be a full-fledged citizen of any state.

The American white man, however, never fails to call on the Negro to come and help fight the wars and keep back the enemy from our shores. The Negro never fails to go. He is always willing to go to war, and fight like the devil when he gets there. He has helped this country fight in all of its wars. He has also helped to clear the forests, build the railroads and highways, to plant and raise the crops, and hundreds of other things to prove his worthiness for complete citizenship.

The Boswell amendment, if adopted, will not strengthen but weaken the democracy of our state. It will, in the minds of many, regardless of race, lower the standard of freedom as embodied in the American Constitution.

I have voted in every election in my county and state for 56 years for the best men and best measures. I have built and for 57 years taught a helpful and outstanding school for my people in my community. I have striven to foster peace and good will between the races. So far as that bugaboo of so-called "social equality" is concerned, leading Negroes don't want it, wouldn't have it.

THE BOSWELL AMENDMENT

The News Birmingham, Ala. Mon.

One of the most powerful arguments this deponent has seen against the Boswell amendment is a letter which appeared in The News of Sept. 22 from William D. Lanier, Jr., of Jasper. Mr. Lanier describes himself as "a small-town merchant," but he writes with a grace and cogency not to be found in the work of most professional scribblers. His brief against the amendment should be printed and circulated by opponents as the best "conservative and commonsense" statement of the case for rejection which has yet appeared. Mr. Lanier is a Southerner whose feet are on the ground but whose eyes are open to realities. As such, he riddles the pretensions of the "Boswellites," who, behind a smoke-screen of talk about "social equality" are actually engaged, wittingly or unwittingly, in trying to forge the chains of political serfdom for white Alabamians. 10-14-46

As a commentary on Mr. Lanier's definitive argument, another letter appearing in The News for Oct. 11 is recommended. It comes from Raymond J. Rowell, of Birmingham, and it explains why the Boswell amendment is before the voters of the state. "Black Belt politicians are disturbed by the fact that lately the increasing number of voters in North Alabama are defeating their hand-picked candidates," Mr. Rowell points out. "Preservation of certain political machines in certain areas" and "destruction of the power of organized labor's political groups" are objectives aimed at by those who are pressing for ratification of the amendment.

Anyone who has watched the line-up of forces in this fight must realize that Messrs. Lanier and Rowell are presenting the facts of the situation. Sen. Boswell speaks for the Black Belt, but his cause has been taken up by others equally solicitous about preserving a manageable electorate. This is the traditional alignment. That the "Boswellites" seem to be so well-heeled is an item not to be lost sight of. They seem to be spending more money than the $3,500 which the State Democratic Executive Committee set aside for the purpose, even though such an outlay is a shocking abuse of trusteeship.

Observe the courthouse machines as they swing into line for the amendment. Observe the county committees going through the same maneuver. These are made up of practical politicians who are mainly interested in preserving their power. They prefer a restricted electorate. They are part of that statewide sodality which thrives on such an arrangement. Does anyone think that "Boswellites" in Birmingham, for instance, are really worried about the Negro as a voter? There are only 1,600 to 1,700 Negroes in a total of about 65,000 registered in Jefferson County. Is this the threat to "white supremacy" in our community? Has anything happened here or elsewhere in the state which invalidates the significance of Richard Rives' assertion that under our present law "although Negroes compose one-third of our population 21 years of age or over, they form less than one-hundredth of our population qualified to vote"?

Not a few intelligent Alabamians are sincerely worried about Negro militancy. They are disquieted by the knowledge that primaries are now open to Negro voters. They see what has happened in Georgia where in the recent election a much larger number of Negroes cast their ballots than in past primaries. Our "Boswellites" point to that in justification of their scare tactics. But what they fail to mention is that Georgia has no poll tax, while Alabama retains it. No inundation of Negro registrants, no inundation of white registrants, is conceivable so long as the poll tax barrier stands. Our racialists and passion-tearers can't get around that towering fact.

It is merely meeting proponents of the Boswell amendment on their own ground to quote this passage from Mr. Lanier's letter: "If the Boswellites have not yet learned that Alabama is part of the United States and that supremacy of the national will, whether we like it or not, was established permanently and irrevocably in 1865, they should at least understand that their proposal, far from helping, would prove a very great disservice to the cause of white supremacy. It would be a red flag to the PAC bull. It would outrage liberals everywhere, it would provide a 'cause' for the parlor pinks, and it would bring down on us a veritable avalanche of crusaders determined to save us from our sins and convince us of our iniquities. It would, in short, produce the damndest nuisance since Sherman."

That is the opinion of a man born and raised in the briar patch. He pictures what is bound to be the consequence of the ratification of the amendment. Do we have to invite bedevilment of this sort, do we have to risk the undermining of our franchise system, do we have to approve a dishonest and undemocratic constitutional provision, merely to satisfy the prejudice of some people and the greed of others? And do we have to do this not because we face a threat to white supremacy but because machine politicians face a threat to their hold upon the political life of Alabama?

Boswell Amendment Can Operate Two-Tone

Sun. 10-6-46

By GROVER C. HALL, JR.

EVERY citizen who is trying to make up his mind whether to vote for or against the Boswell Amendment would do well to reach his decision with some consideration of what took place in 1901.

That was the year of the last constitutional convention and the year in which Alabama decided to purge Negroes from the voting list in the wake of the Reconstruction debauch. What must be remembered is, it was not only the Negroes the party elders were trying to disfranchise. It was also the poor whites they were after. These men believed that property and franchise should be hyphenated. They feared the masses, in the worst Bourbon way.

There can be no question that the poor whites were a target. Gov. Samford, who had just been nominated, opposed—either on grounds of expediency or conviction—making suffrage reform a plank in the convention platform. To mollify Gov. Samford, the leaders agreed aforetime that no changes would be made in the Constitution that would disqualify white persons from voting.

These leaders were the philosophical kin of the men who now urge adoption of the Boswell Amendment.

The convention met during the days of Booker T. Washington. His speech before the convention is well worth reading in terms of the present. Washington, born in a Virginia slave quarter, told the convention that the Negro had learned his lesson and that he was now entitled "to some humble share in choosing those who shall rule over him." Then Washington argued:

"The Negro youth must have some incentive for right and useful living held out to him. Let the Negro youth feel that no matter how intelligent or useful he makes himself, that there is no hope of reward held out before him, and there is danger that he will become a beast, reveling in crime, and a body of death about the neck of the State."

A TIME FOR GREATNESS

To the Editor of The News: The News

I am no prophet. I am one of the millions of Americans lost in the wilderness of time seeking a way out. I stand at the crossroads. One road leads to peace, the other leads to war. I want to go down the road that leads to peace, but it isn't marked, and I am afraid. My forefathers marked the road to peace—for me and for others; but enemies have sneaked up in the darkness and have taken the signposts away. I must rely upon my own self, or I am eternally lost.

I know that down the road that leads to war are the things my forefathers warned me against. Grandfather said some day the free, common man would get tired of being pushed around by the man whose power was money earned by scheming and crushing those who got in his way, and would rise up against this evil power. Birmingham, Ala.

My father said some day the ignorant masses of both white and colored people would be swayed into open war by cunning radical leaders of both races who would come out of the war without a scratch. Of course, the leaders would eventually end up on the dangling end of a rope, but there would be thousands of innocent, ignorant masses in both races who would dangle on the end of that rope—before it finally tightened on the leaders. If you do not agree, look at Germany today. Tues. 10-15-46

The ignorant masses of the German people have gone down the wrong road, only to find themselves to be "the goats" instead of supermen. The leaders who told them what they would find at the end of that road were either shot or hanged before they could sway the ignorant masses to the right road. Some of these leaders escaped and are trying to show the American people which road to take—and they won't listen.

The Boswell amendment is on that road that leads to war. The free man is on the march, whether he is black or white. You can't preach freedom and democracy to the rest of the world and imply in what you do and say that you are not democratic in your own country.

My mother told me that some day the good elements of the world would rise up against the bad; but I've always asked, "Why some day? Why not now?" The good man is on the march—whether he is white or colored. You can't preach Christ to the heathen world and crucify Him in the land where the heathen believes His spirit guides all men.

Carmichael Denies Boswell Amendment Aimed At Negro

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.
Sun. 11-3-46

Charging that the Boswell Amendment is aimed directily and squarely at and against the white democracy of this State, Albert A. Carmichael, attorney general nominate, said yesterday that the "real forces" behind the plan had chosen a thoroughly discredited argument to gain their purposes.

"Differences of opinion among fellow Democrats," he said usually bring forth helpful argument. I concede honesty and sincerity in this matter to all with whom I find myself in disagreement. I find myself in disagreement with those fellow Democrats who favor the adoption of the Boswell Amendment, or Amendment No. 4.

"I do not now, nor have I ever thought the proposed Amendment is directed against the Negro, qualified or not qualified, except in a small way. The fact that a few qualified Negroes would be caught in the drag-net, does not make the proposal an anti-Negro proposal, any more than the inclusion of a rabbit, in a sandwich made of one rabbit and one elephant, would make that sandwich a rabbit sandwich. Amendment No. 4 is aimed squarely and directly at and against the white democracy of this State, in the same way the German 88's were aimed at and against the American Army tanks in the battle of the Bulge.

"Discredited Plan"

With considerable skill, the real forces in charge of placing this noose around the neck of the Democracy of Alabama, have chosen that thoroughly discredited and entirely worn-out battle-field known as the "run, nigger, run" battle-field. This argument is supposed and expected to absolutely paralyze. I shall not be surprised to yet see the "Pope" brought into this campaign, and then the picture will be complete—both the "Pope" and the Negro will be after all of us. It is presumed by the real leadership (or force) seeking the adoption of this Amendment, that the use of the words "Nigger," "Pope" "Rooster," and "White Supremacy" will throw a spell over the voters from which they can't possibly recover until after they awake and find this noose around their necks, as it assuredly will be if this amendment is adopted.

Presents a False Issue

Do you think for a minute that the "away down deep under" forces championing this proposed amendment, fear in the slightest the mass registeration of Negroes under our present system? Not at all. The real forces behind this amendment do not think along these lines, except for the purpose of attempting to have this matter decided on the basis of a false issue. The Advertiser

Since when did these forces become so solicitous about the welfare of the Democracy of Alabama as to assume its protection in any way? I wish to assure you that their theory of protection is not the same as mine. These chosen leaders directing this scrap for the adoption of this amendment, know that the white vote in Alabama is always on the increase, and this increase is terrifying to them.

They know that in the not distant future many additional white Democrats are likely to be enfranchised, and the mortal fear of this has driven these forces to seek to try to off-set this likely increase of white voters, by procuring for themselves a certain and definite measure of control over the entire democracy of Alabama. The relatively small number of qualified Negro voters who might be caught in this drag-net is purely incidental to the main effort. These forces fear the open, free and unfetterd expression of the white democracy of Alabama. Montgomery, Ala.

Direct Conflict

And why, may I inquire, do the ultra-reactionary forces in Alabama fear this free expression from the white democracy of Alabama? The question almost answers itself. Sun. 11-3-46

The reason is that if the white folks in Alabama were allowed to vote freely, they would vote for their own self interest and this interest is in direct conflict with the interests of this small but very powerful force seeking the adoption of this amendment. There, my fellow Democrats, is the real issue, and in this issue we don't find the Negro, the "Pope," a "Rooster" or "white supremacy." We do find here the issue of the supremacy of the democracy of Alabama, and if the issue, the real issue, may be stated a little differently, it might be expressed this way: Shall the democracy of Alabama shake loose from all shackles and vote its full strength—free, open and unfettered—or shall the democracy of Alabama not only retain its present shackles and fetters, but increase the weight of these shackles by the adoption of this amendment? No, my fellow Democrats, this proposal is distinctly anti-white folks.

Playing For High Stakes

The forces behind the proposed amendment are not dealing in "chicken feed." This is no penny-ante game they are playing but a game for table stakes, and all of my fellow Democrats who believe that these forces have placed only $3,500 in this game have been pretty badly misled in my judgment. This proposal is perhaps the most high-handed, open and brazen attempt to gain a definite measure of selfish control, under the protection of law, over the entire Democratic electorate of an entire State, ever attempted in this State, and, perhaps in several States.

There is nothing lacking in boldness in this proposal. It's a "one fell swoop" proposal, and the most insidious part is that the proposal asks the democracy to throttle itself and to place these shackles and this control in the organic law of the State, where no future Legislature may remove it by mere repeal. Talk about convention days in Alabama when, it's said, a few men carried the vote of the convention around in their vest pockets—those fellows were pikers compared with the new version of "mass production" control provided in this amendment.

The central idea behind the proposed amendment is control, and the suggestion that this control is to be applied only against the Negro is, in my judgement, wholly erroneous. Certainly nine-tenths of the control could be exercised against the white voter. The power to push around the entire white electorate of an entire state is no mean power I assure you.

Then, why do these forces drag the anti-Negro cry into this matter? The answer is this: They seek to captalize on what is believed to be great bitterness on the part of the white man against the Negro. As a white man, my fellow Democrats, I wish to state that I fear we white folks have about as many sins chalked up against us as the Negro. The key word in this matter is "control," though certain forces would have us believe the key words are: "whites against blacks."

Offers Rule Of The Few

If the theory of government urged by the real forces supporting the adoption of this amendment is reduced to an absurdity, it would result in ordinary, garden variety of dictatorship. This is so because this amendment seeks to whittle down the number of people who may participate in an election. If this whittling down process, conducted along "assembly line" and "mass production" methods, is carried on and on, at some point down the line democracy vanishes and we have left the vote ot that ratified group who seem to believe that democracy is not really democracy, but rule of the select few.

It's the ancient fight of self-interest—yes, self interest on the part of the masses as against self interest on the part of those who would make a rush for the almighty dollar the dominant and key-note motif of all government.

I cannot accept the construction that the proposed amendment would affect only those who seek registration after its adoption. Even if this were true, its enforcement against the Negro would be altogether insignificant when compared with its application or enforcement against white persons. If this amendment is adopted and the power and authority therein is used, it could conceivably be enforced against a very large segment of the present and future white population of this state.

Would Disqualify White Voters

We are told that the proposed amendment, if adopted, would be enforced in such a way as to direct its application solely against one segment of the population, but we all know that this could not be done. Plain, unambigious words in the organic law of the State must be given the meaning those words clearly and unquestionably convey. In other words, this amendment, if adopted, would apply to white folks just as it would apply to Negroes. And the number of white folks it might or could be enforced against is many times larger than the number of Negroes it may be enforced against. The suggestion that all of these troubles would be cured by its enforcement by 67 different boards of registrars is wholly unsound.

The forces behind this amendment, in effect, say: "It's not too good, but go ahead and pass it—we'll have it enforced in a way that will cure all defects." I doubt if the people of this State will accept any such explanation.

While the noose is being carefully placed around the neck of the white Democracy of Alabama by these "mass control" methods in order that the voters may become oblivious to what is about to happen, the Democracy of Alabama is asked to open its mouth and take a Mickie Finn potion made of: "The Pope is after us," the "Rooster is crowing," and "Democracy is about to be raped by the Negro." And, mind you, my fellow Democrats, the Democracy of Alabama is asked to do this thing to itself, and to bring it all within the frame-work of the laws of this State.

In other words, these forces say to the Democracy of Alabama: Take this potion, go to sleep and have night-mares about the Negroes. And while you sleep we'll draw off enough of the red blood of the Democracy of Alabama to insure its walking with a cane for the next fifty years at least." Indeed, these forces remind me of the boy talking to the fish he was getting ready to scale, clean and fry: "Be still fish, I ain't gonna do nuthin to ya, 'cept gut you a little."

Democracy Is On The March

Now, let's sum up just a bit: Alabama's Democracy, it's white Democracy, is on the march. In numbers it's increasing. It is fairly certain that in the not distant future this natural increase will be augmented by the inclusion of an appreciable number of additional white voters. This out-look throws a dark shadow across the path of the small but powerful reactionary element of the Democracy of Alabama.

Indeed, they foresee for the first time in Alabama's history, a free, open and unfettered expression of the entire white Democracy of this State, and it's extremely frightening to them. They know it's much easier to deal with a small electorate than with large numbers, and they set about to fight this course of events—to off-set what they believe is about to happen—by placing in the organic law of this State a section which they believe will be useful in preventing these feared events from happening; that is, these forces seek not only the power to cut down the present number of white voters, but to prepare for that day of "horrors" when present shackles may be removed and many additional white voters may seek resignation.

The essence of their plan for doing this is to place the Con- which will empower certain stitution of the State a provision boards to require applicants for registration to explain any given provision or provisions of the U. S. Constitution. They know full well that these provisions might be used against whites as well as against blacks, and they know if used against both, the number of whites it could be applied to greatly exceeds the number of blacks it might be applied to.

They said: "It's not too good, but go ahead and pass it and we'll have it amended later." They say, in effect, (presuming to speak for 67 different boards). "We'll enforce it in such a way as to be inoffensive to the whites."

That's about it, my fellow Democrats. It's an unsafe proposal and should be defeated in my judgment. We may need some changes in our laws governing qualifications and registration and many Democrats believe we do, but the proposed amendment is not the answer. It places too much authority and power in the hands of the several boards. If I were a member of one of these boards operating under this amendment, I am frank to state I would not know how to enforce its provisions. Though I have practiced law many years, I would not feel myself qualified to apply its provisions.

Folsom To Give Talks Against Amendment 4

Gov. Designate James E. Folsom will make two statewide radio broadcasts in opposition to the Boswell amendment Monday night, the citizens' committee against the amendment announced.

Folsom will make his first address from Montgomery at 6:45 p.m., then at 8:30 will speak again along with Richard T. Rives, Montgomery attorney; A. A. Carmichael, Democratic nominee for attorney general, and Editor Charles G. Dobbins of The Montgomery Advertiser.

A Textile Worker Speaks Out

Editor, Advertiser: The Advertiser

After the recent political drubbing I received in our Senatorial race, perhaps I should go hide my head in the sand and seal my lips forever . . . But . . . I'm just not built that way. During that late lamented (By Whom? Me, of course) campaign, I was asked how I stood on the Boswell Amendment. My honest answer to that question was that I did not know. I want to clarify that situation now. Montgomery, Ala.

I am against the Boswell Amendment. I am against the Boswell Amendment because of the patent dishonesty of it. The dishonesty of the Boswell Amendment is so flagrantly dishonest, "it stinks," to use the vernacular. Fri. 11-1-46

I am not bringing charges of dishonesty against those who speak out for this amendment, as a whole, because I know that some very fine men have let themselves be persuaded to come out for it. But, among the honest ones will be found the men that go wild when the racial question comes up. These men have racial prejudices, so strong, they would sacrifice our American Liberties to an American Hitler (or should I say, an American counter-part of Hitler), to vent their spleen against the Negro.

But . . . and now we come to the actual crux of the matter . . . there is in each, and every, one of the 67 counties of Alabama, a certain little clique of men that attempt to dominate the politics of that county. These are the men that I consider the "Vote Sellers." Perhaps I should be more polite and call them the "Vote Merchandisers," because they, very often, have to buy votes to elect the man who is buying his election from them. While they buy the votes that they need with a fifty cent piece and a drink of whisky, up to a five dollar bill, they sell these votes for appointments for themselves, or members of their families. Or special privileges and exemptions from the law, as it applies to the common man in the street and fields. These are the men that can invest their money in Roadhouses, Honkey Tonks, and slot machines and feel perfectly sure the Sheriff will close one eye when he drives by their place.

Also they can feel perfectly certain that some small farmer, with a section of his farm along the highway, can't set himself up a place in competition with them, (or at least the man that has been acting as a front for them). If he, the small farmer with a section along the highway, soon finds himself in the county Hoose-gow, he then realizes that he had tried to give competition to the wrong folks. If these county machines are powerful enough to reach into state elections they are free from danger from state law enforcement agents. If these county machines, overlap into adjoining counties, and they get their filthy tenacles hooked into Congressional and Senatorial nominees, then they are free from danger, even from the activities of Federal agents, because of the fact that the top appointees of these agents owe their jobs to the man that these machines elected.

These machines make it almost an impossibility for an honest man to be elected to any office. I use the words "almost an impossibility" because, on rare occasions, a man seeks public office who has enough natural leadership and personality to sway a majority of the electors, even though he is not connected with, or obligated to, the local political machines. But . . . I can assure you, when this does happen, our little special privilege-holding cliques become very highly peeved. To use the language of the street, they are "Burnt Up." They are not only "Burnt Up," at the man elected but also at the voters who elected him. To be exact, they are really more angry at the electors than the elected. They feel that the voters of their counties have been guilty of treason against them personally when they refuse to take orders and vote for the man the machine was backing. Let a very flagrant case like this occur and these machine posses want to disfranchise every voter in their county that could not be persuaded, bribed or commanded to vote with the machine.

As every one knows, there has been such a flagrant case, very recently, in which a man was elected to a public office, in the face of the opposition of almost every county and city machine in the state. I think the Montgomery Advertiser is to be commended for one of the greatest acts of pure sportsmanship that has ever occurred in Alabama, because, while she, too, was on the losing side in this election, yet she refuses to be a party to sponsoring an act that is without doubt intended to aid those that would like an instrument to use in a Witch Hunt against those that wilfully disregarded the wishes of their local political bosses.

The sponsors of this bill are shouting "Nigger, Nigger, Nigger!" because they are striving for the aid of those that they are really seeking to disfranchise. They are shouting the desperate plight of us white people here in the Black Belt. Yes, I'll admit that we have a few upstart Negroes here in the Black Belt, but who is afraid of them? We, the white people hold the purse strings. We, the white people, do the hiring and the firing. We have to furnish the paydays that buy the groceries, the shoes, the clothes and pay the rent. We can refuse to give employment to any Negro that puts his name on a poll list. We can refuse to give employment to any Negro that spends his money with any Negro merchant that has his name on a poll list. We can refuse to give employment to any Negro that is a patient of any Negro Doctor or contribute to the support of any Negro preacher that has his name on a poll list. We can refuse to buy the produce of any Negro farmer that owns his own farm and puts his name on a poll list.

I did not like the way that Col. H. M. Ayers phrased his statement concerning the Black Belt, of which Bullock County is included, but all I can say is: "He's d--m whistling" when he says, "they are smart. They can keep on controlling the offices in their counties." We don't need, or want, the sympathy of Col. Ayers, nor do we need the aid of the Boswell Amendment.

I know that if the Negro had complete autonomy, or self-rule, he would revert back to the stage from which our ancestors pulled him by force, but I am not going to be a fish and grab a baited hook just because some one says bite. Especially when I can see the hook so plain through the bait, and also see the fisherman on the bank that is holding the pole.

I just hope the majority of people who voted in opposition to their local county and city machines in recent elections just glance up through the water and take a look at the fisherman before they swallow the bait. If they do, when they find they have gobbled up the hook too, it will be to late for them, or at least most of them, to ever bother anymore bait.

Some of the fishers on the bank tell you that there is no hook in the bait but Mr. A. A. Carmichael, the man elected to determine such thiings for the next four years, says that there is. He says that your county board of registrars can call you back and refuse you the right to register if you can't answer questions that the Supreme Court disagrees on . . . (You might give an answer agreeing with Justice Black, while they agreed with Justice Jackson).

Unless you are absolutely certain that you are one of the fair-haired boys with your local city and county machines, when you look at Amendment Number 4 . . . YOU . . . yes YOU better sing this little song . . .

It's not My Father, nor My Mother,
Nor My Sister, nor My Brother
But it's me, O Lord . . .

And don't fool yourself that it could not be.

Religion And The Amendmen.

The News Birmingham, Ala.

Two weeks ago the supporters of the Boswell amendment published a list of supporters of the proposal. A large percentage of the names listed were of officeholders professional politicians and persons on the political fringe. Few, if any, preachers were on the list. Eighty Alabama clergymen, including Protestants of many denominations, Catholics and Jews, have signed a joint statement calling for defeat of the Boswell amendment. Perhaps in these contrasting facts, one may get an indication of one dividing line the issue has produced.

There are, of course, good men and women, sincere, honest, intelligent men and women, supporting the Boswell amendment. But the fact that so many ministers of the Gospel are opposed to it, and the reasons they give for their position, would seem especially significant. Sat. 11-2-46

Consider some of the fundamental tenets of Christianity, of the teachings of Jesus. Justice, tolerance, kindness, the brotherhood of men—they all rank high in the teachings of the Man of Galilee. How do those ideals square up with the Boswell amendment? Can they be reconciled with the "arbitrary and undefined powers" the amendment would place in the hands of registrars? Do they accept the brotherhood of men who deliberately and openly proclaim that the law will be enforced one way for one set of men and another way for another group? Is that being "kind one to another"?

There is no reference to religion in the published statement by the clergymen opposing the Boswell amendment. But it is difficult to escape the feeling that their action was motivated by the mainsprings of their faiths. It has been said that democracy is religion in action in the political field. By that standard, these ministers are displaying a deep and abiding faith in genuine democracy.

The statement of these 80 ministers, priests, and rabbis, representing virtually all religious faiths in this State, as published in Friday newspapers, demonstrates that the religious leaders of America are alert to attacks against democratic fundamentals whether they come from the right or from the left. Sat. 11-2-46

Indeed no expression during the whole sad Boswell Amendment controversy has so effectively revealed the broad opposition to this ill-timed, ill-conceived amendment from people who see in it serious moral implications, as well as obvious political implications.

The Rev. C. C. Daniel, superintendent of the Montgomery District Methodist Church, nailed the most damning weakness in the amendment when he declared: "Adoption of Amendment No. 4 would set our State back for many years. We definitely need clear standards for citizenship, but such standards should be applied effectively and without discrimination to all kinds of people in our State."

Bishop Thomas J. Toolen, of the Catholic Diocese of Mobile, minced no words in condemning the proposed amendment as "unethical, un-democratic, and un-American."

When such men as Daniel, Toolen, and the other 78 speak out, it is time for men like Joe Poole, Frank Dixon and Tom Heflin to stop yelling about the "outside influences" which seek to defeat the Boswell Amendment. If they are not careful, they may make themselves look ridiculous.

In the ranks of forces against the Boswell Amendment are most Alabama preachers and teachers, housewives and businessmen, editors and farmers, professional men and office workers. There is a common bond among them all, and it is an unshakable respect for human rights, for the integrity of law, and for the American democracy which so recently cost us the lives of our loved ones.

It is to be expected that the 80 religious leaders who are unwilling to remain silent in the face of a basic attack on the honor of their State will receive some bitter criticism. They will be accused of serving as dupes, and of stepping out of their proper pulpit roles. They will pay a price for their courageous conviction.

But in the opinion of The Advertiser, the action of these 80 men of God, who dared speak out for what they see as the right, come what may, is the most heartening development in the public life of Alabama in many a day. It is convincing proof that, regardless of the Boswell Amendment's fate, a fighting democracy lives in Alabama!

BACKWARD AND BETRAYING

In giving such full treatment to the Montgomery debate on the Boswell amendment last week, The News measured up handsomely to its journalistic duty. It gave full and even play to both sides. But, in that process, it also showed up the weakness of the pro-amendment case. The deadly parallel exposed race intolerance as the major motivation behind the amendment.

The three main objections to the Boswell amendment are that it is (a) unnecessary, (b) offensive, (c) dangerous. It is being pressed as a device to meet the U. S. Supreme Court's decision in the Texas case opening primaries to all qualified voters whatever their color. But the amendment has to do with registration, and under the state constitution, as it stands, the number of Negro voters who can participate in primaries is so small as to be negligible. Why, then, this hullabaloo in favor of doctoring regulations which have kept white supremacy unchallenged for 45 years?

The amendment substitutes for a property qualification three new tests. Registrars are to be given arbitrary authority to say whether applicants can explain and understand the federal constitution, are of good character, and know the duties of citizenship under a republican form of government. When the property qualification was set up, it was intended to keep down the Negro vote. But, in a generation or so, many Negroes have risen economically. Under this amendment, they would be penalized to an extent for being thrifty and working hard.

Participating in primaries and having the right to register are separate things. Those who are for the Boswell amendment know that, but since the "white" primary was an additional barrier to Negro suffrage and since their aim is to exclude the Negro from voting, regardless of qualification, they now undertake to erect fresh impediments. The best they could think up was a batch of vague generalities which, in the hands of the right kind of registrars, could serve the purpose of exclusion. That these restrictions could be used with the same result against white persons seemingly does not disturb them.

But, on the basis of realities, the gravest aspect of the Boswell amendment is that, if adopted, it may prove to be the source of the complete demolition of our suffrage system. For it would certainly be tested in the courts, and there is good reason, bearing in mind the trend of its recent decisions, to expect the U. S. Supreme Court to deal unfavorably with such a limitation on full citizenship. The constitution we have has run the gauntlet and is therefore secure. But if it is subjected to a fresh scrutiny in terms of this amendment, Alabama may be in for the same sort of shock which Texas had.

There are moderate supporters of the Boswell amendment who say that all they want is to make impossible a flood of Negro voters. But what they may be inviting is just that. We will have such an inundation if the Supreme Court rejects the amendment. We may even find ourselves deprived of the safeguards which we now have and which have served so well to prevent a tidal sweep of Negro voting. So sound a lawyer as Col. Richard T. Rives is of the opinion that the amendment is unconstitutional. Does anyone in his senses wish to have the Supreme Court expressly say so?

Every argument of sound judgment, good policy and good sense is opposed to the amendment. Against this logic, those who are for the amendment have nothing to offer except the emotionalism which grows out of prejudice. The race problem will not be eased, much less solved, by a resort to unbridled arrogance on the part of the white community. In spite of lapses, interracial relations have improved, as justice, fair play and human decency have made themselves felt more and more beneficially. In the light of that fact, will rational men and women wipe out the progress which has been made by approving a proposal so gratuitously backward and betraying as the Boswell amendment? Sun. 9-23-46

RULE OF FEAR—OR JUDGMENT?

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

Some advocates of the Boswell Amendment are persuasive witnesses against it.

Take for example Henry Sweet, a commissioner of Jefferson County, who is reported by the Associated Press as appearing before the County Democratic Executive Committee Friday to ask that body not to take a stand on the amendment, but instead to undertake an "educational campaign" on it—whatever that means.

Mr. Sweet said that in his opinion the amendment is "too broad" in some respects, capable of leading to "an abuse of power," but he added—"I WILL VOTE FOR IT."

Now if Mr. Sweet admits the amendment is "too broad" and capable of leading to "abuse of power," just as The Advertiser has pointed out, then why should he vote to make it a part of the Constitution of Alabama, the sacred defender of the people's rights and liberties? Sun. 10-13-46

The simple answer is fear. Half the people who plan to vote for Amendment No. 4 on Nov. 5 will do so not because they are convinced of its wisdom, but because carefully planned propaganda has made them afraid to oppose anything labeled as a way to stop the Negro.

Forgotten is the war in which their sons died fighting to defend the integrity of democracy against those who spit upon the ideal of a fair ballot, and the rule of the people.

Symbols of the past like Horace Wilkinson and Tom Heflin arise and cry out, "Save White Supremacy!" and some men will close their eyes to principle and vote for the thing, no matter what it means.

But the Boswell Amendment is so crude and ill-drawn an instrument, so damning in its invitation to tyranny and abuse, that some of its own spokesmen open their mouths only half-heartedly. They fear to stand for principle and strike against the amendment, but they know in their hearts that they speak for what is rotten and a stench in the nostrils of citizens who stand for a government of laws, and not of men.

Not in many a year have the people of Alabama had such an opportunity to choose between principle, justice, and democratic integrity—and the kind of hate-filled, craven, pagan philosophy that has plagued the hopes and the peace of mankind from the beginning of time.

DISAPPOINTING DECISION

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

While the statement by Governor Chauncey Sparks endorsing the Boswell Amendment is hardly surprising, it may be said that his decision to join former Governor Frank Dixon on this question is disappointing to many friends and admirers of the present chief executive. Tues.

The Governor's statement is couched in temperate language—indeed parts of it are in language that most opponents of the Amendment would accept as argument against adoption. 10-8-46

He said, "I favor Amendment No. 4 on the regular ballot, commonly called 'The Boswell Amendment,' in the interest of continued orderly progress in the settlement of our electoral problems. I favor the gradual enlargement of our electorate, and that without creating further racial antagonisms, or a white and black party system."

But Governor Sparks ignores the serious question as to the amendment's ability to stand the test of the United States Supreme Court, and the certainty that it would invite harsh federal intervention in the election system of the South.

With this statement from Governor Sparks, the lines in Alabama politics are rather clearly drawn on the issue. Sparks and Dixon support the Amendment — Hill and Folsom condemn it. Senator-nominate John Sparkman has made no public statement.

Voice Of The People

THE CHRISTIAN ETHICS VIEWPOINT

The News Birmingham Ala. Thurs. 10-3-46

To the Editor of The News:

Apropos the proposed Amendment 4 (Boswell amendment) there seems to be an ill-founded idea in the minds of some voters that, due to a recent Supreme Court decision, some tightening of suffrage qualifications is necessary in order to prevent a flood of ignorant Negro voters. Such is not the case. The decision in the Texas case has no possible connection with registration, but could affect only such Negroes as are already established as voters. The present rather strict registration requirements of the constitution, if impartially administered, may be relied upon to exclude undesirable elements of both races. Little fault has been found in their operation during the 45 years since their adoption, and there appears no valid reason for change now.

If the object is to exclude the Negro from suffrage solely on account of his race and regardless of character and educational qualifications, it is quite safe to assert that very great difficulty will be encountered in framing an amendment which will stand the test of the courts. Amendment 4 represents not only an attempt to do this, but would empower any registration board to reject any person of either race, whatever might be the validity of his qualifications. It would be, in effect, license to "pass him if he seems likely to vote right, otherwise turn him down." It would clear the way for a crooked political super-machine to dwarf all the crooked political machines which have heretofore flourished in the history of American politics.

Many very able letters have appeared in your "Voice of the People" column on this subject, by both white and Negro writers. But there is one point of view which has not been presented, one which should receive the prayerful consideration of our people, and that is the viewpoint of Christian ethics. Our state is generously endowed with thousands of Christian churches ministering to hundreds of thousands of professing Christians, men and women who profess to follow, as closely as our faulty humanity will permit, in the foosteps of the Founder of Christianity. Among His precepts we find, "Love one another" and "Do unto others as you would that they do unto you." Did He say anything about one race being superior to another—or was that Hitler? If you vote, or influence others to vote, on a basis of hatred and prejudice, how are you going to square such action before the Great Judge on that dread occasion which Christian dogma teaches must come to all?

The sincere Christian who would emulate the Master would be well advised to ask himself, "Were Jesus in Alabama today, how would He vote on this—or any other—matter?" And having found the answer from analogy with His life and teachings, go and do likewise. 10-3-46

DEMOCRACY ON TRIAL

To the Editor of The News: The News

Below is an open letter to Attorney Richard T. Rives, Montgomery, Ala.: Birmingham, Ala.

Since democracy is now on trial before the judge and jury of the world court of public opinion, the state of Alabama is fortunate to have a citizen of your thought capacities serving them in the legal profession. There are undoubtedly many more like you in all walks of life, but do they openly express themselves? Thurs. 10-10-46

The average American wants to abide by the federal constitution regardless of his personal attitude toward race or religion, etc. Those who have returned from the battle fronts of the world are likewise determined to see justice meted out to everyone. To set up any obstacle in the path of civil rights is only to impede progress in every avenue of endeavor. Alabama or any other state in our Union can ill afford to stand in the way of its advancement. Intelligent voters will agree with your point of view and erase the stigma that the Boswell resolution would place upon a great state and a proud people.

The Birmingham News is to be congratulated for its unbiased stand in publishing all sides of every important news issue. When widely circulated publications such as The News give generously of their space to controversial matter, their readers become the recipients of the educational benefits of true journalism. Alabama and the nation need more such dissemination of fairness.

A Grand Old Southerner Speaks Out

(This letter to Dick Rives from an honored Southerner and former resident of Montgomery is published as a valuable comment on the current issue.)

Colonel R. T. Rives, The Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala. Birmingham, Ala.
Dear Colonel: Sun. 10-6-46

I have just read with interest and approval your argument against the proposed Boswell Amendment to the Constitution of Alabama. To me it is sound, logical and convincing and consistent with the march of democracy and twentieth century philosophy.

You know me intimately enough to know that I have taken no part in politics for the last 14 years. I have no desire to ever take any active part in partisan politics. For the last 14 or 15 years my thought as well as my time has been given entirely to an attempt to promote the welfare of the American farmer. I have become so interested in this work as to crowd out from my mind any desire to be a part of strife or indulge in partisan politics. In this work I have dealt with men of all classes, all races, and all conditions, and have found it pleasant to try to be helpful to all persons with whom I have had contact.

I can see no earthly reason to take a revolutionary and radical step in changing our Constitution as proposed by Mr. Boswell. Conditions are not what they were in 1901 in Alabama, in America, nor in the world. We have fought two costly, cruel wars for the cause of democracy, which we interpret to mean individual liberty, a liberty franchise, and the protection of the rights of the minority. Surely we should not at the ballot box seek to bring about a result different than the objectives and results of two world wars.

I am as southern as any man who ever lived and love the traditions of the South as much as anyone and I am just as anxious to maintain the purity and supremacy of the white race as is any other man in the South, but I have really grown tired and I am fed up on this idea of waving the bloody flag and hollering about white supremacy every time any measure is discussed that would tend to strengthen our democracy, make more progressive our government, and bring about a better understanding among our entire people. If with the present underhold we have with our registration boards we still are unable to control the situation in Alabama, then it is a reflection on those of us who are fully in charge of state and county governments.

Parenthetically (if it really be a digression), I have grown tired of certain individuals and groups accusing every man of being communistic or socialistic if he happens to differ with some of those whose opinions have not changed since they heard from their fathers about their grandfathers' views on certain matters that were peculiar to the age in which the grandfathers lived and have no direct connection with the life of the present generation. You remember the old saying: "The orthodoxy of today is the heterodoxy of tomorrow, and the radicalism of today is the conservatism of tomorrow." I remember what I once read in the memoirs of Priestley: "Orthodoxy is my doxy; heterodoxy is another man's doxy." I do not agree with Disraeli when he says: "A conservative government is an organized hypocrisy"; but I do agree with him that sometimes "a precedent embalms a principle" and that "justice is truth in action"; and I also remember that he said: "It is much easier to be critical than to be correct." As I have grown older I have tried to break the chains that have bound me to foolish precedents, and to live in the present rather than try to adjust the present to a dead past. The same fundamental principles apply to my thinking now that applied years ago, but the world has changed, America has changed, Alabama has changed, and we have changed; and but for this, there would be no difference between the present and the past.

I can't keep from realizing, anyway, that the American Negro is an American citizen and we require him to pay taxes, serve in the Army, conform to our laws and customs; and it has been many years since I have been frightened because a limited number of intelligent Negroes might be given the franchise. I am more or less familiar with the political doings of several big cities. I have been in New York on election day, I have been on the South Side of Chicago on election day, I have been in Philadelphia and Baltimore on election day, and I have been in New Orleans on several election days; and as long as barroom bums and gamblers, touts and representatives of the underworld in the big cities line up at the polls as managers, clerks, watchers, and workers, and largely dominate the elections, I have no fear whatever of a limited number of quiet, well-behaved, intelligent Southern Negroes being allowed the privilege of exercising their constitutional rights. I strongly feel to further attempt to restrict the franchise in Alabama would be of no benefit to anyone but would have a tendency to destroy democracy in Alabama and make our state more backward than it is. I have no objection whatever to a reasonable requirement before a man is permitted to vote; but I sincerely believe it should apply to all people alike and I can't keep from thinking anything to the contrary is bad morals.

I am not radical in my views, I am not an extremist in my opinion, and I have not departed from the principles, the teachings and the views of a Southern Democrat; but I hope that through education and the suffering of two great wars we have learned that democracy is something with a meaning and not just a catch word, and I would like to say now what I was criticized for saying in a speech in Alabama 15 or 18 years ago, and that is that unless a larger number of the (C), 1946, by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

American people actively participate in the affairs of their government this thing we so proudly boast of as democracy will cease to exist. I feel sure that the returned soldiers and younger men of our country want a more liberal interpretation of our Constitution, including our franchise, than those of us who have become so advanced in years as to have fixed opinions that still keep us chained to the traditions of a dead past. Nothing could be more unfortunate than for those of us who are still chained to these traditions to feel that we are called upon to further restrict the franchise rather than give to the present generation a free opportunity for expression at the polls. I quite agree that the enthusiasm and ardor of youth may well be tempered by the advice and counsel of old age, but surely those of us who have grown old do not want to block the way to further development and progress of the human race. I have come to that point in life where I feel like I would like to say: Sun. 10-6-46

"Give me a staff of honor for mine age,
But not a scepter to control the world."

for I learn as I journey along the way that all men are made in God's image and that a true democracy gives protection to and offers benefits for all of its people.

"LET SLEEPING DOGS LIE".

Editor, The Advertiser: The Advertiser

I am nearing 86 years old. Talk of a new amendment to tighten and enlighten the voters of Alabama and control the vicious Negro from voting—if there's going to be a Democratic Government, and any sort of white primary, we had better let sleeping dogs lie. Montgomery, Ala.

It looks and sounds silly to me. Every Negro of voting age will be ready to answer any question the registrars can ask him. They will learn and be tutored to give the right answers that any one can ask them as to citizenship and knowledge of our constitutional right as a citizen. If the amendment passes, who is going to say no?

Trouble will come when this is made a law. Look at good old Georgia today.

Please publish this if you see fit. Mon. 10-14-46

WANTS MORE WHITE VOTERS.

Editor, The Advertiser: The Advertiser

As there is so much discussion concerning the Boswell Amendment, I would like to have a few words to say about it.

I don't think the Negroes should be allowed to vote in our primaries.

Why can't they appoint good responsible citizens as registrars, who will do the right thing? Let them use their good, honest judgment as to the applicant's qualification. I am in favor of the Boswell Amendment, but I think the educational part of it should be modified a little to let in a few more poor white voters. Montgomery, Ala.

I am 76 years old, Negroes all around me all of my life. So I think I ought to know something about them. The Negro has no originality, has no inventive power; they are imitators. They are good laborers under white supervision. I like the Negro in his place, but not social equality by any means. The white people must rule. The more rope you give the Negro the more he will take. They are prone to use any advantage they can possibly get. There are not more than one-sixth of the Negroes who are fit or worthy to vote. But we should find some way to let in more of the good poor white citizens. The Secretary of Agriculture, Joe Poole, and Mr. Tom Heflin, got out about the best argument for the Amendment that I have seen. Mon. 10-14-46

IN RE BOSWELL AMENDMENT

The News

To the Editor of The News: Birmingham, Ala.

When Alabama Democratic Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey, in answering Sen. Lister Hill's harange against the Boswell amendment, said, "The Democratic Party in the South and the Democratic Party nationally, on some propositions, are entirely different animals," he spoke a gospel truth. Any improvement on it might have been effected by changing "on some propositions" to "on nearly all propositions." Thurs. 10-3-46

Too many of our state-elected-to-office "Southern Democrats," whether nominated and elected to a state governorship or to a seat in Congress or to a seat in the U. S. Senate, hurry to Washington almost the minute it's officially announced that they've been nominated, even, and join the nationalists and internationalists in the North and East, thus cleverly and quickly changing from Southern Democrats to Washington politicians.

Note: Obviously enough, when our Southern lambs take to the pasture of Northern and Eastern animals (radical regimes, sinister groups, communistic-minded politicians, racial agitators, etc.), they usually, and deservedly, get into a heck of a muddle, if not a stack of trouble. It's like a nice lad taking to bad company. Soon afterward a saintly priest couldn't pray the strayed-away lad's sins away. (Nor could The Birmingham Age-Herald's editorial of Sept. 27 explain Sen.-Nominee John Sparkman's Wallace-muddle away. "What is done, is done." Guilt, political or otherwise, may be explained—but it can't be explained away.)

Apropos of the proposed Boswell amendment, with its pros and cons, I wish you might have read, if you didn't read, Horace Wilkinson's pro on the amendment, as published in the Sept. 18 issue of The Birmingham News.

The pen that wrote it, and the tongue that spoke it, must have been all but verily dipped in pure Southern, Anglo-Saxon blood before such a flow of expressed Southern philosophy and application could have been made to issue forth.

A Southern speech, to the last letter of the last word! Indeed, its adherence to, and advocacy of, an ever-for-keeps solidity and blood-purity of Caucasian home and family, free from ebon mixture in the Southland, were as sound as Southern granite. Its depth in Southern tradition, particularly as concerned white supremacy, was as deep as the Deep South itself.

Rank and file Alabama voters, let us ponder well before souring on the Boswell amendment, which is to be voted on in the November general election. And Southern men elected to high public office in Alabama, for the purpose of properly representing Alabama, had best do some serious thinking also before they come haranguing against the South's No. 1 tradition, namely: Keeping white supremacy supreme.

ASKING FOR EXPLOSION.

Editor, The Advertiser: The Advertiser

I wonder if Wilkinson and the other proponents of the Boswell Amendment realize what they are doing?

Analysis of their reasons for favoring arbitrary restriction of voting in Alabama shows a shortsightedness that is regrettable because it is most dangerous to the people they are trying to protect. Montgomery, Ala.

Preventing a citizen from voting for arbitrary reasons of color (the admitted purpose of the Boswell Amendment) is as morally wrong as slavery. And as long as we remain a fundamentally democratic, logical and righteous people, such restrictions are bound to go, sooner or later—just as slavery was bound to go.

It is in face of this self-evident fact, that the shortsightedness and its danger become evident. Tues. 10-15-46

Even Boswellians admit that the Negro may someday be permitted to vote, but what they don't see is that by continually putting off that day the possibilities of it coming by explosion become greater.

Wilkinson said in his Kiwanis Club speech that we don't want what happened in Georgia to happen here—that of 150,000 Negroes voting in a bloc. But that is what such unjustly prohibitive measures as he advocates would finally bring about.

If, on the contrary the Negro is allowed to take his vote as it becomes his natural desire to do so, without any issue of "White Supremacy" to antagonize him into solidarity, his vote will be as distributed as that of the whites.

If you think an act of injustice will not act as a solidarizer, just consider the case of our South which, some 80 years after such an act was perpetrated on it, is still "solid." We was in power when the South was treated as a conquered territory.

Boswell Requests Clarifying Statutes To Aid Vote Plan

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

Gov. Chauncey Sparks formally proclaimed the Boswell Amendment into law yesterday and simultaneously its author advocated legislative action to aid in administering the new voting requirements. 11-15-46

Gov. Sparks issued his proclamation immediately after the results of the Nov. 5 election were certified by the canvassing board composed of himself, the Secretary of State and the Attorney General.

The official canvass showed the Boswell Amendment was ratified by 89,163 votes to 76,843, a margin of 12,320. The proposal to require prospective voters to be able to "understand and explain the U. S. Constitution carried in 41 counties and failed in 26.

The board also certified the ratification of all eight other constitutional amendments as well as the election of John Sparkman to the U. S. Senate; Laurie C. Battle as a new member of the House of Representatives from the Ninth District, and the re-election of the eight other Alabama congressmen.

The canvass of the vote for governor and other state constitutional officers, however, must await the January session of the legislature.

Meanwhile, Rep. E. C. (Bud) Boswell of Geneva, who authorized the vote registration amendment last year, expressed hope that the 1947 legislature would follow up with "clarifying statutes." 11-15-46

"To remove any doubt at all," he said while on a visit to Montgomery, "the legislature should give county boards of registrars judicial status and make other changes in registration laws which will aid in their administration."

He advocated such action to "make the State's election laws more workable," and said one of the changes should be an increase in election officials' pay.

Boswell reiterated his contention that the amendment was not violative of the U. S. Constitution, as some opponents argued during the campaign, but acknowledged that a federal question might arise if there was "discrimination" in application of the amendment's provisions.

Restrictive Measure Lead Mounts To 11,048

Sat. 11-9-46

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., Nov. 8.—(AP)—Alabama voters wrote into the State Constitution a provision requiring all would-be voters to be able to "read and explain" any provision of the Federal Constitution, belated returns from Tuesday's general election revealed today.

The measure, known as the Boswell Amendment, was frankly aimed at preventing mass registration of Negroes in the State. Its advocates stressed this feature in pre-election speeches.

With 2,012 of the State's 2,362 boxes tabulated, the vote for the amendment was 280,836, with 69,788 against.

The missing boxes, divided between counties favoring and voting against the amendment, were not expected to change the proportionate totals.

The campaign, despite its racial angles, generated little interest and almost none of the usual campaign heat in Alabama. So scant was the curiosity over the outcome that many counties kept no unofficial count of the votes, and were little concerned with the outcome.

Party's Chairman Urges Leaders Unite, Make Amendment 4 Work

MOBILE, ALA., Nov. 8.—(AP)—Party Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey made a move tonight to restore harmony to Alabama Democratic ranks split by dissension over the Boswell Amendment and urged political leaders to unite to make the amendment work.

McCorvey released a telegram to Governor-Designate James E. Folsom advancing the suggestions after an Associated Press count showed the measure, aimed at preventing mass registration of Negroes, had been adopted in Tuesday's general election.

"We must not permit any honest differences of opinion among loyal Democrats on such issues as the Boswell Amendment to cause any rift in our party ranks," the party chairman said in his telegram congratulating Folsom on his election.

Folsom was one of the leaders in opposition to the proposal.

"All of us feel absolutely confident that you and our good friends, Haygood Paterson and Dan Thomas, in selecting our new boards of registrars, with the added discretionary powers now conferred on such boards, will use splendid judgment and only appoint to these all-important positions men and women of judicial temperament who will be fair, honorable, upright, just and reasonable in the consideration of the applications of those seeking to register, to the end that no injustice be done to any of our citizens, whether they are white or colored.

"Alabama will then continue to have an electorate of which we may all well be proud. I sincerely believe that our new registration provisions, when some minor objections have been ironed out, will give Alabama the most workable and satisfactory suffrage laws of any Southern state, and that we will be the envy of our neighbors, with no racial friction, bitterness or hatred and with all classes of our citizens realizing that the privileges of the ballot will be extended to them just as soon as they have qualified themselves to vote intelligently."

McCorvey said he would outline later a plan which he said would make the Boswell Amendment and the state's voting laws more workable.

Supporters Of Boswell's Amendment To Present Supporting Measures

By LYNNE BRANNEN
Associated Press Writer

Boswell Amendment backers, flushed with victory in this week's general election, are girding forces to consolidate the position they have won at the polls.

While no announcement to this effect has been made, it is generally conceded that the victors hope to follow up their constitutional decision with bills in next year's Legislature to assist county board of registrars in its application.

Sat. 11-10-46

Gov. Chauncey Sparks interpreted the successful carriage of the measure as a refuting of the "hysteria" so prevalent in America today and an indication that it cannot move the people "to do a foolish thing or refuse to do an indispensable thing."

"Realistic Way"

"My confidence has been strengthened and refreshed," he said. "We have determined to continue a progresisve settlement of our local problems in an orderly, careful, tolerant, but realistic way. It is a wholesome sign in Alabama's political life."

The Governor's statement came shortly after unofficial Associated Press tabulations from 2,278 of the State's boxes showed the amendment approved by a substantial margin of 88,131 to 76,712 votes.

Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey of the State Democratic Executive Committee, one of the leading supporters of the amendment which makes more rigid the registration provisions, when some minor objections have been ironed out, will give Alabama the most workable and satisfactory suffrage laws of any southern state."

Opponents of the measure who waged a vigorous fight against its adoption have been mostly silent since the election.

However, Richard T. Rives, Montgomery attorney and State chairman of an anti-Boswell Amendment committee, observed that if "properly administered" the measure should not cause any great conflict or harm to any group.

No Surrender

In Dothan, Representative E. C. Boswell of Geneva, author of the controversial amendment, described results of the election as "conclusive" that the American people and the voters of Alabama would not surrender their State and the measure should not cause any conflict or harm to any radical groups."

"I sincerely believe," McCorvey told Folsom, "that our new registration provisions, when some minor objections have been ironed out, will give Alabama the most workable and satisfac- nation to the CIO-PAC and other

Real Factor

"The administration of this measure," he said, "is the real factor now involved. If the registrars are fair and impartial, and I am confident they will be during the Folsom administration, there should be no trouble."

Rives said he has heard of no movement to make a court test of the amendment's legality.

"If any such attempt is made," he said, "I am sure that it will not come from within the group which led the campaign against the amendment's passage."

Montgomery, Ala.

The Boswell Amendment will become effective when Gov. Sparks officially proclaims the election results, which is expected about Nov. 15.

Sun. 11-10-46

The official canvass by the Governor, attorney general and secretary of State must be made within 15 days after the election, but another statute requires the certificates of election be issued for congressmen and senators within 10 days.

Reassurance For Alabama

What opponents feared so much about the now adopted Boswell amendment was that the very wide discretionary authority it grants might some day be used unjustly against members of minority groups. That danger is still there. The power to reject an applicant for registration on the ground that he does not, according to the registrars, "understand and explain" the constitution of the United States satisfactorily, is an exceedingly broad power. It is a power subject to misuse. But mere approval of the amendment in itself does not automatically make certain such misuse. Everything depends, in this connection, in the fairness and intelligence with which the registrars exercise their power.

The tremendous vote against the amendment, which came so close to defeating the proposal, will be a powerful influence against abuse of the authority granted by the amendment. If there had been only a small vote in opposition, the danger would have been much greater.

It is to be remembered, of course, that many sincere citizens who voted for the Boswell plan are themselves strongly opposed to unjust discrimination against Negroes or members of any other minority group. There is, therefore, a vast expression coming from both sides in this particular controversy, but speaking in behalf of moderation.

It may be said, we think, that each side voted against the kind of extremism it feared.

Advocates of the amendment feared there would be indiscriminate registration of unqualified citizens. But it is to be borne in mind also that opponents of the amendment themselves did not favor indiscriminate registration of all applicants, regardless of qualifications. They, too, desired reasonable action in this respect. What they opposed was arbitrary rejection of applicants on unjustifiable grounds. They voted against extremism of that kind.

Expressions of leaders of the opposing sides give support to the hope that there will be moderation and fairness in application of the amendment.

In a message to Gov.-Elect Folsom, Gessner T. McCorvey, State Democratic Executive Committee chairman, expressed confidence that the new boards to be appointed by the governor, the secretary of agriculture and the auditor in the new state administration "will be fair, honorable, upright, just and reasonable in the consideration of the applications of those seeking to register, to the end that no injustice be done to any of our citizens, whether they be white or colored."

Richard T. Rives, Montgomery attorney and leader of the fight against the amendment, asserted that he is confident the new registrars will be fair and impartial and that if they are, "there should be no trouble."

It is the will of the people that finally rules in America. That will is for justice and fairness in using the power of the Boswell amendment. That being so, there can be reassurance for the future.

NOW THAT IT HAS PASSED

Editor, The Advertiser:

It is not surprising that many of the opponents of the Boswell Amendment are shocked at the wide margin by which the amendment was ratified. By and large, those in Alabama who opposed the Boswell Amendment are comprised of elements which, if they have nothing else in common, are at least moved by a mutual revulsion against an attempt to legalize within this State a type of demagoguery which was a distinctive feature of the development of totalitarian governments in Europe. It is natural, then, that the opponents of the bill, having in inherent faith in the integrity of a common background, and a conviction of mutual devotion to democratic ideals, should evidence some consternation at the revelation of such widely divergent principles among their fellow Alabamians.

Montgomery, Ala.

Blatantly advertised by its protagonists as a means of preventing registration of Negroes, and their consequent assumption of public offices in many sections of Alabama, the Boswell Amendment had a tremendous appeal to those people who became convinced that such consequences would naturally follow the defeat of this bill. The fact is that mass registration of Negroes in Alabama has always been so unlikely that it was never even worth considering. There is no logic and no legitimate reason for creating a law to prevent something which would never have happened in the first place. What it does do is set up machinery for depriving citizens of this State of rights granted to them by the Constitution of the United States. It places in the hands of appointed individuals an authority inconsistent with the tenets of government by which the United States has become the emblem of liberty and justice to all the world.

Wed. 11-13-46

At present the effort is being made to create an impression that the Boswell Amendment will operate to improve the qualifications for exercising the franchise. There is a certain merit in the theory invoked. Pointing to the attributes of trust and responsibility that devolve upon the individual in the employment of his vote, there is something to be said in favor of establishing some minimum standards of qualifications for the privilege. In attaching this significance to the Boswell Amendment, an impression of legitimacy is created. However, it is pure camouflage. Some of the chief proponents of this law have left little doubt in any one's mind as to its true significance—all protestations of good faith and fair administration to the contrary.

Unquestionably most of the voters who supported the Boswell Amendment at the polls on Nov. 5 would be incensed at the suggestion that their efforts could contribute to a situation in Alabama which might be compared with the plight that people found themselves in under authoritarian regimes in Europe. It is unlikely that there are many people in Alabama who would subscribe to the sort of ranting engaged in by Horace Wilkinson on the occasion of his debate with R. T. Rives a short time ago in Montgomery. What is more probable is that many sincere minded and honest men and women went to the polls with the true import of the issue obscured to an extent where they were unaware of the type of political philosophy supported with their votes. Fortunately such an error of judgment is not without remedy in this country. Fortunately there are men in this state who will make every effort to insure that the remedy is not too long in coming.

Gov. Sparks Proclaims Boswell Measure Law

The News Birmingham, Ala.
Fri. 11-15-46

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 15—Hope that the 1947 Legislature would pass "clarifying statutes" to aid in administering the Boswell amendment was voiced today by Rep. E. C. Boswell, Geneva, author of the measure, as Gov. Sparks proclaimed the amendment into law.

Boswell repeated his belief that the amendment, requiring prospective voters to "understand and explain" thhe U. S. Constitution, does not violate the constitution.

The official canvass showed the amendment was ratified by 89,163 votes to 76,843, a margin of 12,320. The proposal carried in 41 counties and failed in 26.

The official canvass also certified the ratification of all eight other constitutional amendments as well as the election of John Sparkman to the U. S. Senate and of Laurie C. Battle to the House of Representatives from the Ninth Congressional District.

The canvass of the vote for governor and other state constitutional officers must await the January session of the Legislature.

A Discriminatory Law

Memphis, Tenn. Jan. 11-12-47

In last Tuesday's election Alabama adopted by a small majority vote a law that is clearly and admittedly aimed at disfranchising Negro voters. It is called the "Boswell Amendment" which gives the registrars discretionary and dictatorial power in deciding who shall and who shall not have the right to vote.

This new law gives the registrars who are political appointees the authority to inquire if a voter is "of good character, understands the duties and obligations of good citizenship under a republican form of government." It also requires that a citizen "understand and explain any article of the Constitution of the United States." It obviously intends to try to deny what the Constitution guarantees in the 15th Amendment.

Furthermore, we can imagine how many Negroes could explain and interpret the Constitution to the satisfaction of registrars who are hostile to the Negro voting. Even Supereme Court judges differ in their interpretation of the Constitution.

Already in Alabama Negroes have found it necessary to appeal to the Federal Courts on several occasions to get an opportunity to register. And now, with the fortification of this Boswell law, it is believed they will experience more difficulty. But let us hope the Negroes will not be discouraged by it but meet the issue with more courage determination.

Despite the heroic efforts put forth by the Alabama Negro leadership and the liberal whites against it, the Boswell bill passed largely because, we are told, its sponsors told the prejudiced white voters it will not be used on them. It's one of those laws for Negroes only!

We believe this bill will immediately prove to be so obnoxious and intolerable to the Negroes of Alabama that it will soon be challenged in the courts. Considering the spirit and motives behind it, we hope so, anyway.

The right to vote is the one right we in the south must stand ready at all times to defend to the utmost of our strength and resources. It's our best bet for defense and security. Without it, we have about concluded there is little hope in our future.

So-Called "Boswell Bill" May Be Used Against Race

The Atlanta Daily World

Atlanta Ga.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.— (SNS) The Birmingham WORLD today is able to publish the so-called "Boswell Bill" which proposes to amend the constitution to require that prospective voters be able to "understand and explain" the constitution of the United States.

Voters will pass upon the bill on Tuesday, November 5, in the general election.

Klan-inspired, it is believed, an analysis of the bill reveals that it is a handy weapon that could be used against, racial, religious, labor and other unpopular groups. It would make legal practices regularly used by board of registrars to bar Negro voting. 1-22-46

To the credulous reader the bill may appear harmless, but it is not. Try to explain something so simple as the comics to a friendly person, and you will get the point. You never could explain so complicated a document as the constitution to a hostile, prejudiced, narrow-minded board of registrars. This goes for white as well as black citizens.

HERE IS THE BILL:

To propose an amendment to Section 181 of the Constitution of Alabama and to order thereon an election for the qualified electors of the State of Alabama at the general election next succeeding the 1945 regular session of the Legislature.

Be it enacted by the Legislature of Alabama: 1-22-46

Section 1. An amendment is hereby proposed to revise Section 181 of the Constitution of Alabama to read as follows: "Section 181. After the first day of January, nineteen hundred and three, the following persons and others who, if their place of residence shall remain unchanged, will have, at the date of the next general election, the qualifications as to residence prescribed in Section 178 of this article, shall be qualified to register as electors; provided they shall not be disqualified under Section 182 of this Constitution: those who can read and write, understand and explain any article of the Constitution of the United States in the English language and who are physically unable to work and those who can read and write, understand and explain any article of the Constitution of the United States, and who have worked or have been regularly engaged in some lawful employment, business, or occupation, trade, or calling for the greater part of the twelve months next preceding the time they offer to register, including those who are unable to read and write, if such inability is due solely to physical disability; provided, however, no persons shall be entitled to register as electors except those who are of good character and who understand the duties and obligations of good citizenship under a Republican form of government. 'Yes.... No...." 1-22-46

The choice of each elector shall be indicated by a cross mark made by him opposite the work explaining his desire.

Section 4. The officials for the election shall be appointed and the election shall be held in all ways in accordance with laws governing general elections. Vote upon the amendment cast at the election shall be canvassed and tabulated and the returns thereof shall be made to the Secretary of State and counted in the same manner as in election upon the amendment voted Legislature; an if it shall thereupon appear that a majority of the qualified electors who voted at the election pon the amendment voted in favor of it, the amendment shall be valid to all intents and purposed as a part of the Constitution of the State of Alabama. The result of the election shall be made known by a proclamation of the governor.

Passed by the Senate, June 27, 1945.

VOTING QUALIFICATIONS

To the Editor of The Age-Herald:

An editorial headed "The Boswell Amendment" in The Age-Herald of Jan. 18 was well done. It deserves circulation throughout the South. 1-28-46

Rep. Boswell, of Geneva, would amend the State Constitution so as to make the right of a citizen to participate in Alabama elections measurably dependent upon the personal leanings and prejudices of county registration boards, composed of persons of varying degrees of intelligence, education, judgment, scrupulousness and devotion to democratic ideals. Birmingham, Ala.

I take it that The Age-Herald views with more than a little disfavor the Boswell plan to further reduce the number of men and women permitted to vote, and that the paper definitely does not recommend adoption of the offered amendment.

Since the instant when, some weeks ago, I first read of the Boswell scheme, I have regarded it as fit, for emphatic rejection.

Reflection upon one of the scheme's generally understood objectives, that of making more secure the disfranchisement of a certain minority group, should cause conscience-owning Alabamians to experience a feeling akin to shame!

My information is that Rep. Boswell's proposed amendment provides that, failure on the part of an applicant for the voting privilege to "understand and explain" the Federal Constitution (or parts of it) to the satisfaction of the registrars would be lawful cause for denying the application. Some of the ugly possibilities present in this understand-and-explain-the-constitution provision are readily envisioned. 1-28-46

Acceptance of the Boswell amendment could and probably would lead to the denial of suffrage to unnumbered persons of good repute, normal strength of mind, ability to read and sense the meaning of "ordinary" English, and adequate comprehension of and willingness to perform a citizen's duties. In this category would be members of the race classed as fundamentally "superior" by some of our presumptuous gentry, whose competency to decide so debatable an issue is highly questionable.

Should the state demand that its enfranchised men and women possess specified qualifications? Most assuredly—these qualifications:

1. Moral character conforming approximately to rules of conduct supposed to govern in decent society.

2. Mentality of not less than average power and stability; but final authority to determine this should not reside in registration boards.

3. Demonstrated literacy at least elementary in extent.

4. Ability to understand what is meant by the term, citizen, and a disposition to discharge the obligations citizenship imposes. 1-28-46

5. Minimum age, 20 years, except for younger persons required by law to do military duty during emergency periods.

THE BOSWELL AMENDMENT

To the Editor of The Age-Herald:

The principal function of the registrars is to prevent men from voting. Our political anemia is not caused by an excess of enfranchised citizens but by a shortage of them. The ideal state is one in which every adult is a voter by right of citizenship, excluding only criminals and the insane. 1-30-46

To make the registrars judges of the intelligence and education of voters places a power in their hands which they are well qualified to exercise if they are psychiatrists and educational experts.

To ask a voter to explain the Constitution of the United States is spoken of as if that is a very simple task. As a matter of fact, in our 130,000,000 or 140,000,000 of people we have not been able to find nine men who can render unanimous decisions on every point in which the meaning of the United States Constitution is involved. They have been known even to reverse themselves. Yet these are men of high character and intelligence who have made a life-long study of constitutional law.

If the applicant for registration gives a perfectly correct solution to a constitutional problem, we can be sure that the registrars would instantly recognize its correctness. Otherwise, they would not be the equals of the justices of the Supreme Court of the United States. The possibility of the applicant knowing more than the registrars is beyond belief. If he disagrees with them, he must be disfranchised.

The whole plan of requiring voters to prove their fitness is inequitable. In our courts the accused is entitled to the presumption of innocence. His guilt must be proved before he is convicted. In our political affairs, let us follow a similar procedure, and assume that every applicant for registration as a voter is competent to cast a ballot, until the reverse is proved. Why disfranchise a citizen without giving him a fair trial in open court? 1-30-46

ARCHIBALD LEISHMAN.

2718 16th Ct., N., Birmingham, Jan. 26.

THE BOSWELL AMENDMENT

In many cases, it is not the law which is unjust, but the application of it.

The proposed Boswell amendment to the Alabama constitution, providing that a prospective voter must be able to read and understand any clause in the United States Constitution to qualify, offers a possibility of such a case. Birmingham News

Who is to judge whether the applicant understands the clause or not? The Supreme Court has been disagreeing for many years over the meaning of the constitution.

Interpretation itself, however, is beside the point. A general idea of what the clause deals with should be enough to qualify a voter.

The difficulty is that the official who qualifies or disqualifies under this requirement may do so at will, if he is corrupt. If he is a victim of racial prejudice, he may bar Negroes from the vote. If he knows and disapproves of the political views of the applicant, he may deny them expression through the ballot.

The only protection of the public against corruption in this case would be some means of keeping the identity and color of the applicant secret from the examiner: a screen, for instance, between the two, like the curtains which surround the ballot box at well-conducted polls. Ala. 1-24-46

With such a precaution provided, the Boswell amendment could do much to promote more enlightened voting in Alabama. Maybe the buyers of votes, when faced with the problem of explaining the entire constitution to the ignorant folk whom they corrupt every election year, would give up and try honest ways of winning.—Huntsville Times.

LAWYER ASSAILS BOSWELL RIDER

Birmingham, Ala. Age Herald

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 19 (AP)—The Boswell amendment to tighten voter qualifications in Alabama would "encourage Negroes to go to court to enforce their right to vote," says Richard T. Rives, Montgomery lawyer and former president of the Alabama Bar Association.

The amendment, sponsored in the 1945 Legislature by Rep. E. Boswell, Geneva, would eliminate the $300 property ownership clause from the State Constitution and would require prospective voters to be able to "understand and explain" any section of the federal basic law.

At present they only are required to read the Constitution.

The proposed change would give too much authority to boards of registrars, Rives said, adding:

"If we were to retain a government of laws and not of men, we should retain our present simple and definite tests of voting qualifications, and should not vest such arbitrary power in any group of men."

Under the amendment, it would be up to the registrars to determine whether an applicant successfully explains the Constitution.

Asserting that in his belief such legislation would promote court action, the attorney said that procedure "inevitably breeds bad feeling between the races." Sat 4-20-46

He added that adoption of the amendment would constitute discrimination in the state law and thus enable federal courts to decide voter registration suits.

Delegates Blast Boswell Minority Rule Amendment

Atlanta Daily World

Atlanta, Ga.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.— (SNS) — Jan 13— Condemning the proposed Boswell Amendment as a device to maintain minority rule in Alabama politics, over 100 delegates to an emergency conference on jobs and security who met here yesterday called for defeat of the measure when it is voted on in November.

Called by the Committee for Alabama of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, progressive leaders from every part of the State and from all branches of organized labor met here to discuss the problems of reconversion and the social security legislation now pending on Congress. 1-15-46

Predicting that widespread mechanization would displace three million people from the farms of the South within the next five years, Gould Beech, editor of the Southern Farmer, declared that only rapid industrialization can prevent a large and growing number of unemployed in Alabama.

W. O. Hare, state secretary of the Alabama Federation of Labor, stated that the proposal to appoint fact-finding boards in industrial disputes offers little hope of eliminating labor - management strife. "After a life long experience with fact-finding boards," Mr. Hare declared, "the only thing I know about them is that they never find any facts.'" In Alabama," he continued, "if a board were appointed today the first man named would be Emmett Brooks; the second would be Frank Dixon and the third would be a degraded and corrupt labor leader."

Speaking for the United Mine Workers, District President Bill Mitch, condemned the action of Congress in granting tax refunds to corporations. "The tax refunds were supposed to be used by business to help in the problems of reconversion, but actually," he declared, "the giant corporations are using them as a slush fund to fight labor." 1-15-46

"In the coming elections," Mr. Mitch continued, "labor may pick a loser but labor will back a man who will support its program." Criticizing Congressman Carter Manasco for blocking passage of a real full employment bill, Mr. Mitch stated that the miners in Walker county will vote for any candidate who runs against Manasco in the coming Congressional race.

Defending the Fair Employment Practices Commission, Mr. Mitch asserted that it was the policy of his organization to insist on equal pay for equal work. "You can't keep another fellow in the ditch as far as labor is concerned," he declared "without getting down with him."

Emory O. Jackson, editor of the Birmingham World, described the Boswell bill as the political twin of the Bradford Act which prohibits the closed shop. "These two bills," he stated, "make up the two-edge sword the enemies of trade unions, working under the smokescreen of 'white supremacy,' intend to use in trying to crush the labor movement in Alabama."

Carey Haigler, president of the Alabama State Industrial Union Council, stated that "Congress has been engaged in a sit-down strike against meeting the needs of the American people. In the months ahead, Mr. Haigler concluded, the progressive-minded citizens in Alabama must stand together work together and vote together if we are to prevent a depression worst than of 1929.

Speaking of the Medical needs of Alabama, Dr. John Newdrop, regional medical officer of the Farm Security Administration, asserted that "low income and poor health are closely related." He added, that "we cannot hope to materially raise the health standards in Alabama without first raising the income of the great majority of our pepole."

The Rev. Andrew Turnipseed, pastor of the Dexter Avenue Methodist Church, Montgomery, served as chairman of the afternoon session of the conference which was held at Plumbers and Fitters Hall. He was introduced by Sam J. Hall, of Talladega, chairman of the Committee for Alabama.

STAB IN THE BACK.

The News, Birmingham, Ala.

To the Editor of The News:

The proposed Boswell amendment has all of the aspects of the infamous attack on Pearl Harbor. It is a stab in the back of democracy. If Mr. McCorvey thinks that only well-educated people should be allowed to vote, then does it not follow that only well-educated people should be made to pay taxes? Otherwise he is advocating taxation without representation. England tried such a form of government on the American people in the 18th century. Mr. McCorvey is trying it in the 20th. Everyone knows what we did about England. What are we going to do about Mr. McCorvey? Thurs 9-12-46

The Boswell Amendment

Birmingham Age-Herald

Alabama voters will be called upon this year to consider making an important change in their State Constitution. The proposal touches fundamental concepts of representative government, and the election upon it will be a test of the concern of Alabama voters in democracy. Alabama

The proposed amendment, known as the Boswell amendment because of its sponsorship by Rep. E. C. Boswell, of Geneva, would give county registrars wider discretion in approving applicants for voting registration. It would enable them to set up educational qualifications, including the ability to understand the federal constitution.

The question of qualifications for voting has never been an easy one. For that reason, any change in the basis of qualifying should be taken only after full consideration of all the factors involved. The principles used in determining the right of a person to vote should be scrutinized anew when any change in the qualifying procedure is under consideration. 1-18-46

It is, of course, generally recognized that the right to vote is always to some extent limited.

No country can enfranchise all its people. No country should. Children should not be permitted to vote, although the age at which a person is considered mature enough to cast an intelligent ballot ranges from 17 in Mexico to 25 in some of the Scandinavian countries. The insane are never given the right to vote. In most countries, also, the franchise is taken away from all persons convicted of major crimes. Pauperism and illiteracy are also considered in some places as natural bars to voting.

These exclusions are justified on the ground that participation of such persons in voting would not be to the advantage of the people as a whole and that certain individuals are not qualified for voting.

Any proposal of change in suffrage qualifications involves the question of the common good. Will the change benefit the whole people? Should this or that group be barred from the polls because the general welfare, including the welfare of the group, demands it?

However, the common good is often confused with political expediency. The group that has the franchise is apt to look through selfish glasses. This narrow view ignores the danger that the class which has the suffrage exclusively will fall into the error of thinking that its interests are the same as those of the states. 1-19-46

Selfishness and greed for political power are never the paths to progress, however. Suffrage exercised in a class spirit is not the most enlightened suffrage. A better approach lies through the question of whether a denial of the franchise to any group would not do greater harm, in the long run, than giving it the franchise. 1-18-46

Exclusion of a group from voting may help the state, provided the group excluded is barred by a general rule that is applied equally and impartially. But arbitrary exclusion, applied unevenly according to the whims or prejudices of an individual or a group, leads to injustices and consequent resentments. In the long run, it harms the state.

These are basic considerations that should not be overlooked in the campaign for or against the Boswell amendment. Certainly there is need for keeping close to them as Alabamians consider a change which affects the fundamental democracy of the state.

OBJECTIONS TO BOSWELL AMENDMENT

Montgomery Ala. Advertiser

There are several amendments to the State Constitution to be considered by the Alabama electorate next fall. One of them is the Boswell Amendment. That amendment was frankly designed to make it more difficult for voters to register. The present registration law requires, among other things, that the prospective voter be able to "read the Constitution of Alabama." The proposed amendment would require that a prospective voter be able to both "understand and explain" the Constitution.

In early January a resolution was passed, unanimously if memory serves, by the State Democratic Executive Committee endorsing the Boswell amendment. This was done following action of the Committee to eliminate the specification, "white" in the call for the present primary, a move designed to make Alabama's primary conform to a decision of the Supreme Court.

Richard T. Rives, an able and respected member of the Alabama bar, recently took a hard and long look at the Boswell amendment and decided that upon close inspection it did not look so good. He urged its defeat next Fall. Sat. 4-20-46

Next Fall is a long time off but it still would be a good idea for Alabama's political leaders and thoughtful citizens to take another look at the Boswell amendment and carefully weigh some of the points made by Mr. Rives.

These are the major objections to the amendment as seen by Mr. Rives:

First, the amendment would give to the board of registrars virtually unlimited right to refuse to qualify any prospective voter who did not please them. (Who is to say what a proper "explanation" of the Constitution might be?)

Second, because the obvious intent of the amendment is to keep Negroes unfranchised, then the way would be opened for endless court actions of a most sensitive sort. It would serve to keep feelings on both sides rubbed raw and would inevitably serve as a weapon in the hands of unscrupulous registrars to further their own political purposes by denying registration to any and all who did not suit their political taste.

To those The Advertiser could add several objections of its own, but for the moment perhaps it will serve if Alabama's voters and political leaders give thought to those carefully reasoned objections raised by Mr. Rives. Sat. 4-20-46

It is a long time until next Fall but before the voting time comes, this issue will be much more thoroughly aired here and elsewhere.

Fifth, even though the amendment was designed primarily to make it difficult for Negroes to register, it could become a weapon in the hands of unscrupulous registrars to further their own political purposes by denying registration to any and all who did not suit their political taste.

Third, it would open the way for taking these certain-to-come court actions directly to the Federal Courts because of the discriminatory intent of the amendment. (Who is At present all court actions concerning the registration of primary voters must first pass through the State Courts.

Fourth, due to the certainty of such actions and the fact that individual registrars would be responsible for any damages awarded, it would soon become difficult if not impossible to get responsible citizens to serve as registrars.

BOSWELL AMENDMENT IN RIGHT DIRECTION

Below we carry a letter to the Alabama Journal and its editorial reply thereto. The language is a little strong in that it cannot see the viewpoint of those who oppose this amendment.

"I have just been reconsidering your editorial in which you call on the teachers of Alabama to show their appreciation of the kindness of Governor Sparks to them by voting for the Boswell Amendment. Surely you don't mean to suggest slanting a vote vecause of courtesies received, or that our teachers would be capable of block voting rather than intelligent and individual thinking.

Speaking frankly, the editor of the Journal does not regard a vote against the Boswell amendment as convincing evidence of intelligent voting in this year 1946.

On the other hand we regard such voting as abject surrender to dictation from outside the state.

We regard such vote as disloyal to the heritage of our fathers, and to the sacrifices they made to preserve a pure electorate.

We regard such vote as thoughtless, and undmindful of the history of suffrage in Alabama for the past 45 years.

We regard such vote as yielding to certain pressure groups which want to change our whole way of life in Alabama.

We prefer to think charitably that any school teacher who deserts Governor Sparks' leadership and votes against this amendment does so under some kind of pressure, internal or external, which prevents clear thinking.—Alabama Journal.

We do not profess to know whether the Boswell amendment, if passed, will be enough to stop a very determined drive to break down all Southern customs in regard to racial segregation. We do believe that in light of the Supreme Court decision in the Texas case that to pass this amendment is very necessary to prevent wholesale registration of negroes, and their assuming control of some of the Blackbelt counties.

From Bad To Worse?

The News

Opposition to the Boswell amendment may be expressed at times in ways that seem to imply a failure to recognize that any real problem exists in connection with the registration of voters and a sort of general approval of things as they are.

Of course opposition to the amendment, which would give such sweeping authority to registrars and which admittedly is an expedient to control the registration of Negroes, does not necessarily mean either of these things. Birmingham, Ala.

The News recognizes that there are very real, difficult and pressing problems in connection with registration.

It long has felt that our whole present system was in need of reexamination and revision. Wed. 10-23-46

The Supreme Court decision in the famous Texas case, holding that Negroes cannot be barred from primaries merely on account of their color, is not the great menace that many advocates of the amendment seem to regard it as being. It does not affect qualifications for registration. Many amendment supporters have declared that they favor gradual registration of qualified Negroes. If they are in favor of that, just how does the Supreme Court decision affect the situation? Have masses of Negroes, qualified to vote, been denied participation in primaries? The main control, it seems obvious, has been at the registration offices.

But it is true that more Negroes are seeking registration. The court decision, in effect upholding the basic right of suffrage for qualified Negroes, was, in a sense, an encouragement to seek registration though it did not have anything to do with qualifications for registration. Other factors, including, of course, wartime conditions, have also accelerated and broadened the aspirations of Negroes for the ballot. That does present a problem, of course. In some counties it is an especially difficult problem.

We do not believe that there is basis for some of the more extravagant fears. We believe that controls that have operated in the past to limit registration will continue to be substantially effective. But this is not to be taken as a blanket approval of present requirements and procedures in the matter of registration.

Our opposition to the Boswell amendment is grounded not in the belief that present conditions are entirely satisfactory, but in the deep conviction that approval of the amendment would only make matters much worse. It would, we think, certainly be declared unconstitutional. That prospect would make for confusion and trouble of many sorts.

It would intensify racial tensions.

Disease is not cured by the wrong treatment. That can make matters much worse. That is why the Boswell amendment should be defeated.

Its defeat still would leave us with the problem of establishing fair, constitutional and dependable registration requirements and processes. Even Boswell amendment supporters regard it as only a stop-gap and expedient.

Whatever the outcome of the election, the Legislature might well authorize a comprehensive study of the whole problem.

THE BOSWELL AMENDMENT

To the Editor of The News: The News

Who started all this hullabaloo about Negro mass registering and Negro voting? We, the opposition, never heard of such a ghastly disturbance until the wily seers, past politicos, astounded us with this frightful expose.

Just how many Negroes would vote if the Boswell amendment carries or loses, if the law is rigidly enforced? I believe a majority of the Negro race who are qualified to register under the present law would vote the Democratic ticket and, as in the past, for the candidates their boss man, employer or the white men who have befriended them asked them to, and surely not by calling them CIO-PACs. Most of them, in my opinion, would think they were being called ugly names and of course would resent it. Birmingham, Ala

L. M. Dorough, in The News of Oct. 17, called attention to Joe Poole's statement in The Alabama Farmers Bulletin of Oct. 15. Poole gave the entire front cover page to elaborate on why we the people should vote for the Boswell amendment. It reads quite differently to the speeches he was making a few months ago. He, like other would-bes and has-beens, is waving the danger flag, but, boys, let's keep up the good work and retire more of these trouble-shooters. You know to whom I refer without calling them by name.

Our government, it is said, is for and by all the people. Not enough people vote now as it is to really have representative government. So judge for yourself whether we should have more or fewer voters. Why shouldn't we, the opposition, have a back page to defend our side of the question, Mr. Poole?

CONSTITUTION EASILY "UNDERSTOOD"

To the Editor of The News: The News

Please permit me to say through your columns that I favor the proposed Boswell amendment for the reason that it stipulates literacy as a qualification of suffrage. The authors of this amendment showed acumen and foresight in selecting the Constitution of the United States as a sample of lucid English. It requires no great erudition to read and to understand the constitution. The language is simple, the meaning is crystal clear. Any person who can read current English can understand the language and ideas of the constitution. He may not be able to understand certain technical phases of the constitution on which members of the Supreme Court disagree, but he is able to understand its basic ideas and the broad implications.

Suffrage is a grave responsibility. It is nothing less than active participation in the affairs of the commonwealth. Suffrage should not be accepted lightly or be bestowed indiscriminately. The voter charts the course of the ship of state. Should the person who is too mentally indolent to acquire a reading knowledge of his native speech be entrusted with so serious a responsibility? The ability to read current English is not an exceptional intellectual accomplishment. Foreigners who come to our country readily learn to read our language. Native Americans who have not had the advantages of formal schooling can, if they will, learn to read a language they have heard spoken all their lives. Willful illiteracy is a menace to democracy. Birmingham, Ala.

The Boswell amendment is not a perfect document. No instrument of government ever devised by human beings is perfect. But the amendment is a move in the direction of enlightened democracy and a plea for Alabamians, whites and Negroes, to better qualify themselves for the duties of citizenship. Sun.

SUPPORT GIVEN BOSWELL PLAN

By a vote of 46 to 4, the Jefferson County Democratic Executive Committee yesterday gave its "unqualified endorsement" to the controversial proposed Boswell amendment, and also pledged $250 of its funds to a local organization which is backing the measure.

Meeting in the courtroom of Presiding Circuit Judge J. Russell McElroy, the committee, which had a membership of more than 200, heard both pro and con arguments on the amendment, which would make ability to understand and explain the U. S. Constitution to boards of registrars as a prerequisite for voting registration.

A proposal that the committee conduct an educational campaign on the amendment rather than take a public stand in the controversy was made at the meeting by County Commissioner Henry W. Sweet. Asserting that while he believed in white primaries and would vote for the amendment personally, Mr. Sweet said he doubted the wisdom of the committee taking an official stand.

Commissioner Sweet also said he viewed the proposal as "to broad" and that it might lead to an "abuse of power."

Arguments in favor of the amendment were made by Ben F. Ray, Thomas Huey, H. A. (Gus) Thompson, W. H. Barnard, George Vandiver and Leon Nolen, while those opposing it included A. M. Romeo and W. H. Propst.

The resolution, pledging the committee's support was introduced by Mr. Huey and stated that the amendment would "continue the form of government which was handed down to us by our fathers."

In his argument, Mr. Ray struck at Republicans as major opponents of the measure, and asked: "If you committee members don't carry the standards of the Democratic Party, then who will?" Mr. Ray asserted that 16,000 Negro veterans in Jefferson County and 67,000 in the state already were qualified in one respect to vote through the waiver of poll tax for all ex-service men.

"The amendment," Mr. Ray said, "keeps the spirit of the Alabama Constitution of 1901."

In opposing the measure, Mr. Romeo, a former members of the Jefferson County Board of Registrars, pointed to what he called "dangers" and said that the Boswell Amendment would create more "great many more" white persons than it would Negroes.

"When you jump on a minority group," Mr. Romeo said, "that man is going to stand up and fight for his right of the ballot." He predicted that in his opinion the measure, if passed, would be declared unconstitutional.

Mr. Propst asserted that the

In Reply To Mr. Lew Sanderson

Editor, The Advertiser: The Advertiser

I have hesitated to reply to the long statement of Lew Sanderson which appeared in The Advertiser of Oct. 13, but I feel that someone should call attention to certain fallacies in his reasoning. Montgomery, Ala.

His statement opened by pointing out that, prior to 1901, the white people of Alabama "had to resort to fraudulent practices" in handling the colored vote. He appears to condemn this resort to fraud, and yet he argues for the adoption of Amendment No. 4, which would write the same sort of fraud right into the constitution of the State. If we must have fraud, is it necessary to make it a part of our constitution? Tues. 10-29-46

Supporters of Amendment No. 4 say that they intend to use it exclusively to keep Negroes from voting. I wonder. They say that those trick questions about articles of the United States Constitution, or about the duties and obligations of a citizen, would never be used to keep any white would-be voter from registering. If that is true, and they insist that it is true, then they do not wish to end the fraudulent practices which Mr. Sanderson deplored, but intend to dignify them by making this fraud part and parcel of our State Constitution.

The statement then continued, in an effort to frighten us about the alleged dangers which we face, by stating that great numbers of colored men and women in Montgomery County are now fully qualified, under the present constitution, to register and vote. If this is true, it seems strange indeed that out of 31,479 qualified voters in Montgomery County, only 425 are Negroes. It seems to me that the Negroes of this county must be far less anxious to obtain the right to vote than some profess to fear, or that the present constitution gives the registrars adequate powers to decide what applicants for registration are fit to become qualified voters.

I do not share these fears, and I wonder if supporters of Amendment No. 4 are serious when they make extravagant statements such as that Negroes "will hold a majority of the public offices in Montgomery County." There is not the remotest danger that such a situation would ever come to pass in Montgomery County.

In the first place, I cannot imagine any kind of wholesale registration of colored people which would register more than 31,000 of them to equal the white registration of them to equal the white registration in Montgomery County. In the second place, I do not believe that there are that many, or anywhere near that many, colored people who could qualify under the present constitution. I am sure that our registrars are competent to decide on the qualifications of voters, and that they have ample leeway for their decisions under the existing provisions of the constitution.

I do not believe that there exists any large group of "white scalawags" in Montgomery County or in any part of Alabama, who would join with Negroes in any attempt to gain power.

It seems to me that it is unfortunate in the extreme that the supporters of Amendment No. 4 should have to resort to such fearful threats in their efforts to get voters the Boswell act. And just a few days ago the State Democratic Committee wasted enough money to send me propaganda favoring proposed Amendment 4.

I could write briefly to say I consider the Boswell act undemocratic, unfair, unreasonable and un-Christian, all of which I believe it to be, and stop with that. However, like most preachers, I feel the urge to amplify my feelings, and must preach for a moment. And, as preachers usually do, I need to make a few observations before getting around to the real point.

The issue of communism has been dragged into this discussion by those who favor proposed Amendment 4. The use of the word Communist as an epithet to apply to opponents of the Boswell act is silly and childish. To designate a man who disagrees with you as a Communist has come to the point where it has lost its meaning. I know many persons who oppose the amendment fervently, and there is not a "meanie" among them. They are good, solid citizens of the state. They are persons who are proud of Alabama's progressivism and its sensible political decisions in the past few years, and they want to see Alabama continue its leadership in representing the best the South can offer.

Several days ago the first page of The Montgomery Advertiser contained candid admissions of political leaders in two great Southern states, in which they openly confessed that they fully intended to keep the colored population in their states in a political ghetto. If we did not know the situation to be sadly true, one would think he were witnessing a Gilbert and Sullivan "takeoff" on democracy. It would be amusing if it were not pure tragedy. For such leaders the word is written with a capital first letter: Democracy, not democracy. It is not the rule of the people that interests them, but the rule of a hand-picked group of individuals. They insist that they are trying to preserve "supremacy." We might do better to seek superiority. Superiority cannot be legislated. Superiority is not a matter of law; it either exists or it does not, and if it exists it does so without having attention drawn to it or laws thrown around it like a cofferdam. The Nazis were supreme, but definitely not superior.

If the Boswell act should become law, who is going to examine the registrars to see if they are fit to serve their office? I gathered enough first-hand experience when my wife and I were being registered as voters to question seriously the fitness of some registrars to handle matters on which the nine justices of the Supreme Court seldom agree. Anyhow, however good their intentions or education might be, it is not right that several hundred Alabamians should control the franchise of hundreds of thousands of their fellow citizens.

If fair educational benefits had always been enjoyed by all Alabamians, city and rural and white and black; if economic benefits had been distributed more equitably, thus making higher education available to more people, then to put such a registration law into effect might be justified; but until educational and economic opportunities have been provided on a wider scale than they have been until this time, such a law will disfranchise those whose cultural opportunities have been limited. The law, enacted, would favor the well-to-do, the aristocracy of Alabama. It is class legislation as well as race legislation, and both are sinister.

The main effect of the Boswell act, if it should pass, would not be racial, but would be accentuation of class distinction in the state. We already seethe inside when the backwardness of the South is mentioned, but a large measure of the retardation of the South is the direct consequence of our own pronounced intention to retard the political and economic development of large fractions of our population. Booker Washington was on the beam when he said that if the white man wants to keep the Negro in the ditch he must stick close by to see that he stays down. The same holds true of the prosperous white man's attitude toward the poor white man. The progress of the whole South will be in direct proportion to the progress of the disinherited white and the large colored segment of our population. Economically, politically, physiologically—our corporate progress will be determined by that meted out to the underprivileged whites and all the colored population.

The Boswell act, or proposed Amendment 4, by confession of its promoters, is an expedient, a policy designed to block extension of the ballot to the whole voting population of the state. Henry Thoreau once made some pertinent remarks that bear recalling. He asked: "Will men never learn that policy is not morality—that it never secures any moral right, but considers merely what is expedient?" Writing on "Slavery in Massachusetts," he said: "I wish my countrymen to consider, that whatever the human law may be, neither an individual nor a nation can ever commit the least act of injustice against the obscurest individual without having to pay the penalty for it. A government which deliberately enacts injustice, and persists in it, will at length even become the laughing-stock of the world." The same may be said of ballot slavery in Alabama.

When we try to allocate political privileges on some basis other than rightness, we are tampering with the scales of divine justice. To avowedly attempt to circumvent the law of the nation, so as to favor a particular group in society, will in the long run cause more misery than will fair treatment of all at the time that it is due. Calamity will fall upon Alabama tomorrow if we today thwart the cosmic drive toward justice and freedom for all citizens who are truly qualified.

And what is the text? "Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to Me." A radical named Jesus said that.

"SINISTER LEGISLATION"

To the Editor of The News: The News

The following is the copy of a letter written in reply to one which appeared in the Voice of the People: Birmingham, Ala.

Rev. Mr. John B. Nichols, 224 Wetumpka Street, Prattville, Ala.

My Dear Rev. Nichols—I have just finished reading your fine letter, "Sinister Legislation," which appeared in Tuesday's Birmingham News. There is so much to be said in complimenting you for true life on this terrible evil legislation. I don't have words in my vocabulary nor can I look up words in the encyclopedia to express my appreciation to you, but kindly let me say in my simple way I thank you for speaking out the whole truth on this matter. Fri. 11-1-46

I happen to be a Negro, born and reared in Prattville, Ala. My mother, aunts and other relatives are still in Prattville, and many of my friends, white ones at that, especially two friends, the Rev. Mr. O. S. Welch and Mrs. W. O. Stoudmire. I must mention Mr. C. E. Avery and Mr. C. L. Duffer and many other white friends that I won't mention here, but all of them know who I am from way back when I was quite a lad. I am assuming that youe are a newcomer in the city of Prattville, for you weren't there when I lived there years ago.

Our acquaintance through this letter will be what I call mutual understanding. It appears to me that when a fine white person like you goes to bat for my people they don't have the courage to say thanks and to encourage you to go on with your fine way of thinking and expressing yourself. I feel that I voice the opinion of some of the Prattville Negroes when I say that you have done a swell job in writing your letter, "Sinister Legislation." I would like to express my opinion on this same evil thinking of some men. First I want to say to you that I am sending a copy of this letter to the press (Voice of the People). I don't know if they will print it or not, but anyway, from me to you, this is the way I personally feel about this evil legislation. In 1941 there was so much propaganda about "Let's defeat Hitler, let's defeat the Axis powers, so we can have democracy for all the people in America." Then came the Four Freedoms propaganda and all the other propaganda that I am sure you know about. I, with thousands of other Negro men, was drafted into the Army, shipped thousands of miles away from home, from our friends and loved ones. We Negroes faced every danger from New York harbor to the shores of foreign lands, danger on the sea, danger on the land, danger in the air and danger all about us. I could tell you about the horrible experience that I personally went through from the day that I embarked until the day that I debarked in England. I could tell you how I laid under artillery fire from July 17, 1944, until Dec. 23, 1944. I could tell you how my Christmas Day of 1944 was spent. I shall never forget that Christmas Day. The hour was 12, the weather was cold with 12 inches of snow, but the sun was shining very bright and beautiful. We had just formed a line to go to our Christmas dinner, the Army chaplain was to pray the blessing, and things were going beautifully, and out of the clear blue sky the elements seemed to burst open with fire all around us. Yes, some of my very best friends, buddies I had known since sailing from America, some of my commanding officers who were like fathers to the men, some white, some Negroes, they are not alive any more. But I am. And those men that died that day "died for democracy." I am just putting this personal, especially to show you how I feel to come home and find somebody who has been sitting back here planning such legislation as this evil amendment, No. 4, according to an article that was published in a widely distributed magazine in the state of Alabama. I read some parts of it that states that this amendment would stop "those veterans who don't have to pay poll tax." Should I point out to you that this amendment is not just aimed at Negroes, but aimed at white veterans who are here and don't have to pay poll tax, and also poor white people who have to work for a living. It is aimed at you, Rev. Nichols, you who don't agree with them on their ideals of "democracy." If I told you the truth, this thing looks more like dictatorial communism and fascism than anything that I have ever seen in America. Before going to war I had been listening and studying the American's propaganda on nazism, how they operate and how it worked at its purpose and cause. I want you to see that the Boswell amendment, No. 4, is identical to the Nazi tracts. The veterans of Alabama defeated nazism in Europe, and I trust that the veterans of Alabama and the men behind the gun will help them to defeat the Boswell amendment Nov. 5 here at home.

Sen. Hill Raps Law Proposed To Bar Alabamans from Vote

The Worker New York, N.Y.

By Mary Southard

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Senator Lister Hill (D-Ala) joined the ranks of Alabama progressives with a public statement against the undemocratic Boswell amendment to the state constitution.

Speaking in a small Alabama community, Sen. Hill denounced the measure, which would drastically tighten qualifications for voting registration, and charged that the "big corporations," among them Republic Steel, Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company, and Alabama Power, were backing it.

The aim of the amendment, according to Hill, is to "prohibit voting by those whom the Big Mules do not approve."

The Boswell amendment has become the central issue in Alabama politics. It has caused a major split in the ranks of Democratic Party leaders. The Alabama CIO took a public stand against the Boswell amendment at its convention last September.

The Birmingham News, most influential newspaper in Alabama, has strongly denounced the Boswell amendment.

Attorney Tells Civitan Club Voters' Rights Are In Danger

Sat. 9-28-46

Richard T. Rives, local attorney, addressing the Montgomery Civitan Club at the Jefferson Davis Hotel yesterday, strongly reiterated his opposition to the proposed Boswell Amendment.

Expressing his belief that the controversial proposal is "arbitrary, unnecessary, dishonest, undemocratic and dangerous," Rives added that, if the amendment were adopted, the franchise of every Alabama voter under the age of 64 would be in danger.

Rives, who is actively campaigning against adoption of the proposition by the voters at the November 5 election, pointed out that requirements under the new proposal would be as follows: (1) That the voter would have to understand and explain any portion of the Federal and State constitutions; (2) that the voter would have to be of good character, and (3) that the voter would have to understand the duties and obligations of good citizenship under the republican form of government.

Stressing his belief that such an amendment would be dangerous, Rives said it would be possible for an unscrupulous administration to appoint registrars who would be sympathetic to a policy of limiting eligible voters to those favoring that administration. "It would then be possible for that administration to perpetuate itself in office," he added.

"The amendment's passage could endanger the voting privilege of an overwhelming majority of the white voters of the State," Col. Rives concluded.

David Mussafer, first vice-president, and Dr. Morris Capouya introduced the speaker.

White Business Group Lambasts Boswell's Notion

The Black-Dispatch Oklahoma City, Okla.
Sat. 8-10-46

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (ANP) — The hate-spirited "Boswell amendment" designed to achieve the purpose of the abandoned "white primary" in Alabama has met the opposition of the influential Montgomery Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Authored by E. C. Boswell, state representative from Geneva county, the amendment was formulated as a device to maintain "white supremacy" in Alabama. It will be voted on in the general election Nov. 5. It would hamper large-scale Negro registration.

Copies of the resolution were mailed out to each junior chamber in the state.

The resolution attacks the proposed amendment on the grounds that it "affects the very foundations and structure of our constitutional system of government in that persns entitled to vote in any election would be selected under the terms, and . . .

"It clothes the board of registrars with arbitrary powers to register or reject electors, since under the amendment an elector must not only be able to read and write any article of the constitution of the United States, but must be able to satisfy the board of registrars that he can understand and explain any article of the constitution of the United States, even though the highest court in the land often divides on constutional questions by a vote of five to four, and . . . Boswell Plan Stand Hinted By Governor

Plea For Stronger Law On Registration Cited; Hill Opposes Changes

Gov. Chauncey Sparks said yesterday he "might" make a statement soon on the Boswell amendment, whose provisions for tightening up on voter qualifications have already caused a rift in the Democratic party in Alabama.

Although he declined to say what stand he would take, the Governor reminded newsmen that he had asked the 1945 Legislature to modify the poll tax and to "strengthen" the voter registration laws. The Legislature refused to change the poll tax, but voted to submit the Boswell amendment to the people in the Nov. 5, general election.

Whether it would provide the solution, the Governor would not say. It would require prospective voters to be able to "understand and explain" the U. S. Constitution, and would remove the present constitutional provision which gives the right of ballot to anyone who owns $300 worth of property.

Gov. Sparks' comment came only a day after Senator Hill (D), Alabama, joined the ranks of the Boswell plan's opponents.

Speaking at Arley, Ala., Hill said big corporations which would "milk Alabama and give nothing in return" were the major advocates of the amendment. He listed the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co., a U. S. Steel subsidiary; Republic Steel and the Alabama Power Company as examples of such corporations.

The Senator declared the Boswell amendment's aim was to prohibit voting by those whom the Big Mules do not approve," and added:

"The fellows in Alabama who work for these companies are hired overseers. They are interested only in milking Alabama, and if we are going to stop them, we must fight."

Gov.-designate James E. Folsom has announced he would make his position on the amendment known this month. Thurs. 9-12-46

Opposite Views

Other party leaders have taken opposite views on the amendment, and the State Democratic executive committee is split on it.

A majority of the committee members have voted to follow Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey in endorsing the proposed voting changes, but several other members have voiced outspoken opposition. An organized move has been launched, too, in an effort to form a people's committee to fight the proposal. The Advertiser

Top officials of TCI and of Republic declined to comment on Senator Hill's assertions.

President Tom Martin, of the Alabama Power Company had this to say: Montgomery, Ala.

"I've never read the Boswell amendment. I have never discussed the Boswell amendment with any person whatsoever. I haven't the slightest idea whether I'd be for it or against it."

Black Belt Group Aids Boswell Plan

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.
Wed. 9-25-46

CAMDEN, ALA., Sept. 19.—(AP)—Former State Senator J. Miller Bonner announced plans today for a Black Belt citizens committee to campaign for ratification of the Boswell amendment, and declared:

"Either we adopt the amendment or we lose white supremacy, and before that's done I don't like to put in words what's going to happen."

The Boswell amendment, which would tighten up on voter qualifications in Alabama, will be voted on in the Nov. 5 general election.

Bonner said the Black Belt is "pretty desperate" and is not going to submit peacefully to the election of Negro officers," a condition he contended would result from failure of the amendment.

"It is my deliberate opinion," he asserted, "that in four years every elective officer in Macon County will be a Negro unless something is done, and Wilcox will be next."

Camden is in Wilcox County. The former legislator contended Macon County already has enough Negroes qualified to register under present statutes that they can elect members of their own race, and "we are fooling ourselves if we think they will not do it."

"It is a matter of self-preservation with us," Bonner said. "The Black Belt is pretty desperate. We saved the Democratic party in the older days and we are calling on the white people of Alabama to help us now."

Bonner said it was too early to give details of the Black Belt campaign but they would be announced later.

Governor Openly Backs Plan To Apply Brakes To Negro Registration

Stresses Its Need

Flat Endorsement Follows Earlier Stand Against Blacks As Registrars

By G. C. LONG, JR.

Gov. Chauncey Sparks declared in a prepared statement yesterday that he favored the Boswell Amendment "in the interest of continued orderly progress in the settlement of our electoral problems."

"To continue an orderly program of registration, and to avoid the pitfalls which others would gladly provide for us, we must revise our present standards for voters in Alabama," Gov. Sparks asserted. "I think the Boswell Amendment offers us this opportunity."

The amendment, which will be voted on in the Nov. 5 general election, provides that a person to qualify to register must be able to "understand and explain" the United States Constitution and must understand the responsibilities of citizenship under a republican form of government.

Present Requirements

Present Alabama constitutional requirements are that a person can register to vote if he can read and write the Constitution or has property assessable at $300 and on which the taxes have been paid for the past year.

"There are only two alternatives offered by the amendment," the Governor said in his statement. "Shall we have some kind of effective control over registration, or shall we continue our present system which is rapidly leading to unrestricted registration."

Last week the Chief Executive declared he had been requested to appoint Negroes to Boards of Registrars and emphasized:

"Never while I am governor will I consent to the appointment of a Negro to such a position."

At that time he said Boards of Registrars should be given judicial powers to protect their members from law suits such as the one now pending against two former Macon County board members.

Now All Can Qualify

In his statement Gov. Sparks said that it must be known by the "least informed" that present qualifications for registration give almost everyone a chance to qualify.

Gov. Sparks' complete statement follows:

"Following up the suggestion made to the Legislature in my message of May 1, 1945, in which I said 'We should, therefore, give careful consideration to the strengthening of our registration statutes in order that our election rolls shall be as pure as we can make them,' I deem it my blanket franchise to a group not altogether qualified. It is much better to absorb them gradually and as they individually become fitted. Anything less will frustrate those among both races who are earnestly, sincerely and honestly, I think, seeking better relationship, and the right settlement of those problems which naturally grow out of a two-race society."

Although the Governor did not say directly the amendment is aimed at keep the Negro from registering, he indicated it by referring to a "white and black party system" and by saying:

"It would be just as tragic today as it was 80 years ago to duty as Governor of the State to make pronouncement on what is called 'The Boswell Amendment.'

For Amendment No. 4

"I favor amendment No. 4 on regular ballot, commonly called "The Boswell Amendment."

Wilkinson, Rives To Debate Boswell Measure In Capital

The News, Birmingham, Ala.
Tues. 9-17-46

BY HUGH W. SPARROW
News Staff Writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Sept. 17—The controversial Boswell amendment which makes several major changes in the law governing registration of voters was the subject of a debate scheduled for today between two widely known Alabama lawyers.

Horace Wilkinson, Birmingham, was on the program to present the affirmative and Richard T. Rives, Montgomery, the negative sides of the question.

The debate was booked for today's weekly luncheon of the Montgomery Kiwanis Club.

The Boswell amendment, to be ratified or rejected Nov. 7, proposes three changes in the law regulating the registration of voters.

1. Applicants for registration could be required, not only to read and write any article of the United States Constitution in the English language, but also to explain or show that they understand any article.

2. County boards of registrars would have the right to decide whether applicants for voting privileges "understand the duties and obligations of good citizenship under a republican form of government."

3. The present constitutional qualification entitling any man to vote if he or his wife own property assessed for taxes at $300 or more would be eliminated.

Section 178, referred to in Section 181 of the Constitution and also in the Boswell amendment to Section 181, specifies that, in order to be qualified to vote in any election, a person must have resided in the state at least two years, in the county one year, and in the precinct or ward three months, immediately preceding the election at which he offers to vote, provided he shall have been duly registered as an elector and shall have paid his poll tax on or before the first day of February next preceding the date

Controversial Issues To Be Decided Nov. 5 At General Election

BY HUGH W. SPARROW
News Staff Writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala., June 22—Nine amendments to Alabama's constitution—at least two of them controversial—come up for ratification in the general election on Nov. 5 and are faced with uncertain action at the polls.

Heading the list is the so-called "Boswell amendment," which would give county boards of registrars dictator powers in accepting or rejecting applicants for the privilege of voting in Alabama. Sun. 6-23-46

Not only would registrars under this amendment have power to require any or all applicants for registration to read, write and "explain" any section of the United States constitution, but also the unrestricted power to decide whether the applicant "understands the duties and obligations of good citizenship under a republican form of government."

That early Fall will see a concerted effort well under way to defeat this amendment at the ballot box is the opinion of most capital observers.

Likewise believed heading for trouble is an amendment submitted by the 1945 Legislature which substitutes biennial sessions of 36 "legislative days" for the present 60 "calendar day" biennial sessions.

The amendment woud apply to the 1947 Legislature and would materially lengthen the sessions.

The Legislature now meets on the first Tuesday in May of each odd year for sessions of 60 calendar days. That means that 60 days from the initial meeting day the session is automatically terminated. Under the amendment the houses would convene on the first Tuesday in May of each odd year for sessions of 36 "legislative days." If the Legislature met four days a week the session would last nine weeks. If a schedule of three legislative days weekly were observed the session would run 12 weeks.

Sun. 6-23-46

ANOTHER PROVISION in the amendment authorizes the state to pay legislators $4 a day for "expenses" on each day of the session, in addition to the $10 a day pay they now receive.

Another amendment to be voted on Nov. 5 authorizes the state to "acquire, build, establish, own, operate and maintain hospitals, health centers, sanatoria and other health facilities." The Legislature would have authority to appropriate state funds for the purpose of building hospitals and to require counties or municipalities to match state funds.

A fourth amendment authorizes the state to engage in the development of airports.

Another would extend the taxing of powers of a number of smaller municipalities in Alabama, permitting them to levy an ad valorem tax at a rate not to exceed 1¾ per cent of the assessed value of property within the city limits.

Under another amendment all counties other than Montgomery and Mobile would have the right to call special elections to decide wether or not a special tax not to exceed 10 cents on each $100 of assessed value may be levied.

The remaining amendments are largely local in application.

One, applying exclusively to Mobile County, would increase the county's constitutional debt limit to permit issuance of bonds for certain public buildings.

Another would allow Cullman and Decatur to call elections to decide whether a special school tax not to exceed 10 mills on each dollar of assessed value shall be levied.

A smiliar amendment applying to Haleyville would authorize an election to decide whether a special property tax not to exceed 1 per cent of the assessed value of property shall be levied.

Sun. 6-23-46

A CLEAR IDEA of just what the "Boswell amendment" proposes may be gained by comparing the amendment with Section 181 of the constitution which would be amended.

The Boswell proposal declares that "an amendment is hereby proposed to revise Section 181 of the constitution as follows:

"Sec. 1: After the first day of January, nineteen hundred and three, the following persons, and no others, who, if their place of residence shall remain unchanged, will have, at the date of the next general election, the qualifications as to residence prescribed in Sec. 178 of this article, shall be qualified to register as electors provided they shall not be disqualified under Sec. 182 of this constitution:

(Up to this point the phraseology of the amendment is the same as that of Sec. 181 as it now stands, but from here on requirements for registration and voting would be changed.)

"Those who can read and write, understand and explain any article of the Constitution of the United States in the English language and who are physically unable to work, and those who can read and write, understand and explain any article of the Constitution of the United States in the English language and who have worked or been regularly engaged in some lawful employment, business, or occupation, trade or calling for the greater part of the 12 months next preceding the time they offer to register, including those who are unable to read and write if such inability is due solely to physical disability; provided, however, no persons shall be entitled to register as electors except those who are of good character and who understand the duties and obligations of good citizenship under a republican form of government." Sun. 6-23-46

THE FOLLOWING are provisions of Sec. 181 now in effect which would be eliminated if the Boswell amendment is ratified:

"First—Those who can read and write any article of the Constitution of the United States in the English language, and who are physically unable to work; and those who can read and write any article of the Constitution of the United States in the English language, and who have worked or been regularly engaged in some lawful employment, business or occupation, trade or calling for the greater part of the 12 months preceding the time they offer to register; and those who are unable to read and write if such inability is due solely to physical disability; or

"Second — The owner in good faith in his own right, or the husband of a woman who is the owner in good faith, in her own right, of 40 acres of land situate in this state, upon which they reside; or the owner in good faith, in her own right, of real estate situate in this state, assessed for taxation at the value of $300 or more, or the owner in good faith, in his own right, or the husband of a woman who is the owner in good faith, in her own right, of personal property in the state assessed for taxation at $300."

Sec. 182, referred to in Sec. 181 and also in the Boswell amendment, disqualifies both from registering and from voting, idiots, the insane, those who have been convicted of crimes, vagrants, tramps, etc.

Hill Opposes Boswell Plan

The Post, Birmingham, Ala.
Fri. 9-13-46

Sen. Lister Hill has joined the ranks of loyal Democrats who have announced public their opposition to the unnecessary and dangerous Boswell amendment. Their numbers are swelling steadily. Sen. Hills' announcement is additional proof that opposition to the amendment is not confined to

Mr. Hill is a member of a prominent Montgomery family long identified with politics in the Black Belt. Since 1923, Democrats of Alabama have consistently indicated their approval of him by keeping him in Congress. He is today majority whip in the Senate. It is inconceivable that Lister Hill would knowingly pursue any course or take any stand that would endanger the Democratic Party and its supremacy in Alabama.

The Shadow Before

The News Birmingham, Ala.

Opponents of the Boswell amendment have stressed their opinion that the proposal is bound to be declared unconstitutional. This argument has evidently appeared to have its serious implications because supporters of the amendment have been stoutly maintaining that they are tracking the law. Their main reliance is a Louisiana case, Trudeau vs. Barnes, 65 Fed. Rep. (2), 563, in which the Fifth U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals passed favorably upon a state constitutional provision requiring an applicant for registration to be able to read and give a reasonable interpretation of any clause in the Constitution of the United States. This was a damage suit against a registrar in the Federal District Court. Tues. 10-29-46

On appeal, the Circuit Court held that the "understanding clause" was valid because "it applies to all voters alike, denies to none of them the equal protection of the laws, does not undertake to deny or abridge the right of citizens of the United States to vote on account of race, color or previous conditions of servitude." The court continued: "It is difficult to conceive how this clause can be said to violate either the 14th or the 15th amendment. It lays down but one test, that of intelligence, which applies uniformly and without discrimination to voters of every race and color." Besides, said the court, before suing for damages the plaintiff should have exhausted the remedy afforded by the Louisiana Constitution.

This, upon its face, looks significant. But when the decision is examined in the light of fresh circumstances it begins to lose its persuasiveness. It should be noted that it was issued in July, 1933, and by a Circuit Court of Appeals, not by the Supreme Court of the United States. The latter tribunal has undergone a great change in personnel and attitude in the last 13 years. During that time it has struck down white primaries. During that time it has given civil liberties and the 14th and 15th amendments a new meaning.

In the case of Lane vs. Wilson, 307 U. S., 268, it dealt with an effort to circumvent the 15th amendment, ruling against it in the following terms: "The amendment nullifies sophisticated as well as simple-minded modes of discrimination. It hits onerous procedural requirements which effectively handicap exercise of the franchise by the colored race, although the abstract right to vote remains unrestricted as to race." In view of the fact that the Boswell amendment is so obviously a "sophisticated" device to keep Negroes from registering because of their color, it is hard to see how it can run the gauntlet of Supreme Court scrutiny.

In other words, it takes more than the Trudeau decision, rendered by a court of appeals which has reversed itself, to support the contention that the validity of the Boswell amendment's "understanding clause" is beyond question. In fact, there is reason to believe that the Supreme Court of the United States has already given notice of what it would do with the Boswell amendment, which is avowedly intended to "handicap exercise of the franchise by the colored race, although the abstract right to vote may remain unrestricted as to race."

MR. POOLE SPENDS AS HE PLEASES

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

The Honorable Joe Poole, Commissioner of Agriculture, makes it perfectly clear in the next issue of the Farmers' Market Bulletin, a state-financed monthly publication, that he will use the people's money as he pleases in promoting his personal convictions. Tues. 10-29-46

The issue of November 1, scheduled to be mailed out in a few days, will carry a full-page, front page message "To The People of Alabama" from "Joe N. Poole," in which he defends himself as follows:

Let me say in the beginning that some opponents of the Boswell Amendment have seen fit to criticize me for writing an article to the readers of the Farmers' Market Bulletin relative to the Boswell Amendment. In reply I wish to say that I have never used the Farmers' Market Bulletin to enhance my personal or political fortune, but the front page has been used by me on occasions to write timely articles dealing with current topics; and, in my opinion the Boswell Amendment is a most important issue and the people should be informed about it. Realizing a lot of our subscribers do not take the large daily papers in Alabama, I am using this medium to reach them and so long as I am Commissioner of Agriculture I will continue to write in the Farmer's Market Bulletin whatever I think is to the best interest of the people of Alabama.

The Advertiser is not surprised that Mr. Poole will continue to use State money for the promotion of such enterprises as he chooses, regardless of public opinion. It was such a spirit of dogmatism among other things, that convinced us Mr. Poole should not be elected Governor of Alabama—an opinion concurred in emphatically by the people of Alabama last May.

Mr. Poole's arbitrary use of State funds for political propaganda purposes is no less reprehensible merely because the State Democratic Executive Committee has provided him with a precedent. The State Committee has chosen to spend the Party's funds — a minimum of $3,500 of it — in a determined effort to push across a Constitutional Amendment over which the members of the Party itself are sharply divided.

Members of the opposition, who by every legal consideration have just as much equity in the Party's funds as have the proponents, must dig down in their personal pockets in order to fight for what they believe is right.

Mr. Poole has no leg to stand on in thus arrogantly using State funds to suit himself. Even Mr. Poole would not think of using his State publication in promoting the personal candidacy of some friend who offered for election. Mr. Poole knows he could not get by with spending State money for the election of one personality over another personality.

Yet he is unable to see the effrontery, bad taste, and possible illegality of using State money in a desperate effort to put over an Amendment to the Constitution on which the citizens are seriously divided.

The only mitigating circumstance in this instance of Mr. Poole's use of State funds for personal politicking is that he argues poorly. His final paragraph will suffice to demonstrate:

May I repeat that the statement that everyone will have to register again is a misstatement of facts. The adoption of the Boswell Amendment will simply mean a continuation of what we are doing at present. Namely, the registering of all white folks and the Negroes as they become qualified for good citizenship.

Apparently Mr. Poole considers himself a better lawyer than the distinguished group of 15 attorneys, headed by the next Attorney-General of Alabama, who stated in The Advertiser of October 20 that in their opinion the Boswell Amendment would mean re-registration.

Further, if as Mr. Poole says, the Boswell Amendment means "simply a continuation of what we are doing at present" — why should it be adopted?

to approve the amendment. It is dangerous to exaggerate fears and to arouse racial feelings, and I regret that people are attempting to do this.

Advocates of Amendment No. 4 have said that the provisions of the amendment are not unreasonable and arbitrary. I do not think that this argument stands up under examination. If I were to be called upon to understand and explain any section of the Constitution of the United States, I have some doubts as to how I should come off in such an examination, particularly if the registrars were inclined to deny me the voting privilege.

The phrase, "due process of law," which appears in the constitution, is a case in point. The disagreement over what is meant by this little phrase is so great that it has been the basis of thousands of lawsuits. It is a constant bone of contention in the Supreme Court of the United States itself, where surely the meaning of the constitution should be as clearly understood as anywhere. How can a layman explain this and other parts of the constitution, equally difficult, equally subject to varying interpretations, when constitutional lawyers wrangle year in and year out over their correct interpretation?

Obviously, then, the amendment does give registrars arbitrary powers.

These arbitrary powers might never be used against me. They might never be used against any white citizen. Who knows? Once the registrars have these arbitrary and unlimited powers conferred upon them, only the registrars will determine how they shall use them. Men, not laws, will then decide who shall be voters in Alabama. It would be a dangerous departure from the democratic way.

I should like to touch briefly on one more aspect of the debate over the Boswell Amendment. It is a notable fact that most of those who have declared themselves for the amendment are men who have left office, or who are about to leave office. The very legislature which drew the amendment was composed of men, many of whom have now been repudiated by Alabama voters. Heflin, Dixon, Poole, Sparks and others, are men retired or retiring from office.

On the other hand, the men the voters have chosen for office in recent elections are discovered, in many instances, urging the defeat of Amendment No. 4. There are, for example, Hill, Folsom and Carmichael, all on record against the amendment as undemocratic and unnecessary.

I am convinced that an informed electorate in Alabama will defeat Amendment No. 4. I do not believe that Alabama voters can be frightened into supporting something which is fundamentally dishonest and which is potentially so dangerous.

From Many Sides

The News Birmingham, Ala.

Opposition to the Boswell (No. 4) amendment continues to pile up. It is coming from all kinds of people and from all sections of the state. Veteran observers of the political scene in Alabama are marveling at the scope and extent of the opposition to the amendment, and they find it difficult to see how the proposal can win even though behind it are the power of the State Democratic Executive Committee, most county political machines, and misused party funds.

Consider the support that has been given to the amendment fight in the last few days. It represents many interests in the state, bringing together viewpoints that often are far apart but which are united in the conviction that the Boswell proposal is highly dangerous and highly undemocratic. Dat

Among the latest to align itself against the amendment is the Young Business Men's Club of Birmingham. The club is an organization "dedicated to free enterprise for all as opposed to monopolies and control by bureaus." The club in the past has directed its efforts chiefly to fighting certain government controls over business. But it has, in the words of a resolution adopted this week, concerned itself with "making every voter a better qualified voter by informing him as much as possible as to the issues involved in each campaign." It reaches the conclusion that while voting qualifications should be raised, "they should not be raised merely with the intention of excluding one group of voters; for in time any party in power would use such requirement to advance its own selfish ends." 10-26-46

That is an enlightened viewpoint. The members of the club, who voted four to one against the Boswell amendment, know that the iniquitous amendment is a highly dangerous tool to place in the hands of any group.

Gov.-Nominate Folsom has repeated his opposition to Amendment No. 4 while favoring all the others. He attacks it "because it is undemocratic" and "further restricts the right of franchise."

May it be noted well that thus speaks the man who is the titular head of the Democratic Party in Alabama. His rank in the party is higher than that of Gessner T. McCorvey, of Mobile, chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee, who reached that office by virtue of his election by First Congressional District voters to the state committee and then was chosen by the state committee as chairman. It is higher, too, than that of E. C. Boswell, sponsor of Amendment No. 4, who represents only his county of Geneva in the Legislature.

Consider also other recently announced opposition to the Boswell amendment. In Anniston, the Central Labor Council calls the amendment "reactionary and dangerous." The Baldwin County Ministerial Association opposed the amendment as un-Christian. The Progressive Farmer, published in Birmingham, and The Southern Farmer, published in Montgomery, both attack the amendment as dangerous to farmers. The Crimson-White, University of Alabama student newspaper, urges the 3,000 voters on the university campus to vote against the amendment. Among the additional daily newspapers taking a stand in opposition to the proposal are The Birmingham Post and The Gadsden Times.

The proponents of the Boswell amendment like to attack the opposition as "communistic" and "carpetbaggers." Consideration of the type of people against the nefarious proposal shows how ridiculous are such charges. You simply can't accuse the Young Business Men's Club of Birmingham of being communistic, or the Baldwin County ministers of being carpetbaggers. How hard up for arguments the Boswell crowd is, and how desperate it is becoming!

MORAL ISSUES IN ALABAMA

Editor, The Advertiser: The Advertiser

Into the discussion of the Boswell Amendment I should like to inject two questions which deal, not with the political expediency of adopting the amendment, but with the moral issues involved in such an action.

The first of these questions: Is it right to deny to the Negro the privileges of citizenship in what we proudly call a democracy while at the same time we demand of him the responsibilities of a citizen? We require of the Negro that he pay taxes to support a government in which he has no voice. We require of the Negro that he defend with his life this same government. If I read my history aright, our nation was founded upon the sacrifices of those who believed that "taxation without representation is tyranny."

And now, supposing that this question can be answered with a clear conscience, allow me to ask my second question. Is it right to circumvent the Constitution of the United States by shameless deceit?

I am amazed by what seems to me to be a complete lack of moral principle in regard to this issue on the part of so many of the best citizens of Alabama.

A CATHOLIC VIEW

Editor, The Advertiser:

In ventilating the Boswell Amendment, the Advertiser is doing a real service to the public by its clear and intelligent comments on the somewhat obscure and intriguing innovation recommended. Serious thinking and reflection on political issues are not the fashion of the day, and even the elect may be deceived and misled by sharp, cunning men who are more interested in their selfish calculations than in the bonum commune, the honor, dignity and fair reputation of the State of Alabama.

I wonder if those who advocate the passing of the Boswell Amendment, under the specious plea of danger to White Supremacy, really believe what they proclaim so fervently? Are they not aware of Shakespear's psychological innuendo about people protesting too much, and exposing themselves to be suspect of insincerity?

It is encouraging and refreshing to advert to the very able, and whole-hearted suport of a group of sincere and upright men and women who support the noble effort to defeat the Boswell Amendment.

To defend the rights of the common man has ever been a genuine mark of democracy. After reading the article in today's Advertiser: "A Black Belt Minister Speaks Out," I have nothing to add but my hearty endorsement of what he expressed and what has been said so far by other contributors in this worthy cause. May the Lord bless them for their efforts, and grant them the victory.

FOR THE BOSWELL AMENDMENT

Editor, The Advertiser:

Persons above the Mason and Dixon Line, and many who live in the northern and southern portions of Alabama, do not realize what unrestricted suffrage would mean in the central part of the state, the so-called "Black Belt," because of the color of much of its soil.

This writer lives in Bullock County, the county seat being Union Springs. In this county the Negroes outnumber the whites by about four or five to one, with other counties likewise. While some of the Negroes can be listed as intelligent voters, a great many more, both men and women, cannot be so regarded. An electorate controlled by money or liquor, as often was the case before the Constitution of 1901, can mean a very great menace to both white and colored citizens and property owners.

The fact that this writer has been a Methodist preacher for almost 59 years, and in various counties of the state, does not cause him to forget many things in the "Reconstruction" days, along in the 1870's. He has seen guns being loaded with buckshot, just before an election, to be placed near the polls in Glennville, in Russell County. His childhood home was only about twelve miles from Spring Hill, in Barbour County, where the son of a Northern carpetbagger (Kiels) was shot fatally in the voting room there; and also it was only about 18 miles from Eufaula, where in an election riot 30 negroes were killed. He knows something about the ballot-box stuffing which preceded the Constitution of 1901, and voted for that Constitution.

Now the Boswell Amendment is needed, to help, to prevent unregulated and unrestricted registration and voting by a great multitude of persons, men and women, who do not know how to vote for the best interests of the state and the nation. Such indiscriminate voting is now being loudly advocated by both white and colored Northern haters of the white people of the South, like the (white) Northern woman, Mrs. Canfield, who some years ago wrote that "she hoped some day to be able to look down from little peepholes in the sky upon the proud spectacle of black heels on white Southern necks."

Surely the fact of the Macon county registrars, at Tuskegee, resigning in a body and many others refusing to serve, because of $5,000 damage suits against registrars who refused to sanction indiscriminate registering of belligerent Negroes, with similar resignation and suits elsewhere, including Jefferson county, should be enough to wake up the white people of Alabama to what is really being threatened, as a result of great sums of money and much propaganda being sent into this state.

Methodist Minister.

A BETTER WAY

To the Editor of The News: The News

The campaign to obtain ratification of the Boswell amendment threatens to reach a pitch of vilification and mere appeal to prejudice. On the basis of fear, our citizens are urged to take a step which in my judgment is unnecessary, will embitter a large portion of our population, will be held invalid by the United States Supreme Court, and will call down ignominy on our state and retributive action of the Congress. Birmingham, Ala

The Boswell amendment is unsound because it substitutes for objective standards of voting the personal judgment and desire of appointed officials. Those who support it admit, and in fact urge in its support, what may therefore be taken to be the fact, that it will be arbitrarily administered against the potential Negro voter. If it may be used that way, it can also be administered against any white individual or group who may apply. Voting standards should be simple and clear and beyond risk of arbitrary interpretation.

But I am not one who would rest his opposition to the amendment alone upon fear that it may be used arbitrarily against the white population. I do know that it would be used against the qualified Negro in violation of the Constitution of the United States. I am against violating the constitution, particularly as I believe the situation which the amendment was contrived to meet can be solved in a perfectly lawful way. I am convinced it will be better to proceed lawfully than to rest on a subterfuge which our courts will ultimately hold unconstitutional and which the American people will ultimately find the way to resist. We Southerners have been too prone to complain about outside interference while at the same time making too little effort to put our own house in order. Fri. 11-1-46

The safeguards in our present constitution against mass registration of unqualified voters have worked satisfactorily since 1901. They are, in my judgment, still adequate, notwithstanding recent decisions of the Supreme Court. But if the fear of some is justified that the door is now open to a great mass of the unqualified, then a lawful remedy is available. The Legislature at its session next May can submit to the people for ratification next Summer an amendment to the constitution (a) increasing the property qualification for all new applicants for registration so as to exclude all illiterates except those who have demonstrated their sagacity through accumulation of a somewhat larger means than now stipulated by our constitution, and (b) laying down as an alternative for such new applicants objective educational requirements such as completion of a grade school education or its equivalent. Such changes would not open the door to arbitrary discrimination, would permit the new enfranchisement of only well-qualified persons of both races, and would be consistent with the 15th amendment and the historic right of the state to impose reasonable and equal restraints on the voting privilege. Such changes would prevent the wholesale registration of the incompetent, but, contrary to the Boswell amendment, would also preserve the principles upon which our country was founded.

The Boswell amendment should be defeated.

Turning Backward

The News, Birmingham, Ala.

Adoption by Alabamians of the Boswell amendment would be a backward step for two reasons: Fri. 8-30-46

1. It would make Alabama the state with the most severe educational requirements for voters

2. It would reverse the general trend of liberalizing the qualifications for the franchise.

The Boswell amendment provides that before an Alabamian can become an elector he must be able to "read and write, understand and explain any article of the Constitution of the United States in the English language," and that he must "understand the duties and obligations of good citizenship under a republican form of government."

No other state poses such difficult educational tests for a would-be voter. In fact, only 18 states, in their state constitutions, provide for any kind of an educational requirement, and only two approach the position Alabama will be in if the Boswell amendment becomes law.

The following states through their constitutions impose no educational tests for applicants to vote: Arkansas, Colorado, Florida, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, North Dakota, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Texas, Utah, Vermont, West Virginia and Wisconsin.

In three of those states, Colorado, New York and North Dakota, the constitution gives the state Legislature the right to prescribe by statutory law educational tests for voters. This has been done in New York.

It will be noted that three Southern states, Florida, Kentucky and Texas, are in this list, as well as three border states, Maryland, Missouri and West Virginia. These states have not found educational tests for voters necessary for preservation of any desired social system.

New Mexico has a unique position among these states. The framers of its constitution were not content with silently ignoring educational tests as a basis for voting. They specifically forbid them. The state constitution prohibits the restriction, abridgment or impairment of the right to vote on account of inability to speak, read or write either the English or the Spanish language.

Many of the 18 states whose constitutions permit educational tests limit themselves to mere requirements that the applicants be able to read in English any section of either the state or the federal constitution, and to be able, unless physically handicapped, to sign their names. States with simple provisions to that effect include Arizona, California, Connecticut, Delaware, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Wyoming.

Some other states impose only minor requirements. The Tennessee constitution provides only that the applicant must be able to mark his ballot, unless blind. Washington insists that he read and speak the English language. Oklahoma requires him to be able to read and write any section of the state constitution.

The six states remaining, not counting Alabama, are all in the South. They are the ones that have set up more rigid requirements.

The Georgia constitution, as amended in 1943, provided that the applicant shall be able to read and write in English any paragraph of the United States or Georgia constitutions, or to possess alternatives in property and good character.

Louisiana requires the ability to read and write and proof of the latter by writing out the application for registration in English or the mother tongue.

South Carolina has constitutional provisions much like those of Alabama. In fact, the Alabama constitutional convention of 1901 patterned its sections relating to voting much after the South Carolina constitution which had been adopted 10 years earlier. In South Carolina a voter must be able to read and write, or pay taxes on $300 or more of property.

North Carolina stipulates that the applicant must be able to read and write any section of the state constitution in English and prove the same to the satisfaction of the registrar.

In only the two remaining states are there constitutional provisions relating to "understanding" the constitution. Mississippi's section calls for the applicant to be able to read any section of the state constitution, or to be able to understand it and give a reasonable interpretation of it. This provision differs from the Boswell amendment in two respects. The Boswell amendment would require the applicant to be able to read and write, understand and explain the constitution. In Mississippi the applicant must be able to read, or to explain, and give a "reasonable" interpretation.

In Virginia, which has an educational requirement that is optional with a so-called "grandfather clause," the would-be voter must demonstrate his ability to read and explain any section of the state constitution, or, if he cannot read, be able to understand and explain it if read to him. Fri. 8-30-46

Both Virginia and Mississippi have milder provisions than would Alabama if the Boswell amendment is adopted. Today they stand in the position of imposing the most difficulties in the way of the voter as far as his intelligence is concerned.

The Boswell amendment would be a step backward. The present tendency is mainly in the direction of broadening the base of voting. Except for the period around 1890 and 1900 when most Southern states were adopting new constitutions that sought, in various ways, to curb Negro participation in government, the general trend in this country for the last century has been away from educational qualifications.

This country started out with definite restrictions on voting. Most of the early limitations, however, were in regard to property. Only freeholders were permitted to vote in most of the early states. But the tide set away from property qualifications. As a substitute, some states imposed educational requirements. Both Massachusetts and Connecticut, for example, adopted provisions requiring the voter to be able to read the constitution and write their own names. A majority of states, at some time or other, have set up educational qualifications.

But in the last 40 years, or since the South got over its reaction to the evils of Reconstruction, the suffrage in this country has been gradually but steadily widening. Even in many states where educational qualifications are still to be found in the constitution the provisions are seldom applied. In some instances they have been abandoned.

For Alabama to adopt the Boswell amendment would be an effort to stem a tide of social change. It would be looking backward instead of forward.

Is This Democratic?

News, Birmingham, Ala.

Gessner McCorvey's proposal that the State Democratic Executive Committee spend $3,500 in a campaign for adoption of the "Boswell amendment" is not the best suggestion in the world. There are too many Democrats in Alabama who think the "Boswell amendment" undemocratic to justify this use of party funds. Whatever funds are at the disposal of the state committee should be used for strictly party purposes, not to push a matter on which there is so much divided opinion. 8-23-46

The very fact that Mr. McCorvey feels the need for waging a campaign in behalf of the amendment reveals his realization that many Alabama voters, including many consistent and conscientious Democrats, are opposed to it. It matters not which side of the issue the money would be spent in promoting, the use of any party funds in this controversy would be wrong in principle.

The campaign over the "Boswell amendment" will not be a fight with the Democratic party lined up on one side, and Republicans and all others on the other. It is a battle that will be fought largely within the Democratic party itself. It is chiefly a battle between those Democrats who want the ballot to be free to all persons who can qualify under objective tests and those Democrats who want to empower individuals or boards to exercise arbitrary authority to keep off the voting list whomsoever they please. 8-23-46

If Mr. McCorvey is convinced that the "Boswell amendment" is desirable, let him get out and campaign for it all he wishes. Let him raise funds among like believers and seek to convince the voters. But, as a consistent Democrat, he can scarcely use his position and party funds for such an enterprise. Friday

Dark Evils, Rosy Blessings Of Boswell Amendment Cited

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

By G. C. LONG

Reasons for and against the proposed Boswell amendment to the State Constitution were given the Kiwanis Club here yesterday by Horace C. Wilkinson and Richard T. Rives.

"A law that is unjust to the Negro is unjust to the white man," Rives, a local attorney, asserted in speaking against the amendment. "It does not require statesmanlike vision to see that the consequences of the Boswell amendment would be evil alike to the white man and to the black." Wed. 9-18-46

In arguing against the measure Wilkinson, a Birmingham lawyer, declared:

"I shall support the Boswell amendment because I think it will help prevent the Negro from voting in Alabama."

Opposes Equality

Continuing, Wilkinson said he opposed Negro registration and Negro voting because he is not an equalitarian, because he is opposed to social equality and intermarriage of the races and because it would menace the political structure of this country.

On the other hand Rives contended that a gradual registration of qualified Negroes, rather than the sudden enfranchisement of thousands, is in the best interests of both races.

"Experience under the present Constitution has proved that the question of allowing qualified Negroes to vote will be answered in the way the great majority of the white people of a county may think," the Montgomery attorney stated. "They don't need any Constitutional amendment to maintain white supremacy."

Wilkinson asserted the Boswell amendment is, in effect, "a finely meshed legal screen that will enable the State to effectively perform its duty to preserve and protect our local and National government."

"I do not believe the races are equal," he continued. "I know they are not."

Wilkinson declared the 1901 Alabama Constitution was presented to keep the Negro from voting and it received the same criticism then as the Boswell amendment is receiving now.

"The Boswell amendment is the 1946 spirit of the 1901 Constitution," he continued.

The Montgomery attorney said it was his 'considered opinion' the Boswell Amendment is so arbitrary that it is itself violative of the Constitution of the United States. The Advertiser

He added he felt the measure placed too much arbitrary power in the hands of the Boards of Registrars. Montgomery, Ala.

To say the amendment is needed on the grounds that it would maintain "white supremacy," Rives continued, is to raise an ugly issue, one that should not be raised unless necessary and urgent.

Quoting Gessner T. McCorvey, chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee, as saying, "There are any number of counties in Alabama's Black Belt where within a comparatively few years there will probably be only Negro city and county officials unless we do something to tighten up our registration laws," Rives declared: Wed. 9-18-46

"Pure Buncombe"

"Yet these gentlemen know full well that registration in each separate county is entirely under the control of white registrars and the white jurors of that county. To this hysterical statement we may reply in the language Mr. McCorvey used toward Senator Lister Hill last week, 'Buncombe, pure and simple,' or in the even more picturesque language of an American general, Nuts!' "

Wilkinson asserted that the theory of equality is a communistic theory, but democracy does not mean equality.

"The primary reason why the Negro wants the vote is because political equality leads to social equality and social equality leads to intermarriage," the Birmingham lawyer said.

He added the Negro is trying to break down the theory of racial superiority because when he does that he will be able to achieve social equality and bring about intermarriage.

"If the Boswell Amendment will delay, for even an hour, enfranchising those who advocate that program, I am for the Boswell Amendment," Wilkinson said.

"Without intending any flattery," Rives told his listeners "I may say that this is a fairly intelligent audience. Yet take these questions home to yourselves and answer honestly whether you could qualify under the Boswell Amendment:

He Asks Them

"Can you explain the power of Congress to grant letters of marque and reprisal?

"Can you define a bill of attainder of an ex post facto law?

"Can you explain just how the electoral college is constituted and how it functions?

"What is the difference between a 'treaty' which must be concurred in by two-thirds of the Senators present, and an 'agreement' with a foreign country which can be approved by a simple majority of Congress?

"Just what is meant by 'due process of law'?

"What are the 'privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States'?

"If you can answer all of these questions you have the Supreme Courty bested."

Wilkinson declared this country was built on voluntary cooperation, and that among Caucasians.

"Pressure" Needed

"The social value of voluntary cooperation has no appeal to the Negro because it is not part of the Negro's racial constitution," the Birmingham attorney continued, "and that is why Negroes never make combat soldiers. He has never done and will never do anything that he is not compelled to do by some form of pressure other than his obligation to society."

Wilkinson said the Negro would never be fit for the ballot under the present form of government because under his racial constitution he is devoid of any sense of obligation.

"I do not contend that Negro voting will destroy America next week or next year," he continued. "But I do assert with the utmost confidence, that no nation can always withstand a large number of people, opposed to its fundamental concept, influencing or shaping its policies. That form of political erosion will eventually destroy a free government for free men."

Three Tests

The three tests of the right to vote under the Boswell Amendment, Rives declared, are impossible of accurate application.

"'Good character,' 'understanding and explaining the Constitution' and 'duties and obligations of good citizenship under a Republican form of government' — those pious words are as sounding brass and tinkling symbols — just a lot of legalistic mumbo jumbo really meaning that the amendment would give the Board of Registrars arbitrary power to register or to refuse to register any prospective voter," the Montgomery man explained.

Wilkinson questioned: "Is there anything arbitrary about vesting a board of reputable citizens with the power to determine whether an applicant is a person of good character and understands the duties and obligations of good citizenship under a Republican form of government?"

Like Teachers

School teachers in the State, he pointed out, have the authority to deny a child promotion because the child, in the teacher's opinion, does not know enough to be advanced. And so do boards dealing with barbers, plumbers, cosmotologists and various other trades and professions.

"Arbitrary power is no respecter of persons," Rives asserted. "The chains we forge to shackle qualified Negroes can be used to keep the white voters of Alabama from walking to the polls."

The Montgomery lawyer pointed out the possibility of an ambitious governor in the future, "a man greedy for power," dominating the auditor and commissioner of agriculture to appoint registrars who would do the will of the governor, to "assure his continued political domination of the State."

"In nearly every county in this State there exists a great pool of reservoir of unqualified and as yet unregistered persons, mostly Negroes, a potential source of political power that the Boswell amendment would enable an unscrupulous Board of Registrars to dam up and harness," Rives said.

Asks Evidence

Wilkinson held it is evident opponents of the Boswell amendment cannot promise, much less deliver, any concrete evidence of any benefits that will accrue from registration of the Negro.

". . . Make sure that the rule of the white man will continue in the future as it has in the past," the Birmingham lawyer declared. "We can be certain of that by investing political power in white people only."

"If it should appear in the future that the standards need to be raised," Rives said, "then we might raise the literacy test. . . . but whatever the test, it would be definite and to comply with the Constitution of the United States, it should be applied fairly and impartially to all applicants. I believe that is our only sound course." 9-18-46

The real issue, Rives concluded, is whether a government of laws should be retained or whether "we surrender to the arbitrary power of men."

Boards Of Registra

The News, Birmingham, Ala

Boards of registrars in Alabama hold the key position in determining the character of the state's electorate. They are charged with enforcing the present registration laws. They would carry out the provisions of the Boswell amendment, if it should be approved. They are now, and will be, pretty much on the spot. Any comprehensive study of the Boswell amendment and what it will mean to Alabama should begin, therefore, with consideration of the boards of registrars and their powers.

Each county has a board of registrars, consisting of three members. It is the board's duty to consider the qualifications of voters, to keep lists of qualified voters, to purge the lists of voters who have died or have become disqualified for any reason, and in general to maintain the purity of the voting lists in accordance with democratic principles. The only qualifications for members of the board of registrars are that they themselves shall be qualified electors and residents of the county, not at the time holding an elective office, and shall be "reputable and suitable" persons. Fri. 9-6-46

Registrars are named by a board of appointment consisting of the governor, state auditor and commissioner of agriculture and industries, or by a majority of the board. They are appointed for four-year terms, but may be removed at the will of the state board, or its majority, with or without cause, and without giving reasons therefor. It is theoretically possible, therefore, for the governor and one other state official to fire, without known reason, an entire board of registrars and rename new registrars more amenable to the administration's will.

In designating the governor, state auditor and the commissioner of agriculture and industries as the board of appointment, the framers of the state code sought to minimize the possibility of a politician using the registration system for building up a machine he could control. The three members of the appointing board cannot succeed themselves. It was therefore felt that new registrars would be named by each administration and the only continuing policy in registration would be one of honesty and fairness. Changing the boards of registrars every four years would, it was believed, automatically assure protection against misuse of the powers of the boards.

In practice, however, this safeguard has been partly nullified. Most registrar appointments are really made by one member of the appointing board and ratified by a majority of the board. By an unwritten rule of courtesy, the governor, auditor or commissioner of agriculture and industries is permitted to select all the registrars in his home county. In other counties it is customary for each member of the board of appointment to choose one registrar. In this way political debts can be paid and political support gained, if not for the next election, at least for some possible subsequent election.

INAPPROPRIATE COMMITTEE ACTION

Montgomery, Ala

The fact that the Alabama Democratic Executive Committee is seriously debating the question of whether or not it should spend $3,500 of the committee's money on a propaganda campaign to put over the Boswell Amendment to the State's Constitution is a shocking disclosure. There is no argument over the amount of money which the Committee proposes to spend, since $3,500 obviously will not go far in a statewide propaganda campaign; — but the proposition would still be disturbing if the sum involved were one-tenth of the amount.

The prime fault in the proposed action of the Democratic Executive Committee lies in the fact that the Committee will thereby arrogate to itself a function wholly outside its legitimate sphere of activity. Admitting that the Executive Committee has no well defined or delimited area in which to exercise its legitimate functions, it clearly has no right to infringe upon the perogatives of the electorate. 8-23-46

How can the elected officialdom of the Democratic Party of Alabama assume the right to spend the funds of the Democratic Party of Alabama in the effort to tell the Democrats of Alabama how they shall vote?

The Advertiser, along with many of Alabama's foremost Democratic leaders, is opposed to the Boswell Amendment. We regard it as an un-democratic and unconstitutional design for limiting the use of the ballot in Alabama to those voters favored by the ruling political powers.

As November approaches we shall develop what we believe will be a compelling case against adoption of the Boswell Amendment. In the meantime we view with concern the partisan activity of the State Democratic Executive Committee in an election which should have only the Committee's fair and impartial administrative attention. Advertiser

It seems especially inappropriate that the highly esteemed Gessner T. McCorvey, of Mobile, Chairman of the Committee, should send out to his members the following suggestion of campaign strategy:

"I have discussed with some of our most level-headed Democrats the method of handling this campaign, and I believe the most effective work can be done through our County Democratic Executive Committees. I think it important that each member of every County Democratic Executive Committee (and there are approximately 2,500 of these County Committeemen), should be contacted and have explained to him the purpose of this Amendment, and I also think that we should endeavor to contact each election official who will serve at the ballot boxes in the General Election in November. We have in round figures 2,400 County precincts. With six election officers at each precinct election box, there are approximately 14,000 election officials who will serve in the General Election on November 5th, 1946, when this proposed "Boswell Amendment" will be voted on. I think we should undertake to contact each of these election officials . . ."

Such a statement by Mr. McCorvey must raise a serious question in the minds of

Fri. 11-15-46 WHAT PROCESS?

Editor, The Advertiser:

I should like to know by what process Gov. Sparks arrived at the conclusion that Negroes in Alabama will be encouraged to improve themselves economically as a result of the passage of the Boswell Amendment? Advocates of the Amendment failed to mention any such idea. They said flatly that its purpose was to keep the Negro from voting. I am sure that no one would admit such a wrong without committing it.

Wilkinson And Rives Debate Boswell Bill

Former Sees Specter Of Racial Amalgamation; Latter Feels Fear Is Without Foundation

BY HUGH W. SPARROW
News Staff Writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Sept. 18—The pros and cons of the so-called "Boswell Amendment," which would add greatly to powers of county boards of registrars in passing on applicants for the privilege of voting, were argued here yesterday before an audience which included Supreme Court and other judges and many widely known state and local political figures.

The debate was staged during the weekly luncheon of the Montgomery Kiwanis Club at the Jefferson Davis Hotel, with Horace Wilkinson, Birmingham, presenting the affirmative side and Richard T. Rives, Montgomery, the negative.

Both speakers are widely known attorneys and their cases, in the opinion of many in the audience, were ably presented.

Wilkinson contended throughout that the Negro is striving for political equality as a stride toward social equality and inter-marriage with white people. The Boswell amendment, he insisted, is needed to close the door to Negro registration, now that the United States Supreme Court has ruled that Negroes cannot be barred from party primaries supported by public funds.

The speaker declared that the Negro must be ruled out as a political factor, because, if he gains easy access to suffrage, he could dominate politically many Alabama counties having a preponderance of Negro population.

Arguing that our democratic form of government is a government of laws, and not men, Rives contended that restrictions already in the State Constitution have enabled the state to uphold the principle of white supremacy throughout the last 50 years. Those restrictions, he declared have an added advantage over the far-reaching and untested Boswell amendment in that they have been upheld by the United States Supreme Court.

While the Boswell amendment may be aimed principally at would-be Negro voters, Rives declared, any law that is unjust to Negroes is unjust in the long run to white persons.

Pro

THE AFFIRMATIVE WAS presented by Mr. Wilkinson as follows:

"When our constitution was submitted to the people in 1901, its main object was to eliminate the Negro from politics in Alabama. The criticisms now made of the Boswell amendment are by and large a repetition of the criticisms that were made of the constitution of 1901.

"An attempt was made in 1901 to frighten the people into turning down the constitution. A like effort is now being made to frighten the people into turning down the Boswell amendment.

"The main theme in each instance being that too much power would be conferred upon the registrars. Those opposed to the constitution in 1901 even argued that if the constitution was adopted, the registrars would destroy both liberty and white supremacy. (Page 4748, Official Proceedings).

"The constitution of 1901 was adequate to its day and generation. Times have changed. Written constitutions change; racial conditions never change. The Anglo-Saxon has the same love of liberty now, the same determination to succeed through exertion that his ancestors had when they challenged King John at Runnymede and brought forth the Magna Charta.

"The Boswell amendment is, in substance and effect, a 1946 version of the 1901 constitution. It is the spirit of the 1901 constitution translated into the language of the day appropriate to the needs of the hour.

"IF IT WAS NECESSARY to eliminate the Negro in 1901, because of certain inherent characteristics, it is even more necessary now because some intellectual progress makes the Negro more dangerous to our political structure now than he was in 1901.

"The Negro has the same disposition to live without working that his ancestors had in the jungle 10,000 years ago.

"I am for the Boswell amendment because I think it will help keep the Negro from voting in Alabama.

"Why do I oppose Negro registration and Negro voting?

"First, because I am not an equalitarian. Second, because I am opposed to social equality and intermarriage. Third, because Negro voting will menace our political structure.

"If it be said that I am influenced by racial prejudices, I admit it. Racial prejudice is a natural phenomenon. It is natural for man beings to have prejudices and to exhibit bias in their relations with each other. Prejudice does not necessarily develop into hate. In fact, the most tolerant person is one who feels kindly toward another against whom he is prejudiced.

"I am prejudiced in favor of the American form of government. I am prejudiced in favor of the flag of our country. I do not hate limited monarchy of Britain. I do not hate the Canadian flag. I do not hate the Negro.

"The theory of equality is a communistic theory. It reaches all to a dead level. The general idea of equality is a leveling down that is harmful to individuals, to nations and to races. It is a philosophy of negation. Nature knows no equality. The philosophy of equality is fatal to those who aspire. Democracy does not mean equality.

"SECOND, I AM OPPOSED to social equality and intermarriage. In 1901, the Negro wanted the ballot, primarily because he could sell his vote. Today education causes the Negro to seek political equality because political equality leads to social equality and social equality leads to intermarriage.

"The theory that all races are equal leads logically to amalgamation. If there is no prejudice or feeling of the white-skinned peoples against those with more pigment in their skins they will not hesitate to intermarry.

"The Negro is trying to break down the theory of racial superiority. Why? Because the educated Negro has been caused to believe that if he can break down prejudice and overcome the idea of racial superiority, he can destroy segregation, achieve social equality and bring about intermarriage."

The speaker then quoted excerpts from an article in the December, 1944, issue of The Negro Digest, written by G. A. Borgess. The article declared that "any step forward in the field of political and social equality, however desirable and imperative, is merely a palliative as compared with the final remedy."

"That final remedy," according to the article, "will be achieved only when the bedrooms open and the two bloods mix freely in many marriages, free from blame and bane."

The article envisioned the time when scientists accomplish the miracle of producing an artificial skin, thereby insuring "mixed marriages against racial nemesis by the knowledge that the treatment that was inexpensive and successful for the parent will be no less so for the progeny . . ."

"WHAT I HAVE JUST READ," Wilkinson continued, "is the theme song of the Negro forces all over America.

"If the Boswell amendment will delay, for even an hour, enfranchising those who advocate that program, I am for the Boswell amendment.

"Third, Negro voting will menace our political structure.

"Let's analyze the constitution of the two races for a moment. Ever since the Lord God took man and put him in the Garden of Eden 'to till it and look after it,' the Caucasian has had to live by exertion. He has been required to expend energy in order to obtain food and clothing and to store provisions against the day of scarcity.

"Nature taught the Caucasian that progress is possible only through voluntary cooperation. In that way, voluntary cooperation became a part of the Caucasian's racial constitution.

"Now let's look at the Negro's racial constitution. Voluntary cooperation is no part of the Negro's racial constitution. One reason is because the Negro is a native of the tropical climates where food and nuts are plentiful and where clothing is not required for protection against the Winter's cold. While the white man battled with nature for a living, the Negro merely accepted what nature had to offer.

"What has one's attitude towards voluntary cooperation to do with registration and voting in Alabama? Simply this: In a state whose government is bottomed on voluntary cooperation the franchise should never be conferred on those who, by nature or racial constitution, are opposed to voluntary cooperation."

Continuing, Wilkinson declared:

"THE ESSENTIALS OF SOCIETY in the jungle are few and do not include the production, transportation and marketing of goods. Nature relieved the Negro of any idea of voluntary cooperation; the social value of cooperation has no appeal to the Negro because it is no part of the Negro's racial constitution. That's why it is impossible for the Negro to make a combat soldier.

"You can see why a Negro cannot be trusted to support and maintain at the ballot box a political structure grounded in voluntary cooperation. If there is no sense of duty there is no basis for voluntary cooperation.

"I do not contend that Negro voting will destroy America next week or next year. But I do assert with utmost confidence that no nation can always withstand a large number of people, opposed to its fundamental concept, influencing or shaping its policies.

"It is claimed that the Boswell amendment confers arbitrary powers on boards of registrars to disqualify any applicant for registration. It is even suggested that a board of registrars might flunk

Concluding, Wilkinson asked:

Court of the United States on a con-

of the opinion that some of the jucarticles of the Constitution of the quite sure that they sometimes make a mess of 'explaining' some of those articles. "The white man is responsible for the safety and security of this country. World War I and World War II demonstrated that beyond question The white man will be recreant to his trust if he does not do the thing that is best for the country for which he is responsible. That thing is to make sure that the rule of the white man will continue in the future as it has in the past."

Con

IN PRESENTING the opposition to the Boswell amendment Rives declared:

"My opposition to the Boswell amendment is based upon principle, a principle fundamental to a democratic form of government namely, that ours is a government of laws and not of men.

"The Boswell amendment does away with the ownership of property as a qualification for voting, but that is not its dangerous feature.

"Its most important provisions are that for any person to qualify to vote he must satisfy the board of registrars of three things: one, that he can 'understand and explain' any article of the Constitution of the United States; two, that he is of 'good character' and, three, that he 'understands the duties and obligations of good citizenship under a republican form of government.'

"These three tests of the right to vote are impossible of accurate application.

"Understanding and explanation of the constitution is mostly a matter of opinion, and on which lawyers differ among themselves.

"For instance, my considered opinion is that the Boswell amendment is so arbitrary that it is itself violative of the Constitution of the United States. My opponent, for whole legal learning I have great respect, doubtless holds a contrary view.

"WITH ALL 48 STATES to choose from, and with a $20,000 salary to offer, we haven't produced nine Supreme Court justices to agree on the constitution. Under the Boswell amendment the state of Alabama, at $5 per diem, would produce 200 registrars, three from each of the 67 counties, capable of conducting examinations on the constitution. Our registrars are good men and women, but they do not claim to be experts on the constitution. How can any citizen be sure that his idea of the proper understanding and explanation of any article of the constitution is the same as the opinion of a majority of the Board of Registrars?

"Under the present constitution, persons with records of conviction for crime cannot qualify to vote. This amendment would go further and require the applicant to be 'of good character.' That sounds all right, but again 'good character' is a matter of opinion upon which persons might differ widely.

"To 'understand the duties and obligations of good citizenship under a republican form of government' just about embraces ideal perfection for any citizen. Who can be certain of proving such understanding to the satisfaction of a board of registrars?

"What are the present qualifications of a voter in Alabama? There are 10:

"1. A citizen of the United States.

"2. Twenty-one years old or upwards.

"3. Must have resided in state two years, in the county one year, and in the precinct three months.

"4. Must not be an idiot or insane.

"5. Must not have been convicted of any infamous crime nor of any crime involving moral turpitude.

"6. Must have worked regularly forthe greater part of the last 12 months.

"7. Must answer under oath where he has lived during the past five years and give the names of his employers for the last five years.

"8. MUST EITHER BE ABLE to read and write any article of the Constitution of the United States, or must own 40 acres of land or personal property assessed for taxes at $300 or more (hence actually worth $500 or more) and upon which the taxes have been paid.

"9. Must establish the foregoing qualifications by evidence to the reasonable satisfaction of the Board of Registrars in the county of his residence, and if he moves to another county then he must re-register.

"10. Must have paid on or before Feb. 1 preceding the election all poll taxes due from him.

"Those requirements of our present law are simple, definite, equally applicable to all persons and have withstood attacks through the highest courts. I deny that the Boswell amendment has any similarity to those de facto requirements of our primary law. The Boswell amendment would add these arbitrary and indefinite tests.

"Can you explain the power of Congress to grant letters of marque and reprisal?

"Can you define a bill of attainder or an ex post facto law?

"Can you explain just how the electoral college is constituted and how it functions?

"What is the difference between a 'treaty' which must be concurred in by two-thirds of the senators present, and an 'agreement' with a foreign country which can be approved by a simple majority of Congress?

"Just what is meant by 'due process of law?'

"What are the 'privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States?'

"If you can answer all those questions you have the Supreme Court bested.

"'GOOD CHARACTER,' 'understanding and explaining the constitution,' 'duties and obligations of good citizenship under a republican form of government'—those pious words are as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal. They are just a lot of legalistic mumbo-jumbo really meaning that the amendment would give the Board of Registrars arbitrary power to register or to refuse to register any prospective voter.

"Mr. McCorvey (Gessner T. McCorvey, State Democratic Executive Committee chairman) in his appeal to the voters of Alabama, supports the amendment on the ground that it is needed to maintain 'white supremacy.' That is an ugly issue, one that should not be raised unless necessary and urgent.

"For nearly a half century now 'white supremacy' has been maintained in Alabama under our present constitution. The last year for which figures are available generally throughout Alabama is in 1942. At that time, of 55 counties reporting, only three counties had as many as three Negro voters to every 100 white voters. Choctaw had 3.2 per cent; Macon had 3.1 per cent, and Talladega had 4.3 per cent. Of the persons qualified to vote in the general election of 1942 in the 55 counties reporting (12 not reporting), seven-tenths of 1 per cent were Negroes; 99.3 per cent were whites. Although Negroes comprise one-third of our population, 21 years of age or older, they form less than 1-100 of our population qualified to vote.

"WHAT, THEN, is the source of the sudden danger envisioned by Mr. McCorvey? According to him, it is the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the Texas primary case. To quote Mr. McCorvey's words: 'This court decision has opened the way to a flood of Negro registration and Negro domination at the polls in Alabama—especially in our Black Belt counties—which our present election laws are powerless to prevent.'

"Again he speaks of 'the veritable flood of Negro registration and Negro domination which the Supreme Court decision has released. Now what was that dangerous decision? Let us accept Mr. McCorvey's own statement of the holding of the Supreme Court: 'The Supreme Court of the United States, in a far-reaching and precedent-shattering opinion, has held that any qualified voter, whether he be white or colored, has the legal right to vote in any party primary supported by state funds.' That holding had to do simply with the right of a voter already qualified and registered to participate in a party primary. How Mr. McCorvey can say that that decision released a veritable flood of Negro registration is beyond my comprehension. It had nothing to do with registration and it left intact every safeguard of our present state constitution, under which white supremacy has been successfully maintained since the beginning of this century.

"My opponent complains that in Jefferson County there are several thousand Negroes registered to vote. I had a wire yesterday that Sheriff Holt McDowell estimates 4,200 Negroes out of a total registration of 75,000.

"THE TOTAL NUMBER of Negroes qualified to vote in 1942 in the 55 counties reporting was 2,635 as against 359,396 white voters. Apparently in the last four years Jefferson County has registered more Negro voters than there are in all the rest of the state. Assuming they were registered on a basis of merit, Jefferson County still is in no danger of losing white supremacy for there would be only 5.6 per cent of Negroes against 94.4 per cent of white voters.

"Perhaps my opponent and his County of Jefferson can profit from our experience in Montgomery. A few years ago, at the height of the Simpson-Hill senatorial campaign, a New York Negro lawyer, also admitted to practice in Alabama, appeared in Montgomery and announced that he was going to register at least 5,000 Negro voters here. At the same time, Jim Simpson was plastering the state with billboards and oratory calling for the maintenance of white supremacy. It looked to us suspiciously like an effort to embarrass Lister Hill in his home county.

"I defended the board of registrars all the way through the Supreme Court—and that was a free service without fees. Every case brought in court was defeated and without the aid of any Boswell amendment. Further, the New York lawyer was found himself to be guilty of unethical and illegal practices and was disbarred from further practicing law in Alabama and also fined $500.

"MY OPPONENT SAYS that in the Black Belt in a day not far distant, the courthouses will be filled with Negro officers if white supremacy is not safeguarded and made secure. Mr. McCorvey makes the following desperate statement: 'There are any number of counties in Alabama's Black Belt where, within comparatively few years, there will probably be only Negro city and county officials unless we do something to tighten up our registration laws.' Yet these gentlemen know full well that registration in each separate county is entirely under the control of white registrars and the white jurors of that county.

"To these hysterical statements we may reply, in the language Mr. McCorvey used toward Sen. Lister Hill last week, 'Buncomb, pure and simple,' or, in the even more picturesque language of an American general, 'Nuts!'

"Experience under the present constitution has proved that the question of allowing qualified Negroes to vote will be answered in the way the great majority of white people of a county may think. They don't need any constitutional amendment to maintain white supremacy.

"A law that is unjust to the Negro is unjust to the white man. It does not require statesmanlike vision to see that the consequences of the Boswell amendment would be evil alike to the white man and to the black.

"From the viewpoint of the extremists in various camps—liberals and reactionaries, labor unionists and undustrialists, wets and drys, Democrats and Republicans—their opponents might not be of 'good character' and unable to 'understand the duties and obligations of good citizenship under a Republican form of government.' The political leanings of the registrars might well determine who would be allowed to register, especially if a hotly contested election were at hand. Arbitrary power is no respecter of persons. The chains we forge to shackle qualified Negroes can be used to keep white voters of Alabama from walking to the polls.

"HOW CAN THE GOVERNOR and the boards of registrars under the Boswell Amendment become most powerful? The answer is obvious: By refusing to register qualified voters and by registering those not qualified. A board that wants to control an election can register enough unqualified voters to do its bidding. An ambitious and unscrupulous governor can dictate the appointment of registrars to assure his continued political domination of the state.

"My own view is that Negroes should be permitted to vote as they qualify. A gradual registration of qualified Negroes, rather than the sudden enfranchisement of thousands, is, I think, in the best interests of both races.

"The problems presented by the two races living so closely together will be with us through this generation and through generations to come. Those problems, if approached in a Christian spirit by men of good will in both races, can, I believe, be solved, but the kind of arbitrary power sought by this amendment will destroy confidence and be an effective hindrance to any just and lasting solution."

5-Point Program Listed Including Convention And Poll Tax Increase

By ATTICUS MULLIN

In a speech before the Kiwanis Club of Talladega this week Judge Horace Wilkinson, of Birmingham, strong Folsom backer, offered what he termed a solution of the Blackbelt's political problem in the event Negroes become the voting majority in the counties where they outnumber the whites.

Judge Wilkinson endorsed the Boswell constitutional amendment and set forth the following five-point program which he said would eliminate the Negro from the political picture in Alabama in a lawful, orderly way:

1. The adoption of the Boswell amendment.

2. A constitutional amendment making it impossible for a political party to become a state agency.

3. A convention of the Democratic Party in Alabama.

4. Increase the poll tax to $3 per year.

5. Statewide election of all public officers including city and county officers.

Judge Wilkinson argued, as he has done in other speeches, that when the State has no control over a primary, the officers of a party can call a primary in which only white voters will take part as in South Carolina which he said recently held a white primary. Montgomery Ala.

Regarding his fear that certain Blackbelt counties, if Negroes are allowed to register and vote, will be dominated by the Negroes who might choose county and city officers, he said.

"White supremacy in the Blackbelt can be made secure by the nomination of local officers by the white voters of the county or case may be in a county as they are nominated now and with the added primary just as the requirement that safeguard of a requirement that they be elected statewide. Even Jefferson County may need this safeguard and protection at no distant date." The Advertiser

Gov. Sparks' Arguments

The News Birmingham, Ala. Wed. 10-9-46

Chauncey Sparks has given ample evidence of his growth in statesmanship during his term as governor. He has been forward-looking and creative. Time and again he has taken an advanced position. He did so when he sought to persuade the Legislature to drop the cumulative feature of the poll tax. His attitude toward education has been admirable, by and large. He has shown himself to be open-minded and progressive in facing up to many problems of a stormy quadrennium. But he has not risen to his own mark in his statement on the Boswell amendment.

He is for the amendment because, in his opinion, the present requirements for registration can be met "by almost everyone of whatever race." The fact that those requirements have kept most Negroes and a great body of whites from registering does not seem to count for much in the governor's thinking. He prefers to argue in terms of possibilities, thereby seeking to justify his fear of a wholesale enfranchisement without reference to all that experience has to say to the contrary. There isn't much logic in that.

He is for the gradual absorption of Negroes as voting citizens. He is against a mass inundation of voting lists. He is for individual fitness. No one will quarrel with him on this score. This is a good doctrine. But how does he propose to implement it? Through use of the new standards of the Boswell amendment. It is nonsense, he contends, to say that they involve arbitrary authority. You allow judges to use their discretion. Why not do the same with respect to registrars?

But that is just the point. Registrars are not judges. They are not usually appointed for their learning, for professional expertness, for their judicial qualities. Furthermore, even judges would have a great deal of trouble in enforcing the new standards of the Boswell amendment, because these standards are altogether discretionary. They are not definite or specific. They leave it up to registrars to decide whether an applicant can explain and understand the federal constitution in its entirety, possesses good character and knows the responsibilities of good citizenship under a republican form of government. This is not a yardstick—it is excessive authority placed in the hands of officials who in the very nature of things may use it arbitrarily.

Gov. Sparks declares: "No one should be given the franchise until he is qualified according to a reasonable standard—reaches a certain age, and also attains a certain experience, moral and intellectual qualification." All right. But what has that to do with the Boswell amendment, which provides two qualifications the constitutional convention of 1901 considered objectionable as permanent tests and one qualification which would demand from registrars the wisdom and knowledge of Supreme Court justices? Are these reasonable standards or are they merely the cover under which registrars could substitute their own opinions and prejudices for law and justice?

Gov. Sparks believes in a gradual enlargement of our electorate. But the express purpose of the Boswell amendment is to keep the electorate down to a manageable minimum. Gov. Sparks seems to assume that only Negroes would be affected by the Boswell amendment. But that's a rash assumption. The power which this amendment would give to registrars is a power which could be used against whites. History is a constant reminder of the danger which inheres in the mere possession of power.

QUESTION FOR MR. BONNER

Editor, The Advertiser: The Advertiser

I had thought I would keep my mouth shut and remain on the side line, and from there watch the fight now going on over the Boswell Amendment. However, in your today's issue (Sept. 19, 1946), a letter from Senator J. M. Bonner, of Camden, Ala., prompts me to say just a word or two. The following is the closing paragraph of Senator Bonner's letter, wherein he urges the passage of the Boswell Amendment, to-wit:

"We in the Black Belt need the help of every white person in Alabama; I plead for that help. I say to you solemnly; our only hope for white supremacy; our only hope for peace; our only protection against a race war is in the adoption of this amendment."

I am a member of the Senate in the present Legislature. My district is composed of three counties, Clay, Cleburne and Coosa, any one of these counties probably voting heavier than Wilcox, Senator Bonner's county, and all together certainly representing thousands more voters than are to be found in Wilcox. Senator Bonner's Wilcox has its own senator and, as I recall, two representatives in the lower house. At the time the Boswell Amendment bill was pending in the Senate, there were pending bills, at least one, designed to get Alabama reapportioned so as to have all sections of Alabama more equitably represented in the State's Legislature. Some twenty or more of us tried, hard and long, to get our reapportionment legislation up for a vote. Did we ever get it up for a vote? Yes, we did NOT! Many of us representing the "White Belts" begged and plead for "Black Belt" aid, understanding and sympathy. Our calls went unheeded and no reapportionment legislation was enacted, and, in my judgment, none will be enacted at any early date. Montgomery, Ala.

At the time the Boswell Amendment legislation was up in the Senate I cast the first vote against its submission. There were three votes in all against in that body. I was naturally against the legislation, and, at the same time, there kept chasing through my mind the treatment that the "White Belts" were getting from the very hands that were outstretched for aid in passing the Boswell Amendment legislation. Mon. 9-23-46

What I have said above maybe does not touch directly or indirectly on the merits or demerits of the Boswell Amendment, but it does serve to suggest that if the Black Belt is asking for protection from its large colored population when it comes to voting, that it ought not to take credit for their population in having its representation in the Legislature assessed, or ought it?

THE RETROACTIVE AMENDMENT

To the Editor of The News: The News

It so happens that within the last few days a lawyer who is a personal friend and has been a staunch supporter of the Boswell amendment, upon having the retroactive feature of same pointed out to him, immediately typed a letter to Mr. McCorvey, chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee, requesting that an official copy of same be sent him. Birmingham, Ala.

Surprising as it may seem, he admitted to me that he had not yet read the amendment, and, not being satisfied with a newspaper version of it, he sent for an official version and asked that one be sent to me as well.

There is not the least doubt in my mind whatever but that "the date's the thing," so why not present it "as is"? The original "Section 181" of the state constitution reads: "After the first day of January, 1903."

The Boswell amendment reads: "Section 181. After the first day of January, nineteen hundred and three." Wed. 10-9-46

Had there been no intent to make the amendment retroactive, it would have been dated ahead to Jan. 1, 1947.

Now here is the "payoff" as far as this retroactive feature of the Boswell amendment is concerned. It exposes every registrant from the date, Jan. 1, 1903, regardless of what or why he happened to be qualified under the original Section 181, to reregistration under the terms of the Boswell amendment, which wipes out the property ownership clause—for one thing—which happens to be of such vast importance that even a non-property owner like myself should sit up and take notice of it.

If this amendment goes so far as to rule out property ownership—"in this state assessed for taxation at $300 or more" ("or more" means property valued at any amount)—then this amendment proposes to cast aside the guarantee that this property-owning clause now in the state constitution provides that there shall be no taxation of property without representation. In connection with this particular phase of the amendment, it should be borne in mind that "the power to tax is the power to destroy," and if the word of a widely known attorney in Alabama is to be taken in this respect, here it is: "No, there is no other assurance in the constitution against taxation without representation."

Aside from this phase, the retroactive feature places the Boswell amendment in the same class with the "grandfather's clause" cases, that every lawyer in Alabama should be familiar with, and if they will just take the pains to "read" the amendment, I feel confident they will agree with me.

These cases were overruled by the Supreme Court in 1915, but it took from 1908 (State of Maryland case) and 1910 (State of Oklahoma case), seven and five years respectively, before these cases were decided by the U. S. Supreme Court. Incidentally, this is the high tribunal that the Boswellites propose "to show the hole the hog went through" after it had gorged itself to the bursting point on a choice variety of rights, privileges and immunities belonging to its owners. That's we-all.

BOSWELL AMENDMENT

Editor, The Advertiser: The Montgomery Advertiser Mon. 9-2-46 Montgomery, Ala.

I see in the paper where Mr. G. T. McCorvey, of the Alabama State Democratic Executive Committee, has announced the committee's approval of using $3,500 of its funds to help get the Boswell Amendment adopted in November. Mr. McCorvey and the 48 members who voted for the proposal should receive proper recognition.

The committee has taken a courageous stand. With outside influence from Yankeeland attempting again to run our government and meddle in our private affairs, the danger of Communistic Reds contaminating our working people, and subversive elements boring within, it is high time for our upright, clear-thinking leaders to show the way to maintain our glorious, democratic ideals. Mr. McCorvey sets the precedent with — "Since the emblem of our party is a crowing rooster with the words 'White Supremacy' above the rooster, and the words, 'For the Right' below the rooster," then it is entirely proper that the State Democratic Committee should lead the fight to maintain the traditions of our party in this state by adopting the proposed amendment to our Constitution and endeavoring, as far as can legally be done, to make the Democratic party in Alabama the "White Man's Party."

We are determined not to lose face with the adjoining states. We are following closely in the footsteps of Georgia and Mississippi into the fight for right and white supremacy. These two noble sisters expunged all foreign and radical attempts to hamper their rightful progress by electing men who are living symbols of "White Supremacy." We know where they stand. The entire world knows where they stand — two bright and shining lights that winds from foreign shores cannot extinguish. Will we be able to clasp their hands in holy union for the cause?

A few years ago there was in one country a master race. They thrived on white supremacy. Well if the master race can achieve it, then so can we. They followed a leader who knew what he was doing.

Mr. McCorvey knows what he is doing—"and endeavoring, as far as it can legally be done, to make the Democratic party in Alabama the white man's party." Yes, we must do it legally. The New Testament taught us that: Some Jews sought and found legal means to crucify a radical who preached brotherhood. But if we do it legally, then it can't be wrong.

Our illustrious forebears, who wrote the Constitution, resolved that all men were created free and equal. The people were granted the voting franchise. That was old fashioned. We will modernize our interpretation of the Constitution. This will reserve the franchise of voting for a deserving few who have the privilege of belonging to the ruling class. The fewer the voters the easier to control elections. There is no need for too much competition at the ballot box. This will eliminate outside interference in our private affairs.

"The government of the people, by the people, for the people shall not perish"—pretty words. What do they mean?

Poole Seeks Support Of Boswell Measure To Avoid 'Bribery'

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 8—(AP) — Agriculture Commissioner Joe Poole appealed to Alabama voters today to support the Boswell amendment or risk what he termed "wholesale bribery and debauchery at the polls."

Writing in the current issue of Alabama Farmers, a publication of the Agriculture Department, Poole declared:

"I am for the Boswell amendment because if we adopt the amendment, we . . . through our boards of registrars will be able to determine who will vote in our primaries."

But if it fails, he added, the boards will be compelled by U. S. Supreme Court decision to register "practically everyone who applies." He referred to a ruling section of the U. S. constitution cannot be barred to the registrars instead of merely a party primary reading and writing it.

A Vote Against Alabama

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

Today there are more than 3,000 registered voters on the University of Alabama campus, 3,000 persons who will soon vote to determine whether or not the highly controversial Boswell amendment will become a part of the Alabama constitution or whether it will be discarded and forgotten, one more thwarted attempt to curtail the political freedom guaranteed us in the Bill of Rights. Mon. 10-21-46

This amendment (which will appear as the fourth amendment on the Nov. 5 general election ballot) proposes to stop mass Negro registration and voting. To this end it is absolutely unnecessary. Our present registration requirements unquestionably are adequate to maintain "white supremacy."

The last election registration figures which are available reveal that seven-tenths of the voters were white. Does this indicate that "white supremacy" is in danger? Mon.

Under our present law the qualifications are outlined clearly and distinctly. The fourth amendment proposes vague and indistinct substitutions, such as "understanding and interpreting the articles of the Constitution," "being of good character" and "understanding the duties of a good citizen."

It is evident that any resident of our State, regardless of his educational background, could be deprived of his voting right by failing to meet these vague qualifications.

The imminent danger that has not been emphasized is that this amendment is retroactive to the year 1903 and would allow the purging from the voting list of any person who has registered since that time. This would mean that every student at the University today could be deprived of his voting right.

While there is no criticism of present registrars, it is dangerously possible that, since the offices are purely political appointment, they could operate to the defranchisement for political differences.

If the amendment is passed there is a better-than-average possibility it will be declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court. In the process it could cause untold strife and bitterness. 10-21-46

The group which is sponsoring the amendment declares that any man has recourse to the Supreme Court should he be purged from the voting list. This is true, but appeals to the Supreme Court are slow and costly, and it is doubtful that many of the disfranchised would profit by seeking redress in Washington.

The fourth amendment is unnecessary undemocratic, arbitrary, intellectually dishonest and an insult to the integrity of the people of Alabama.—The Crimson-White University of Alabama.

Rives Opposes Boswell Plan As Reactionary

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

Sun 9-3-46

He Sees No Threat To 'White Supremacy' In Giving Negroes Ballot

By ATTICUS MULLIN

"The sponsors of the Boswell amendment are more reactionary than the men who framed the Alabama Constitution of 1901. They are more reactionary than those who wrote the constitution of any other State. They would turn back the pages of history for more than a half of a century."

Thus spoke Col. Richard Rives, powerful sponsor of Jim Folsom for governor, last campaign manager of the late Gov. Bibb Graves and a man whom I regard as the most powerful and one of the sanest figures, not only in Montgomery County politics but in Alabama politics as well.

Col. Rives does not believe there is any danger to white supremacy in the counties of Alabama where the Negroes vastly out-number the whites. He points to the percentage of white and Negro voters now and says that should settle the argument.

Col. Rives says the Boswell amendment is a "studied attempt to evade the Constitution of the United States. Sun 9-3-46

I interviewed Col. Rives and here is the result:

Why He's Opposed

"Why are you against the Boswell Amendment?"

"All that is needed to defeat the Boswell Amendment is for us to understand what it really means. It does away with the ownership of property as a qualification for voting, but that is not its dangerous feature. Its most important provisions are that for any person to qualify to vote he must satisfy the Board of Registrars of three things: One, that he can 'understand and explain' any article of the Constitution of the United States; two, that he is of 'good character;' and three, that he 'understands the duties and obligations of citizenship under a republican form of government.'

"These three tests of the right to vote are impossible of accurate application. Understanding and explanation of the Constitution is all a matter of opinion, and one on which even justices of our Supreme Court differ among themselves. Our registrars are good men and women, but they do not claim to be experts on the Constitution. How can any citizen be sure that his idea of the proper understanding and explanation of any article of the Constitution is the same as the opinion of the Board of Registrars"

"Good Character"

"Under the present Constitution, persons with records of conviction for crime cannot qualify to vote. This amendment would go further and require the applicant to be of 'good character.' That sounds all right, but again 'good character' calls for an opinion on which persons might differ widely.

"To understand the duties and obligations of citizenship under a republican form of government just about defines ideal perfection for any citizen. No one can attain to and prove such perfect understanding.

"In short all of those words are just a lot of legalistic mumbo jumbo really meaning that the amendment would give the Board of Registrars arbitrary power to refuse to register any prospective voter.

"Liberty can exist only where there is a government of laws and not of men. If we want to retain such a government, we must keep the tests of the right to vote simple and definite, and we should not vest such arbitrary power in any man or group of men. Sun 9-3-46

Other Provisions

"The other provisions of the Amendment, that an applicant must be of good character and understand the duties and obligations of citizenship under a republican form of government were lifted bodily, word for word, from Section 180 of our Alabama Constitution which provided the temporary qualifications for registration from the date of ratification of our State Constitution in November, 1901, to January 1st, 1903. Even under that temporary provision, nothing more was required in addition to an applicant being of good character and understanding the duties and obligations of citizenship under a republican form of government. Nothing more need be required for such a citizen would be mighty close to perfection. The Boswell Amendment, however, requires more, namely: that the applicant "understand and explain" any article of the Constitution to the satisfaction of the Board of Registrars.

"The members of our 1901 Constitutional Convention recognized the good character clause as being arbitrary and they repeatedly declined to adopt that clause as a part of the permanent system of registration to apply after January 1, 1903. (See Journal of Constitutional Convention p. 537, Vol. 3, Official Proceedings Constitutional Convention, p. 3451), or even to extend the operation of that clause to January 1, 1905, (Vol. 3, Official Proceedings, p. 3200).

"In short, the sponsors of the Boswell Amendment are more reactionary than the men who framed our 1901 Constitution, and more reactionary than those who wrote the Constitution of any other State. They would turn back the pages of history for more than half century.

He Charges Evasion

"Does the Boswell Amendment increase the chances of Federal intervention?

"The Boswell Amendment is a studied attempt to evade the Constitution of the United States. If adopted, we may naturally expect the powers of the Federal Courts to be invoked to maintain the United States Constitution as the supreme law of the land. Further, the intervention of the Federal Congress for the separate registration of voters in Congressional elections would be invited and encouraged." Sun 9-3-46

"What do you say about the claims of the proponents of the Boswell Amendment that it is needed to maintain white supremacy in the black belt counties?" he was asked.

"They tell us that in some counties the Negroes outnumber the white population, and that is true. The really important figures however, are how the number of Negro voters in any county compare to the number of white voters, registered under our present Constitution. Those records, I submit, will prove that there is no immediate threat to white supremacy in any county. In Montgomery County, for instance, out of more than 30,000 registered voters, only 350 or a little more than one per cent are Negroes. I do not have the statistics, but I am confident that there is not a County in the State with as many as three Negro voters to every one-hundred white voters. That situation does not justify the reactionary and dangerous Boswell Amendment.

"If it should appear in the future that the standards need be raised, then we might raise the literacy test, say to the possession of a high sch school education or it equivalent, or even to a test, fairly conducted by competent examiners, to determine the applicants' understanding of our systen of government, but whar ever the test, it shou should be definite and to comply with the Constitution of the United States, it shou should be applied fairly and impartially to all applicants. I believe that is our only sound course."

PRAISES McCORVEY

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

Editor The Advertiser:

Having read and re-read McCorvey's statement, by Atticus Mullin, am made to wonder just what is meant by State's Rights.

Have always thought if our Constitution is worth the paper it is written on, then our State is sovereign and makes and changes her own laws at will: How then can any one assume to dictate to her just how she shall control the citizenry within her borders? To me this is worth thinking about, and after thinking I would do something about it.

As to the Boswell amendment, of course there will be different ideas about it, differing in proportion to how much thought we give it. As for me this is not the first thought I have given it—not by more than 50 years—I mean the subject matter contained in it. It means the making or breaking of our state, politically—believe it or not. Now let every one read again this statement by McCorvey in Wednesday, Sept. 11 Advertiser. Keep your shirt on—"and he says keep your feet on the ground" and Moses said "stand still." Mon. 10-21-46

Study the circumstances which surround us at the present—Tennessee North—Georgia on the East—Mississippi on the west and the Gulf of Mexico South, shall we stand still and wait for the waters to be divided, or shall we stay home and protect ourselves? Now do not get the idea that I have in mind protect ourselves against the Negro, No! For all these years we have never had any trouble with our colored friend and never will—except for the four reasons mentioned in the conclusion of McCorvey's remarks.

Dixon Legal Adviser Urges Ratification Of Boswell Amendment

The News Birmingham, Ala.

Sat. 10-5-46

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 5—(AP)—J. Miller Bonner, legal adviser to former Gov. Frank Dixon, says certain Negro domination will result in many Alabama counties if the Boswell amendment is not ratified.

Former State Sen. Bonner, of Camden, told the Montgomery Civitan Club Friday that history proves that Negroes abuse the voting franchise and cannot "without disastrous consequences" be permitted to vote en masse.

Bonner declared: "During post Civil War years, it was clearly demonstrated that Negroes, if allowed to vote in large numbers would elect only carpetbaggers, scalawags and other disreputable persons to office. The Boswell amendment is vitally needed if honest, white elections are maintained."

If the constitutional amendment fails, he said, "within four years the Negroes will take over every public office in Macon County where all members of the Board of Registrars have resigned. My county of Wilcox would probably be the second county to fall under Negro control.

"There are three alternatives," Bonner said. "Either the whites would have to leave their homes, submit to Negro domination, or engage in inter-racial conflict resulting in extermination of one or the other races."

Bonner said he could not vision any of the alternatives actually happening and called for adoption of legal means exemplified in the Boswell amendment to preserve the present system of government.

McCorvey Praises Boswell Bill, Col. Ayres Condemns Measure

The News Birmingham, Ala. Wed. 10-30-46

HUNTSVILLE, Ala., Oct. 30—(AP)—The Boswell amendment to tighten up on voter qualification was described as necessary to prevent mass registration of Negroes and attacked as "dishonest and dangerous" in a debate last night before the Huntsville Hometown Council.

The debaters were Gessner T. McCorvey, Mobile, chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee, proponent of the measure to be voted Nov. 5, and Col. Harry M. Ayers, published of The Anniston Star.

The amendment would require prospective registrants to "understand and explain" the United States constitution rather than the present requirement to merely read and write sections.

McCorvey said that the Association for the Advancement of Colored People "have busied themselves very much in informing our colored people of their rights" and added that registrars must "be given power" to prevent what he said was a likely mass registration of Negroes.

He contended that, unless the present laws are amended, "there will probably not be a white county officer elected" in Alabama's Black Belt counties where Negroes outnumber the white population.

Referring to the Black Belt also, Col. Ayers said: "I have no sympathy to waste on those people. . . . They have ruled the politics of this state for the last 45 years. . . .

"THOSE PEOPLE IN the Black Belt have kept the Negro from voting 45 years under our present laws. They are smart. They can keep on controlling the offices in their counties."

McCorvey said many Negroes were entitled to vote because they were "good Negroes . . . whose interests are the same as their white friends."

He said that, in his opinion, the amendment would, if ratified, be sustained by the United States Supreme Court, and termed "bunk and nonsense" what he described as warnings of opponents of the measure that its passage would compel re-registration of presently qualified voters.

Col. Ayers said that, when forces seek "to undermine the fundamental law of the land," then the entire structure of the government is endangered. The News

"They will throw it out," he continued, "then we will have chaos."

"If human rights are not respected in this state," the Anniston publisher continued, "this state which we are trying so hard to develop . . ., men who respect human rights and the constitution of the United States are not coming into the state.

"If this sort of thing had been in force . . . Thomas Jefferson would never have been elected president, nor would Andrew Jackson, Wilson, Lincoln and last but not least, Franklin Roosevelt. There would have been no TVA."

MEEKS VISIONS UNFAIR BOARDS

Registration boards in some counties 'very possibly would be unfair" in administering the Boswell amendment, in the event it becomes law, S. Paul Meeks, state representative nominate of Jefferson County, told the Birmingham Inter-Club Council at its luncheon meeting at the Molton Hotel yesterday. Mr. Meeks spoke in the absence of Albert Boutwell, state senate nominee, who was kept from delivering his talk by other business.

Mr. Meeks said that in counties where the Negro population is overwhelmingly large the boards might become "arbitrary in their decisions," but he added that he felt the law would be carried out with more justice in most counties.

As for the validity of the proposed law before the Supreme Court, Mr. Meeks said that would depend upon whether the high tribunal judged it as a measure against a single racial group, or as a voting qualification law.

He asserted that Negro voters would be easily led, referring to results from some large Negro districts which he said showed that they were voting a slate of candidates. He charged that these candidates apparently were approved by the Civil Liberties League.

The Inter-Club Council voted approval of a resolution recently passed by the Park Board, at the request of James A. Downey, Jr., board president, in which the Park Board urged the Civilian Production Administration to permit addition of 20,000 seats at Legion Field. The Park Board resolution will be referred to individual clubs.

A letter from the Civitan Club asking approval of an Americanization program by which a paid worker would instruct non-citizens, to prepare them for the naturalization examination, was referred to the council board. The council voted to endorse Amendment No. 7, coming up in the November 5 election, which sets aside proceeds from aviation gas sales for the construction and improvement of airports.

Boswell Foes Protest Naming Thompson To Supervise Vote

The News Birmingham, Ala. Sat. 11-2-46

The movement against ratification of the Boswell amendment, to be voted on throughout the state next Tuesday, was marked Saturday by two new developments:

First, Al McGinty, Jr., and Guy A. Matlock, co-chairmen, Jefferson County Committee Opposed to the Boswell Amendment, issued a statement protesting the appointment of H. A. (Gus) Thompson by the subcommittee of the Jefferson County Election Committee to supervise, direct and name the poll workers in the general election Tuesday.

Second, M. E. Morris, Birmingham real estate man who as election commissioner and chairman of the Jeffereson County Board of Registrars from 1914 to 1924 is said to have handled the registration of more voters than any other one man in the city's history, issued a statement branding the proposed amendment as "selfish and dangerous."

MR. McGINTY AND MR. MATLOCK declared Mr. Thompson "in our opinion, is not qualified to be entrusted with the task of appointing poll workers, or to have anything to do with the active work of the Democratic Party in this election by virtue of his prejudice, bias and leadership in the campaign to have the Boswell amendment ratified.

"Mr. Thompson, in addition to being the tool of certain interests in advocating passage of the amendment, has allowed his name to be used in glaring letters on an impassioned and exaggerated throwsheet, which proponents of the amendment are using in their zeal to thrust it upon the voters of Alabama. The News

"In protesting the appointment of Mr. Thompson, we do not question the integrity or fairness of the many workers who will give generously of their time to the election next Tuesday, but in view of the fact that certain zealous proponents of the amendment have made the open boast that 'the good Democrats would see that the election is won,' we feel that Mr. Thompson's intolerant attitude and activity for the proposal render him unfit for such service." Birmingham, Ala.

"AFTER GIVING THE BOSWELL AMENDMENT my careful through I am thoroughly convinced that a more selfish or dangerous amendment has never been presented for ratification to the qualified electors of any state," declared Mr. Morris, who served during the Henderson, Kilby and Brandon administrations. Sat. 11-2-46

"The entire composition of this substitute for Section 181 of our constitution is none other than the brain work of selfishness and a reactionary and greedy spirit.

"There is absolutely no question in my mind but that the framers of this piece of legislation knew at the time they composed it that every person registering since Jan. 1, 1903, could be forced to re-register and re-qualify to vote. And as I pointed out in my opposition to the unreasonable suffrage amendment offered during the Kilby administration, if adopted we would be holding general elections and sessions of the registrars under federal bayonets. There is no question in my mind but that if this Boswell proposal is ratified Tuesday, the federal government will step in and supervise our registrations and elections.

"The reactionary crowd that hatched up this amendment was not afraid of the Negro vote and their scheme in stirring up race prejudice in order to mislead the average voter into supporting it was a clever device to divert attention from its real object.

"IN MY OPINION the resignation of the chairman of the present board of registrars of Jefferson County and his withdrawal of the same later on was arranged in advance by agreement with the reactionary administration at Montgomery, its purpose being to influence the working people of Jefferson County to support this amendment.

"I hope the common people of Alabama will not be deceived by such tactics and propaganda and will go to the polls and vote 'No' next Tuesday on Amendment No. 4.

"The present constitution gives the registrars sufficient authority to deny registration to any undesirable applicant and Sec. 180, Paragraph 3, gives the registrars wide discretion on accepting or rejecting applications for registration as is shown in the cases of Giles versus Teasley and Giles versus Harris. Sec. 186 makes the board of registrars a statewide judicial body. Paragraph 5 gives the board authority to question applicants for registration. And under provisions of Sec. 188, Paragraph 1, a board of registrars can construe it in such a way as to deny a man or woman registration and make it a question for a jury to decide. Sec. 190 gives the Legislature sufficient authority to give the registrars further protection by legislative act, if such protection is needed."

Boswell Foes Unite; McCorvey Sees Registrars Reasonable

Amendment Opponents Launch Organization In Jefferson County

Formation of a Jefferson County Committee Opposed to the Boswell Amendment was completed at a meeting in the courthouse last night.

"Get out the vote" was the meeting keynote, and committee members sounded a general appeal to the Jefferson County electorate to cast their ballots in the election next Tuesday when the Boswell Amendment will be up for ratification.

The drive to defeat the amendment is being spearheaded here by the Young Men's Business Club of Birmingham, two of whose members, Al McGinty, Jr., club president, and Guy Matlock, are serving as co-chairmen of the general committee opposed to the Boswell Amendment.

MEMBERS OF THE GENERAL committee are A. M. Romeo, William Mitch, R. R. Wade, Horace Alford, Edward Hunvald, Lionel Baxter, Mrs. Hattie Prestridge, John Busby, Mrs. P. T. Dobbs, Ralph Willbanks, Mrs. Phyllis Sachs, Homer Wilson, Douglas Smith and Joe P. Bell, Bessemer.

Named to the finance committee, a subcommittee of the general committee against the amendment, were Marvin Engel, Joe Morris, Mr. Busby and John P. Schulter.

Charles N. Feidelson, contributing editor, The Birmingham News-Age-Herald, described the proposed Boswell Amendment as "objectionable because it is unnecessary, undemocratic and dishonest."

Mr. Feidelson declared sentiment in this county is fundamentally against the amendment, which would require registrants to "be of good character" and to be able to understand and interpret the United States Constitution to the satisfaction of Boards of Registrars.

A FORMER CHAIRMAN of the Jefferson County Board of Registrars, Mr. Romeo, said the amendment had provisions which could bring every voter before the Board of Registrars for questioning.

Mr. Feidelson said the present State Consitution has kept the Negro vote to 1,700 out of a possible 63,000 voters in Jefferson County, and to 425 out of 31,479 in Montgomery County.

He used those figures in charging supporters of the amendment with "calculated exaggeration" in predicting an imminent Negro registration of 200,000.

The "understanding" clause of the amendment would be knocked out in the U. S. Supreme Court, Mr. Feidelson said, with the result that "the situation would be even worse than now, if we're willing to admit that the situation is bad."

Mrs. Malcolm Dobbs, member of the Bives committee against the amendment, said it held threats to the voting rights of women and to persons made jobless by depression in the provision that voters "must have worked for most of the 12 months preceding registration." The clause could obviously exclude housewives, Mrs. Dobbs said.

State Demo Leader Says Few Would Lose Votes Through Rider

The News Birmingham, Ala. Tue. 10-29-46

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 29.—(AP)—Registrars "are not going to be unreasonable" if the Boswell amendment is adopted, says Gessner T. McCorvey, and "my idea is that any registrar would replied, "that any registrar would undertake to give an examination on constitutional law. . . ."

The Boswell amendment, up for ratification or rejection in the Nov. 5 election, would require prospective voters to be able to "understand and explain" the United States constitution rather than the present requirement to merely read and write sections.

The chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee expressed his views at the request of Columnist Grover C. Hall, Jr., of The Alabama Journal, who asked him how he would handle Negro applicants for voting if he were sitting on a board of registrars.

"I have never thought," McCorvey replied, "that any registrar would undertake to give an examination on constitutional law. . . ."

The Boswell amendment, up for ratification or rejection in the Nov. 5 election, would require prospective voters to be able to "understand and explain" any section of the U. S. Constitution. McCorvey as an individual and the State Democratic Committee as a group have endorsed it.

THE COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN offered these as examples of "perfectly proper" questions to be asked of applicants if the amendment passes:

"Do you know under what kind of government you live, a republic, an empire, a monarchy, or under some other form of government?

"What is meant by freedom of religion? . . . Freedom of speech? . . . Freedom of the press?

"Do you know what body makes the laws for our federal government?"

"I could go on suggesting innumerable questions," McCorvey wrote, "but my idea is that any intelligent Negro, or any intelligent white person would be registered without question. The registrars are not going to be unreasonable."

THE PARTY CHAIRMAN acknowledged that the amendment "may not be the best . . . that could be drafted," but he declared its adoption is essential "because it is the only thing before the people."

"We can have it remedied in another election to be held about two years from now, so as to remove many of the features which have been objected to," he suggested. "However, if we do not adopt the amendment, then before we could submit another constitutional amendment, every Negro in Alabama will be registered."

McCorvey said he was "really very deeply concerned" over what would happen if the Boswell plan were defeated, but that regardless of the outcome of the election, "I am not going to have any sore spots in any form, shape or fashion."

MOBILE, Ala., Oct. 29—(AP)—The Boswell amendment was termed "discriminatory" by the Mobile CIO Industrial Union Council which announced a campaign to get out a heavy vote against the measure on Nov. 5. The News

Kiwanians Hear Boswell Rider Get Brickbats And Bouquets

The News Birmingham, Ala.
Wed. 10-30-46

The Boswell amendment was presented as a safeguard against everything that Alabama has fought for by former Gov. Frank Dixon, and as dishonest and an attack on equal rights by Peyton Bibb, attorney, in separate addresses yesterday before the Birmingham Kiwanis Club at the Tutwiler Hotel.

The high points of Mr. Dixon's arguments were as follows:

The Boswell amendment is essential to prevent the registration of "a large undigestible mass of Negro voters, most of them venal" The amendment has become the only safeguard Alabama has against this fate now that the U. S. Supreme Court has ruled that all Negroes in Alabama who can read and write can qualify and vote not only in the general elections but in the Democratic primary as well.

The amendment is the only safeguard against black control in 18 counties in which there would be a majority of Negro voters. In Jefferson County Negroes would have 43 per cent of the vote, meaning that they would hold public office in this county and control votes in Congress. Zoning laws would be removed and Negroes would attend the same schools as whites. Segregation laws would be removed.

SUMMARIZED, THIS WAS Mr. Bibb's argument: Text of the proposed amendment requiring that voters be able to understand and explain any section of the U. S. Constitution is dishonest in its application because the average citizen is incapable of doing so—it is beyond the power of the U. S. Supreme Court. Right of an Alabama citizen to vote will depend on the whims of the registrars. Under the amendment not only could a minority be disenfranchised but a majority could be disenfranchised by a minority, such as happened in the dictator countries.

Essence of the amendment is contained in the effort to prevent Negroes—a minority group—from voting, Mr. Bibb further told the Kiwanians. He said it isn't true that under present voting requirements the state is faced with the registration of every Negro who can read and write a section of the constitution. He mentioned that voters are required to qualify as being employed and name the place where they are expected to be employed for the next five years. To prevent registration, all the next Legislature needs to do is do away with the extra registration periods now allowed in most counties, he suggested.

One bone of contention between the two speakers concerned the right of registrars to purge the lists of voters who have been declared insane, been convicted and otherwise disqualified. Mr. Dixon observed that the registrars meet to do this purging during one week every two years, and that the voter to be purged has the right of a hearing and appeal to a jury while his name remains on the list.

But Mr. Bibb declared that the registrars inform the probate judge of everyone removed from the list and that such voters are not certified. Thus, he argued, a voter the registrars want removed doesn't have immediate right to a trial before jury.

Mr. Dixon warned his listeners—Kiwanians and guests who packed the ballroom of the Tutwiler—that a vote against the Boswell amendment will be irrevocable but one in favor of it will still give voters the chance to change their minds and "widen their franchise."

Mr. Bibb made an appeal for an honest and just treatment of the question, reminding his audience that the foundation of this government is based on the concepts of the rights of mankind. Ehney Camp introduced the speakers.

Montgomery Legislator-To-Be Dislikes Boswell Amendment

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

Opposition to the Boswell amendment was voiced yesterday by Hubert E. Busby, who will be a member of the Folsom Legislature from Montgomery County.

He charged supporters of the Boswell amendment, which would tighten restrictions on registration in Alabama, with representing "special interests," and charged that the party's State executive committee was "unfair" in spending "party money in this fight." His statement follows: Wed.

"I came out against the Boswell amendment during the recent campaign. Since then I have become even more convinced that it should be beaten. 10-16-46

"There is a clear lineup in our State on this issue. Practically all of those who have come out in favor of the amendment have been the spokesman for special interests. They have become frightened by the growing power of the average citizen in Alabama politics. They don't want many people to vote because the more voters there are the harder it is to control elections. Advertiser

"The leaders who have come out against the amendment are those who have been most interested in the welfare of the average man—in education, public welfare, good roads, etc. Montgomery

"It is up to the average citizen to get out and talk to his neighbors about this amendment. If it passes it will be too late to find out whether the Boards of Registrars will use their unlimited power to keep people from voting.

"I also think it is unfair for the Democratic Executive Committee to spend party money in this fight. The men and women who are against this amendment are just as loyal Democrats as those who are on the executive committee—if not more so. The money that is being spent, and it seems there is a lot of money being spent, belongs just as much to those who are against the amendment as those who are for it." Wed. 10-16-46

FACTS VERSUS ALARMS

Campaigners for the Boswell amendment start off with two false and desperate premises. The first is that without this amendment "white supremacy" is doomed. The second is that the Boswell amendment is the only way in which to immunize Alabama from such a fate. Both arguments are rhetorical devices, which have little to do with facts, which are based on calculated exaggeration in one instance and on a non-sequitur in the other. Demagogy is not the exclusive mark of the Southern politician but he uses it most flagrantly. How ideal for his purpose is this opportunity to rehearse the old, unhappy, far-off things of reconstruction days! How quickly he seizes upon the first weapon at hand with which to belabor the straw man he has erected!

We are told that a deluge of Negro voters is about to overwhelm the state and that this will happen immediately—say Nov. 6th—unless the Boswell amendment is approved. This assumption is based on nothing except the dark imaginings of those who persist in dealing with the race issue in terms of the thinking of 50 years ago. They do cite the Supreme Court ruling on primaries, but what that has to do with registration is still a mystery. The Supreme Court merely declared that Negroes cannot be prevented from participating in primaries merely because of their color. But haven't some Negroes been voting in white primaries in Alabama all along? Mon. 10-28-46

Ah, says the Boswellians, that has been a matter of sufferance and not of right, and now that so many Negroes can so readily meet the current tests for registration, new barriers must be set up to keep 200,000 Negro voters from taking over our affairs. Otherwise, segregation is doomed and our white civilization undermined. This is arrant nonsense, edged with race hatred. It is nonsense because there has been no breakdown in our suffrage system. In 1946, in a Black Belt county like Montgomery, there are 425 Negro voters in a total registration of 31,479. In 1946, in Jefferson County, there are 1,700 Negro voters in a total registration of about 63,000. Richard Rives has been asserting for months, without contradiction from any quarter, that under the constitution as it stands, although Negroes make up one-third of our population 21 years of age or over, they form less than one-hundredth of our population qualified to vote.

But look at the way registrars are being harried by Negroes, egged on by "outside" organizations. Look at the suits being filed against registrars. The catch in this argument is that, even if the Boswell amendment should be adopted, registrars would not be protected from suits. That you will have so long as clients litigate and lawyers expatiate. Registrars can be guarded from damage suits, but there is nothing in the Boswell amendment which provides that shield. It gives registrars the absolute authority to bar from the voting list anyone they are willing or ready to reject, but that still leaves them subject to attack in the same manner that the Macon County registrars have had to face the music. The Boswell amendment per se does not alter that aspect of the situation.

OK On Boswell Amendment, Light Vote Seen By Governor

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.
Tues. 10-22-46

A prediction that the Boswell Amendment would be approved by the voters on Nov. 5, though by a small majority, was made by Gov. Chauncey Sparks yesterday.

At the same time he said that in his opinion charges made by opponents of the amendment that it would be retroactive are erroneous. The governor told reporters in a press conference that "it will be no more retroactive than the present law."

Governor Sparks also estimated that the vote in the general election would be light, with around 150,000 ballots being cast and not more than 175,000 in any event in the off year election.

Some opponents of the Boswell Amendment, Amendment No. 4 on the Nov. 5 ballot, contend it will be retroactive to 1903 and that any person who has become James E. Folsom, who has announced he will campaign against the proposal.

IN A TWO-PAGE written statement, Sparks said he favored "the gradual enlargement of our electorate . . . without creating further racial antagonisms, or a white and black party system."

The state's present system, he declared, is "rapidly leading to an unrestricted registration" because "it must be known by the least informed that we have no qualifications for registration now which cannot be met by almost everyone of whatever race."

The amendment would require prospective voters to be able to "understand and explain" instead of merely to read and write the federal constitution, and would eliminate from the state's basic law the present provision that gives the right of ballot to anyone who owns $300 worth of property.

REFERRING TO CHARGES by opponents of the amendment that it would invest County Boards of Registrars with "arbitrary" power, the governor asserted:

"The discretion placed by the amendment in the hands of registrars is little different from many discretions now in our courts—the place where all our rights, civil and economic, are protected."

"Besides," he added, "I have faith in the people of Alabama who may be selected as registrars that they will be honest and fair."

Boswell Amendment Tagged 'Dictatorial'

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

FOLEY, ALA., Oct. 9.—(AP)—The Boswell Amendment was criticized as "dictorial" today in a resolution adopted by the Baldwin County Ministerial Association urging its defeat at the Nov. 5 general election.

"The Boswell Amendment involves surrender of the right of franchise of every voter to the control of an unknown group of persons," the resolution said.

"Since we consider it dictatorial and a surrender of all the rights of democracy, and since its adoption would strike a vital blow at all the principles of our American Republican form of government—we appeal to the voters of Alabama to defeat it."

Ministers representing six protestant denominations in 12 Baldwin towns voted on the proposal.

Folsom Leads Opponent By Vast Majority As Alabama Had Expected

Supporters of the Boswell amendment to tighten up on voter registration in Alabama moved well out ahead last night with approximately one-third of the vote tabulated.

With 785 of the State's 2,362 boxes counted unofficially, the total vote for ratification was 38,246 to 33,918 against.

Montgomery and Mobile Counties, however, continued to give a majority against ratification, and a close vote for the amendment was reported in Jefferson.

Returns from 37 of the 48 boxes, including absentee ballots, put the Boswell amendment behind by 678 votes in Montgomery County. The other eight amendments had leads of from two to one to approximately four to one. The 37 boxes cast 2,760 votes against the Boswell amendment and 2,082 for.

Democratic Nominee James E. Folsom, whose election was a foregone conclusion, led his Republican opponent, Dr. Lyman Ward, of Camp Hill, 6,627 to 439 on the basis of 99 boxes in the governor's race.

Voting throughout the State was light, ranging around 50 per cent of the 367,000 ballots cast in the May 7 primary.

The Boswell amendment, which its supporters said was designed to bar any mass registration of Negroes, had been the subject of a heated campaign that split the ranks of the Democratic party in the State.

Folsom opposed it as "undemocratic" while Gov. Chauncey Sparks, whom he succeeds in January, advocated its passage as necessary to give registrars leeway in determining a prospective registrant's qualifications.

Nominations for governor, U. S. senator and hundreds of lesser State officers were ratified in the election. Republican candidates, who have not won a major State office since Reconstruction days following the War Between the States, were entered for a number of State offices and in four of the nine congressional races.

The first two of the State's 2,300-odd boxes to report gave the controversial Boswell amendment a wide margin. Vernon, in the Black Belt's Dallas County, cast all nine of its ballots for ratification, and a box in Houston, in the Wiregrass section, voted 27 to 9 for the measure. All ballots in the two boxes were for democratic nominees.

The Boswell Amendment, which would require prospective registrants to "understand and explain" sections of the U. S. Constitution, is one of nine proposed constitutional revisions being voted on.

Four affect municipal finances, another would replace the 60 calendar day limit on legislative sessions with a 36 legislative day session, and others would authorize the state to construct and operate hospitals and airports.

Rep. John Sparkman of Huntsville is unopposed for the Senate seat of the late John Bankhead but is opposed by Republican Arthur South for the eighth district house seat which he plans to resign following the election.

Reelected to the house in the five unopposed congressional races are Reps. Frank Boykin of the First District, George Grant of the Second, George Andrews of the Third, Albert Rains of the Fifth and Pete Jarman of the Sixth.

The slate of contested state offices: Governor, James E. Folsom (D), and Dr. Layman Ward (R); Lieuenant governor, J. C. Inzer (D), and W. J. Kennamer (R); Attorney General, A. A. Carmichael (D), and Jere Murphy (R); State Auditor, Dan Thomas (D), and Charles B. Hembree (R); Secretary of State, Sibyl Pool (D), and Cyrue Kitchens (R); Superintendent of Education, A. R. Meadows (D), and Fred Allen (R); Agriculture Commissioner, Haygood Paterson (D), and James N. Dennis (R); Public Service Commission Place No. 1, Jimmy Hitchcock (D), and A. L. Isbell (R); Public Service Commission No. 2, C. C. Owen (D), and H. J. Horton (R).

Democratic nominees in state races in which no Republican candidate were entered included, Chief Justice D. Gardner and Associate Justice A. B. Foster, J. Ed Livingston and Davis Stakely on the state Supreme Court, and Judge Charles R. Bricken, Robert B. Carr and Robert B. Harwood of the Court of Appeals.

Of the 26 Montgomery voting machines reporting last night the Boswell Amendment led in 25. In the one other box there were 124 votes for and 124 against the measure. Four of the 30 city machines did not report.

However, in the rural areas of Montgomery County the votes for the Amendment were in the majority, but not enough to overcome the lead built up in the city. Of the 17 rural boxes only 10 reported last night.

The absentee ballots were against the Boswell Amendment by more than three to one, a total of 20 being cast for and 73 against.

WALLACE DISSERVICE The Advertiser

Henry Wallace doesn't know it, but the speech he made 2,500 miles away in Los Angeles Friday is going to prove a help to sponsors of the Boswell Amendment in Alabama. Montgomery, Ala.

Wallace told his audience that he was "ashamed" of both parties for their record on "racial equality." Wallace said further:

"There should be no discrimination because of race, color or religion in labor unions, educational and other institutions."

By that, Wallace is probably not thinking of equal rights under the law. All decent Southerners believe that Negroes should stand equal before the law. What Wallace is attacking is segregation. Sun.

Segregation is, after all, an exercise of personal liberty: You do not wish to mingle socially with a kind of person, so you do not mingle socially with them.

Wallace's daughter Jean was wed recently and there was a reception at Wallace's Wardman Park Hotel suite. We saw many pictures of the guests, but we do not recall any evidences of Wallace's convictions.

However, we're not trying here to make a point either of Wallace's wisdom or unwisdom in his philosophy. Indeed, we think he is entirely sincere. It simply occurred to us, an opponent of the Boswell Amendment, that Wallace's speech will inadvertently put a hot spur to those urging adoption of the amendment. His utterance makes it tougher for those of us who are against the amendment. 10-27-46

MONTGOMERY— Supporters of the Boswell Amendment, designed to curb registration of negroes for voting, were encouraged during the past week when Gov. Chauncey Sparks and Commissioner of Agriculture Joe Poole came out for it: Former Gov. Frank Dixon, Senator Lister Hill has also thrown his influence against the Alabama's only living ex-governor amendment. Opponents are further encouraged by the fact that Alabama history shows it to be mighty hard to put across any amendment. Opposition to the amendment has been strengthened by announcement of Governor-Elect James E. Folsom that he is against it and where there is concerted opposition.

Money, Men And The Boswell Amendment

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. Sun. 10-27-46

With the General Election of November 5th less than 10 days away there is much speculation as to the people's decision on the "Boswell Amendment," controversial "Number 4" among the nine Amendments to be accepted or rejected.

The Advertiser will hazard no prediction. Qualified political observers see a close vote, but few profess to know what will be the outcome.

Seldom in an issue of such importance have there been so many silent voters. Persons desiring to arrange public discussions of the subject report difficulty in obtaining speakers on either side. It is apparent that the decision on November 5 will be made by voters who hold unspoken convictions. Those who, like The Advertiser, oppose the Boswell Amendment as a fraud, a hazard to American freedom, and a mandate for corruption, can only hope and pray that these people of silent conviction are moved by solemn Christian principle rather than by fear, hatred and emotional hysteria.

This editor is aware that many good men and women have been persuaded, or almost persuaded, that this Amendment should be approved. Their decision—mistaken as we see it—is understandable, for the issue is complex, and proponents are sparing neither money nor truth in their determination to saddle Alabama with this vicious law.

As was to be expected, the Boswellians cry out that vast sums are being spent by outside influences to stop the Amendment. But from first-hand knowledge we report that the money raised to defeat the Amendment—all of it contributed by Alabamians—is less than the minimum $3,500 of the people's Party money which is being flung around the State by the Democratic Executive Committee in the effort to cut down on the number of voters. When one adds the value of State-financed propaganda put out by Agriculture Commissioner Joe Poole, and the $7,000 raised by a reactionary Birmingham group this week, it is very clear that the machine politicians are well-heeled for their attack on the people's franchise. And obviously it is an excellent investment for them, since with the reduced number of voters which the Amendment would achieve for them, the control of elections in the future would be more certain and less costly.

Who Are The Symbols?

In a broad suffrage issue such as is presented by the Boswell Amendment it is worth something to watch the symbols which appear—the men who take their stands for, or against. Putting aside today the faulty amendment itself, let us consider the symbols as they have emerged in Alabama.

Who are the two most prominent spokesmen for the Boswell Amendment? Are they men from the Black Belt, the section which the Amendment supposedly is designed to protect?

No, strangely—or perhaps not strangely at all—the two men come from Birmingham, the stronghold of out-of-State finance and special interests in Alabama.

Are the two men just ordinary people—business men, school teachers, office workers, preachers, or farmers? No, they are big-time lawyers, men who make good incomes by representing wealthy clients and corporations. Is it not strange that they, of all the smart people in Alabama, should devote t' eir valuable time to whipping up the racial antagonism of the people and selling them on a law that will place the ballot in Alabama in the abitrary hands of politicians?

The two men of whom we speak are Horace Wilkinson and ex-Governor Frank M. Dixon. It is they who have been stumping the State with a message of panic, shouting an appeal to fear that is the equal of anything ever perpetrated by Bilbo or Talmadge.

The people of Montgomery may well guage the quality of Dixon's appeal by the following. In Athens, on October 18, he predicted that in the event the Boswell Amendment is defeated, "Montgomery County will be represented (in the Legislature) by an entirely Negro delegation, both in the Senate and in the House, and the fine people of Montgomery, that lovely city and the proud capital of the Confederacy, will see a day of which they never dreamed."

We leave it to the voters to decide whether such a statement reflects the fine intelligence of Frank Dixon—or the shrewdness of a politician who loves truth less than he loves votes.

More White Votes Needed

If lawyers Wilkinson and Dixon yearn so to save "White Supremacy" in Alabama, why haven't they tried to give the ballot to more white men? They carefully evade the fact that present restrictions on the ballot in Alabama bar more than 500,000 white men and women from voting—a number far in excess of THE TOTAL POTENTIAL VOTE OF NEGROES IN ALABAMA!

Of course the truth is that Wilkinson and Dixon, and the behind-the-scenes backers of the Boswell Amendment, want as few voters as possible in Alabama. As is traditional in our politics, these men scream "Stop the Negro" loudest when what they mean is—"Please pass this thing and save my special friends—the people are getting too strong!"

Now who are the symbols of opposition—the men who have spoken out against this proposed legalistic stranglehold on the suffrage in Alabama?

They come from many walks of life. One of the first to speak out was Governor-nominate Jim Folsom, who even as a candidate for office expressed his stand against the Boswell Amendment. Alabama's Senior Senator, Lister Hill, perhaps the most forthright defender of the people's rights who ever represented Alabama in that august body, has denounced the Amendment. Here in Montgomery, the able and respected Richard T. Rives has led the State-wide battle with amazing vigor and effectiveness against great odds.

But even more significant, perhaps, has been the courageous opposition of the rank and file—of young men, many of them veterans, such as those of the Montgomery Junior Chamber of Commerce who voted unanimously in condemnation of the Amendment. Anybody who reads Grandma Advertiser knows that vigorous opposition comes from teachers, workers, and housewives. Striking indeed has been the stalwart expression from ministers of the gospel, who by a heavy majority see the Boswell Amendment as despotic and un-Christian.

Up at the University of Alabama a group of veterans, back from war, have organized for the battle to defend democracy at home. Their slogan is—"If You Believe In The Four Freedoms—Vote No On The Fourth Amendment!" It's a slogan that belongs on the heart of every Alabamian.

FOR THE BOSWELL AMENDMENT

The News

To the Editor of The News:

Persons above the Mason and Dixon line, and many who live in the northern and southern portions of Alabama, do not realize what unrestricted suffrage would mean in the central part of the state, the so-called Black Belt, because of the color of much of its soil.

This writer lives in Bullock County, the county seat being Union Springs. In this county the Negroes outnumber the whites by about four or five to one, with some other counties likewise. While some of the Negroes can be listed as intelligent voters, a great many more, both men and women, cannot be so regarded. An electorate controlled by money or liquor, as often was the case before the constitution of 1901, can mean a very great menace to both white and colored citizens and property owners.

Birmingham, Ala.

The fact that this writer has been a Methodist preacher for almost 59 years, and in various counties of the state, does not cause him to forget many things in the reconstruction days, along in the 1870s. He has seen guns being loaded with buckshot, just before an election, to be placed near the polls in Glennville, in Russell County. His childhood home was only about 12 miles from Spring Hill, in Barbour County, where the son of a Northern carpetbagger (Kiels) was shot fatally in the voting room there; and also it was only about 18 miles from Eufaula, where in an election riot 30 Negroes were killed. He knows something about the ballot-box stuffing which preceded the constitution of 1901, and voted for that constitution.

Thurs. 10-24-46

Now the Boswell amendment is needed to help to prevent unregulated and unrestricted registration and voting by a great multitude of persons, men and women, who do not know how to vote for the best interests of the state and the nation. Such indiscriminate voting is now being loudly advocated by both white and colored Northern haters of the white people of the South.

Surely the fact of the Macon County registrars at Tuskegee resigning in a body and many others refusing to serve because of $5,000 damage suits against registrars who refused to sanction indiscriminate registering of Negroes, with similar resignation and suits elsewhere, including Jefferson County, should be enough to wake up the white people of Alabama to what is really being threatened.

THE PURPOSE OF THE AMENDMENT

To the Editor of The News:

Recently I read the address which Horace Wilkinson made before the Rotary Club in Montgomery a few weeks ago. While Mr. Wilkinson and I seldom agree on a matter, if this address was correctly reported I will have to admit that it was filled with facts from start to finish.

Many opponents of the Boswell amendment appear to be apprehensive of the power it will place in the hands of boards of registrars. These boards are made up of white citizens, 98 per cent of whom are opposed to the Negro vote. They all realize that the only intent of the Boswell amendment is to disfranchise the Negro. As these boards are made up of people who believe in carrying out the law according to its intent, they can deny the privilege of registration to any Negro.

It is my prediction that in more than half of the cases where a white applicant desires to register the board will take it for granted that he knows all the answers and will not even bother to ask him the questions. When they do feel obligated to ask these questions they will be satisfied with his answers regardless of what they might be. There may be an occasional case where some white person is denied the right to register, but such cases will be so few that they will amount to nothing. I have been a registered voter in Alabama for over 40 years, and I feel that I am better qualified to vote than many of the present voters, but if it becomes necessary to disfranchise me in order to disfranchise 1,000 Negroes, I would say, "Well done."

There may be some better way to keep mixing with white people for a few years he would not want to inter-
Negroes from voting than the Boswell amendment will be able to break down our segregation people had no respect for them, they woul
ment, but nothing else is being offered at the laws. This lone, it will only take him a few marry with the whites, but there are some sorry good-for-nothings, both white and black, have no respect for themselves and woul present time, so let's take this and hope that more years o have our laws prohibiting inter who would be willing to intermarry. This would bring on a race of half-breeds which Until we can get something better, let we can do better later. marriage epealed. I know that the large the self-respecting whites and Negroes would make this Boswell amendment and use it.
The Negro has only one main idea in want majority of white people would never think have no use for. When they found that other GEORGE C. STEELE,

A Discriminatory Law

Daily World, Atlanta, Ga. Sun. 11-10-46

In last Tuesday's election Alabama adopted by a small majority vote a law that is clearly and admittedly aimed at disfranchising Negro voters. It is called the "Boswell Amendment" which gives the registrars discretionary and dictatorial power in deciding who shall and who shall not have the right to vote.

This new law gives the registrars who are political appointees the authority to inquire if a voter is "of good character, understands the duties and obligations of good citizenship under a republican form of government." It also requires that a citizen "understand and explain any article of the Constitution of the United States." It obviously intends to try to deny what the Constitution guarantees in the 15th Amendment.

Furthermore, we can imagine how many Negroes could explain and interpret the Constitution to the satisfaction of registrars who are hostile to the Negro voting. Even Supereme Court judges differ in their interpretation of the Constitution.

Already in Alabama Negroes have found it necessary to appeal to the Federal Courts on several occasions to get an opportunity to register. And now, with the fortification of this Boswell law, it is believed they will experience more difficulty. But let us hope the Negroes will not be discouraged by it but meet the issue with more courage and determination.

Despite the heroic efforts put forth by the Alabama Negro leadership and the liberal whites against it, the Boswell bill passed largely because, we are told, its sponsors told the prejudiced white voters it will not be used on them. It's one of those laws for Negroes only!

We believe this bill will immediately prove to be so obnoxious and intolerable to the Negroes of Alabama that it will soon be challenged in the courts. Considering the spirit and motives believed it, we hope so, anyway.

The right to vote is the one right we in the south must stand ready at all times to defend to the utmost of our strength and resources. It's our best bet for defense and security. Without it, we have about concluded there can be little hope in our future.

State Awaits Sparks' Views In Rift Over Boswell Plan

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

By LYNNE BRANNEN
Associated Press Writer

With a former governor and a future governor already at odds over the Boswell Amendment, Alabama citizens are awaiting an expression of opinion on the subject from Gov. Chauncey Sparks.

Ex-Gov. Frank Dixon aligned himself with the backers of the amendment three days after Gov.-nominate James E. (Big Jim) Folsom announced that he opposed and would stump the State to make speeches against it.

Meanwhile Sparks indicated that such interest has been generated in the amendment as to make it "virtually mandatory" for him to express his views on the measure. Sun. 9-29-46

A deep rift in Democratic party ranks has developed over the amendment which proposed to make more rigid the State's qualifications for voting.

The split was brought into the open several months ago when Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey of the State Democratic Executive Committee proposed to use party funds to finance a campaign supporting the amendment.

Opposition Begins

Several members of the committee promptly announced opposition to the proposal, suggesting that voting qualifications as set up in the present State constitution are entirely adequate and that party funds should not be used to promote the change.

The Boswell amendment, which comes up for ratification in the Nov. 5 general election, would require prospective voters "to understand and explain" instead of merely being able to read any section of the Federal Constitution.

In addition it would remove the present section of the State Constitution which enfranchises anyone who owns $300 worth of property.

Representative E. C. Boswell of Geneva, father of the amendment in the 1945 Legislature, contended it to be necessary to preserve "white supremacy at the polls."

Supporters of the amendment, including McCorvey and Horace Wilkinson, Birmingham attorney, contend the amendment will protect Alabama from "a flood of Negro registration and Negro domination, which the Supreme Court (in the Texas case) has released.

A Black Belt citizens committee was organized earlier this month to plug for ratification of the amendment. Most Black Belt counties have heavy Negro populations.

Hill And Rives

In addition to Gov.-nominate Folsom, Senator Hill (D), Alabama, and Richard T. Rives, prominent Montgomery attorney, have taken sides opposing the amendment.

Rives' most recent contention is that the amendment, if adopted, would be retroactive to 1903 and would endanger the franchise of every Alabama voter who has registered since that time.

He contends that under provisions of the measure, only persons assured of a lifetime franchise would be those who qualified under the "grandfather" clause of the State Constitution which died in December, 1902.

The grandfather clause gave the right of ballot to all veterans of the War of 1812, the Indian wars, the War Between the States, the war with Mexico, and the Spanish-American War, and to their lawful descendants.

Senator Hill, speaking at Arley two weeks ago, sounded the contention that big corporations which he said would "milk Alabama and give nothing in return" are major advocates of the Boswell amendment.

On the other hand McCorvey contends that Republicans and others interested in lowering election barriers to permit "any and everyone to vote regardless of their fitness to do so" are the chief opponents of the measure.

Members of the Jefferson County Democratic Executive Committee held an informal meeting Friday to form an organization to campaign actively for adoption of the amendment. 9-29-46

An undisclosed number of committeemen were present to hear Horace Wilkinson and ex-Gov. Dixon make speeches in favor of the amendment.

Dixon, who declared he did not completely share Wilkinson's opinions on the Negro vote question, said he felt the amendment was intended to prevent "mass registration of Negroes" which he labeled as "proper at this time."

On the other hand Wilkinson contended that "Negroes don't belong in a white man's voting box" and said the president of Tuskegee Institute (Dr. F. D. Paterson) has "more influence in Washington than both senators and nine congressmen together."

Gov. Sparks, who asked the 1945 Legislature to modify the State's poll tax by removing its cumulative provisions, has indicated that he has virtually decided to make his Boswell amendment statement within the next few weeks.

Jim Folsom Says 'No' On Boswell Plan

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. Wed. 9-25-46

He Will Stump Against It Through Fall, Seek Poll Tax Repeal Later

BIRMINGHAM, Sept. 24.—(AP)—James E. Folsom, Democratic nominee for governor, announced today he would oppose ratification of the Boswell amendment on voter qualifications, up for ratification or rejection in November, and would "make speeches against it."

The big Cullman insurance man made the announcement to newspaper men here as he prepared to attend the American Legion convention in Califorina.

Folsom said "I made it clear" during his campaign for governor that he would oppose the Boswell amendment "as undemocratic."

"I made it clear then, when I was trying to get votes," he said. "I was not afraid of it then, and I am not afraid of it now."

The Boswell amendment would repeal property qualifications for Alabama voters and would require that each registrant be able to "read and explain" the U. S. Constitution. It has the official backing of the State Democratic Executive Committee.

At the beginning of his runoff campaign for governor here last May, Folsom told supporters he would oppose the Boswell amendment if elected, and eliminate the poll tax. The Advertiser

Since that time, however, he has made no public announcement of his opposition but it has been an open secret in political circles that Folsom not only would announce his opposition but probably would take the stump to ask the voters to defeat the measure. Montgomery Ala

Folsom said he would arrange speaking dates after his return from California. Wed. 9-25-46

He added that he hoped to visit all the members of the State Legislature before the end of the year, and would discuss his legislative program with each one. Folsom advocated poll tax repeal, higher pay for school teachers and a minimum old age pension of $50 a month during his successful race for the Democratic nomination for governor.

Forum To Debate Amendments' Merits

An hour-long round-table discussion of the Boswell voting amendment will be broadcast over an Alabama radio hookup the night of Oct. 1, Manager G. W. Covington of station WCOV announced Monday.

He said the program, from 9 to 10 p.m. (CST), would be carried on WCOV, station WAPI in Birmingham and WMOB in Mobile and "probably several others."

Participants, Covington announced, will be Atty. Richard T. Rives of Montgomery and Editor Charles G. Dobbins of The Montgomery Advertiser, against the amendment, and Atty. Horace Wilkinson, Birmingham, and Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey of the State Democratic Executive Committee, speaking in favor of the proposal.

Circuit Judge Walter B. Jones will be moderator.

The amendment, to be voted on in the Nov. 5 election, would tighten up on vofer qualification requirements in Alabama.

Sparks Ponders Stand On Boswell Amendment

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

Gov. Chauncey Sparks said yesterday he has "virtually decided" that he will have to make a public statement on the controversial Boswell amendment sometime in the next few weeks. Sun. 9-29-46

Earlier this month the governor said he might make a statement of his views on the amendment which is up for ratification in the November general election.

"There is still plenty of time before the election," he pointed out. "I still haven't definitely made up my mind on when I will release the statement."

The Boswell amendment proposes to tighten up the State's voting qualifications.

FOR TRUE DEMOCRACY

Editor, The Advertiser: The Advertiser

I have followed your career as editor with much interest and for the most part with great appreciation, but nothing has given me more satisfaction than the way in which you are setting forth the case against the Boswell Amendment. It would be a sad day for our State if it were discovered that the advocates of this amendment, which is both dangerous and unfair, should be more on the alert than are the friends of true democracy. The proposal is (so it seems to me) based upon distrust of a large minority group, and it is a confession of fear and weakness. You are rendering a real service to democracy and to the State of Alabama in opposing the adoption of this amendment. Wed. 10-30-46

CONCERNING MR. DIXON

Editor, The Advertiser: The Advertiser

Having read and heard much, for and against the proposed "Boswell Amendment," I'd like to add my few words in opposition to same. Montgomery, Ala.

To date, I fail to find one single good reason for the enactment of such an undemocratic law. It's true however, the stated aims and purpose of this law is the preservation of white supremacy, but even this can be doubted. Granted this is the fundamental purpose of this amendment, I should like to ask: Supremacy in what, we are seeking to maintain? Supremacy in our efforts to force our will upon others less fortunate?

There are those among us who would deny their own fellow whites the right of suffrage, in order that they may more easily maintain a favored position in life at the expense of all the people. Wed. 10-30-46

This is very apparent today, when one considers the efforts put forth in the past to defeat every attempt at legislative reapportionment, which is certainly due the people of the North Alabama counties.

Yet this very thing that is now being urged upon the people, is the brain child of the very men who have consistently opposed the people of these northern Alabama counties and I firmly believe these people (whose rights have been repeatedly ignored) will upon election day demonstrate the brand of democracy they believe in.

Regardless of what Messrs. Dixon and Wilkinson may say in support of this evil thing, the people remember the fine promises Mr. Dixon made to them when he was campaigning for governor, how he would see to it that they would get reapportionment, but his record speaks for itself along this and other lines.

The writer happened to be a citizen of Walker County at that time, and heard Dixon on more than one occasion make such promises to these people, and now he comes before them to urge the most undemocratic thing imaginable. Is this consistent with his previous promises to them? I hardly think so.

Mr. Dixon had an enviable record in World War I, a war which was fought to "make the world safe for democracy," a war in which he lost much, but I wonder if he hasn't since suffered a greater loss, in that he seems to have lost his heart in the battle for special privileges for a special few.

The writer fought that "war to make the world safe for democracy" and knows first-hand all the horrors of war, how it draws all classes and races of men together in common bonds of comradeship; and to one having had such experience it's inconceivable that such a one could champion such a proposal as the "Boswell Amendment," and at the same time proclaim his belief in democratic principles.

We have a tried and proven law setting forth the requirements of a would-be voter. It's proven very acceptable through the years, and why exchange it for a thing that, in all its aspects immediately becomes controversial, and if it succeeded in evading the U. S. Constitution, would be an injustice to the people and bring disrepute to the State?

I have no assurance that I and thousands of my fellow workers in labor unions won't be disfranchised by some unscrupulous governor's appointed registrar.

No, the people of Alabama don't want this thing, and I firmly believe they will prove it, come election day.

J. G. WARD

P. S.: I ran across a quotation after writing the above, which, I think is very applicable to some of those who are battling for the "Boswell Amendment": "Logical consequences are the scarecrows of fools and the beacons of wise men."

COMMENTS FROM MR. GRAYSON

Editor, The Advertiser: The Advertiser

I wonder if The Advertiser would permit me to use a short space in their Letters to Grandma Column, about a few things in general that are uppermost in the minds of the people. First about the "Boswell Amendment." Some forces, The Advertiser for instance, are opposing this amendment. We elected a state committee of good democrats who are supposed to do what is best for the party. We have always followed their advice, why should we now vote against them. These men were picked from each district and should be supported. We have weathered the storm during the long years of experience, as to how to handle the question of voting qualification, through the guidance of our state executive committees. They have always done a good job. Let's stick to their advice. Montgomery, Ala.

Another thing, how can we have faith in people like Wallace, and Truman? Truman means well, but too many of these dreaded professional politicians keep his mind confused. Read a speech one day, approves that speech, next day repudiates it. Wallace makes a speech condemning our foreign policy which stirred up the wrath of the country. Truman rouses from his slumber, tells Wallace he is a good fellow, but asks for his resignation. When Wallace says he will continue to make the same kind of speeches, Sparkman then says neither Wallace nor Pepper can talk for the Democratic Party. Something happened over night that caused Sparkman to say they both are good Democrats, and will probably be among those telling the people what good Democrats are, etc. Sun. 9-29-46

Pepper you know is hot stuff (especially red). He is another hillbilly from Alabama who has risen to prominence (nouveau rich). The other is that fellow Black, who should be dethroned from his high position. Both Black and Pepper are getting too big for their breeches. They think they are the only atomic bombs in these United States. Like the atomic bomb, they should be squelched.

The atomic bomb showed what it could do when it murdered the people of a whole city. It should then have been put away, buried, cease talking and writing about it. In fact it ought not have been invented. It has caused and will continue to cause the world to be in ceaseless turmoil. It's the only thing, I think, that keeps Russia from entering wholeheartedly in the making of peace. Enough of my rambling, so will cease firing my hot shots against so many things at one time.

"KILL IT!"

Editor, The Advertiser: The Advertiser

Having carefully analyzed the Boswell Act, I have reached the conclusion that it is not an act but a keen-cutting ax. While some of its proponents claim its purpose is to prevent Negroes from voting, it does not discriminate. Montgomery, Ala.

"There is a reaper whose name is death,
And with his sickle keen Tues. 10-1-46
Reaps the bearded grain with a breath,
And the flowers that grow between."

Consequently, Mr. Voter, while this act may eliminate the Negro, if you are not wise you are sticking your neck under the same ax when you vote for its passage.

I asked a member of the Legislature that passed this act what its main objective was. He said to eradicate corrupt elections. To keep out people who sell their vote. This evidently refers to the last clause or sentences in this amendment. That is, to register a man "must be of good moral character and understand the duties of a good citizen." I grant that it is possible to get men in every county, clean, unbiased, upright and with sufficient moral integrity, and a high norm of intelligence as registrars. If not our system of government in Alabama has sunk to an alarming low ebb. However, conceding that they can be obtained, then tell me, how in the name of peace are they to determine if the applicant possesses these requirements? What test can they apply?

I am sure our Governor would not stoop to the low level of the ward heeler, but men who would perform the functions of this instrument will be recommended to the Governor for appointment and there lies the danger. As I see the whole matter, this instrument is a booby trap loaded with political dynamite.

In regard to the Negro vote, you no doubt have heard Uncle Remus' story about the animals holding a convention. Mr. Coon suggested that they vote by holding up their tails. Mr. Fox rose and said: "Mr. Coon made that suggestion because he has a long, pretty, ring-streaked tail and wishes to show it. Besides that, Mr. Billy Goat has done already voted." This amendment is not necessary to prevent the Negro vote, the amendment we already have has done that.

Like the cold benumbed reptile that bit the farmer who warmed him in his bosom, this thing will bite. Kill it.

OFFER TO DEBATE

Editor, The Advertiser: The Advertiser

Your valuable paper carried a news item a few days ago that must have been read with no little interest by The Advertiser's thousands of subscribers. I refer to the recent speech by our distinguished Senator Lister Hill. Montgomery, Ala.

He delivered a strong blast against the Boswell Amendment. The able senator paid his respects to the "big mules," named at least two of these "mules," charged them with supporting the sinister Boswell Amendment. In all fairness to the voters who must pass judgment on the above mentioned amendment at the polls in November, the senator failed to mention certain groups in Alabama and elsewhere who are marshaling their forces to defeat this amendment.

It is a matter of common knowledge that every radical group, every dark hued racial group from Harlem to Mobile are giving voice, aid and support to any politician who draws his sword against the Boswell amendment. Every so-called liberal from Marcantonio of New York to Claude Pepper of Florida, would rejoice over the defeat of this amendment. Every radical would find comfort at the demise of this amendment. The ebony hued majority in a number of our Black Belt counties who see the future repeal of our poll tax laws next year. This group will be highly organized, will doubtless vote as a unit and place in office every county official from constable to county judge, a grim reminder of reconstruction days and the causes that led to the adoption of the Constitution of 1901. Tues. 10-1-46

Referring to the Alabama Power Company and other corporations labeled "big mules" by the senator, I feel that they are about as much interested in the Boswell amendment as I am of the identity of the man in the moon or an Alabama pig in the latest style bathing suit. Understand, I am not a stockholder in any of these soulless utilities, just a plain citizen who is able to recognize a political dust storm when he sees it.

It is either the Boswell amendment in November or the election of State and Federal officials in Alabama in 1948 and 1952 on all white primary platform. The thoughtful voters remember what happened this year in Mississippi and Georgia. It is a vivid reminder and a warning to every politician to return to the faith of our fathers before the storm breaks against the rock wall of white supremacy in the South—Henry Wallace, Bill Mitch, John L. Lewis, Walter Reuther, Eleanor Roosevelt and the Society for the Advancement of Colored People, withstanding, including the loud-mouthed advocates of the FEPC. I will vote for the Boswell amendment and be pleased to publicly discuss the issue with any one or more of its opponents, any where, any time, any place.

Dobbins Debates Dixon On Amendment No. 4

The Advertiser • Montgomery, Ala. Fri. 10-18-46

"It is my firm belief that we face the elimination of our segregation laws, of our zoning laws; that we will see our children in mixed schools of whites and Negroes, our legislature with strong Negro minorities, our juries of mixed races; many of our city and county governments either manned by Negroes or largely dominated by them, should we fail to pass the Boswell amendment."—Frank M. Dixon.

"We have fought a war against the kind of men who sneer at the democratic ballot. . . . This amendment . . . would be an ugly blow at the in-tegrity of our precious ballot. After what has happened so recently in the world, we all know that if democracy is to survive, we Americans must insist upon living under laws, and not at the capricious will of men."—Charles G. Dobbins.

So debate a former Governor of Alabama and the editor of The Advertiser before a rally in Athens, Ala., sponsored by the Athens Rotary Club. Following are abstracts of the opposing viewpoints.

CHARLES G. DOBBINS

Why I Vote 'No'

The question is this: Will passage of the Boswell Amendment to the Constitution of Alabama on Nov. 15, 1946, help—or hamper—the future welfare and progress of Alabama?

First of all, do we need it? Is voting so easy in Alabama today? It is not easy, though our friends, whom we may call the "Boswellians," would have us believe that restrictions amount to little or nothing.

We have in Alabama 10 qualifications for voting. One must be:

1. A citizen of the United States.

2. 21 years old or upwards.

3. Must have resided in the State two years, in the county one year, and in the precinct three months.

4. Must not be an idiot or insane.

5. Must not have been convicted of any infamous crime nor of any crime involving moral turpitude.

6. Must have worked regularly for the greater part of the last 12 months.

7. Must answer under oath where he has lived during the past five years, and give the names of his employers for the last five years.

8. Must either be able to read and write any article of the Constitution of the United States, or must own forty acres of land, or personal property assessed for taxes at $300 or more (hence actually worth $500 or more) and strong Negro minorities, our juries of mixed races; many of our city and county governments either manned by Negroes or largely dominated by them, upon which taxes have been paid.

9. Must establish the foregoing qualifications by evidence to the reasonable satisfaction of the board of registrars in the county of his residence, and if he moves to another county, then he must re-register.

10. Must have paid on or before Feb. 1, preceding the election, all poll taxes due from him.

Now I submit to you, my friends, that these are solid, genuine, measurable qualifications, not too easily met. As proof, I point to the fact that, according to latest statistics, there were 530,357 unqualified white people of voting age in Alabama. Thus we see that Alabama's present law, operating for nearly 50 years, is restrictive enough to disfranchise more than half a million white voters. And while Negroes make up about one-third of our total population in Alabama, less than one per cent of our qualified voters are Negroes . . . Does that sound to you like Negro domination of Alabama?

But advocates of the amendment tell us it must be passed because of "changed conditions." At State and party expense, they have circulated statements claiming that the recent Supreme Court decision on the Texas primaries will "open a veritable flood of Negro registration and Negro domination." What is the truth? The Texas decision had to do only with the right of a man already registered, to vote in the primary. The decision had nothing to do with registration, and leaves intact every safeguard of our Alabama Constitution against mass or indiscriminate registration.

Boswellians point their fingers also at Georgia, claiming that without this Amendment, Alabama will have the same unchecked flood of registrants. They neglect to show that there is a difference, and a big one: Georgia threw out her Constitution, and with it her voting qualifications; Alabama's safeguards, all of them, are with us today just as they have been since 1901.

Still another scare situation, now being blown up as propaganda material, is the case of the Macon County Registrars. There in Tuskegee a Negro college professor has sued the registrars, claiming that he met all the requirements for registration but was denied that right solely because of his color. The Registrars resigned. The case has not been settled. The Registrars may or may not be guilty, but in any event the Boswell Amendment is no solution to their predicament. Under the crudely, vaguely phrased Boswell Amendment there would be suits multiplied. In this situation remedial legislation may be needed, but the Boswell Amendment is a remedy that would not solve the problem. . .

Suppose my Board of Registrars really means business, and comes at me with questions like those:

Can you define a bill of attainder or an ex post facto law?

Can you explain the power of Congress to grant letters of marque and reprisal?

Just what is meant by "due process of law"?

If such questions are asked me seriously, then I shall fail of qualification, for I don't know the answers. . . But what about those 201 Registrars who serve Alabama's 67 counties—do THEY know the answers? Will THEY know whether or not my explanations are any good?

Many fine men and women serve on these Boards of Registrars, but frankly, I doubt they are smarter than the disagreeing members of the United States Supreme Court. Therefore it's hard for me to see how they'll know whether I'm right or wrong . . . And there's the point. The men who worded the Boswell Amendment did not desire that the Registrars should give any real test to applicants. They wanted a test entirely without meaning—a test that would permit Registrars to look at a man and say, "You're in, fellow!" Or, "Sorry, friend, you didn't make the grade."

My friends, the cry is, "Save White Supremacy!" You and I know we have that today in Alabama. But if we put such a law as this into our State Constitution we shall bring shame to the white race. We have fought a war against the kind of men who sneer at the Democratic ballot, preferring to rest their hopes in an all-powerful party machine, or in the hands of a ruthless and ambitious dictator. This Amendment, as a part of our Constitution, would be an ugly blow at the integrity of our precious ballot. After what has happened so recently in the world, we all know that if democracy is to survive, we Americans must insist upon living under laws, and not at the capricious will of men.

While the professed purpose of this Amendment is to discriminate against Negroes, it is actually a threat against the fundamental freedoms of us all.

This amendment would be useful in the hands of an ambitious governor. While appointment of the three Registrars in each county by the Governor, the Auditor, and the Commissioner of Agriculture, provides an apparent safety, anybody who knows the rudiments of practical politics is aware that there could be domination of these appointments by a man of the Huey Long type.

Personally, I have no fear of the way Governor-nominate Folsom would use the Boswell Amendment, if it should somehow pass. Indeed he has proved his good faith by denouncing the Amendment as dangerous and unnecessary. But who can predict the stripe of men who will lead us in the future? Fri. 10-18-46

Let us now consider a phase of the Amendment which, frankly, is very puzzling to me. If the framers of this law intended only to stop the alleged horde of Negro voters, why did they so frame the law that every present voter in Alabama, black and white, is subject to purge from the voting list? Was this a mistake, or was there a calculated reason? . . .

Consider the potential use of this Amendment in denying freedom of speech and expression to a prospective candidate for political office, or to any citizen actively opposed to those in control of the Board of Registrars. If such a candidate or citizen refused to bow to the will of the political boss or machine in control, he could be cited to appear before the Board and show cause why his name should not be stricken from the list. . . .

A most serious objection to the Boswell Amendment is the invitation it would present for the passage of harsh federal legislation designed to disrupt the South's steady, peaceful solution of its problems. While in my layman's opinion the Amendment could not pass close scrutiny by the United States Supreme Court—a test which surely would come soon after passage—there still would be excuse here for every radical and unfriendly group in the nation to condemn us, and to use us as an object lesson in demanding legislation such as the FEPC, or bill freeing voters from State restrictions in federal elections. That, my friends, would be hard to handle; but if we permit passage of this Amendment—something far more repressive than what was considered wise and adequate by our fathers—we fail to pass the Boswell Amendment.

That statement may shock some of my listeners. Let us see.

In the first place, I am not one of those who believe that Negro blood should be an absolute and arbitrary bar to the franchise. Rather, I am one who believes that the members of that race should be given every encouragement, that their economic level should be in every way raised, that as they become qualified for the ballot it should be extended to them, as is now being done and preventing the registration of Negroes, men of good character. It is one of preventing their Gethsemane. The newly enfranchised Negroes, utterly incompetent to understand even the meaning of the privilege of voting, were willing tools in the hands of unscrupulous men. Montgomery, Ala.

EX-GOV. FRANK M. DIXON

Why I Vote 'Yes'

Since January of 1943 my role has been that of a private citizen, making a living in the practice of the law. It will remain the role of a private citizen, so far as candidacy for office is concerned.

But my service as Governor of Alabama during the four years from 1939 to 1943 has given me an insight into public affairs vouchsafed to comparatively few. There is on me an obligation, arising out of the gratitude I owe the people of Alabama for their goodness to me, to speak out when their interests are endangered, when they are facing a choice, the answer to which is gravely significant. And I believe that their decision on Amendment No. 4, generally known as the Boswell Amendment, to be voted on November 5th, is the most serious decision they have faced since the adoption of the Constitution of 1901.

It is my firm belief that we face the elimination of our segregation laws, of our zoning laws; that we will see our children in mixed schools of white and Negroes, our legislature with nearly fifty years ago—then we really are asking for trouble. . . .

This year, 1946, is no time for the promotion of fear, and bitterness, and racial animosities anywhere in the United States. Yet the Democratic Executive Committee of Alabama, by a divided vote, has chosen to spend Party money—money that belongs as much to me as to my honored opponent—in trying to put over a hasty, crude, inept Amendment that is an insult to the traditions of our state and nation.

To meet this situation permanently, the people adopted Section 181 of the Constitution of Alabama of 1901. It provided two qualifications for voting — that the applicant should be able to read and write a section of the United States Constitution or should assess $300 worth of property.

Under the conditions existing then, and for a time thereafter, these provisions were sufficient to disfranchise the incompetent and vicious element which had debauched Alabama. But times changed. We adopted free education. We taught everyone to read and write, so that in 1945, among the Negro population age 20, there were only 400 in the entire state not qualified.

Section 181 of our Constitution is no longer sufficient. The United States Supreme Court has now settled that matter. Under recent decisions any Negro who qualifies under Section 181 by being able to read and write or by having $300 worth of assessed property must be registered, and further can vote in our white Democratic primary.

These decisions open the way for complete and mass registration of all but a very few of the Negro men and women in Alabama.

There are, as you know, in each county three registrars, one appointed by the Governor, one by the Commissioner of Agriculture and one by the State Auditor, three elected officials. The registrars are the men in each county who are in charge of registration. They are everywhere, so far as I know, reputable, honest men. It has been their duty to prevent the registration of unqualified persons, and this duty they have performed.

But under Federal law, if they fail to register a Negro who can read and write even though he be totally unqualified otherwise, suit can be brought against them, personally, for damages, in an unlimited amount, and this method of enforcing registration is being used, under the guidance of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored Persons, in Alabama today. I am informed that there are 19 such suits pending against our registrars in Jefferson County today, with many others already filed and others in preparation in six other counties.

Under these circumstances an impossible burden is placed on the registrars. They place themselves in danger when they accept the appointments. There is no protection for them under our present law, either against a judgment or the costs and fees of the litigation. So serious has the situation become that in Macon County, in June, the registrars resigned as the result of a suit filed against them, and no white man has been found who is willing to serve. 82.1 per cent of the population of Macon County is Negro. There are 1,800 white voters and 200 Negroes registered now. There are at least 2,000 additional Negroes awaiting to register.

As of last Tuesday, October 15th, the case for $5,000.00 damages and a declaratory judgment that all Negroes qualified under Section 181 of the Constitution, arising out of Macon County, was decided by the Supreme Court. The result of that holding is that all of the Alabama Negroes who can read and write can qualify and vote, not only in the general elections but in the Democratic primary as well, and that no registrar can refuse registration to them. This fact cannot be denied.

The passage of the Amendment will not prevent the registration of worthy Negroes. It will permit us to allow them registration as they become qualified to exercise the franchise, as we have been doing, and to stop mass registration, with its inevitable race friction and wholesale election debauchery.

Throughout the years we have worked out a way of living for the two races. It has been based on segregation. It has worked, in a State where the situation is necessarily explosive. It is evidenced by our separate schools, facilities in buses and trains, eating places and places of public assembly, zoning laws and in many other ways.

How can the opponents of the Amendment possibly contend that this system will continue where there is mass Negro registration and mass Negro voting?

The answer is presented by those States in which there are Negro minorities in the North. There the children are mixed together in schools, there is no segregation in residences, trains, buses, ball games, restaurants. The Northern Negroes, with their small but tight voting blocs, have brought this about there. How could it be prevented in Jefferson, with 43 per cent, in all Alabama with 35 per cent, in the 18 counties with a Negro majority, in some counties with a majority as high as six to one?

Those who contend that the Negro does not want the abolition of the segregation laws simply close their eyes to the facts; those who contend that with mass registration they cannot secure it simply do not know politics. Those who contend that mass registration does not mean mass voting deliberately overlook the history of Reconstruction and, in these days, the practices of the Negro minorities in the doubtful states, where both Republican and Democratic parties are anxiously trying to buy them or to keep them bought.

In the Alabama legislature, which makes your laws, the representation in the House is by counties, in the Senate by Senatorial districts, some of which, like Jefferson, consist of a single county. There are 106 House members, 35 Senate members. There are eleven senatorial districts which have a Negro majority, and several others in which the numbers are very close. There are eighteen counties in which there is an actual majority of Negroes, with seven more in which they constitute more than 40 per cent.

Inevitably, therefore, you will see eleven Senators and 31 House members of that race. And if any of the rules of politics work, you will see substantially more, since organized minorities always secure representation. In Jefferson, unless we can stop the rules from working, we should have four whites and three Negroes on our House delegation. Montgomery County will be represented by an entirely Negro delegation, both in the Senate and in the House, and the fine people of Montgomery, that lovely city and the proud capital of the Confederacy, will see a day of which they never dreamed. What chance do we have of maintaining our segregation laws with that complexion to our Legislature?

In the counties, of course those with Negro majorities will have county officers of that race. There are 18 of them. In the cities where Negro majorities are present, what is to prevent their taking over the city governments, with their police and fire departments? What is left then of the fine system of civil service, state and local, built up by us?

In the National picture, with the mass voting of this great bloc of unqualified persons, what Senator or Representative from Alabama will dare vote against FEPC and its kindred iniquities? Do the Senators and Representatives now vote against it who come from states and districts with strong Negro minorities? They do not; they vote to strike down the white Southerner, or they are defeated. What Senator or Representative will dare vote against Federal abolition of the poll tax; against the many other measures aimed at us?

The people in Alabama may have come to the decision that they want that amalgamation of the races which will in time come with the abolishment of segregation. There are men and women in both races sufficiently lacking in character to ignore the color line. There are enough to affect vitally, in our times, the character of our civilization and our social life. The people of Alabama may have come to this decision, but I doubt it. And by all means they should know the real issues when they vote on Nov. 5. Then, when they see the system under which they have lived collapse, their state the scene of racial conflicts and bitterness, their public officials the type of men who will compromise with all they hold dear, the electorate of Alabama cannot say that they were deceived. Unless I am grievously mistaken, that time will come, should the Boswell Amendment be defeated.

A point to remember is that this decision against the amendment is irrevocable. Given mass registration and the flood of new voters, those same new voters would defeat any attempt to change our registration sections to take their franchise away. A vote for the amendment is not irrevocable—if we want improvements or changes in the future, they can be made, by the same voters now registered.

The arguments against the amendment are skillfully presented. Let us see what they are.

It is claimed that those now registered would have to register. Section 36 of Title 17 of the Code of 1940 provides: "No person heretofore registered and no person hereafter registered shall again be required to register unless he or she changed the county of his or her residence."

True, Section 44 of Title 17 provides that persons who have become disqualified may be removed from the lists, but there is a provision for notice, hearing and appeal to a jury, and in the meantime, of course, the person remains on the lists.

There is absolutely nothing to justify this contention. It was referred to as "bunk" by the Chairman of the State Democratic Committee. It is bunk.

It is claimed that the registrars would have too much power and would refuse to register those with whom they disagreed. But a jury trial, without bond, is provided by law, with appeals to the higher courts. This is all the protection needed for life or property. It is sufficient for the franchise, and the qualifications are no more than is required by any foreigner desiring to become a citizen. It is not generally understood, but there is absolutely no way in which the prevention of mass registration can be worked out without leaving discretion in the hands of the registrars. There is no more discretion left in their hands by the Boswell Amendment than is essential to achieve the result we must have.

Hit Alabama Amendment as Curb on Voting

Daily Worker
New York, N.Y.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 2.—A statewide conference of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, largest in recent Alabama history, was held here to lay plans for mobilizing Negroes in the state to fight the Boswell Amendment to the Alabama Constitution.

The amendment would give the appointed boards of registrars dictatorial powers over the registration of voters.

Sun 10-3-46

Seventy-five delegates, representing some 25,000 NAACP members in Alabama, denounced the amendment as an attempt to deny the right to vote "to thousands of American citizens of all classes, groups and stations of life."

The resolution, adopted unanimously, accused the reactionary leaders in public affairs of trying to break up the democratic alliance which brought about the nomination of James E. Folsom in the recent primary.

Democratic Executive Committee Majority Votes $3,500 Fund

MOBILE, ALA., Aug. 26.—(AP)—Forty-five of the 72 members of the Alabama State Democratic Executive Committee have approved the use of $3,500 in party funds to campaign for adoption of the Boswell amendment, Party Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey reported today.

On the basis of a poll among committee members which closed last Thursday at noon, the committee chairman said 63 members had voted for a Democratic primary in the Eighth Congressional District.

On the controversial Boswell amendment issue, McCorvey said 45 of the 53 ballots received endorsed the use of party funds for the campaign for adoption of the amendment, which will come before Alabama voters on Nov. 5. The measure would tighten up requirements for voting in the State. Seven committee members voted against use of party funds for that purpose, McCorvey said, while one member declined to vote.

Three members of the committee took public stands last week against use of party money for that objective. They were James E. Faulkner of May Minette, John A. Caddell of Decatur and Dewitt Carmichael of Anniston.

The committee vote means that expenditure for a campaign on behalf of the amendment has been officially sanctioned, McCorvey asserted.

The committee chairman said plans were being made to hold the party primary to replace U. S. Representative John Sparkman, recently elected to the U. S. Senate, so the party would have a nominee ready when the Governor calls a special election.

filling the vacancy caused by the death of J. E. Sorrells.

The primary will be held Sept. 24 and the run-off, if necessary, Oct. 22.

Registration Practices

The News Birmingham, Ala. Wed.

Boards of registrars in Alabama, in the course of their prescribed duties of passing on qualifications of voters, have frequently stretched or ignored the law. They have at times acted willfully and unconstitutionally, disobeying both the state law and the state constitution. This they have done under present statutes. To what extremes might they go under the vastly wider power of the Boswell amendment? 9-11-46

Consider some of the affidavit-supported charges against Alabama boards of registrars:

Refused to qualify a school teacher on the grounds that she could not read and write.

Disqualified an applicant who could not name all the members of the United States Supreme Court.

Rejected an applicant who could not name all the representatives to Congress from Alabama.

Refused to consider applicants if all three registrars were not present, although the law says two members constitute a quorum.

Altered registration places without notice in order to confuse applicants.

Rejected an applicant who inadvertently omitted one minor word from a reading of the constitution.

Refused the vote to persons showing tax receipts on $300 worth of property, although the constitution says such are entitled to vote.

Refused to accept tax receipts on personal property, although the constitution prescribes ownership of that kind of property as one qualification for the franchise.

Demanded tax receipts for taxes due but not yet delinquent.

Asked applicants such questions as "Where would be the proper place for a candidate for the governorship to make his first speech?" when there is no legal justification for such procedure.

Told applicants not to write anything under "Remarks" on the application blank, although the space was provided for applicants in order that they could make supplementary statements in support of their applications.

Refused to tell applicants for registration why they were refused.

Arbitrarily disqualified applicants they did not examine or question.

Refused to permit examination of public records.

Demanded to know if the applicant was a friend of a named person who was obnoxious to a member of the board.

Most of such actions listed above could be construed as illegal. Certainly there is no justification in the present law for questions on the political knowledge of the applicant. Even if such questions were presently permissible, it is doubtful if any court would uphold as fair and equitable a demand that a voter must be able to name all the members of the United States Supreme Court.

But many other subtler methods Alabama boards of registrars have used to discourage applicants. Registrars take interminable lunch periods. They go out of their way to snicker at and ridicule applicants answering questions. They make applicants stand when seats are available. They tell applicants, falsely, that they have run out of application blanks. They alternate leaving the room on the most flimsy of pretexts in order to delay and postpone examinations. They do not consider applicants as they come, but compel some to wait long past their turn.

But why mention any more of the ways in which some registrars seek to limit the right to vote to those whom they want to have the right? Many registrars are today the most arbitrary and high-handed officials in Alabama. They are the supreme political hand-pickers of the state.

The Boswell amendment is designed to legalize many of the things boards of registrars have been doing illegally. But it will also permit them to engage in many questionable practices in that shadowy land between legality and justice. The power the amendment would give them is almost immeasurable.

Three specific changes in the law would be accomplished by the Boswell amendment:

1. It would eliminate entirely the property requirement which has been an alternative qualification for voters in Alabama.

2. It would demand that voters, in addition to being able to read and write, as required by the present law, also be able to "understand and explain" any article of the Constitution of the United States.

3. It would insert a currently new provision in the state constitution to the effect that "no persons shall be entitled to register as electors except those of good character and who understand the duties and obligations of good citizenship under a republican form of government."

In view of what some boards of registrars already do in Alabama, one wonders what the vaster powers of the Boswell amendment would give them license to do.

Under that amendment, a board could arbitrarily declare an applicant not of good character, and he would be compelled to go into court to prove otherwise.

Or a board could demand that an applicant define letters of marque, bill of attainder, general welfare, appellate jurisdiction, habeas corpus, ex post facto and other phrases in the constitution over some of which lawyers and courts have argued since the nation was founded.

Or a board could ask any question it wished concerning the organization of the government, its personnel and their duties. Or it could, with cover of legality, ask such stupid questions as the proper place in which a candidate for governor should make his opening speech.

The board's powers to refuse the ballot would be almost unlimited. It is a power that could be used in many ways. It could endanger the citizenship of any minority group in the state. Negroes, Catholics, Jews, foreign-born, organized labor, Socialists, war veterans, every minority element in the state's population could be effectively denied the ballot under the sweeping powers of the Boswell amendment.

In a previous article on this subject it was pointed out that the Boswell amendment would give Alabama the most reactionary and arbitrary registration laws in the nation. The Mississippi law in its severity approaches the Boswell amendment. In Mississippi, however, the applicant for the franchise is required to be able to read the federal constitution and to give a "reasonable" explanation of any part of it. But what constitutes a "reasonable" explanation? Wed. 9-11-46

In answer to that question, the U. S. Supreme Court ruled on an appealed case that it was within the province of local authorities to determine what was meant by a "reasonable" explanation. The provision, the court held, was not unfair if it was not unfairly administered. The burden of proving unfair administration rested upon the applicant, however, or fair administration was assumed.

In the light of that ruling by the Supreme Court and the present conduct of boards of registrars in Alabama, one shudders at the burden that might be placed upon would-be voters in Alabama. An applicant under the Boswell amendment could be barred from voting under a wide variety of reasons, or without the board's being required to give any but a vague and general reason. The applicant must then prove that he was treated unfairly. The barriers placed before him in that respect are almost insurmountable.

Could you name all the congressmen from Alabama? And if you couldn't, how would you go about convincing a court that that was an unfair question?

TWO CLASSES OF VOTERS

The News Birmingham Ala.

To the Editor of The News-Age-Herald:

In view of the fact that in the recent June 30 runoff election approximately 350,000 permanently registered voters participated, it seems highly important that Mr. McCorvey (father of the Boswell amendment) should be called upon to explain exactly what effect this amendment will have on this large number of voters who, according to our federal constitution, would not be disturbed or interfered with just as long as permanent registration continued to be provided for by law or custom, or regardless of how it is provided.

There could not be two distinctly different classes of voters, one of large numbers (350,000) allowed to remain secure and immune from the provisions of this amendment, and a new class of voters made subject to the provisions of a new law "which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States." Sun. 9-8-46

For the benefit of all concerned, here is the complete text, Article XIV, Section 1: "All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside. No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States."

On top of this is Section 1 of Article XV.

Mr. McCorvey surely must know that there could not be two classes of voters such as there would be unless permanent registration were suspended or discontinued and the entire electorate made subject to the provisions of this amendment and required to reregister. Otherwise, the first time a registrar undertook to make a prospective voter submit to the test Mr. McCorvey thinks so well of, the state could be sued.

The main point is, would the voters relish the idea of doing away with permanent registration, and having to register every two years, just to gratify Mr. McCorvey's burning desire "to come to the aid of his party" that happens to be mortally apprehensive of an expanding electorate?

Mr. McCorvey is skating on mighty thin ice. He cannot present a lucid, justifiable argument in defense of this brain-child of his, so he resorts to a militant effort to regiment the 2,500 elected precinct committeemen and to enlist the approximately 14,000 appointed election officials into a Fascist-like combination to influence the vote on this measure.

That is not the democratic way to go at it, and no one knows this better than Mr. McCorvey should know it.

AGAINST THE AMENDMENT

The News Birmingham, Ala. Sun. 9-8-46

To the Editor of The News-Age-Herald:

In The News there appeared an article from Mr. Wilkinson on "Negro Voting." In his advocacy of the Boswell amendment Mr. Wilkinson takes the position that the purpose of the amendment is to prohibit Negro voting. The writer would be far from taking issue and arguing the question with Mr. Wilkinson. He is a great lawyer. He was for some years my Sunday School teacher, and I enjoyed his teaching very much, but in his argument for the Boswell amendment he seems in some way to have his wires crossed.

The Boswell amendment, in my judgment, won't prohibit Negro voting any more than it will deprive hundreds of good, honest, intelligent white people of the right to vote. The amendment provides that those who register to vote must be able to read and explain any section of the constitution. Now, just as you find Mr. Wilkinson and myself differing on the purpose and the application of the Boswell amendment, we will find very few people who will give the same construction to any section of the constitution. I doubt very seriously if half the members of our boards of registrars would give the same explanation. Sun 9-8-46

Inasmuch as our Supreme Court judges often disagree on the application of different sections of the constitution, I doubt very much if Mr. Wilkinson (and I say this not to cast any discredit) could give an explanation of every section of the constitution that would satisfy every board of registrars.

Coming to the point, it appears to me that the Boswell amendment is an object of machine politics. Machine politics is the result of a desire to control. It is concocted behind closed doors and camouflages itself when it appears in public; just as this amendment whose supporters say will prevent the Negro from voting, but who don't tell you it will also disfranchise hundreds of white people.

I believe in an educated citizenship, but this we will never have by disfranchising a portion of our people. Educate the people, give them good government free from machine politics, and we will soon find we have an intelligent people whose desire is to make of our state a great state where each and everyone feels he is a part of a great commonwealth.

Machine politics is the opposite to the best interests of the people. Its desire is to dictate, and it will not hesitate to destroy any and all interest that does not coincide with objects and desires of the machine.

This being true, I will cast my vote against the Boswell amendment and for a great, intelligent electorate who will hold in their hands the ballot and in whose hearts there burns a desire to use that ballot for a better moral and spiritual life for all the people.

EVERY VOTER FOR HIMSELF

Editor, The Advertiser: The Advertiser

The majority of the voters in Alabama voted for Jim Folsom for governor for two reasons. One being that they were for his progressive program, the other being that they were tired of the big newspapers and big-time politicians dominating the affairs of state government. I sincerely believe that those of us who supported Jim Folsom will always be proud of it.

There is another matter before these same voters which is also very important to the welfare of the people of Alabama. The Boswell Amendment.

Any person of average intelligence can read and understand the Boswell Amendment. After reading it there is only one thing to do and that is carefully consider every point made in it and then let these points like Folsom point the way for you to vote in November. From this letter you might wonder how I am going to vote on this particular amendment. Well, I'll tell you, I'm going to vote as I doggone please and I hope every Demo-

We should not be influenced every the fact that Dick Rives and Jim Folsom are against it or that big operators like Horace Wilkinson and McCorvey are for it. THE BOSWELL AMENDMENT

Proponents of the Boswell amendment insist that it is intended to save "white supremacy." But they have yet to prove that "white supremacy" is in danger. Even in the Black Belt, for whose special benefit the amendment has been avowedly devised, Negro voters are scarce as hen's teeth. As Col. Rives has pointed out, the law as it stands has served very well the will of the people or the politicians with respect to suffrage. Why, then, this amendment to clothe with additional power registrars who have had no trouble preserving the status quo?

Recent decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States are supposed to explain the Boswell amendment. Those decisions had to do with the right of Negroes to vote in primaries. It is hard to get the connection. Obviously, the purpose behind the amendment is to restrict the Negro vote in primaries. But that vote is so small under the current law that it represents no menace, except in the eyes of professional Negro-baiters, who cannot abide even this situation.

Since it is being proposed that the property qualification be stricken to allow the use of arbitrary standards, one must conclude that Negroes have grown rich in sections of the state where they were traditionally poor. If that be true, the economic alteration should be welcomed instead of cold-shouldered. If it be true, it has not been reflected in any inundation of voting lists. Why must it be assumed that there is some new factor in the equation which justifies a constitutional amendment?

But, as has been pointed out by better men that this deponent, the vice in the Boswell amendment is that, though apparently aimed at the Negro, it could be used even more tellingly against whites. In a county where registrars dislike any organized group, it could be a weapon to keep members of that group from being first-class citizens. And there is little point to arguing that disgruntled applicants have the right of appeal. You don't enact laws on the assumption that the hardships they impose can be righted by appeal. Upon that theory a Legislature would adopt every proposal presented to it in the expectation that folly or wrong would be corrected somehow in the long run. 9-16-46

FOR A VERDICT OF "NO"

Editor, The Advertiser:

The Kiwanis Club of Montgomery rendered our people a real service Tuesday when it presented its timely and informative program on the subject of the Boswell Amendment. The speeches delivered—Mr. Horace Wilkinson's pro and Col. Richard T. Rives' con—should be required reading for every voter in the state. It is obvious from the controversial issues raised by the speakers that our voters face a great responsibility when they cast their ballots on this question on November 5.

In my opinion, the honors went overwhelmingly to Col. Rives. Mr. Wilkinson refused to consider seriously the legal questions involved in the Amendment, although he is an able lawyer. Instead he chose an appeal to rank prejudice by confining his remarks to a vicious attack upon the Negro race. This course is not surprising, however, to those who are familiar with the background of the Boswell Amendment, for on no reasonable ground can the proposed law be justified. Thurs. 9-19-46

Having damned the entire Negro race as being incapable of "voluntary cooperation" (whatever that may mean), Mr. Wilkinson went so far as to charge that it is impossible for the Negro to be a combat soldier (a charge which War and Navy Department records and history disprove), and concluded by calling upon the audience "for God's sake" to disfranchise the Negro. It has not yet occurred to me what connection our Creator could possibly have with the adoption of the Boswell Amendment. I submit that this futile attempt to becloud the issues indicates the desperation of the forces backing the proposed law.

Col. Rives, on the other hand, spoke with logic and intelligence. He clearly and concisely pointed out the true issues presented by the proposed Amendment. His premise was the fundamental principle that our government is one of laws and not of men. He showed that the Boswell Amendment would place arbitrary and unreasonable power in the hands of the Board of Registrars, thus violating this principle of our democracy. He forcefully submitted that our present laws are definite, reasonable and adequate. He refused to dodge the racial questions presented by Mr. Wilkinson, but stated firmly and courageously that we must face the problem of the Negro franchise with realism. He advocated that we accept our colored neighbors as registered voters freely as they become qualified under present laws. The forces of progress owe a debt of gratitude to Dick Rives for his straightforward stand on such an unpopular issue. It is high time that we all face this problem squarely and intelligently.

Col. Rives has stated the case well. I believe the verdict of the electorate in November will be "NO."

FOR THE BOSWELL AMENDMENT

Editor, The Advertiser:

On Nov. 5, 1946, the Boswell amendment will be ratified, or it will be defeated. Its language and its meaning have been discussed recently so fully, pro and con, that I shall not now deal with that phase of the question. I want to deal with consequences.

If it is adopted, few, very few negroes will register. For each applicant for registration must satisfy a Board of Registrars that he is able to understand and explain any article of the Constitution of the United States; that he is of good character; and that he understands the duties and obligations of citizenship under a republican form of government. Admittedly, these requirements are high; but not too high, if it takes that to guarantee White Supremacy. Lower them, and our plight is that of hapless Georgia where about 140,000 Negroes are now registered.

To defeat the Boswell amendment is to lower the registration level to that prescribed by section 181 of the present Constitution. Under it about 6,000 Negroes can legally register now in Wilcox County, while we have only 2550 whites registered, AND NOT ONE NEGRO. Defeat the Boswell amendment and Lowndes and Greene Counties can legally register four times as many Negroes as whites; Macon and Dallas twice as many; Montgomery and Barbour 40 per cent; Jefferson County 30 per cent;

We are not naive enough to believe that we in the Black Belt can continue to hold the line against an onrushing black horde without a change in our fundamental law; especially, when we realize that horde is spurred on by radicals in the North, aided and abetted by some of our leading daily newspapers, and (I blush for Alabama when I say it) a U. S. Senator named Hill, Lister Hill. The man who at Arley this week sought to array class against class; the man who said, in substance, that this amendment was supported by big corporations who would "milk Alabama and give nothing in return"; the man who listed Alabama Power Co., as one of such corporations, and yet its President, Tom Martin, says he has never read it, never discussed it; therefore does not know whether he is for it or against it. Thurs. 9-19-46

We in the Black Belt need the help today of every white person in Alabama; I plead for that help. I say to you solemnly: our only hope for white supremacy; our only hope for peace; our only protection against a race war is in the adoption of this amendment.

"TOO REACTIONARY"

Editor, The Advertiser:

It is now evident that it is not a question of whether or not the Boswell Amendment will be defeated, but a question of the number of the majority of votes which will be cast against it. This amendment is too reactionary to be approved by the people of Alabama in their present mood.

VETERANS AND THE AMENDMENT

To the Editor of The News: The News

In the four-page letter being circularized by the State Democratic Executive Committee over the signature of Gessner T. McCorvey, chairman, it is graciously admitted that, "while a number of splendid citizens have expressed opposition to this proposed amendment to our constitution, yet we think that most of them are doing so because they have not studied the matter sufficiently and do not realize the danger which confronts us." In conclusion, however, the letter states, as quoted herewith, that "the principal part of the opposition comes, of course, from four sources." These, of course, are a motley crew that are the "strange bedfellows" of the aforementioned "splendid citizens." Briefly, they are those who are hell-bent on social equality, who would mongrelize the white race; those "who spend their time berating everything south of the Mason and Dixon line"; the FEPC'ers; "the Communist groups" and, last but not least, "the Republican Party." Certainly politics does make strange bedfellows. And that prompts one to wonder. Out of whose well-feathered beds do the Koo Koos krawl these kool September mornings?

These are all minorities, but not all we have. There is one particular minority that common sense tells me the machine political ringmasters keep discreetly in the back of their minds, while they are making their all-out appeal to prejudice as set forth in the Boswell amendment, and laid bare in the letter the State Democratic Executive Committee is now circulating. Birmingham Ala.

There should be no beating around the bush about this, and as for my part there will be none, for the simple reason that the committee invites the veterans of our wars (and I am one of them—vintage of 1898) to place in the hands of the state's politically-appointed registrars the power to say whether they—as well as other minorities—can or cannot exercise their right to suffrage.

It has always been claimed that there is safety in numbers, and from the voters' point of view this holds true, but from the machine politician's point of view the opposite holds true. In their case, safety lies in the smallest possible number of voters, especially under a one-party political system such as the one presided over by the State Democratic Executive Committee. Fri. 9-20-46

"Wherever there is an interest and power to do wrong, wrong will generally be done, and not less readily by a powerful and interested party than by a powerful and interested prince."—Madison to Jefferson, 1788.

This is one of those occasions when it is far better to be safe than to be sorry, and I sincerely urge every veteran to sit tight over his own rights, privileges and immunities and to delegate no part of them to the political interests. The larger the vote, the less the political corruptionists like it. I shall vote against the Boswell amendment.

TAKING AWAY DEMOCRACY

To the Editor of The News:

I am not old enough to vote. However, I am an American and I have the right to express my opinion. I would like to do so concerning the Boswell amendment.

This amendment is a menace to pure democracy. It tends to take away one of the basic principles of democratic government. That principle is the right of the citizen to suffrage. It tends to make even stronger the walls which divide the white and Negro races. It tends to destroy democratic government.

At the call of war, was the Negro denied the right to fight for his country? It made no difference then how we were labeled. Then we were united to defeat a common enemy. There are some of us who haven't experienced the actual scenes of war. We have not heard the white soldier and the Negro soldier screaming alike from wounds. We have not seen the battlefields with their rivers of human blood—of white blood and Negro blood flowing together in a common stream, shed for a common purpose. Thurs. 10-10-46

Perhaps we have not realized that we are all fundamentally the same, that we all desire the same things—peace and security, the right to voice our opinion, the right to vote as we choose and to preserve the precious gift of human rights given us by our forward-looking forefathers. Perhaps we have not realized that intolerance is ignorance and that it leads only to war and chaos.

Before election day we must study this amendment carefully. We must lay away prejudice and study it with understanding and tolerance. We must sense its danger to a democratic form of government. Above all we must defeat it and remove such thoughts from our minds.

DEMOCRATS AND DEMOCRACY

To the Editor of The News: News

You are to be commended for your stand against the Boswell amendment. The Democratic Party has disfranchised enough good people in Alabama and the South. If this thing goes on, before long nobody can vote in Alabama but college graduates and millionaires. News

I would suggest that the leaders of the party go down to Montgomery and go into the Capitol Building and turn the faces of George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, Andrew Jackson and Woodrow Wilson to the wall and hang crepe on the rest who called themselves Democrats. Then let the Legislature pass a resolution changing the name of the Democratic Party to something more appropriate. Birmingham Ala.

As far as the colored people are concerned, any Negro who votes the Democratic ticket in any state of the Union ought to be disfranchised. In the North and East the Democrats have but one party.

We have 150,000 white people in Alabama who cannot vote today because of an old, out-of-date poll tax law here. Any man who takes such his gun and fights to defend this country in time of war, and at the same time pays taxes to support this government, should have the right to vote, regardless of whether he ever spent one day in school or regardless of his race. That is democracy.

Alabama (Boswell A mendment)

THE LINES ARE DRAWN

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

In many ways the heralded meeting Tuesday between Dick Rives, of Montgomery, and Horace Wilkinson, of Birmingham, before the Kiwanis Club, was important in Alabama politics. Their opposing statements on the proposed Boswell Amendment, to be voted on November 5th, set the pattern for what promises to be the most heated political contest over an Alabama constitutional amendment in many a year.

If there had been any doubt as to public interest in the question, it was settled by the crowd that overflowed the Jefferson Davis Hotel's ballroom. Nor were they all Montgomery people. They came from many counties in Alabama, both men and women. Every seat was taken, and many latecomers stood. Wed. 9-18-46

There was blood-stirring power in each of the speakers. The listener felt that here a fundamental American issue was being fought out in the American way — by the presentation of facts to the voters who will decide, Yes or No.

Mr. Wilkinson, short, heavy, a bulldog in force and tenacity, led off with a sentence that well summarized his speech. "I shall support the Boswell Amendment because I think it will help prevent the Negro from voting in Alabama."

All the rest was a development of that statement, the one simple argument by which proponents of the Boswell Amendment hope to place it in the Constitution of Alabama during the Year of Our Lord, 1946.

Mr. Wilkinson used all the stops in playing his symphony of hatred. He claimed that defeat of the Boswell Amendment would open the way to communism, intermarriage of the races, and ultimate Negro menace to free American government.

In short, Mr. Wilkinson attempted to make the question merely—"Do you or do you not want to turn Alabama over to the Negroes." By that distortion of the issue, he and other leading proponents of the Boswell Amendment are endeavoring to make the people of Alabama move backward into the 19th century.

Richard Rives opened with a sentence that likewise well summarizes his speech. "My opposition to the Boswell Amendment," he said, "is based upon principle, a principle fundamental to a democratic form of government, namely that ours is a government of laws and not of men."

Rives demonstrated that Alabama for nearly 50 years has been operating under the present Constitution without threat to white control of Alabama politics. He quoted official figures from 1942—the latest available—to show that Negro voters constituted less than one per cent of the total. Why, then, he asked, should we change the fundamental law of Alabama?

The proposed requirements for registration — "good character," "ability to understand and explain the constitution," and a knowledge of the "duties and obligations of good citizenship under a republican form of government"—all, he said, "are as sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal, just a lot of legalistic mumbo jumbo really meaning that the Amendment would give the Boards of Registrars arbitrary power to register or refuse to register any prospective voter."

If we are to have a government of laws and not of men, Rives said, then we "must keep the tests of the right to vote simple and definite, and we should not vest such arbitrary power in any man or group."

Consequences of the Boswell Amendment, he showed, would be a threat "alike to the white man and to the black." Sometime in the future, "an ambitious governor, a man greedy for power," might use his already enormous powers to get control of the registrars and get them to do his bidding.

"From the viewpoint of extremists in various camps, liberals and reactionaries, labor unionists and industrialists, wets and drys, Democrats and Republicans, their opponents might not be of 'good character' and 'understand the duties and obligations of good citizenship. . . .' The political leanings of the registrars might well determine who would be allowed to register, especially if a hotly contested election were at hand. Arbitrary power is no respecter of persons. The chains we forge to shackle qualified Negroes can be used to keep the white voters of Alabama from walking to the polls."

Rives declared that if the voting standard must be raised, the test "should be definite; and to comply with the Constitution of the United States, it should be applied fairly and impartially to all applicants . . . that is our only sound course." 9-18-46

In closing, he touched the note of statesmanship for which the whole world is hungry. "The problems presented by the two races living so closely together will be with us through this generation and through generations to come," he said. "Those problems, if approached in a Christian spirit by men of good will in both races, can, I believe, be solved, but the kind of arbitrary power sought by this Amendment will destroy confidence and be an effective hindrance to any just and lasting solution."

Thus Alabama is presented with the alternatives: To march ahead as men of good will, as we have been doing under present laws since the turn of the century; or turn back the pages of history, fan the flames of hatred, and make a mockery of democracy at a time when democracy needs its every strength in the battle for world survival.

THE BOSWELL AMENDMENT

The News

To the Editor of The News:

The Boswell amendment is not only undemocratic but strikes at the foundations of our civilization. While the peoples of other countries riot and struggle in efforts to obtain the right of suffrage, our people vie with each other in efforts to take the right of suffrage from themselves.

Under our federal and state constitutions, the people, by their ballots, can abolish any oppressive measure and obtain any change in their government in a peaceful, lawful and constitutional manner, while in countries where suffrage is restricted their only means of obtaining relief from unjust, arbitrary and oppressive laws and rulers is by rioting, violence and bloody revolution. Thomas Jefferson said, in effect, the way to correct public evils is to give the people more power, not to limit their power. Inform the people and trust them. Birmingham, Ala.

It is admitted by the advocates of the Boswell amendment that their purpose is to violate the federal constitution. We have suffered too much by excusing public officials for violations of their oaths of office or broken promises as "just politics."

I have always supported measures that would promote our public educational system; but I do not agree with those who insist on an educational qualification to vote. Millions of people deprived of educational advantages are better qualified to vote than thousands of our so-called best educated people. They feel and experience the hardships and suffering from unjust and oppressive laws and conditions, while too often the highly educated only theorize, never having experienced or felt their oppression. Wed. 10-9-46

I believe that the right of suffrage should be restricted only by age and conviction of crime involving moral turpitude. Rather than lock the door against voters, every citizen should be required to vote as a public duty, just as managers of elections, jury, military and other public duties.

My father refused to sign the Constitution of South Carolina because of a provision like the Boswell amendment. He and Sen. B. R. Tillman almost came to blows in the convention over it. Later Sen. Tillman publicly admitted that it disfranchised about half the number of worthy white people, who found that a law that could be used against Negroes could just as easily be used against them.

HOW TO QUALIFY VOTERS

The News

To the Editor of The News:

After a recent letter of mine concerning the proposed Boswell amendment appeared in the "Voice of the People," I was the flattered recipient of an envelope from Gessner T. McCorvey containing a mass of cleverly constructed propaganda designed to make gullible people of this state vote themselves out of the right to vote. This deluge of propaganda smacked sickenly of Bilbo and Talmadge with the words "white supremacy" attracting the eye in bold-faced type. It seems that unscrupulous politicians have found those two words to be the "open sesame" to public office as well as a means by which to control public elections. By shouting white supremacy they attempt to steer the voters' mind away from their shady past or their inability to make sensible laws. Birmingham, Ala.

If Mr. McCorvey would go before the State Legislature and advise the interim committee as to what changes are advisable in our present educational laws and appropriations instead of our election laws, he would be closer to the root of the evil. If the laws of this state were amended to provide a sufficient number of schools and decent pay for teachers, there would be no question of educational qualifications for voting. Tues. 9-24-46

I might remind Mr. McCorvey that no one asked me if I could interpret the Constitution of the United States at the reception center when I was inducted into the Army for the purpose of defending the United States.

THE BOSWELL AMENDMENT

Birmingham, Ala. The News

To the Editor of The News:

The proposed "Boswell amendment" begins to blossom in the minds of thoughtful citizens as a much more serious proposition than was at first anticipated by Alabama voters.

The political trend of mind as exemplified in recent statewide campaigns is quite convincing that the day of the political ringmaster and dictator is rapidly passing into oblivion. Liberal-minded citizens, who seem now to be decidedly in the majority, are more alert than ever before and will not stand idly by while self-seeking politicians wrest from them their inalienable rights of citizenship.

A constitutional requirement that a person must be able to "read and explain the constitution" is too silly even to the mind of a moron to be in the least degree amusing. I dare say that if a poll were taken of the members of the various boards of registrars throughout the state on the question, "What is the meaning of the 14th amendment?" not 10 per cent of them could even tell you what the 14th amendment is. I doubt if 10 per cent of the population of Alabama has ever read the constitution or would know where to look for a copy of it if they had need for it.

Before we adopt the Boswell amendment, why not include the constitution in our public school texts? After our graduates have been thoroughly versed in its provisions we might reasonably require an explanation of its contents as a prerequisite to the voting privilege; provided, however, boards of registrars have first stood an examination before a thoroughly qualified board of constitutional authorities and made an acceptable grade. Until political ringmaster methods, political slush funds and political bribery have been completely eliminated, masses of Alabama potential voters would have about as much chance for registration as an American airman before a Japanese court-martial: Wed. 8-28-46

"Give the people light and the people will find their way." "Let them know the truth and the truth will make them free."

May The Birmingham News-Age-Herald and other newspapers of like mind continue to shed light on this vital question.

and social equality leads to intermarriage. Political and social equality are only a means to the end with the Negro. That end is intermarriage. This is made clear by an article in a recent issue of The Negro Digest by G. A. Borgess, in which the writer, in a discussion of the "color problem," said:

"Any step forward in the field of political and social equality, however desirable and imperative, is merely a palliative as compared with the final remedy. Tues. 9-3-46

"Nothing will be conclusively done until all is done. All will be done only when the bedrooms open and the two bloods mix freely in many marriages, free from blame and bane.

"If science is trying hard, and hopefully, to contrive an artificial heart, I would be at a loss to understand why it should be overbearing or nonsensical to exact from science the lesser miracle of an artificial skin. There should be some means, by inoculation or rays or other nondescript process, to discolor the Negro. . . . A proposition of this kind should be the leading thought of humanitarianism and science in their next phase of growth. . . . Mixed marriages would be insured against racial nemesis by the knowledge that the treatment that was inexpensive and successful for the parent will be no less so for the progeny, with other and less definite differential characteristics of the races merging by-and-by much more easily in the multiple miscegenation of the border zones. This would make a substantial and positive—not nominal, not utopian—bequest by us to children and grandchildren. The color line should blur almost past recognition in the course of the very next generations."

We who support the Boswell amendment oppose the objective mentioned in the article quoted.

Your charge that the Boswell amendment empowers registrars to arbitrarily disfranchise white people is not well founded. If it were true, it would be no obstacle to the adoption of the Boswell amendment, inasmuch as any person not qualified by the registrar has a right to appeal to a jury without giving security for costs and without hiring a lawyer, and have a jury find whether or not he should be registered.

Those who oppose the Boswell amendment manifestly and obviously evidence a lack of confidence in the right of trial by a jury. That is one of the priceless privileges of every Alabamian. Every child attending school has to stand an examination to satisfy the teacher that it knows enough to be advanced before it can be promoted. Your criticism of the Boswell amendment which confers a similar power on a board of registrars to find out whether a voter knows enough to be entrusted with a ballot means you would relieve the adult Negro of conditions imposed on a 7-year-old child.

Since when has The Birmingham News become so distrustful of the right of trial by a jury?

Do you advocate conferring a franchise on anyone who does not understand the duty and responsibility of good citizenship under a republican form of government?

Perhaps The News advocates universal suffrage. Perhaps you advocate allowing the criminal, insane, the feeble-minded and immature youths to shape the policies of our state by their ballots. If you do not advocate universal suffrage, why discriminate against this large group of unfortunates in favor of a group who do not even understand and appreciate the duties and responsibilities of good citizenship under a republican form of government? By opposing the Boswell amendment you necessarily advocate the amalgamation of the races. By expressing your opposition to the Boswell amendment as you have expressed it you necessarily show a contempt for the right of trial by jury. By your cartoon you furnish evidence that you believe the Negro superior to the white man and far in advance of the white man in some ways. This causes me to wonder why you do not renounce your American citizenship and move to Liberia, the Negro nation in Africa whose constitution provides that only Negroes can vote.

Perhaps I am wasting time arguing with a newspaper that claims that the Ethiopian is better than it is. The newspaper knows more about itself than I do.

Loyal Opposition

The fight over the Boswell amendment has become an intra-party fight among the Democrats of Alabama. Any hopes that may have been held by supporters of the dangerous legislation to make the issue a straight partisan affair with all loyal Democrats aligned behind the amendment have been dissipated. The final blow has been delivered by the organization of a state committee of Democrats to lead the fight against the proposal to tighten up on voter qualifications. Birmingham News 9-10-46

Heading that committee is Richard T. Rives, Montgomery lawyer, supporter of James E. Folsom for governor in the May and June primaries, campaign manager of the late Gov. Bibb Graves, and a man looked upon by Atticus Mullins, veteran political writer of The Montgomery Advertiser, as "the most powerful and one of the sanest figures . . . in Alabama politics." Others associated with him in this fight for a better democracy include Harry M. Ayers, publisher of The Anniston Star, a delegate to national Democratic conventions; Charles G. Dobbins, editor of The Montgomery Advertiser and former president of the Alabama Press Association; R. R. Wade, president of the Alabama Federation of Labor; Mrs. Albert Thomas, Auburn, past president Women's Joint Legislative Council of Alabama, and Henry McDaniel, a prominent lawyer of Black Belt Demopolis. Alabamian

Behind this group, largely unorganized, but steadily becoming more vocal and coherent, are thousands of other Alabama Democrats. They are loyal members of the party. Consistently they have supported the party in national elections and its nominees in state elections. But they see the danger that exists for democracy in the Boswell amendment. They oppose the efforts of a group of party leaders to foist upon the people of Alabama a system that could spell political discrimination against every minority in the state, whether it be racial, religious, political or economic. Tuesday

Opponents of the Boswell amendment are not disloyal to the party. Rather they, and not the supporters of the amendment, are the more loyal to the principles of the party. They are the closest followers of Thomas Jefferson, who said that he knew of "no safe depository of the ultimate powers of society but the people themselves, and if we think them not enlightened enough to exercise their control with a wholesome discretion, the remedy is not to take it from them, but to inform their discretion by education." They know that the Boswell amendment, under the guise of saving democracy in Alabama, would weaken democracy here and in the nation and in the world.

The call from the anti-Boswell committee is a call to genuine democracy. It is a call to rescue the party from those members of it who apparently do not recognize that they could kill the party through limiting it too closely, who do not see that by hand-picking voters they would ultimately destroy the very principles of the party. 9-10-46

This is a fight within the Democratic Party to protect the highest principles of democracy. And those who oppose the Boswell amendment are on the side of right.

The Date's The Thing

The Times Birmingham, Ala.

Many are the signs encouraging hope that the Boswell amendment will be rejected on Nov. 5. The brilliant leadership of Richard T. Rives, who has thrown himself into the fight with all the fervor of a crusader, has been reenforced by the position which men like Sen. Hill and Gov.-Nominate Folsom have taken. The real meaning of this proposed constitutional change is becoming clear to most Alabamians. It seeks to revive requirements which the constitutional convention of 1901 refused to approve. It seeks to impose on the state's future the heavy handicaps and tensions of prejudice and fear. Sun. 10-6-46

One phase of the great argument in connection with this amendment has to do with the point raised by Mr. Rives touching the effect such a change could have upon the right to vote of persons already registered. Mr. Rives has contended from the outset that the amendment looks to giving registrars sweeping and arbitrary authority. With that premise, he now directs attention to the fact that the amendment has as its effective date Jan. 1, 1903. He directs attention, furthermore, to the law requiring that the voting lists be purged every two years for reasons, among others, contemplated under the amendment. What is, therefore, Mr. Rives asks, to prevent registrars from using their authority to strike the names of those who do not or cannot qualify under the new tests of the Boswell amendment?

The suggestion has been spurned by supporters of the amendment, but Mr. Rives' reasoning is persuasive. It is now proposed, he maintains, that, after Jan. 1, 1903, registrants must be able to "understand and explain any article of the Constitution of the United States" and must be persons "who are of good character and who understand the duties and obligations of good citizenship under a republican form of government." If the registrars are in a position to apply these tests to those who apply after Nov. 5, 1946, why can't they do so with reference to everybody else who has registered since Jan. 1, 1903? Under the law, they would have the power to take this course. On what ground is it to be assumed that they will not use their power?

That is the way it appears to many laymen and since Mr. Rives is an outstanding member of the Alabama bar there seems to be good legal basis for scrutinizing the date of this amendment. This may look like making a great ado about a technicality. But where the right of suffrage is involved, the most precious democratic right is involved. If the Boswell amendment expressly deals with the right to register of all persons since Jan. 1, 1903, it might imperil the standing of voters now on the lists. In view of all other flaws, is not the effective date a clinching reminder of the unworthiness of this amendment?

PRAYER FOR INTEGRITY

Editor, The Advertiser: The Advertiser

This morning a letter has come to me asking this question, "Is not the world in the condition it is in largely because 'those who pray will not face issues and those who face issues will not pray'?" A general statement of course, but one which seems pertinent in thinking of the Boswell Amendment. Centering around our churches are the largest groups of praying people, and yet with few exceptions a question like this amendment is altogether without the area of discussion for church groups. "It might be controversial"—therefore we cannot even pray together about it. Montgomery, Ala.

To many of us the Boswell Amendment is not so much a political issue as it is one of moral integrity. In reconstruction times our fathers took action which they thought to be necessary to maintain their way of life. We feel that they did what they believed to be right, but ways of life change and their South is not our South. Moreover, we have placed ourselves before the world as the champion of democracy. We have taught our children to give allegience to "one country, united, with liberty and freedom of all;" at the same time we have connived to undermine our constitution and have given freedom through education to part of our children at the expense of the children of those to whom we have denied the right to vote. Sun. 10-20-46

And now at this time when more than ever before we are seeing that moral integrity is the only foundation upon which peace in any area can be built, we undertake to strengthen the pattern of deception we have practiced.

Might it not be that if those who pray, could pray together for wisdom to face the issues and strength to see them through, there would come for us a greater willingness to act for the good of all and a clearing away of those fears which have so beset us.

Negroes To Pray For Boswell Plan Defeat

The Advertiser

MOBILE, ALA., Oct. 30—(AP)—The Negro Baptist Ministers' Conference, of Mobile, today set aside Sunday, Nov. 3, as a date of prayer for defeat of the Boswell amendment to tighten up on voter qualification.

In an appeal to "the white religious constituency" of the State, the conference labeled the proposal "wicked and unjust" and said if passed it could be used to deprive any citizen of his political rights regardless to race, religion or any other reason if desired. Montgomery, Ala.

"We regard being so ungodly in principle, that we are appealing to the religious leaders and church folk, and every one who has an idea of justice and fair play, to use their influence in defeating the passage of this cruel instrument, which would make this amendment as possible for those in authority to keep any citizen from using his Godgiven rights." Objections To Boswell Amendment

Birmingham, Ala.

An Editorial in The Montgomery Advertiser

There are several amendments to the State Constitution to be considered by the Alabama electorate next Fall. One of them is the Boswell Amendment. That amendment was frankly designed to make it more difficult for voters to register. The present registration law requires, among other things, that the prospective voter be able to "read the Constitution of Alabama." The proposed amendment would require that a prospective voter be able to both "understand and explain" the Constitution.

In early January a resolution was passed, unanimously if memory serves, by the State Democratic Executive Committee endorsing the Boswell amendment. This was done following action of the committee to eliminate the specification, "white" in the call for the present primary, a move designed to make Alabama's primary conform to a decision of the Supreme Court.

Richard T. Rives, an able and respected member of the Alabama bar, recently took a hard and long look at the Boswell amendment and decided that upon close inspection it did not look so good. He urged its defeat next Fall.

Next Fall is a long time off but it still would be a good idea for Alabama's political leaders and thoughtful citizens to take another look at the Boswell amendment and carefully weigh some of the points made by Mr. Rives.

These are the major objections to the amendment as seen by Mr. Rives:

First, the amendment would give to the board of registrars virtually unlimited right to refuse to qualify any prospective voter who did not please them. (Who is to say what a proper "explanation" of the Constitution might be?)

Second, because the obvious intent of the amendment is to keep Negroes unfranchised, then the way would be opened for endless court actions of a most sensitive sort. It would serve to keep feelings on both sides rubbed raw and would inevitably breed bad feeling between the races.

Third, it would open the way for taking these certain-to-come court actions directly to the Federal Courts because of the discriminatory intent of the amendment. At present all court actions concerning registration of primary voters must first pass through the State courts. age Herald

Fourth, due to the certainty of such actions and the fact that individual registrars would be responsible for any damages awarded, it would soon become difficult if not impossible to get responsible citizens to serve as registrars. Wed 4-24-46

Fifth, even though the amendment was designed primarily to make it difficult for Negroes to register, it could become a weapon in the hands of unscrupulous registrars to further their own political purposes by denying registration to any and all who did not suit their political taste.

To those The Advertiser could add several objections of its own, but for the moment perhaps it will serve if Alabama's voters and political leaders give thought to those carefully reasoned objections raised by Mr. Rives.

It is a long time until next Fall but before the voting time comes, this issue will be much more thoroughly aired here and elsewhere.

Rives Attacks Boswell Plan, Cites Court Appeal System

the Montgomery Ala. Advertiser Sat. 4-20-46

The Boswell amendment to tighten voter qualifications in Alabama would "encourage Negroes to go to court to enforce their right to vote," says Richard T. Rives, Montgomery lawyer and former president of the Alabama Bar Association.

The amendment, sponsored in the 1945 legislature by Rep. E. C. Boswell of Geneva, would eliminate the present $300 property ownership clause from the State constitution and would require prospective voters to be able to "understand and explain" any section of the Federal basic law.

At present they only are required to read the constitution.

The proposed change would give too much authority to boards of registrars, Rives said, adding:

"If we are to retain a government of laws and not of men, we should retain our present simple and definite tests of voting qualifications, and should not vest much arbitrary power in any group of men."

Under the amendment it would be up to the registrars to determine whether an applicant successfully explains the constitution.

Court action, the speaker said, "inevitably breeds bad feeling between the races."

Urging careful study of the measure, Rives declared it was "high time for the citizens of Alabama to bestir themselves and defeat the . . . amendment."

The speaker warned that the adoption of the measure would give opponents of Alabama registration laws strong argument in the United States Supreme Court to strike down Alabama's entire registration system.

He pointed out that a prospective voter can resort now to the Federal courts only after he has carried appeals through all state courts. Sat. 4-20-46

"But this rule," he said, "applies only when the state law itself does not work a discrimination."

"With the Boswell amendment designed to permit arbitrary discrimination, I apprehend that the United States Constitution would hold that an applicant denied registration might at once sue in the Federal courts without first appealing to the state courts and then to the State Supreme Court."

"Thus we might lose the power of our own state courts to pass on our own state laws, one of the most valuable prerogatives. . . ."

He further warned that with registrars subject to suits for damages in the Federal courts, "good and responsible men and women will hesitate to serve as registrars."

In discussing the possibility of increased numbers of Negro registration suits, Rives said that separate registration of voters in congressional elections would be "invited and encouraged."

Pointing to the provisions requiring an ability to understand and explain any article in the United States Supreme Court declared: Sat 4-20-46

"There are almost as many understandings and explanations of the Constitution as . . . of the Bible . . . No doubt Mr. Justice Black thinks that Mr. Justice Frankfurter does not properly understand and explain the Constitution, and Mr. Justice Frankfurter entertains the same opinion of Mr. Justice Black's understanding . . ."

Political leanings of the registrars might "well determine who would be allowed to register, especially if a hotly-contested election were at hand," the speaker continued.

"Unless the average citizen studies the issue calmly and informs himself thoroughly, blind prejudice will cause the amendment to be adopted," he said in closing. Sat. 4-20-46

Rives' address was sponsored by the Museum of Fine Arts Association. He spoke at the museum building.

The Boswell amendment will go before the voters in the November elections.

McCorvey Sees Trouble If Amendment Spurned

The Advertiser

MOBILE, ALA., Oct. 18.—(AP)—Declaring that resignations of registrars in Jefferson and Macon counties "reflect a very serious situation," Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey of the State Democratic Executive Committe today predicted others would follow unless the Boswell Amendment is adopted.

McCorvey said existing constitutional law provided in effect that anyone could register who could read and write and had a $300 tax assessment and that registrars had no choice but to register "practically every Negro who presents himself."

"With the Negroes outnumbering the white people approximately five to one in Macon County, a moron can see what is going to happen in that county if the board of registrars register every Negro over 21 years of age who can read and write, regardless of his fitness to vote intelligently on important public issues," he said in a statement.

"Macon County is not alone. There are something like 17 or 18 other counties in Alabama's Black Belt where the same situation exists." Montgomery, Ala.

McCorvey said the Boswell Amendment, requiring voters to "understand and explain" the Federal Constitution "would remedy all of this."

"It gives the registrars some discretion, and the registrars are not required, as they are under existing laws, to register practically everything that walks on two legs. Sat. 10-19-46

"I cannot understand how any Southerner with the traditions of our people can think of wishing to continue a situation such as exists in Macon County today, which can only result in trouble for the future."

McCorvey said that since the registration of the Macon County registrars recently, Governor Sparks had appointed some eight or ten registrars but all of them had declined the apointment, and that Negroes of the county were now demanding that Sparks appoint three Negroes.

Heflin Comes Out For Boswell Amendment

The News, Birmingham, Ala. Wed. 10-9-46

LAFAYETTE, Ala., Oct. 9—The proposed Boswell amendment to the State Constitution "will keep scores of ignorant, vicious Negro votes from being cast," J. Thomas Heflin, former United States senator, said in a telegram to The Birmingham News today.

"As one of the surviving delegates to the Constitutional Convention of 1901, I feel I should say a few words on the Boswell amendment," Mr. Heflin said.

"The Grandfather Clause in the Constitution of 1901 provided a way for every white man to vote. A different plan was provided for the Negro. It is not as full and complete as the plan suggested and provided in the Boswell amendment. That amendment will keep scores of ignorant, vicious Negro votes from being cast.

"No white man will be embarrassed by the Boswell amendment. It is purely and wholly in the interest of white supremacy. Sen. John T. Morgan, in the last speech he ever made in this state, said the day would come when a man would be elected president of the United States on the platform that 'This is a white man's country.'"

The Boswell amendment, to be voted on in the general election Nov. 5, would tighten voting qualifications so as to require applicants for the right to vote to be able to understand and explain any part of the Constitution.

Folsom Opposes Amendment

The News Birmingham, Ala

Some of Mr. Folsom's friends and well-wishers were puzzled a week or so back when he declined at that time to take a stand on the Boswell amendment. Knowing what he had stood for during the campaign and since, no one could conceive of his favoring the measure. He had courageously spoken against maintaining the poll tax; he had shown that he believed in widening the electorate; he had been supported by organized labor, and he had promised Negro leaders to do all he could to assure their people of equal economic and political opportunities. Yet for a time he refused to speak out strongly against the amendment that is designed to extend authority for further limitations on suffrage in Alabama. Thurs.

But on Tuesday in Birmingham he announced that he is opposed. He is not yet sure that he will make any further public announcement against the amendment, although he said that "it is possible" he may make a few speeches on the matter when he returns from his trip to California in two weeks. His statement was made incidentally in a routine interview. 9-26-46

It is true, however, that Mr. Folsom had said during his campaign that he did not approve the amendment. "I took my stand when it counted, when I was trying to get votes," he says. "I was not afraid of it then, and I am not afraid of it now."

So our next governor joins an ever-growing crowd of Alabama citizens who oppose the shackling provision that would put upon the people of the state the most reactionary voting restriction in all the nation. If Mr. Folsom would make the speeches he mentioned as a possibility with anything like the vigor of his campaigning, he could reach and influence many of the people who voted for him and who may not now fully understand the necessity of defeating the amendment in November.

Training Negro Nurses

The News Birmingham, Ala. Mon. 9-30

Recently Dr. Roy Kracke, dean of the Medical College of Alabama, announced the suspension of training of Negro nurses at Jefferson-Hillman Hospital until facilities for complete segregation were available. It is imperative that such facilities be provided at an early date. The health and welfare of this community long have been impaired by inadequate medical aid to Negroes. One major means of helping our Negro people to better health is the training of Negro nurses. Mon. 9-30-46

The Boswell Amendment

The News

To the Editor of The News-Age-Herald:

The increasing attention being paid to the amendment proposed by Mr. Boswell is evidence of the fact that the people of Alabama are very well aware that the measure is of vital importance, and that, if adopted, it would effect a fundamental and far-reaching change in our political system.

From any viewpoint the plan is regrettable. Its proponents must regret its necessity; its opponents must deplore its method. Whatever our private opinions on the subject of white supremacy, we must all regret the inevitable repercussions in the nation as a whole if we persist in placing upon the statute books such a bald assertion of racial inequality. There is little doubt that the amendment is unconstitutional and there is no doubt at all that it would be poor tactics. The Supreme Court and the federal government would justifiably react with vigor in suppressing such a defiantly reactionary violation of the 14th amendment. Birmingham, Ala.

If, however, the Boswellites have not yet learned that Alabama is a part of the United States and that the supremacy of the national will, whether we like it or not, was established permanently and irrevocably in 1865, they should at least understand that their proposal, far from helping, would prove a very great disservice to the cause of white supremacy. It would be a red tag to the PAC bull, it would outrage liberals everywhere, it would provide a "cause" for the parlor pinks, and it would bring down upon us a veritable avalanche of crusaders determined to save us from our sins and convince us of our iniquities. It would, in, short, produce the damndest nuisance since Sherman.

Although the above arguments are both cogent and imperative, they do not touch upon what is, in my opinion, the great danger inherent in the Boswell amendment. That danger is the concentration of unrestricted political power in the hands of an organized machine. Sun. 9-22-46

I am a small-town merchant. I regard the PAC about as fondly as the Egyptians regarded the seven plagues of Moses. I am about as much of a "left-winger" as Calvin Coolidge. I haven't agreed with Eleanor Roosevelt about anything since she said Hitler was a heel. I am not in favor of racial intermarriage, social equality or the revolt of the masses. And yet I unqualifiedly and sincerely and vehemently oppose the Boswell amendment.

I oppose this plan for some very conservative and common-sense reasons. In the first place, I do not believe that it is simply a measure to maintain white supremacy in Alabama. Its political possibilities are so abundant, it provides such a deadly and efficient weapon for machine politics, that I cannot accept the pious assertions that it is a high-minded and gratuitous gesture for our own protection. Even if the originators of this subtle scheme are naive enough to be blind to the potentialities of their own creation, I see no guarantee that their heirs in office would fail to perceive and grasp the opportunity to turn this product into a political Frankenstein. This is one gift horse which it behooves us to look straight in the mouth—its teeth are as false as a dime store diamond.

An examination of the possibilities of the plan serves to strengthen the conviction that the racial issues is a red herring designed to divert our attention from the real purpose of the bill. What Mr. Boswell proposes is simply to place in the hands of registrars appointed by the governor the power of determining a citizen's right to vote. The determination is to be made on the basis of the applicant's ability to read and interpret a portion of the Constitution of the United States.

This sounds deceptively simple. Yet for 150 years we have entrusted the task of interpreting the constitution to the Supreme Court—a body composed of the nine most astute and eminent legal minds in the United States. This court has not always been able to agree even within itself, but the public trust it has earned by its character and its efforts has maintained its superiority in its assigned field over both Congress and the president. Efforts to pack the court, to abrogate its power, have met with unanimous and vigorous opposition from the people as a whole, who regard it as the guarantor of their liberties and the bulwark of their freedom. Now Mr. Boswell suggests that we create in Alabama 100 or more small-town, small-time Supreme Court justices, each equipped with a power as important as any reserved to the court in Washington—the power of controlling the exercise of the most fundamental prerogative of the American citizen—the right to vote. Is this logical? Is it legal? Is it justifiable?

It might be well to remember something which the men who created this nation considered very carefully—the regrettable but obvious fact that liberty is based on and derived from law. Experience has clearly proven that while government, by its very nature, needs no protection from the individual citizen, the citizen very definitely needs protection from his government. This protection was provided for in the constitution by the establishment of a system of checks and balances, in which the three branches of the government were scrupulously set apart and assigned to their own functions. The deliberate purpose behind these provisions was to prevent an amalgamation of political power subject to no practical and immediate restriction. The Boswell amendment would abolish these checks, destroy the balance of power and unify the executive and legislative branches by the exercise of judicial privilege. To be specific, the governor would appoint registrars who would control the votes which would elect the Legislature and the governor. This would constitute a vicious circle of political power—a system of wheels within wheels in which the machinery of government would rotate on its own axis with a beautiful imitation of perpetual motion. In brief, the damn thing has no brakes.

Now the Boswellites will insist that their plan provides a check in the provision that a citizen turned down by the registrars could appeal to a jury. "Since when," asks Mr. Horace Wilkinson in a tone of righteous indignation, "has The Birmingham News become so distrustful of the right of trial by jury?" Since when, I ask in reply, has Mr. Wilkinson thought it right and proper for us to have to stand trial to establish the basic right of an American citizen? With this sort of specious reasoning, would it not be equally logical to require us to establish before a jury our rights to freedom of speech, to freedom of religion, to freedom of assembly, to all the rights which we have always fondly believed were derived from our God and granted by our government? I had thought, my dear sir, that these were the things I was fighting for during the late war. I had thought I had earned, for myself and for my fellow citizens, the right to enjoy these privileges without fear or favor—or trial by jury. If Mr. Boswell is right, then I am wrong. And if I am right, then Mr. Boswell is wrong. It's as simple as that.

Are the supporters of this scheme sincere in their avowals that the right of appeal constitutes a valid and effective check upon the power they covet? Or are they again talking with their tongues in their cheeks? It is difficult to believe that they can seriously maintain that granting to a law-abiding citizen the same right afforded to a law-breaking criminal is anything more than a none too subtle insult. It is even more difficult to believe that they do not realize all too well that this ridiculous provision would involve more trouble, delay and expense than the average citizen is either able or willing to afford. It is obvious that in 99 cases out of 100 the decision of the registrars would be, to all practical purposes, final.

The proponents of this plan have emphasized the fact that the state Legislature, by an almost unanimous vote, decided to submit the Boswell amendment to the voters in November. Apart from the simple truth that legislators, like the rest of us, are human and can err, this almost unanimous vote is readily understandable. Why shouldn't the "ins" be enthusiastic about a measure which would give them such an insuperable advantage over the "outs"? Why shouldn't they heartily approve a plan in which, with a little cooperation from the governor, they could create a hand-picked electorate ready to do their bidding or be disqualified? Under the Boswell amendment the incumbents could look forward happily to remaining in office until Gabriel blows the last reveille.

The Boswellites, with a cheery contempt for the facts of life, loudly proclaim that their opponents are "visionaries," "theorists" and "impractical do-gooders," while they themselves are practical realists. The truth is that the proposed amendment would require a confidence in the wisdom and probity of a multitude of minor officials that would test the simple faith of a 6-year-old child. Could anything be more "visionary" than the blithe assumption that these backwoods bureaucrats would possess the wisdom of Solomon and the discretion of John Marshall? Is it not a pure case of "theorism"—this happy hypothesis that these underpaid clerks would be automatically invested with the integrity of Cato and the honestry of Benjamin Franklin? And would it occur to the most "impractical do-gooder," as it does to these "practical realists," to entrust an untrammeled and unrestricted power to the very people most interested in abusing that power? It seems painfully obvious that, in this matter, the true realists are those who refuse to submit our future to the unchecked vagaries of human nature—those who insist, regretfully but logically, that there is nothing in our record as people in general and politicians in particular to justify throwing caution to the winds and trusting an unknown pilot to steer the ship of state on an uncharted course in shoal waters.

Speaking for myself, I say that the real issue in the Boswell amendment is not white supremacy, but machine supremacy. That there is no guarantee that an instrument devised to keep Negroes from voting cannot and will not be used to keep white people from voting. That this scheme would insure perpetual power for the next administration and deprive us of any legal recourse in effecting a change. That the end result would be political serfdom for all of us, white and black alike.

The Constitutional Convention of 1787 was unwilling to grant unbalanced, unchecked power to George Washington. I am certainly unwilling to grant that power to Jim Folsom. I have some inalienable rights, as a human being and an American citizen. Not the least of these rights is the privilege to cast my ballot for the candidates and the laws of my choice. I have no desire to relinquish that right to anyone, at any time, for any purpose. I think I would be an utter and complete fool to surrender the only weapon I have and throw myself on the uncertain mercy of politicians. And I frankly think that the people of Alabama will be equally foolish if they do not quickly and thoroughly destroy this transparent bid for potential tyranny. Lest we forget: "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

BOSWELL AMENDMENT, BY A NEGRO

To the Editor of The News: The News

Many citizens of Alabama, white and colored, thank you for uncovering the hidden aims and objectives of the much-discussed Boswell amendment to the Alabama Constitution. You, Sen. Hill, Mr. Rives, Mr. Clark Coleman, whose letter appeared in The News of Sept. 18, and all of the people who are saying no to the adoption of this undemocratic measure, are taking the proper course, and we trust that a majority of the Alabama electorate will follow you in helping to defeat this law. Birmingham, Ala.

The majority of the State Democratic Executive Committee claims that, through the adoption of this amendment, they seek, and will get, a more intelligent suffrage. If that is what they seek, all well and good, provided the scheme shall be applied to all citizens alike. Under this amendment all registrants are required to understand the constitution and be able to explain any paragraph to the satisfaction of the registrars. The applicants also must know and answer any historical data that the registrars care to ask them. The News says such amendment "gives the registrars sweeping power to prevent the registration of any person who may be in any way offensive to the registrars." It seems that, as this majority of the committee wants to "tighten up our registration laws," they mean to cut out or prevent the registration of such citizens as they do not want, whether such citizens be intelligent or illiterate, and vice versa if the registrars want them.

I remember quite well the year 1901, when the powers-that-be called a constitutional convention to revise the electorate (disfranchise the Negro) of Alabama. They made it very hard for any Negro in Alabama to register. However, a few came through the mill by answering hundreds of irrelevant questions (the writer was one of them). I have wondered ever since that time why those in authority in Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi and other states of the South don't want the Negro to vote or take any part in the government which rules over him, and do not want him to take part in any civic activities of the state. Without the ballot no one can be a full-fledged citizen of any state. Thurs.

The American white man, however, never fails to call on the Negro to come and help fight the wars and keep back the enemy from our shores. The Negro never fails to go. He is always willing to go to war, and fight like the devil when he gets there. He has helped this country fight in all of its wars. He has also helped to clear the forests, build the railroads and highways, to plant and raise the crops, and hundreds of other things to prove his worthiness for complete citizenship.

The Boswell amendment, if adopted, will not strengthen but weaken the democracy of our state. It will, in the minds of many, regardless of race, lower the standard of freedom as embodied in the American Constitution. So far as that bugaboo of so-called "social equality" is concerned, leading Negroes don't want it, wouldn't have it. 9-26-46

Dixon Calls For Ratification Of The Boswell Amendment

The News Birmingham, Ala.
Thurs. 10-17-46

Voters who cast ballots against the Boswell amendment Nov. 5 are inviting the removal of segregation, mass registration by Negro voters, control of elections by Negroes in a number of counties and "the loss of the way of life that your grandfathers gave you," former Gov. Frank Dixon warned a record turnout of Exchange Club members and their guests at the Redmont Hotel yesterday.

Those who want to live in Alabama under conditions that he said would exist with removal of segregation laws can easily attain this desire by voting against the Boswell amendment but in such case, Mr. Dixon indicated, he might buy a ticket for Brazil where he said a large number of Alabamians formed a colony when the carpetbaggers and scalawags had control of the state.

"What senator in a state with a 35 per cent Negro registration would vote against the Fair Employment Practices Committee?" Mr. Dixon inquired. "Do they in Northern states where Negroes vote in blocks?"

The former governor asked his audience if they didn't think there were "venal men" in Alabama who would trade traffic with Negro voters, if these conditions existed, just as he said they do in Northern states where Negroes vote in large blocks. Anyone who thinks otherwise is "naive," he asserted, just as anyone is "naive" who doesn't believe that Negroes would have power in the city hall, fire department and in the county government if the Boswell amendment is defeated.

THE FORMER GOVERNOR described as "childish trash" the idea that under the Boswell amendment registrars would indulge in purging of voting lists. He declared that whenever a registrar wants to purge a voter from the list the voter is given notice and has the right to appeal to a jury and then to higher courts.

"Just as much protection is given as to a citizen under indictment for murder," he declared.

Mr. Dixon warned his listeners that "mass registration will mean death and destruction of Alabama. He explained that he does not believe a man should be kept from voting just because his skin is black. He also expressed the belief that those who are not qualified should be given the opportunity to become qualified.

MR. DIXON POINTED OUT that there are 11 senatorial districts which have a Negro majority and several others in which the numbers are very close. There are 18 counties in which there is an actual majority of Negroes with seven more in which they constitute more than 40 per cent, he declared.

On the basis of this, Mr. Dixon argued, there will be 11 Negro senators and 31 House members of that race in the state Legislature. Jefferson County will be threatened with four whites and three Negroes in its House delegation, he predicted.

Montgomery County will be represented by an entirely Negro delegation, both in the Senate and the House, he added.

IT IS ESSENTIAL, Mr. Dixon argued, that the registrars be given some judicial power in order "to hold the line." There is no way on earth to stop mass registration without giving the registration board some discretion," he contended.

The Exchangeites — business executives and professional men— were further informed that a vote for the Boswell amendment is not irrevocable because it can be changed at any time in the future. But if the amendment is voted down, there will never be a chance of reviving it because the large Negro vote will never vote for a constitutional amendment tightening the registration laws. 10-17-46

Next Wednesday, the Exchange Club will hear an argument against the Boswell amendment from Charles N. Feidelson, contributing editor of The Birmingham News.

Heflin Urges State To Back Boswell Plan

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.
Thurs. 10-10-46

Former Senator Asserts Time Will Come When Change Will Be Needed

Former Senator J. Thomas Heflin, of LaFayette, in a statement favoring the passage of the Boswell Amendment says "The amendment will keep scores of ignorant, vicious Negro votes from being cast and no white man will be embarrassed.

The former senator is one of the few surviving members of the Constitutional Convention of 1901, the last held in Alabama, and was a young orator then whose talents finally called him to long service in both the House of Representatives in Washington and the United States Senate. Heflin also served in the Alabama House of Representatives from Chambers County.

The former United States senator, in his statement quotes from a speech made by the outstanding and lamented Senator John T. Morgan in which Senator Morgan said that the day would come in this country when a man will be elected on a white supremacy platform.

Several members of the committee, however, have refused to participate in its campaign for ratification and have joined the opponents, most outspoken of whom is Richard T. Rives, Montgomery attorney.

On Rives' side in addition to Folsom are Sen. Lister Hill; Dr. Lyman Ward, of Camp Hill, Republican nominee for governor, and a citizens' committee composed of newspaper editors, educators, political, labor and religious leaders.

SEVERAL PUBLIC DEBATES have already been held on the question and another is on schedule at Athens on Oct. 19 between former Gov. Dixon and Editor Charles G. Dobbins, of The Montgomery Advertiser. Dobbins has been active against the amendment.

Because of the interest stirred up by the Boswell plan, a heavier vote is anticipated on Nov. 5 than normally is polled in a general election in Alabama.

Boswell Amendment To Call Out Large Vote

The News Birmingham, Ala.
Tues 10-15-46

BY REX THOMAS

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 15—(AP)—An issue so controversial that it has precipitated a Democratic Party split extending even to the governor's office will be decided upon by Alabama voters in the Nov. 5 general election.

It is the Boswell amendment, one of nine proposed changes in the state constitution on which the electorate will vote that day. And from every indication, it will overshadow everything else in the election.

The Boswell plan is an attempt, endorsed by the Democratic party's governing body, to tighten up on voter registration requirements. The controversy centers around two provisions:

1. It would require applicants for registration to be able to "understand and explain" any section of the U. S. Constitution to the satisfaction of county boards of registrars. Under present law they are asked only to be able to read and write it.

2. It would limit registration also to persons of "good character . . . who understand the duties and obligations of good citizenship under a Republican form of government."

THE LATTER SECTION was written into the constitution in 1901 as part of the "grandfather clause" which expired in 1902.

Advocates of a ratification, led by Gov. Chauncey Sparks himself, say the amendment is necessary to prevent a flood of Negro registration as a result of the U. S. Supreme Court ruling that Negroes cannot be barred from party primaries. In Alabama the primary is the real election.

Opponents of the amendment, at the top of whose list is Gov.-Designate James E. Folsom, contend on the other hand that its provisions are "arbitrary" and could be used to disfranchise whole groups of voters who might not agree politically with the registrars.

LINED UP WITH SPARKS in support of the Boswell plan are such men as his predecessor, former Gov. Frank Dixon; Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey, of the State Democratic Executive Committee; Agriculture Commissioner Joe Poole; Atty. Horace C. Wilkinson, of Birmingham; former U. S. Sen. J. Thomas Heflin, and the State Democratic Committee as a group.

Gov. Sparks, Poole, Heflin Urge Ratification; Those Against Cry 'Undemocratic, Dictatorial'

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 12—(AP)—Gov. Chauncey Sparks came out this week with his long-awaited statement on the Boswell amendment, and his plea for ratification touched off a barrage of arguments for and against the voter registration proposal.

The governor's appeal followed pretty much the same line taken by other opponents of the move to tighten up on registration requirements in Alabama.

"It must be known by the least informed," he said, "that we have no qualifications for registration now which cannot be met by almost everyone of whatever race."

Under the present law, prospective voters are required either to be able to read and write any section of the U. S. Constitution, or to own $300 worth of property. The amendment, to be voted on Nov. 5, would eliminate the property ownership provision and would make applicants "understand and explain" the constitution to the satis-

Heflin was a member of the Constitutional Convention of 1901 which wrote the present law.

On the other side, there arose new appeals from several quarters for defeat of the amendment, which opponents brand as "arbitrary."

The News

DR. LYMAN WARD, Republican nominee for governor, issued a statement from his home in Camp Hill criticizing the requirement that prospective voters must "interpret" the constitution, as he called it.

He suggested, instead, that if a literacy test were desired, it would be better to use a "standard piece of English."

Birmingham, Ala. 10-12-46

A group of ministers representing Protestant denominations in Baldwin County also struck a blow against the vote plan. They adopted a resolution blasting the amendment as a "dictatorial" measure which "involves surrender of the right of franchise of every voter to the control of an unknown group of persons . . . a surrender of all the rights of democracy."

faction of the county boards of registrars.

THE GOVERNOR'S STATEMENT was followed by an even stronger plea from Agriculture Commissioner Joe Poole, who declared failure of the Boswell plan would lead ultimately to wholesale registration of Negroes and that this would lead to "wholesale bribery and debauchery at the polls."

Others adding their voices to the campaign for ratification included the colorful J. Thomas Heflin, one-time U. S. senator, and the Wilcox County Democratic Executive Committee.

McCORVEY'S PAC

The News Birmingham, Ala. Fri. 8-30-46

To the Editor of The News:

On the national level we have three well established political action committees, "The Citizens," "The CIO" and "The PAC of the Arts, Sciences and Professions."

Politics is one of the professions, and the last-mentioned of these three appears to be a political action organization of the "outs" who hope to become "ins" eventually. All three can lobby and electioneer to their heart's content, and consequently they can build up funds for these purposes, and as long as they confine their activities so that they do not come in conflict with national and state laws designed to regulate such activities. This idea of PACs could be extended so that every pressure group among us could have one in the field, and may heaven forbid it, even though it possibly could be construed as democratic.

avowed purpose of electioneering for amendment to the state constitution that is palpably designed to favor the "ins" and to shut out whomsoever the registrars deem it expedient to shut out.

It appears to be perfectly obvious that Mr. McCorvey's proposal that "the State Democratic Executive Committee spend $3,500 in a campaign for adoption of the 'Boswell amendment-the constitutional right of the electorate on 23 under the heading "Is This Democratic?") sought by machine politics of the other hand is a proposal that this committee shall resolve itself into a political action committee for the counties Negroes may hold a dangerous balance of power. Sun. 9-15-46

This fear became very active and influential following the Supreme Court's decision in a Texas case holding that Negroes could not be barred from Democratic primaries simply because of color.

Some Democratic leaders in Alabama and other states became convinced that new restrictions were necessary respecting Negro voting. Various moves have been discussed in Southern states. One that has had a good deal of backing would seek to remove Democratic primaries from the jurisdiction of state law. There are strong objections to such a plan, and such an extreme step is not being actively pressed in Alabama. In this state much of the concern centers around what might be the effect of the Supreme Court decision in counties where the Negro population is greater than the white. It is obvious that advocates of the Boswell amendment are not putting it forward as a sound "educational" qualification to be applied without discrimination to all applicants for suffrage, but as a device by which to keep down a flood of registrations which might bring Negro domination in some counties.

This device would grant boards of registrars a very wide authority under which they could bar applicants on the grounds that they do not "understand" and cannot "explain", the constitution. Obviously registrars could exercise a wide discrimination under such a broad grant of authority. Also restored as a qualification would be a provision requiring that all voters be of "good character" and "understand the duties and obligations of good citizenship under a republican form of government."

Now, of course, "good character" is itself subject to wide variation of interpretation, and understanding of the duties of good citizenship under a republican form of government is another proposed provision under which wider latitude would be given registrars—a latitude which, of course, might be extensively abused.

These extreme provisions have been proposed in the honest conviction of many of the amendment advocates that they are desirable as a protective expedient for use, as necessary, to prevent excessive political power being held by Negroes.

The opposition to the amendment contends that such broad grants of authority would be, in spirit, at least, profoundly in conflict with the Constitution of the United States; that arbitrary power could be exercised under them which would be unjust and dangerous; that the adoption of such means of dealing with the problem would intensify racial tensions.

But, in addition to these grave objections to the amendment, opponents set forth their conviction that such extreme measures are not needed to prevent indiscriminate registration of unqualified persons.

There are, of course, some supporters of the Boswell amendment who are opposed to qualifying any Negro applicants. But we do not believe that is true of a large proportion of these citizens. Most of them, we believe, recognize that it is necessary under the Constitution of the United States and in the name of justice to admit to suffrage those Negroes who can meet fair and reasonable qualification tests.

There are, of course, qualifications for suffrage under the present state constitution. They stand against indiscriminate registration of voters.

Section 181 of the constitution, which would be amended by the Boswell proposal, declares in its first section that qualification may be met by "those who can read and write any article of the Constitution of the United States in the English language, and who are physically unable to work; and those who can read and write any article of the Constitution of the United States in the English language, and who have worked or been regularly engaged in some lawful employment, business or occupation, trade or calling, for the greater part of the 12 months next preceding the time they offer to register; and those who are unable to read and write, if such inability is due solely to physical disability."

Section 182 disqualifies idiots and insane persons and persons convicted of a long list of crimes.

These qualification provisions may not be ideal, but under them there has not been any flood of unwarranted registrations. The Supreme Court decision does not change these provisions. Refusal to register applicants for suffrage has not been based in the past on the broad contention that the Democratic Party could bar voters from its primaries simply on the basis of color. On the contrary, qualified Negro voters have been permitted to participate in Democratic primaries. We do not see that any necessarily dangerous change has been made in this respect by the Supreme Court decision. It has only made explicit what had been more or less accepted as obvious. But so delicate have been relations, so acute have been some fears, that some Southerners have feared that a profound alteration in political control in many parts of the South would quickly result.

We do not look for any such rapid change in Alabama, whether or not the Boswell amendment is approved. But we do believe that its adoption would seriously interfere with the orderly and just meeting of the whole problem of racial relations and suffrage qualifications and might produce dangers far greater than those which are motivating the supporters of the Boswell amendment.

Registration Change Foes Deny Its Claims

News-Age Herald
Birmingham, Ala. Sun. 10-20-46

Opponents of the Boswell Amendment Saturday assailed as "positively erroneous" the claim by advocates of the proposal that there is no retroactive feature in the measure to be voted on in Alabama Nov. 5.

Richard T. Rives, Montgomery lawyer and active campaigner against the amendment; Albert A. Carmichael, also of Montgomery and attorney general - nominate, and others challenged a quoted statement made by the State Democratic Executive Committee that the proposal applied in no manner to any Alabama voter already registered.

Likewise challenged was the committee's further statement, "The franchise of any Alabama voter now duly registered is in no manner endangered by the Boswell Amendment and no re-registration is authorized, permitted or required."

CITING THE FIRST WORDS of the proposed amendment, "after the first day of January, 1903," Rives and others signing the challenging statement contend that qualifications of any voter who registered since that date could be legally questioned in several ways, if the amendment were adopted.

They contend that the Legislature could require all such voters to re-register, that any voter moving his legal residence from one county to another must re-register and that boards of registrars are empowered to strike from the registration list the names of any electors disqualified.

They state further that the State Constitution guarantees life registration only to those persons who registered prior to Jan. 1, 1903.

Those who issued the challenging statement with Rives and Carmichael were Carroll T. Prince, Mobile; Henry McDaniel, Demopolis; Harry W. Gamble, Selma; Charles L. Hybart, Monroeville; Oscar L. Tompkins, Dothan; Crampton Harris, Birmingham; Vernol R. Jansen, Mobile; Harold M. Cook, Birmingham; George C. Hawkins, Gadsden; Albert A. and Mrs. Ida D. Rosenthal, Birmingham; Ramon L. Farnell, Nesbit Elmore and Jack Crenshaw, all of Montgomery.

THEIR FULL STATEMENT follows:

The State Democratic Executive Committee, favoring the adoption of Amendment No. 4, known as the Boswell Amendment, has made the following statements:

"There is absolutely no retroactive feature in the Boswell Amendment. It applies in no manner whatsoever to voters who are already registered. The franchise of any Alabama voter now duly registered is in no manner endangered by the Boswell Amendment and no re-registration is authorized, permitted or required."

The quoted statements, in our opinion, are positively erroneous.

The first 10 words of the Boswell Amendment are: "After the first day of January, nineteen hundred and three." (General Acts Alabama 1945, P. 551). That amendment then prescribes as additional qualifications for electors that the elector must be able to understand and explain any article of the Constitution of the United States; must be a person of good character, and must understand the duties and obligations of good citizenship under a republican form of government. If the amendment is adopted, then those additional qualifications would be applicable to every person registered after the first day of January, 1903, whenever such person's right to registration might be legally questioned. Our State Constitution guarantees life registration to those persons only who registered prior to Jan. 1, 1903. (Constitution, Sec. 187.)

THE QUALIFICATIONS of any voter who has registered since that date can be legally questioned in several ways:

1. The Legislature can require all such voters to re-register.

2. Under the law as it now exists, if any such voter changes his legal residence from one county to another, he must re-register in the county of his new residence. (Code 1940, Tit. 17, Sec. 36, Shepherd vs. Sartain, 185 Ala. 439, 64 So. 57.)

3. The present law (Code 1940, Tit. 17, Secs. 44 and 47) requires each Board of Registrars to meet for one week every year for purging the registration list, and provides that the names of those disqualified as electors under the constitution shall be stricken from the registration list.

IN THE EVENT of the adoption of the Boswell Amendment, if the qualifications of any voter registered since Jan. 1, 1903, are questioned in either of these methods, and if that voter cannot prove to the satisfaction of the Board of Registrars that he is of good character, understands the duties and obligations of good citizenship under a republican form of government, and can understand and explain any article of the Constitution of the United States, then the voter may be disfranchised.

We feel it proper to call attention to the potential use of that power to deny freedom of speech and expression to a prospective candidate for political office, or to any citizen actively opposed to a political boss or machine which might be in control of a board of registrars. Such a candidate or citizen, if he refused to bow to the will of those in control, could be cited to appear before the board, his name could be purged from the poll list, and he could be disfranchised. Whether such a power would long remain in disuse, human nature and practical politics being what they are, is a question to be considered by every elector before he casts his vote on Nov. 5.

A Bad Amendment

News Birmingham, Ala. Wed. 10-26-46

The Alabama Democratic Executive Committee has voted to spend $3,500 for promotion of the Boswell amendment. This decision was reached at the suggestion of Chairman McCorvey and in the teeth of stout protests from at least three committeemen who went on record as objecting to so plain a misuse of party funds. Mr. McCorvey is regarded as the real power behind the Boswell amendment and is quite standably ready to worship at the shrine of his own making, as Mohammed did of old. But that is no reason why the party should have to pay the bill. Yet this action is of a piece with the whole enterprise of foisting upon the state a suffrage regulation which cannot be justified except in terms of a blind adherence to a false "white supremacy." When the United States Supreme Court ruled against the old assumption under which white primaries have been operating, statesmanship of the Alabama Legislature might have led to an honest and enlightened adjustment, with equal facility. For registrars are not in a position to impose valid tests. They are not expected to do that. The Boswell amendment merely gives them additional leeway to indulge in arbitrary winnowing of applicants. It is a mockery to clothe registrars with sweeping authority with respect to something quite different—an intractable issue upon which the Supreme Court renders split opinions.

A provision which allows a person to register under a property qualification is to be stricken. In lieu thereof, would-be voters are to be called on to prove to the satisfaction of registrars that they understand and can explain any article of the Constitution of the United States. This is aimed at Negro citizens, but it can be used against whites with equal facility. For registrars are not in a position to impose valid tests. They are not expected to do that. The Boswell amendment merely gives them additional leeway to indulge in arbitrary winnowing of applicants. It is a mockery to clothe registrars with sweeping authority with respect to something quite different—an intractable issue upon which the Supreme Court renders split opinions.

Boswell Amendment Will Solve No Problems

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. Wed. 10-23-46

Study of the many arguments relating to the proposed tightening of registration requirements leads to the conclusion that the Boswell Amendment should be defeated at the polls Nov. 5.

The debate has focused attention on the avowed plan to prevent increased Negro voting. This purpose could be served no more than temporarily if the amendment is adopted.

We may as well face the facts squarely. If applicants for registration are required to "understand and explain" any section of the Constitution of the United States, the one relating to "no discrimination because of race, creed or color" will hardly be selected for the test. But it has been made clear by recent Supreme Court decisions that the Federal government has the power to enforce that provision. And it has been made clear by the campaigns of various organizations that nothing will be left undone to have that power enforced.

All voters should be of good character and have an understanding of the duties and obligations of good citizenship, and they should be able to understand and explain the Constitution within the reasonable limits of the education required for average laymen's occupations. But this will not be accomplished through an amendment designed to prevent "mass registration" by Negroes. This amendment can only bring a bitter fight through the courts, and probably physical clashes.

Discretion placed with boards of registrars by the amendment might, or might not, be abused. But the wording of this measure leaves the way open for abuse. There are now suits pending against registrars who have denied certain Negroes registration under the existing provision in the Constitution. The board of Macon County has resigned because of the difficult situation and there are no applicants for the vacancies. Does anyone think the places on these boards will be any more popular if the Boswell Amendment is adopted and they become centers of constant controversy?

Every qualified elector not prevented by illness or other specific reason should inform himself on every issue and vote in every election. But we have many times seen fewer than half participating at the ballot box and seldom more than 75 per cent of those eligible cast votes in an election. If there is a heavy increase in the number of Negroes registered it will at least serve the purpose of making the white people take their citizenship responsibilities more seriously.

Certain minimum requirements for registration would have sound reasoning on their side. Intelligent voting cannot be expected from illiterate persons, whatever their color.

Had this amendment carried provisions that would automatically apply to all alike, just as the resident rules do, then it could be defended and sustained. The element of discretion injected here, with its avowed purposes, opens the way for successful attack.

It is reasonable to eliminate the present alternative that ownership of $300 worth of property or 40 acres of land is qualification for registration. It would appear reasonable to set a minimum education requirement, based on completion of certain standard schooling, or alternative tests, which would automatically apply to all applicants.

But the designers of the Boswell Amendment did not approach the problem in the light of all the known elements affecting it. Even if their objective is desirable, the method will not succeed.—Gadsden Times.

When Lawyers Disagree

The News Birmingham, Ala.

Would the Boswell amendment, if passed, endanger the franchise of persons already registered? The question has been a moot one, but 16 lawyers, including Albert A. Carmichael, attorney general-nominate, have joined in a statement declaring that passage of the amendment would require the reregistration of all voters whose right to vote is challenged by the registrars. Tues. 10-22-46

The 16 lawyers are positive in their statements. They declare that the claim made in advertisements of the State Democratic Executive Committee favoring the adoption of the amendment that "there is absolutely no retroactive feature in the Boswell amendment" is "positively erroneous." Here's the gist of their argument: Under the Boswell amendment, all voters who have registered since Jan. 1, 1903 (and that means the great majority), hold the franchise subject only to the will of boards of registrars. Every year registrars are required to purge the electoral lists of disqualified persons. Voters moving to another county must register in the new county. Because of these two provisions in the existing law, the Boswell amendment would give registrars the right to compel every voter who has registered since Jan. 1, 1903, to prove that he was of good character, understood the duties and obligations of good citizenship, and could understand and explain any article of the constitution.

That is what these 16 lawyers say. Many other lawyers agree with them. Regardless of which view might be correct, adoption of an amendment of such dubious nature would be a grievous error. The very possibility that such sweeping control over the election lists should be placed in the arbitrary hands of a few men should be enough to defeat the amendment.

Undoubtedly some of the aims of those who drafted and passed the Boswell amendment in the State Legislature were good. But the measure is so faulty, it carries so many risks to so many people of so many classes that it should be rejected.

Tell It To Old Grandma

SEES AMENDMENT AS "UN-CHRISTIAN"

Editor, The Advertiser: The Advertiser

I find that as a minister I cannot support the Boswell Amendment in a Christian Democracy for two reasons. In the first place, from its intent and purpose, it is doubtful that it is Christian; and in the second place it is surely not democratic.

In a Christian Democracy we profess to believe in the "infinite worth of every individual" and in "liberty and justice for ALL." It needs to be emphasized that Amendment XV still remains which says, "The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude." If a state deliberately, through political chicanery, destroys the foundation upon which it was built, it invites the inevitable discord and strife which follows.

How well I am aware of the abuse of power already invested in County Boards of Registrars which the Boswell Amendment would make supreme in determining the "worth" of individuals to vote. A resident of Montgomery presented his qualifications to the Board. He was a college graduate having done work on his Ph.D. degree. He was a Christian minister, a college professor, director of the U. S. O., and a highly respected citizen. However, according to the Board, he was not "the type" person who should be voting. He was a negro. Under the present laws which are inadequate also, he was finally registered under the protest of the Board, because two white citizens had "vouched" for him. The two citizens were immediately "blackballed." Such a ridiculous situation would only be intensified under a law which left final authority in the hands of a few such demagogues.

The time has passed when citizens of a Christian Democracy should talk about "white supremacy" or "black supremacy." It is now time to stand for "Right Supremacy." We have laws which are impartially administered without regard to race, creed or color. These should be applied to the franchise. We may accept the fascist philosophy which denies the rights of minorities, or Democracy, which recognizes the inalienable rights of EVERY individual. I believe the people of Alabama will continue to choose Christian Democracy.

A FEW "democrats" NEEDED

Editor, The Advertiser: The Advertiser

Just a common citizen and democrat thinks that "just the right kind of people" to vote would include a few others than inferiority complexes, intolerants, and hypocrites. In a Democratic primary there should be at least a few democrats, with the little "d."

No needed amendment needs any false declarations. No amendment of "good character" would contain one. Montgomery, Ala.

Amendment No. 4 contains three:

1. After January 1, 1903, no person may qualify to vote unless able to understand any article in the U. S. Constitution.
2. After January 1, 1903, no person may qualify to vote unless able to explain any article in the U. S. Constitution.
3. After January 1, 1903, no person may qualify except those of good character.

Each of these is a false representation of Alabama covering a period of 43 years and millions of citizens.

To ratify this amendment would legalize these falsities, and as falsehood and good character are never compatible it follows, that: Wed. 10-23-46

By authority of the Boswell Amendment (itself) any Board of Registrars may legally disqualify, or refuse to register, any person known to endorse said Boswell Amendment.

Desperately vote-scared politicians are using the Party's money to put over this anti-democratic measure . . .

FOR COMMON PEOPLE

Editor, The Advertiser: The Advertiser

Please publish these few lines for me. I notice in Mr. Roy E. Thorington's letter several days ago that he was against the Boswell Amendment but wanted the present registration board laws tightened up. He said he knew a man that couldn't read nor write that had been voting all these years. Montgomery, Ala. Thurs. 10-10-46

My Dear Mr. Thorington, would you be so little and so unjust to that class of people that have been so unfortunate and hadicapped that they had no opportunity whatsoever to get an education? Just like myself and thousands of others, there are just as good, straight, honest gentlemen in Alabama that can't read or write, as the highly educated. These uneducated people stay at home, work like the devil to make an honest living and to have something to sell to help feed and clothe the world. The most of this class of people pay Federal, State and County taxes. It would be a shame and a disgrace to the State of Alabama to pass a law that would take their birthright away from these good, honest citizens and not let them vote. I am in favor of education 100 percent, but when a man just can't get it, I don't believe in throwing him away.

I never saw many hoboes in my life but what had a fair education. Nearly all the bank robbers and gangsters have a fair education. The penitentiaries are full of young men under 45 years old that have a fair education. Then the very idea of taking a good, honest, hard-working citizen's birthright away from him just because he can't read and write. God forbid! God made us all equal in his own image, not just a few rich crooked politicians, but all of us.

They say the Boswell Amendment will keep the Negro from voting. It sounds to me like Mr. Thorington wants to keep the poor working, uneducated white man from voting. If a Negro is honest and upright and can qualify to vote, let him vote. Give the Negro what justly and honestly belongs to him and make him stay in his place. That's what we will do here in the South, but for God's sake don't take the poor, hard-working white man's birthright away from him just because he was unfortunate and couldn't learn how to read and write. If he has paid Federal, State and County taxes I feel like he has just as much right to vote as Mr. Thorington, Chauncey Sparks, Frank Dixon, or Bud Boswell.

Well, I hope and pray to God I can live to see something on the front page of the paper besides Henry Wallace, the Boswell Amendment, the atomic bomb, and the O. P. A. I don't believe Mr. Bonner, of Camden, Ala., believes the Negroes will ever have control of his county or any county in the State of Alabama. I am just like Mr. Faulkner says about the Boswell Amendment.

State Press On The Boswell Amendment

Birmingham
Oct 16, 1946

BY J. F. ROTHERMEL

A majority of the newspapers of Alabama which have expressed themselves on the subject are opposed to the Boswell (No. 4) amendment. Counting only the newspapers of general circulation, 15 are opposed to the amendment and 13 are for it. Added to the newspapers in opposition could be counted several weeklies of special circulation, including representatives of the religious and the Negro press.

The figures above include only those newspapers which have taken positive and definite stands in regard to the issue. The papers represent a good cross-section of Alabama thought, although it must be noted that only a minority of the press so far has taken a position. Why more of the 19 dailies and the 133 weeklies of general circulation in the state have not expressed themselves on this important and controversial issue is difficult to answer.

A larger percentage of dailies than of weeklies have lined up either for or against the constitutional change. Six dailies are definitely against the amendment and five are for it. Among the general circulation weeklies, nine are against it and eight for it. At least three newspapers of special circulation are opposed to it.

Daily newspapers against the amendment are The Montgomery Advertiser, The Anniston Star, The Decatur Daily, The Huntsville Times, The Birmingham News and The Birmingham Age-Herald. Dailies for the amendment are The Dothan Eagle, The Selma Times-Journal, Opelika Daily News, Alabama Journal and Talladega Daily Home.

Weeklies against the amendment include: Baldwin Times (Bay Minette), Lee County Bulletin (Auburn), Brewton Standard, Piedmont Journal, Hale County News (Moundville), DeKalb Times (Fort Payne), Cullman Tribune, Florala News and The Jacksonville Record. Weeklies for it are: Shelby County Democrat (Columbiana), Clarke County Democrat (Grove Hill), Marion Times-Standard, Cleburne News (Heflin), Greenville Advocate, Franklin County Times (Russellville), Sylacauga News and Etowah News-Journal (Attalla).

Naturally, the positions of these newspapers are varied. They represent many shades of opinion. But let the papers speak for themselves. What follows represents an attempt to give a fair expression of each paper's viewpoint.

For the amendment:

Talladega Daily Home—"Despite the hue and cry of every 'liberal' and leftist influence in the state, the Boswell amendment is designed simply to keep the government of the state and its subdivisions in the hands of the white man. To that end it gives a wider grant of authority to registrars to withhold qualification for suffrage. . . . We invite every Alabamian to consider those who are most vigorous in opposition to the amendment, and then to consider what giant strides already have been made in destruction of ancient safeguards."

The Dothan Eagle—"Opponents of the amendment, rising mainly from the ranks of the so-called 'liberal' elements . . . at present are centering their attack on one section of the amendment. That section would bestow broad powers on boards of registrars in determining what new voters should be added to the list. We concede that the amendment would establish broad authority. But we don't agree that it is the bugaboo that opponents of the amendment try to make it out to be. . . . The scare . . . falls pretty flat."

The Selma Times-Journal—"The constitutional change proposed to place the voting franchise under desirable restraints in this state is not the vicious and dangerous measure it has been pictured. . . . The Black Belt faces a grave menace in the possibility of unrestrained voting." (The Selma paper attacks efforts against the amendment as "the ill-directed ardor of youthful visionaries.")

Alabama Journal—"This is the Halloween season, but don't let the excitable opponents of the Boswell amendment scare you. . . . Vote for (it) as a new guarantee of self-determination to yourself and to your children."

Opelika Daily News—"We are at the moment inclined to vote for the Boswell amendment, in which event we shall never cease to publicly demand that the provisions of the proposal, if adopted into law, be strictly observed and enforced among both races. It would be inexcusable sham to register a white man no more familiar with the constitution than a colored man appearing at his side seeking registration. And we need not kid ourselves that the U. S. courts will not be keeping a close eye on this point."

Sylacauga News—"In spite of the fact that we believe the Boswell amendment to be a poor substitute for more intelligent legislation, we will support it as the choice of two evils. . . . (We) put our faith and trust in the Legislature of Alabama, hoping they will use the amendment, if enacted into law, as a basis for new legislation that will be fairer, less prejudicial and more democratic."

Franklin County Times—"We have no grudge against the Negro. . . . But they, if the present plan is let alone, at least many of them, will become tools in the hands of the Communists . . . and . . . will undertake to destroy our form of government."

Greenville Advocate—"(The members of the Alabama Legislature) thought it best to amend the constitution in this manner, and we agree."

Marion Times-Standard—"From The Times-Standard's point of view, the proposed amendment is class legislation, directed against the Negro, and is therefore neither democratic nor honest if we place a strict interpretation upon those words. We recognize the Boswell amendment as a legal ruse, but one that is born of necessity and designed to serve the best interests of both races. It is the only means short of intimidation and violence by which the people of the Black Belt can preserve the political and social conditions which have enabled the white man and the Negro to work and live in peace in Alabama."

Shelby County Democrat—"The provisions in the Boswell amendment seeking to raise the qualifications for voting privileges seem to us very necessary ones. . . . We stress education in every walk of life. Why should we discard 'intelligent understanding' on the part of the electorate? . . . We can think of no more disastrous end to our democracy here in Alabama than to turn the decision of our destiny over to ill-informed people who can be easily emotionally swayed or commercially controlled by high-powered leaders."

Clarke County Democrat—"When our 'liberal' leaders come forward with a plan which will assure the proper safeguards for those counties with a dominant Negro population, we will consider supporting such a plan. We would have preferred some control measure fashioned along different lines from the Boswell amendment, but as we consider some control measure necessary, and this is the only one available to us at this time, we shall support it."

Cleburne News—"The amendment is being opposed vigorously by socialistic and left-wing elements in Alabama. They want to see our old election rules done away with. They want to gain control of the ballot through a mass Negro vote. This group is being championed by The Birmingham News-Age-Herald and The Montgomery Advertiser, whose radical philosophies are well known."

Etowah News-Journal—"Adoption of the Boswell amendment is the only course short of violence to maintain a white ballot. Alabama people are determined to keep their Democratic primaries free of the carpetbag racial disturbers. . . . With but three exceptions, every daily newspaper in Alabama is owned and controlled by carpetbagger politicians."

Against the amendment:

Anniston Star—"It seems safe to predict that Alabama voters will reject the iniquitous Boswell amendment. . . . The amendment embodies several provisions which, in our opinion, are extreme. . . . Wide exercise of the franchise offers one of the surest safeguards against corruption in public office; therefore, our efforts should be aimed at extending the right to vote, not at curbing it capriciously. . . . Ostensibly, the Boswell monstrosity is calculated to keep the Negroes from voting. But really it is to keep the vote of all Alabamians restricted because . . . it is easier to control an election if the vote is small."

Decatur Daily—"We are against the Boswell amendment because there is already sufficient constitutional safeguard in Alabama concerning voting. Moreover, the amendment would serve minority and not majority causes. Alabama needs more voters. Alabama needs more voters to vote."

Huntsville Times—"The basic objection to the Boswell amendment is that it substitutes for law the whims of three men in each county. . . . Registrars should not be vested with such broad powers of discretion. . . . The social equality issue is without point, and just a red herring designed to befog the real issue. . . . The Boswell plan . . . is aimed specifically at Negro voters, but in taking a swipe at them it also endangers the suffrage of white men."

Montgomery Advertiser—"There should be no mistake about the real issue at stake in the Boswell amendment. It is democracy versus oligarchy. . . . We oppose the amendment on principle. We contend that this piece of legalistic mumbo-jumbo offers no honest test of any voter's qualifications. . . . Let every citizen read the amendment for himself and decide: Is it honest? Is it necessary? Is it democratic?"

Brewton Standard—"The Boswell amendment . . . is a haphazard piece of legislation. It would be impractical to enforce it in either spirit or letter, and it would permit unscrupulous men to build a statewide organization for keeping themselves in power. . . . The amendment is not the solution for the delicate problem facing nearly every county and city in Alabama."

Lee County Bulletin—"The Boswell amendment would place in the hands of a few people the absolute power to say whether or not an applicant shall be allowed to register. Only the most naive would hold that such power might never be misused or lead to corruption of the ballot. . . . Our present registration laws are safeguards aplenty against wholesale registration of unqualified applicants."

Baldwin Times—"The Times regards the amendment as thoroughly undemocratic and probably unconstitutional because it is designed to limit the use of the ballot to those voters favored by those who are in political power. Its potentialities for abuse are tremendous and dangerous."

Piedmont Journal and Jacksonville Record—"As well-meaning as may be the purpose behind this amendment, its adoption would place unprecedented and arbitrary powers in the hands of . . . registrars. . . . We do not relish adopting such a fantastic scheme of class and political discrimination which, in the hands of unscrupulous politicians, might work to deplorable embarrassment and nuisance to many humble but worthy citizens."

Hale County News—"Moundville is in the Black Belt section of the state, but The News does not believe the Boswell amendment solves any problem. . . . It should be defeated for it will turn out to be nothing but an unworkable farce."

Space does not permit quotations from other weeklies of general circulation, or from Negro or labor papers also opposed to the amendment. The minority point of view that one finds in most of these can be summarized, perhaps, by a single quotation from The Catholic Week, which is the official organ of the Mobile Diocese (Alabama and West Florida) for the Catholic Church: "Such authority as granted by the Boswell amendment would give the registration boards arbitrary powers with which they could rule the state with totalitarian effect. Not only could they rule out the undesirable Negro, but also the undesirable whites."

NO WHISPERING CAMPAIGN

To the Editor of The News:

We have two weekly newspapers published in Hale County. One at the county seat, The Greensboro Watchman, indorses the Boswell amendment, while the other, The Hale County News, of Moundville, opposes it, saying, "The News believes that the Boswell amendment should be defeated, for it will turn out to be nothing but an unworkable farce."

I would say that this, coming from The Moundville News, which is in the Black Belt section of the state, is somewhat like "shouting from the housetops." Surely it is not what even the State Democratic Executive Committee would call a "whispering campaign." The committee's literature warns voters to beware of "whispering campaign."

As the U. S. Constitution figures largely in this controversy, the purposes its framer's had in mind should not be overlooked. Every word in the preamble thereto has a direct bearing on the subject under discussion as well as the entire present situation the world over. Here is the preamble:

"We, the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America."

Putting my view of the Boswell amendment mildly, I simply cannot reconcile its purposes, which are openly avoked, as conducive to the "general welfare" or any other of the worthy purposes set forth in this preamble, which begins with "We the people."

DEVIOUS DEMAGOGY

The News Birmingham, Ala

On this the day before Nov. 5, little which is new can be said about the Boswell amendment. The arguments are in. After all the clamor pro and con, the voice of the people will now be heard. It isn't hazarding much to say that if enough voters go to the polls, this amendment will be snowed under. It is by now revealed as a fraud, based upon a delusion and intended as a snare. Urged as a device to bar Negroes from voting, it is actually a thrust at white Alabamians. Albert Carmichael made that clear enough in the eloquent statement he issued Sunday. The old trick of shouting "white supremacy" and knifing the progressive forces of the state is being tried again. But it will not succeed because the intelligence and decency of our people have gone into action.

That intelligence and decency cannot help noting the lavish use of funds by supporters of the amendment. Radio time, advertising space and wide distribution of literature cost money, more money than the $3,500 egregiously appropriated out of party funds by the state executive committee. Where has all this lucre been coming from? Sen. Hill was berated when he asserted that certain interests have gone to the rescue of their old friends in the Black Belt. It begins to look as though he knew what he was talking about. The Boswellians have not been using hay to bolster up their campaign. Anyone with eyes to see and ears to hear must realize that organized backers of the amendment have plenty of coin of the realm.

But that will not avail them, though they have the courthouse politicians behind them and though they have charge of the election machinery. It will not avail them because they are fighting the moral sense of the community. The cry of "Vote right, vote white, vote Christian," was answered the other day by the Baptist clergy of Birmingham, who declared: "We as Christian ministers decry the appeal to Christianity as the reason for support of the Boswell amendment." And as though to clinch this repudiation of an effort to exploit religion for an unrighteous cause 80 Alabama churchmen of all creeds went on record Friday in a denunciation of the amendment. News 11-4

That is not surprising, because many pro-amendment appeals have shown the stigmata of Ku Klux Klan thinking. It is not surprising, because these men of God are also aware of the fascist animus which impels some of the Boswell exhorters. The issue of this contest is now plain enough. It involves a choice between hysteria and common sense, between retreating 50 years and living up to our best instincts, between yielding to reactionism and facing up boldly and constructively to the major challenge of Southern life. The Boswell amendment is a symbol of all which has held this section down and should be rejected in proof of the courage and understanding with which Southerners of this generation are confronting their future.

Proponents have had to rely exclusively upon an emotional appeal. They haven't a leg to stand on when logic or reason comes into play. That is why they have been driven to distorting facts. They conjure up a horrid vision of mass voting by Negroes as though our whole system of registration were non-existent. They keep on talking about the Supreme Court decision about primaries, although it has nothing to do with registration. They ask Alabamians to accept their nightmares as realities. They set up straw men and knock them down and expect the rest of us to join a movement so obviously unnecessary, dishonest and backward-looking. Our state has seldom seen a campaign comparable to this in calculated misrepresentation deliberately aimed at arousing fear and prejudice as the basis for political action.

It is a desperate venture, as the shrillness of its orators demonstrates. They see the handwriting on the wall. They know that what they propose has been weighed in the balances and found wanting. They have a premonition of what people will say on Tuesday. They move in the darkness of their own blind passion. Like Robert Frost's neighbor, they repeat the nonsense of their old war cries. But it will not profit them. The Boswell amendment is a more or less conscious effort to substitute for rational consideration of a grave issue the passion-tearing which has been the stock in trade of demagogues like Talmadge until his very name has come to mean something distasteful in the eyes of reasonable Southerners. To deal with the problem of democracy, as affecting both whites and Negroes, we do not have to rave with Rankin or bleed with Bilbo.

PRAISES GOVERNOR SPARKS

The Advertiser

Editor, The Advertiser:

Gov. Sparks' answer to the questionnaire of some Northerners a few days ago, I think is the soundest, the most commendable, and by far the most common horse sense attitude taken by any one on the issues and arguments brought forth by the writers and speakers of either side in the much discussed Boswell Amendment controversy.

It is so simple, so matter of fact, I like to have it so said that a dullard could see the efficacy of it. If the Eleanors of the North would keep their fingers out of our pie, all would be well down here in this sun-kissed land, where the gulf breezes blow, and the mocking birds awake us in the dawn of each new day. Montgomery, Ala

The understanding between the two races in Alabama is 98 per cent perfect, with less than one-half of one per cent friction. I commend Gov. Sparks for his forthright views.

Folsom Opposes Boswell Plan

Defender Chicago, Ill.

Plans Stump Battle On Vote Restriction

Sat. 10-5-46

BIRMINGHAM—Big Jim Folsom, Alabama governor-elect, who won his campaign on a social reform platform including poll tax repeal, went a step further than was expected last week, when he declared that he will take the stump against the Boswell amendment to the state constitution.

Observers close to the wealthy insurance magnate predicted earlier that he would fight the proposal, which seeks to tighten voting qualifications, utterly disfranchising Negroes. It will be voted on in the Nov. 5th general election. The governor-elect not only condemned the measure in the first formal statement he has made on it since May, but announced that he will tour the state speaking against it.

To Speak After Tour

The statement came just before Folsom left for an American Legion convention in California. He told reporters that he would arrange a speaking schedule when he returned to the state.

The controversial measure would repeal the $300 property ownership provision for voting in Alabama, but the joker in it is that all applicants must interpret the U. S. constitution to the satisfaction of registrars. Such a device, Negro leaders pointed out, would completely disfranchise Negroes and poor whites, along with anyone else opposing a Bourbon power bloc.

The fight over the Boswell amendment has split the Democratic party in the state, with incumbent Governor Sparks, who favored tightening voting requirements, promising stump speeches on the measure. The state Democratic Executive committee also favors the amendment.

Program Fight Looms

Meanwhile speculation has centered around the liberal Folsom platform which calls for poll tax repeal, $50 old age pensions for people over 65, and $1,800 annual minimum salaries for school teachers. Folsom announced that he would visit all members of the legislature to explain his program. Clarence Inzer, lieutenant governor designate, who will preside over the Senate, and will make committee appointments said he will place no barriers in the path of Folsom's program.

Both branches of the legislature have promised Folsom a fair hearing on his legislative proposals. Opposition is shaping up around legislative reapportionment, the tax fight and a possible constitutional convention. However, throughout the state, Negro leaders have backed the poll tax repeal fight, and the campaign against the Boswell amendment.

Attorney Says Voters Under 69 Face Loss Of Life Franchise

"If the Boswell Amendment is passed, the franchise of every Alabama voter under the age of 69 will be in danger," Col. Richard T. Rives, prominent Montgomery attorney who has been actively campaigning against the proposed amendment, declared yesterday.

Speaking before the Exchange Club at the Whitley Hotel, Rives attacked the controversial proposal on five counts, calling it arbitrary, unnecessary, dishonest, undemocratic and dangerous.

The so-called Boswell Amendment, which will be referred to a popular vote at the general elections on Nov. 5, would require that eligible voters be able to read and explain any portion of the state and federal constitutions, be of good character, and understand and perform the duties of a good citizen.

"If passed, the amendment will be retroactive to Jan. 1, 1903, the date on which the present state constitution was adopted," Rives explained. "Consequently, no voter in the state would be guaranteed of a life franchise unless he had registered prior to that date, and only those voters who are 69 or over could fall in that group." Fri. 9-27-46

"It does not even require an act of the State Legislature to call a re-registration. The law requires that the registrars meet once every two years to purge from the lists all unqualified voters, and if the Boswell amendment is adopted, any voter who has registered since 1903 could be called up before the registrars for reconsideration and asked to explain the constitution."

Emphasizing his belief that the amendment would be dangerous, Rives pointed out that it would be possible for an unscrupulous administration to appoint sympathetic registrars which could limit eligible voters to the extent it would be impossible to oust the corrupt administration.

Rives reiterated his stand that passage of the Boswell proposal is unnecessary in maintaining white supremacy, which he termed "an ugly issue, one which would be brought up only in the most extreme circumstance."

"Although the maintenance of white supremacy is the avowed purpose of the proponents of the amendment, its passage could very conceivably endanger the voting privilege of an overwhelming majority of the white voters of the state," he declared.

Guests introduced at the Exchange Club meeting were Edward Faulkner, of Birmingham, Mrs. Neal Spendiff, and Henry L. Lyon.

President G. E. Suddith announced that the program committee for October would be made up of John Chisholm, chairman, Rev. Samuel R. Jones, Walter fuss, Joe Petranka, and Charles Bragg Smith, Cantwell Mucken-Burns

State's Voters Go To Polls Decide On Boswell Issue

Amendment No. 4 Is Storm Center Of Today's General Election; Ballot Lighter Than In Primary Expected

Alabama voters went to the polls today beneath low hanging clouds which early held the threat of rain to elect a governor and other state and federal officers and to decide the fate of nine proposed amendments to the constitution, including the controversial and vote-restricting Boswell proposal.

While the outcome of today's election was hardly a secret so far as the election of new officers and the ratification of most of the pending amendments were concerned, result of balloting on the Boswell amendment remained uncertain long after the polls opened.

Although Alabama voters set a new all-time voting record in the May 7 Democratic primary and almost duplicated the record in the June runoff, indications were that today's voting, despite the raging controversy over the Boswell amendment, would fall far short of primary records.

Estimates were that slightly more than one-third of the vote cast May 7—something more than 366,000—would be turned in at the state's more than 2,300 polling places today. On that basis the total should be around 150,000.

TODAY'S BALLOTING FOLLOWED a raging controversy between proponents and opponents of the Boswell amendment which extended to every county in the state. The amendment, which would make it virtually impossible for Negroes to register and vote, held the spotlight throughout the pre-election campaign. Campaigning for and against the proposal continued until the eve of today's election.

Campaigning for and against the Boswell proposal came to a close with rival radio broadcasts. Opponents delivered their final shot at the amendment in a state-wide appeal in which Gov.-Nominate James E. Folsom, Atty.-Gen.-Nominate Albert A. Carmichael, Richard T. Rives, Montgomery attorney, and Charles Dobbins, Montgomery newspaper man, were heard. Former Gov. Frank Dixon delivered the closing appeal for ratification, also in a statewide radio hookup.

Earlier yesterday the campaign against the amendment was accelerated by adoption of a resolution, 57 to 13, by the Birmingham Pastors Union, condemning the Boswell amendment as unworthy of consideration.

Action of the voters in today's election was merely a rubber stamping of the outcome of the May and June Democratic primaries as far as state and federal officers are concerned.

Folsom, who defeated Lt. Gov. Handy Ellis, in upset races last May and June, was certain to be elected governor—by a wide margin—over his Republican opponent, Dr. Lyman Ward, of Camp Hill.

REP. JOHN J. SPARKMAN, of the Eighth District, was unopposed for U. S. senator, but had opposition in Arthur South, Florence Republican, for reelection as congressman. Sparkman was expected to achieve the distinction of being one of the few men to be elected to two high offices in the same election. He plans to resign as congressman between now and January and is scheduled to be succeeded in the House by Judge Bob Jones, of Scottsboro, the Democratic nominee, who will be elected in a special general election in the near future.

In the other state and district races at stake in today's election the candidates were as follows:

Lieutenant governor, J. C. Inzer, Gadsden, Democrat, and W. J. Kennamer, Woodville, Republican.

Attorney general, Albert A. Carmichael, Montgomery, Democrat, and Murphy, Huntsville, Republican.

State auditor, Dan Thomas, Winfield, Democrat, and Charles H. Hembree, Mobile, Republican.

Secretary of State, Miss Sibyl Pool, Linden, Democrat, and Cyrus Kitchens, Oneonta, Republican.

State superintendent of education, Dr. A. R. Meadows, Montgomery, Democrat, and Fred Allen, Calera, Republican.

Commissioner of agriculture and industries, Haywood Paterson, Montgomery, Democrat, and James N. Dennis, Clanton, Republican.

Public service commissioner, Place No. 1, Jimmy Hitchcock, Democrat, and A. L. Isbell, Albertville, Republican.

Public service commissioner, Place No. 2, G. C. Owen, Tuscaloosa, Democrat, and H. R. Horton, Ft. Payne, Republican.

Chief Justice Lucien D. Gardner, and Associate Justices A. B. Foster, J. Ed Livingston and Davis Stakely, of the Supreme Court, and Charles R. Bricken, Robert B. Carr and Robert D. Harwood, of the Court of Appeals, have no Republican opponents.

DEMOCRATIC NOMINEES for congressmen in the Fourth, Seventh, Eighth and Ninth Districts had Republican opponents.

Rep. Sam Hobbs was opposed by Roger S. Bingham, Republican, in the Fourth; Rep. Carter Manasco had a Republican opponent in M. H. Woodard in the Seventh; Sparkman and South were on the ticket in the Eighth, and Laurie Battle, who ousted Rep. Luther Patrick in the May and June primaries, was opposed by J. G. Bass, Republican and former postmaster of Birmingham.

Polling places opened at 8 a.m. and were to close at 6 p.m. in urban areas. In rural sections the polls opened at 8 a.m. and were to close at 5 p.m.

The resolution adopted by the Birmingham Pastors Union in opposition to the Boswell amendment was as follows:

"The Birmingham Pastors Union reaffirms its belief in the sufficiency of Christian principles applied to: (1) sacredness of human personality, (2) love for all humanity, (3) democratic principles of government that express themselves in laws implementing these ideals, and does not regard the proposed Boswell amendment as worthy of support in that it does not offer a sufficiently Christian approach to the problems which its proponents set out to solve."

In addition to the Boswell Amendment—No. 4 on the ballot—other proposed amendments to the state constitution up for action in today's election were:

No. 1, permitting Decatur and Cullman to levy a special school tax and Morgan County a special tax for hospital purposes.

No. 2, permitting the state in cooperation with federal and local governments to acquire, build and opearte hospitals.

No. 3, authorizing Haleyville to increase its ad valorem tax rate.

No. 5, authorizing municipalities whose tax rates are limited to less than 1¼ per cent of the value of property assessed for taxes to increase their rates to that figure.

No. 6, authorizing 36 "legislative day" biennial sessions of the Legislature instead of hte present 60 "calendar day" sessions.

No. 7, authorizing the state to construct, improve and operate public airports.

No. 8, permitting the governing bodies of counties other than Mobile and Montgomery to call on petition signed by at least 100 votres an election to decide whether or not a tax not to exceed 10 mills shall be levied.

No. 9, permitting Mobile County to extend its constitutional debt limit for public buildings, roads and bridges.

WHO'S WHISPERING

Editor, The Advertiser: The Advertiser

I am sure that it surprised most opponents of Amendment No. 4 (the so called Boswell Amendment) to have Gessner McCorvey charge them with conductiong a "whispering campaign" against the Amendment. The charge of gumshoe tactics" is equally surprising.

The facts are that the opponents of the Boswell Amendment are out in the open and that, far from whispering against the Amendment, they are speaking out loud, so that all may hear. Montgomery, Ala.

The opponents of the Boswell Amendment seek its defeat because they believe it is unnecessary and undemocratic. Col. Richard Rives, to whom McCorvey referred specificaly in his statement, has been scrupulous to keep his argument against the adoption of this amendment on a carefully reasoned plane. He has appealed to reasonable men to study this measure and to see its dangers.

Jim Folsom, who I suspect does not know how to whisper or gumshoe, came out openly and vigorously against Amendment No. 4, calling it undemocratic. Lister Hill, who is equally averse to pussy-footing, only this week called again for the overwhelming repudiation of the Amendment, stating that it would be "ridiculous to require a voter to explain the Constitution of the United States to the satisfaction of a local Board of Registrars when from the beginning of our government the Supreme Court of the United States has differed and divided on the proper explanation of the Constitution and its many provisions." Wed. 10-2-46

I could list many other prominent citizens who have taken the same stand as the distinguished men I have mentioned. I could name many hundreds of loyal Democrats, members in good standing of the same political party for which Mr. McCorvey presumes to speak, who are aware of the dangers in the Boswell Amendment and are opposing it openly and with all the vigor which they can bring to that task.

If there has been any whispering in the campaign, it has been on the part of those supporters of Amendment No. 4 who are using fear and bigotry as their weapons instead of reason. When one listens to the wild charges of speakers for Amendment No. 4, compared to the reasoned argument, calm and dispassionate, of men like Dick Rives and Charles Dobbins, one is inclined to think that the attacks on the Amendment have been on a far higher plane than that chosen by its defenders.

The opponents of Amendment No. 4 are not whispering. They want the issues to be discussed freely, fully and openly, so that every citizen of Alabama may know just what he has at stake in this proposal. When he knows, he can vote intelligently on November 5.

FOR PARTY INTEGRITY

Editor, The Advertiser: The Advertiser

One writer to Grandma says (about the Boswell Amendment): "We elected a state committee of good Democrats who are supposed to do the best thing for the party, then why not follow them?"

It is a fatal mistake to see nothing in the Boswell Amendment but a "party." It is not a question of a party but the honor and good of the whole people. The adoption of that amendment would help to build up a set of Bourbon politicians, entrusted with autocratic powers, who could control and corrupt the electorate. We don't want rule of men in Alabama as this Amendment would permit, but rule of law. If we have not seen enough of rule by the fickle will of men among the nations, instead of rule by constitutional government, then our senses of observation and experience are blind.

Talk about giving three persons the power to register or not to register every person in a county, is absurd. I wonder how three registrars would know whether I can understand and explain the meaning of everything in the Federal Constitution and the Alabama Constitution when they don't know it themselves. If the blind lead the blind, both will fall in the ditch. Why is it that some political trickster, as it might be, who gets himself appointed as registrar is supposed to know more about constitutions than other persons who may have three times his education and intelligence? Montgomery, Ala.

If it is just to exclude the Negro from voting, as in fact it is, then this method is unnecessary, deceptive, and based on falsehood. For the State to practice a lie will raise a generation of liars. Governments, the same as individuals, should see honest and speak the truth. That Amendment if adopted and honestly enforced would exclude a large part of the Democratic Committee from voting and might catch Mr. Boswell himself for he does not know the meaning of everything in the Federal Constitution if you put a smart lawyer on the other side.

We ought to have an educational qualification for voting, and not a fine spun legal test which the lawyers themselves cannot pass if the rule is honestly applied. Intelligence and a record free from crime are the right qualifications for a voter whether he is white or black. The real gist of this Amendment is based on hate, not on ideals or good citizenship. THE AMENDMENT LEADS

On the basis of returns from 1,325 boxes out of Alabama's total 2,362, voters favoring adoption of the Boswell Amendment lead by some 7,500 votes. The vote as of this writing is 58,332 for, 50,956 against.

Whether or not returns from the remaining 1,037 boxes confirm the trend, or reverse it, The Advertiser is proud to find that so many Alabamians, withstanding all pressures, voted according to their unshakable belief in democratic principle.

When one considers that this contest was waged against virtually the entire Democratic party machinery in Alabama by a loosely organized group of independent citizens, the close vote is surprising and heartening. Thurs. 11-7-46

Of particular interest is the strong opposition vote in Montgomery County. It was the disappointing performance in Imperial Jefferson County which went far toward giving a lead to Amendment No. 4.

The Advertiser calls attention once more to the indefensible delays in reporting vote totals from the various counties. What excuse can there be for election officials who, 24 hours after the polls close, still hold back their count of the votes? Such tactics give rise to suspicions that weaken the confidence of the people in their elec-

Alabama (Boswell Amendment--RESULTS)

Ballot Lack Claimed In Boswell Bill Vote

Birmingham, Ala. News-Age-Herald Sun. 11-24-46

BY HUGH W. SPARROW
News Staff Writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 23 — The much-debated Boswell amendment has been proclaimed the law of the land, but just the same, apparently authentic reports echoed in capital gossip centers this week indicating that in at least two anti-amendment counties in North Alabama the Nov. 5 vote on the Boswell and other amendments was restricted.

Heavy voting DeKalb County polled about 10,000 votes in the general election but Democrats and Republicans alike report that a "shortage" of amendment ballots allegedly prevented many from voting in the amendment election. Only one-third of the total vote cast for sheriff and other candidates was tallied up for and against the Boswell proposal.

In another North Alabama county — Franklin — which cast about twice as many votes in the general election as it did for and against the amendments, election officials reportedly did not issue amendment ballots to absentee ballot applicants unless they specifically requested them. Only about 10 amendment absentee ballots were tallied, but in the general election more than 400 absentee votes were chalked up.

Just how many votes would have been cast for or against the Boswell amendment in DeKalb County had it not been for the reported ballot shortage remains problematical, but one authoritative source in DeKalb County estimated that "between 3,000 and 4,000 DeKalb Republicans and a great many Democrats" would have voted against the proposal. Official returns disclosed that the amendment was defeated in DeKalb by a 482-vote margin.

THE DeKALB COUNTY SOURCE—Editor J. A. Downer, of The DeKalb Times, weekly Republican newspaper published at Fort Payne, was consulted via long distance after reports were first heard of the alleged ballot shortage from equally reliable Democratic sources.

Editor Downer disclosed that many persons—he identified two of them—had informed him of the scarcity of ballots. At the same time a prominent DeKalb Democrat reported that election officials said only 5,000 amendment ballots were received and voters had complained that the ballots were improperly allocated.

The newspaper editor said he had heard complaints of the shortage of ballots from several boxes, particularly from boxes in Precincts 16 and 19, and the Democratic informant said he had been told that many small boxes received an excessive number of ballots and larger boxes a correspondingly limited number.

"The first I heard about it came from two Republican candidates," Editor Downer declared. "One of them voted early on the morning of Nov. 5 and was told the amendment ballots had all given out. The other said that, when he voted, the amendment ballot supply at his box was just about gone. Since then, I heard the same story from quite a few others."

E. C. Mitchell, a candidate for probate judge, and John W. Bowman, board of revenue candidate, Editor Downer added, were the candidates.

General election and amendment ballots, it was ascertained here, were printed by the Brown Printing Company of Montgomery. A company official declared that an ample supply of ballots both for the general and amendment elections was forwarded to DeKalb election officials in Fort Payne.

DeKALB COUNTY CAST only 3,476 votes for and against Amendment No. 4, of which 1,497 were for and 1,979 against ratification. Nearly 3,000 more than that number voted for John J. Sparkman who was unopposed for United States senator and 5,850 votes were cast for Albert Rains for congressman.

DeKalb chalked up a vote total of 9,541 in the race for circuit judge, 9,424 for member of the Alabama House of Representatives and 9,824 for sheriff.

The Franklin County vote for and against the Boswell amendment totaled 3,036 with 1,216 voting for and 1,830 against. Franklin cast almost as many votes for unopposed Sparkman as it did for and against the explosive Boswell proposal and in the only state race in which the official returns are on file in the secretary of state's office—for associate member of the Public Service Commission — the tally amounted to 4,940.

In other races involving county offices, the poll was between 5,700 and 6,000.

SEVERAL OTHER NORTH ALABAMA counties voted against the Boswell amendment with slight totals and at the same time cast heavy ballots in the general election.

Among them were:

Blount, voting 735 for and 827 against for a 1,562 total, and between double and treble that total in the general election.

Cullman, casting 5,903 Boswell amendment votes — 2,915 for and 2,988 against—and polling between 7,000 and 8,000 in the general election.

Jackson, which voted 202 for and 1,005 against the Boswell proposal, polled between 2,000 and 3,000 in the general election. (In the recent special Democratic primary to nominate a successor to Sparkman in the House, Jackson's vote exceeded 7,000.)

Perhaps the most striking impression to be gained from a study of the Boswell amendment vote and the vote cast in the general election is that the vote in pro-amendment counties did not disclose such wide discrepancies between the amendment total and the general election tally. Maybe that's what the Black Belters mean when they crack: "North Alabama has the votes and we have the brains."

Two-Thirds Of Ballots Predict Adoption

Tue. 11-8-46

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., Nov. 7. —(AP)—With almost two-thirds of the vote in, the Boswell Amendment tonight apeared to have been adopted by a narrow margin, but its fate will not be definitely known until tomorrow when official returns are tabulated from several unreporting counties.

A count of 1,452 of the 2,362 Alabama polling centers gave this score:

For the amendment, 62,600; against, 53,391.

The vote restrictive measure, hotly contested and about the only issue on the Alabama general election ballot that generated much interest, led in 35 counties and trailed in the other 22.

The measure, presented as a means of preventing mass registration of Negroes as voters, was favored in industrial Jefferson County (Birmingham), but was voted down in the other three most populous counties—Montgomery, Mobile and Etowah (Gadsden).

Its advocates argued that the Negro registration question posed an immeidate threat that could be met only by the amendment. Opponents took the position that no such threat existed, and argued that the amendment could be employed to disqualify white persons as well as Negroes.

The amendment would require that a registrant for the vote be able to "understand and explain" the U. S. Constitution. County boards of registrars would pass upon each applicant's qualifications.

BIRMINGHAM, Nov. 11.—Despite the active opposition of Governor-elect James E. Folsom and a coalition of Alabama progressives, the reactionary Boswell amendment aimed at barring Negroes from voting was ratified at the polls Nov. 5. This new voting registration law requires voters to be "literate" and to understand and "interpret" any part of the U. S. Constitution.

The amendment vote at 2,052 of the state's 2,362 polling places was 81,877 for ratification and 70,064 against.

All major cities went against the amendment with the exception of Birmingham. Northern industrial counties voted down the amendment, while Black Belt counties, where the population, including a majority of Negroes, is almost entirely disfranchised, solidly supported it.

Progressives here feel that the growing movement for wider democracy in Alabama received a sharp setback with the ratification, but they are nevertheless encouraged by the large opposing vote, registered in the face of the most vicious Negro-baiting campaign in this state in recent years.

Leading opponents of the amendment have declared that it is unconstitutional, and that a real fight in the courts can result in wiping it off the statute books.

Alabama Passes Vote-Barring Amendment

TESTING TIME OF THE AMENDMENT

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

The official canvass of the recent vote on the Boswell amendment shows that Alabamians voted 89,163 for, and 76,843 against the restriction of the suffrage in Alabama. For better or for worse, Alabamians accept the verdict of the majority on the Boswell amendment. Sun. 11-17-46

But 76,843 Alabamians have said by their votes that the application of the provisions in the amendment must not operate to the detriment of the State. Such a number of vigilant Alabamians can constitute a powerful argument for justice regardless of what conditions may evolve in Alabama politics.

A full week after ratification of the Boswell amendment, The Chattanooga Times expressed itself editorially on the adoption of the restrictive amendment by Alabama voters. It reproduced the full text of the Boswell amendment, and then called the attention of Tennessee voters to the dangers of the provisions in the following words:

Under that amendment, registrars can, of course, disqualify most Negroes. But they could also disqualify most whites. The amendment gives a dangerous weapon into the hands of political machines.

There is no reason why politically-minded county registrars should not disqualify such white persons as they choose under the Boswell amendment. Not only must the applicant be able to explain and understand the Constitution, but apparently he must explain it to the satisfaction of a county board of three registrars. Since there are passages in the Constitution which could not be explained by the average white person in Alabama, we predict that this Boswell amendment will be used against poor whites by Alabama politicians.

When a State starts out to discriminate racially, it is liable to find it difficult to pass legislation which would hit one race and leave the other untouched. Such legislation would be clearly unconstitutional. So States pass such amendments as the Boswell amendment, leaving the State wide open for political machines to manipulate the white vote as well as the Negro vote.

The Chattanooga Times' editor speaks out of a wealth of experience with political machines. Perhaps no State in the South is so ridden by so many or such evil political machines as is Tennessee.

In Alabama there is wide concern over the probable use of the amendment. This concern, paradoxically, is felt among both supporters and opponents of the amendment. Opponents have openly expressed their fears of abuse, and sought to forestall that possibility by negative votes; advocates realize that quick, crude use of the discriminatory powers would result in public revulsion.

Those who voted for the amendment in the hope that its arbitrary powers would be used with restraint can find little encouragement in the immediate cry for still additional changes in the suffrage laws. Representative E. C. (Bud) Boswell, of Geneva, author of the amendment, is quoted in Friday's papers as wanting the Legislature to adopt "clarifying statutes." While Mr. Boswell's plans for further suffrage legislation may be entirely constructive, their development will be awaited with critical interest.

The Nation New York, N.Y. Sat. 11-23-46

UNTIL THE LAST GENERAL ELECTION THE state of Alabama had been an island of liberal refuge between the Scylla of Mississippi and the Charybdis of a Georgia which had relapsed into Talmadgism. But on November 5 Alabama voted to adopt the Boswell amendment to its constitution, an amendment which will set up the most highly restrictive voting qualifications in force in any state in the Union. The author of the amendmentment is Representative E. C. (Bud) Boswell of Geneva, in Alabama's Black Belt. Mr. Boswell wanted "to save our Alabama traditions and principles from the frontal attack of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and their radical allies . . . [to] maintain and insure white supremacy in Alabama, by law, for the salvation of both the Negro and white races." The amendment provides that each applicant for the right to vote must appear before the board of registrars in his county and be able to read, understand and explain, to the board's satisfaction, any section of the Constitution of the United States. It is a foregone conclusion that registrars will accept no Negro's explanation of any part of the Constitution. The leaders of organized labor and many newspapers opposed the amendment, but the rank and file of labor in the large industrial districts failed to go to the polls. Racial prejudice is probably stronger than loyalty to a union, and every questionable device known to racial bigots was brought forth by proponents. The amendment was the baby of the state Democratic committeemen, and passed by the small majority of less than 10,000 votes out of 200,000 cast. It will, of course, be tested in the courts at the earliest opportunity. Many of the state's lawyers believe it will be held unconstitutional. Meanwhile, Alabama has taken a step backward, much to the dismay of those who have been priding themselves on the advancing forces of progressivism within the state.

MR. BOSWELL ON THE AMENDMENT

Editor, The Advertiser: Thurs. 11-21-46

It was thought when the Boswell amendment was adopted by a substantial majority of the voters of the State, that the opposition would gracefully submit to this mandate. Had it been defeated, you would have not heard a squawk from me.

My purpose in submitting Amendment No. 4, sponsoring it in the Legislature and before the people, was, as I believe, in the best interest of the State as a whole and for the peace and betterment of both races. I am not a Negro hater or baiter.

Answering the following paragraph of your Sunday editorial:

"Those who voted for the amendment in the hope that its arbitrary powers would be used with restraint can find little encouragement in the immediate cry for still addititonal change in the suffrage laws. Representative E. C. Boswell, of Geneva, author of the amendment, is quoted in Friday's papers as wanting the Legislature to adopt 'clarifying statutes.' While Mr. Boswell's plans for further suffrage legislation may be entirely constructive, their development will be awaited with critical interest."

My desire for clarifying statutes is for the purpose of relieving the minds of some honest voters who were misled and deceived by false statements and propaganda disseminated by some who opposed the Boswell amendment. I do not believe or claim that the amendment is perfect, that it is entirely self executing, or that it will settle, forever, the race question, forever fomented in Alabama and the South by negrophiles from the North and East, aided by some selfish local politicians; but I do believe that Governor-elect Folsom and the other members of the board who will appoint the registrars for Alabama for the next four years, will name honest, fair and judicial minded men and women on these boards, and that the amendment will be fairly, honestly and efficiently administered to permit orderly registration of qualified applicants and prevent the mass registration of those not qualified without subjecting registrars to damage suits for trying to maintain in Alabama an intelligent electorate.

ROGERS SAYS:

Boswell Amendment Latest in Series of Efforts to Legally Disfranchise Southern Negroes

By J. A. ROGERS The Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.

(The views expressed in this column are those of the writer and do not necessarily express the editorial opinion of The Pittsburgh Courier.—The Editors.)

Sat. 11-23-46

ALABAMA voters have written into their State Constitution a law known as "The Boswell Amendment" which will disfranchise Negroes even more thoroughly than the notorious Grandfather Clause of Reconstruction.

The Grandfather Clause, which was outlowed by the U. S. Supreme Court in 1915, ruled that the descendants of anyone who had not the right to vote on Jan. 1, 1867, should be exempt from such voting requirements as owning property, paying taxes and being able to read and write. Of course this left the Negro out in the cold since his father and grandfather were likely slaves or could not have voted anyway. On the other hand, any white man, however illiterate, could vote provided that even one of his great-grandparents had the right to vote on the above-mentioned date. Among the States practising this most barefaced robbery were, of course, Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina, and Virginia.

Mr. Rogers

Prior to the election the Boswell Amendment was frankly stressed in speeches as being designed to keep Negroes from the polls. It provides that would-be voters must be able "to read and explain" the Federal Constitution.

THE BIG CATCH is in "explain." Not even the judges of the United States Supreme Court have been able to "explain" among themselves after a century and a half of arguing what the Constitution really means as regards the rights of the "common" man. Explaining the Constitution is like explaining the Bible. Every individual and every sect make their own explanation and insist they are right. Since Alabama whites are to determine what is the "right" explanation, even in the case of the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments, which give equality to Negroes, every Negro can be barred and every white allowed to vote. To make it easier for the whites, the $300 property qualification has been removed.

And so it is. Each time the U. S. Supreme Court outlaws one of these "Negro-stoppers" a new one is invented. It is clear, therefore, that sooner or later the Federal Government will have to step in and make a uniform voting law for the United States. If the new Republican Government means to show any sense of right and justice it will have to do this. The most elementary concept of democracy demands that all citizens of the United States should meet the same requirement at the polls, especially in the case of Federal offices such as President, senator and representative.

THE SOLID SOUTH is bent on cheating the Negro of his citizenship rights. There will be no decent Government in this Nation as long as there is a solid South. In olden days a method of punishment was to chain a corpse to a living man and let him perish. The Bible speaks of this "body of death." The solid South is a body of death and unless the right thinking people of this Nation find some way to free themselves from it, all are doomed.

The chief sufferer from this body of death is now the Northern Democratic party. In my opinion, the Northern Democrats have a more advanced sense of human rights than the Republicans. In it are some men with a fine spirit of right such as Henry Wallace and Senator James M. Mead, not to mention such near-Southerners as President Truman and Senator Dennis Chavez of New Mexico. But what is the actual truth? The fortunes of these good men, thanks to the party system, are tied to those of such unspeakable creatures as Bilbo and Rankin. When you support a good Democrat the chief beneficiary, has been, and is, a rotten Democrat. For instance, the Republican victory will oust Bilbo as "mayor" of Washington and put in his place a Republican, Senator Capper, a very good man for both whites and Negroes. Had the Democrats won, however, even with such excellent men as Mead and Lehman, Bilbo would have remained entrenched.

SINCE THIS is undeniably the case I think Henry Wallace showed mighty poor logic when he called the Democratic party, the "progressive" party and said that the line between the two parties was "clean-cut." He said Nov. 10, "I don't think there is a ghost of a show for a progressive's winning in 1948." Progressive? Why is Mr. Wallace not now President? Would he say that the way he was knifed by his own party at the Chicago Convention in 1944 was progressive? The truth is because he stands for what is right, he has been kicked around politically by the Southern Democrats as if he were a Negro. One thing, I feel sure that every Negro who thinks clearly on his problem will agree that the Republican victory, since it has ousted some of his worst foes, is a decided step toward more democratic government, reactionary as are many Republicans.

The treatment of the Negro is the key to the whole question of just government in this Nation. And there has been very little clear thinking on that subject since the republic was founded. Thomas Jefferson, a slaveholder, wrote that all men are created free and equal and George Washington and others fought to prove it but still held on to their slaves. Negro slaves were used to build the Capitol at Washington and even to cast the Statue of Freedom on it. Few saw the incongruity of that and most Americans still do not see how the treatment of the Negro gives the lie direct to the democratic rule of which they boast so much. When you get right down to it what is the Federal Government, as it has always been administered, but a jim-crow affair? Good men, like Mr. Wallace, need to pull the facts apart and then assemble them straight. Party lines kill straight thinking as effectively as racial ones. 11-23-46

Eager to Be Citizens

THE BOSWELL AMENDMENT, which the voters of Alabama passed by a relatively narrow margin after a heated campaign, was frankly aimed to prevent the registration of Negroes. It requires that any registrant be able to "understand and explain" any section of the Federal Constitution. The tacit understanding, which might turn out to be an erroneous impression, was that it would be invoked only against persons of color. The judge and jury of the registrant's knowledge as to the verbiage and philosophy of the Constitution are the local Boards of Registrars. There can be no appeal from their judgment.

Thus extraordinary power is given to a small group of men in every county of Alabama. It is conceivable that even so learned a jurist as Mr. Justice Hugo Black could be disqualified as a voter by his local board. The registrars might hold that the constitutional views of the late Mr. Justice McReynolds were the only true and sound interpretations of the intent of the Founding Fathers and therefore Mr. Justice Black is both ignorant and heretical.

Since the local boards are clothed with such arbitrary and sweeping authority, it is easy to envision the peril that confronts the franchise of any citizen whose views the members of the board may oppose. Many white citizens would fail on even an elementary test, even if it were conducted honestly; any white citizen could be disfranchised at the will of the examiners, for they are the sole judges as to what is sound constitutional theory and what is error.

But some of the Negroes of Alabama, we learn from the Associated Press, are going to work earnestly in preparation for the examinations which must be passed if they are to vote. They are organizing schools on the Federal Constitution. In Mobile more than 600 already have signed up and classes will begin shortly. Negroes with college degrees will expound the Constitution and conduct quizzes.

The leader of the movement, a building contractor named J. J. Thomas, says it is planned to invite prominent white attorneys and Democratic leaders to lecture to the students.

"If we don't accomplish anything else," he told the AP, "we will have made our people better citizens by giving them understanding of their government."

Retroactive Feature Denials Challenged By Carmichael

Montgomery, Ala. Advertiser 10-20-46

Albert A. Carmichael, attorney-general nominate, in company with 15 other Alabama lawyers, yesterday issued a statement contending that passage of the Boswell Amendment would require re-registration of all voters whose right to vote is challenged by the registrars.

The statement called attention to a political advertisement by the State Democratic Committee which said, "There is absolutely no retroactive feature in the Boswell Amendment," and commented, "The quoted statements, in our opinion, are positively erroneous. Advertiser

"With the exception of those qualified under the 'grandfather clause', that is, registered prior to January 1, 1903, the statement argues that "the qualifications of any voter can be legally questioned in several ways." Montgomery, Ala.

The statement follows: 10-20-46

"In a political advertisement by the State Democratic Executive Committe favoring the adoption of Amendment No. 4, known as the Boswell Amendment, the following statements appear with the underscoring indicated: Sun.

"'There is absolutely no retroactive feature in the Boswell Amendment. It applies in no manner whatsoever to voters who are already registered. The fran- [illegible] Alabama voter now duly registered is in no manner endangered by the Boswell Amendment and no re-registration is authorized, permitted or required.' The Advertiser

"The quoted statements, in our opinion, are positively erroneous. The first 10 words of the Boswell Amendment are: 'After the first day of January nineteen hundred and three.' (General Acts Alabama 1945, p. 551). That Amendment then prescribes as additional qualifications for electors that the elector must be able to understand and explain any Article of the Constitution of the United States, must be a person of good character, and must understand the duties and obligations of good citizenship under a Republican form of government. If the Amendment is adopted then those additional qualifications would be applicable to every person registered after the first day of January nineteen hundred and three, whenever such person's right to registration might be legally questioned. Our State Constitution guarantees life registration to those persons only who registered prior to January 1, 1903. (Constitution, Sec. 198.) The qualifications of any voter who has registered since that date can be legally questioned in several ways: Montgomery, Ala.

"1. The Legislature can require all voters to re-register.

"2. Under the law as it now exists, if any such voter changes his legal residence from one county to another, he must re-register in the county of his new residence. (Code 1940, Tit. 17, Sec. 36, Shepherd vs Sartain, 185 Ala. 439, 64 So. 57.)

"3. The present law (Code 1940, Titl. 17, Secs. 44 and 47) requires each Board of Registrars to meet for one week every year for purging the resigistration list, and provides that the names of those disqualified as electors under the Constitution shall be stricken from the registration list.

"In the event of the adoption of the Boswell Amendment, if the qualifications of any voter registered since January 1, 1903 are questioned in either of these methods, and if that voter cannot prove to the satisfaction of the Board of Registrars that he is of good character, understands the duties and obligations of good citizenship under a Republican form of government, and can understand and explain any article of the Constitution of the United States, then the voter may be disqualified. Sun. 10-20-46

"We feel it proper to call attention to the potential use of that power to deny freedom of speech and expression to a prospective candidate for political office, or to any citizen actively opposed to a political boss or poll list, and he could be dismachine which might be in control of a Board of Registrars. Such a candidate or citizen, if he refused to bow to the will of those in control, could be cited to appear before the Board, his name could be purged from the poll list, and he could be disfranchised. Whether such a power would long remain in disuse, human nature and practical politics being what they are, is a question to be considered by every elector, before he casts his vote on November 5th."

"Respectfully submitted,
"CARROL T. PRINCE."

Celebrated Alabama Minister Speaks Out For Boswell Plan

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.
Sun. 11-3-46

Alabamians who believe that literacy should be the qualification for citizenship are in favor of the Boswell Amendment, Dr. John W. Fraser, formerly pastor of the First Methodist Church of Montgomery, and presently pastor of the Methodist Church of Greenville, declared last night.

Dr. Fraser

"I favor the Boswell amendment, or Amendment No. 4 for that and a variety of equally tenable reasons," he continued.

"The Boswell amendment does not disqualify the Negro any more than it disqualifies the illiterate white man. To me it means simply the encouragement of enlightened suffrage.

"I think that former Gov. Frank M. Dixon stated the entire question concisely and clearly when he pointed out that the proposed amendment does not bar anyone from the privilege of voting so long as he has the mental agility to learn anything.

"The proponents of the amendment showed acumen and foresight when they selected the Constitution as the test of literacy. Its meaning is clear and it does not require any unusual erudition to understand its broad meaning.

"Obvious Benefit"

"The Boswell amendment is in one sense an obvious benefit both to white and colored people in Alabama, in that it is a challenge to people to enlighten themselves on Government."

At the same time, Jesse M. Williams, Jr., prominent Montgomery attorney, member of the State Democratic Committee, and member of the special committee of 200 who are urging Alabama to approve Amendment No. 4, offered this terse observation on the question to be voted upon Tuesday:

"All that we in the South salvaged out of the Civil War was our self-respect and the right to determine what was an intelligent electorate. Certainly Alabamians don't want that to be infringed upon. I believe it is necessary that this amendment be passed to keep outside influences from taking those rights away from us."

'Turn Out the Vote' Is Cry in Alabama

The Constitution Atlanta, Ga
Sun. 11-3-46

By ROBERT H. DENLEY

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 2 (INS)—Special committees were at work Saturday to "turn out the vote" in Alabama's general election Tuesday—but for a reason thought by many to be more vital than the nation-wide scrap for control of Congress.

The issue in Alabama is the retention of white supremacy.

Alabama voters will elect nine Congressmen to swell the Democratic party in the House.

They also will elect a full slate of State officials, including, as Governor, James E. "Big Jim" Folsom—the six-foot, eight-incher, who campaigned with a hillbilly band, made a reputation with his liberal kisses and won nomination with the largest vote ever given a candidate in the State.

But victory for those candidates is assured in Democratic Alabama. If only they were concerned, interest in the election would be negligible.

VOTE FURORE

The furore of "getting out the vote" has been churned up around one of nine proposed amendments to the State Constitution. Known as the Boswell Amendment after its author, State Legislator C. E. Boswell, the bill would require prospective voters to "understand and explain" the Federal Constitution to the satisfaction of local boards of registrars.

The amendment was designed to prevent mass registration of Negroes, which has been particularly feared in the State since a Supreme Court decision permitted Negroes to vote in Texas Democratic primaries.

On opposite sides in the debate over the bill are Gov. Chauncey Sparks, who favors it, and Gov.-Nominate Folsom, who opposes it.

Siding with Folsom have been, among many others, Alabama's senior Senator, Lister Hill, and the Republican candidate for Governor, Dr. Lyman Ward.

SUPPORTERS LIST

Backing the amendment are the State Democratic Committee, former Gov. Frank Dixon, Gessner T. McCorvey, Chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee, and another long list of public figures.

McCorvey formed a committee of some 200 to work for passage; Montgomery Attorney Richard T. Rives previously had formed a state-wide council to fight the amendment.

The CIO, in Mobile, actively opposed the measure.

Oddly enough, the question as to whether the Negro should or should not be allowed to vote has not been the major issue in the heated arguments which have raged for weeks.

Foes of the amendment have held that it would be declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court, that it is unnecessary since present laws are adequate for the purpose in mind and that it would disenfranchise many present voters. There have been heard argument terming the bill "undemocratic" or "discriminatory."

RABID PROPONENTS

Proponents, denying those assertions, have advanced arguments ranging from the rabid declarations that no Negro should be permitted to vote in the State to the milder theories—of Gov. Sparks, for instance—that the franchise should come gradually to the Negro and that the amendment would treat equally the unqualified Negro and the unqualified white man.

Regardless of the interest in the bill, however, few on either side believe the election will close the issue on white supremacy. If the Boswell Amendment passes, it will get its first test in the Supreme Court, observers believe. And, if it fails, a substitute is expected to be formulated.

A FIRST AMERICAN SPEAKS

To the Editor of The News:

Congratulations to you and your editorial staff for the stand you have taken against the Boswell amendment.

I don't profess to know very much about politics but I think the Boswell amendment is one of the most damaging pieces of legislation that has come before the voters of Alabama in 50 years.

I came from a race whose ancestors met Columbus when he found this country. I guess some of my ancestors met the Mayflower and I have not in all my time heard such a howl from the white man about the Negro until some representative we elected who professed to look out for the interest of the common man.

The colored man has striven to qualify himself to be a good American citizen and it seems a catastrophe since he has educated himself according to the white man's laws to have such a turmoil arise to retard the progress he has achieved in the last 50 years. Evidently some white and colored must suffer together at the hands of a few.

I hope that the voters of Alabama will take this amendment under very serious consideration before we set Alabama back 50 years more. Mon. 11-4-46 C. L. BAILEY.

BISHOP SHAW APPEALS

To the Editor of The News:

For 22 years I have lived in Birmingham. I was born in Mississippi. I think I know the tradition and custom of our Southland. I also know that in this Southland of ours we have some of the truest friends of the nation, and because of that reason and among others, I am writing this letter.

The Boswell Amendment No. 4, is now before the citizens of Alabama to be approved or disapproved by its voting citizens. Such an amendment is an awful one. It is awful because it is undemocratic. Any movement in the United States that is undemocratic is dangerous. It is awful because it opens the gate of racial hatred and prejudice wider than ever before in Alabama. It is awful because it is in violation of the Fifteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. In my humble judgment it does not stop at crippling the Negro's opportunity to live in the four freedoms that were so gloriously pictured to the world by the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

If the Boswell amendment is adopted we will lose all the glorious four freedoms as promulgated by the noble late President Roosevelt.

One-third of Alabama's population is made up of Negroes, and only about 1 per cent of that one-third can vote. Does voting destroy democracy? I am of the opinion that voting helps democracy. If the Boswell amendment is adopted it will be done not by the Negro vote but it will be done by the white citizenship of our state. I am, therefore, making this appeal to the religious white people of all denominations and to every fair-minded white person regardless of church affiliation to save the state from the shame and disgrace which will give to it the blackest spot that it has ever had, which only, or perhaps eternity could blot out.

I believe that the majority of the white citizens of our state are willing to see the Negro people make progress, and I cannot lay down behind the walls of fear while the brave and courageous white people are fighting our battle. I feel that I ought to speak in behalf of the thousands of Negro people who have selected me as their leader.

My son who, like the sons of many other fathers, white and black, had an awful experience in the jungles and war zone of the South Pacific. The Negro soldier has fought on every battlefield from Bunker Hill to Okinawa. They were fighting that our flag, the Stars and Stripes, might ever float in the breezes. It is the Negroes' flag as well as the flag of the white people. We have no other flag but the Stars and Stripes, and may I appeal again to our white citizenship to continue to let that glorious flag which is a symbol of our protection float over our people with equal protection that democracy may not perish in Alabama. B. G. SHAW,

Bishop of the First Episcopal District of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church.

TRAVESTIES OF DEMOCRACY

To the Editor of The News: The News

Regardless of all the diverging explanations and reasons, the Boswell amendment is essentially a matter of racial discrimination at its vicious worst. True, it can be used against labor. Certainly it makes it more possible for political cliques to wield a small voting populace to their own desires. And because of the clause requiring the registrant to have been "gainfully employed" during the past 12 months it could be used against housewives. But this is not expected in any of these cases. From any angle, the Boswell amendment is directed towards keeping in political slavery an entire segment of our population.

The other night this writer attended a meeting of zealous individuals who wanted to organize to defeat the amendment. Citizens from all walks of life spoke, condemning the nature of the measure, wisely recognizing that used wrongly it could affect the personal freedom of each of them.

At the heighth of the proceedings a group of Negroes entered the room—one of the city's leading business men and several of his associates. As the modest Negroes took a rear seat, the specter of racial superiority arose from the audience as distinctly as if a giant serpent had bared its fangs. Without the utterance of a single word it was apparent that the Negores were out of place. During the remainder of the evening not one white person spoke a word of welcome or appreciation that they had joined in the fight.

This incident brings forth clearly that the defeat of the Boswell amendment is only a minor step in the erasing of the foulest of all our social ills. It is good that we superior whites have joined forces to defeat the legislation. But it is also an avowed truth that many of us are fighting it purely because of its threat to one of our individual phases of security. It is one of our greatest weaknesses that we fight constantly—both nationally and internationally—the boil, not the cancerous matter in the blood stream.

We meet. We organize. We fight the Boswell amendment because it threatens something pertaining to our narrow scope of life. It is good that we do this. But why can't we realize that if we took steps further, constantly and consistently, such travesties of democracy would have no place in our scheme of things?

Why don't we organize to provide more education for the Negro? Why don't we do something about health conditions among the lower classes of both whites and Negroes? Why don't we set up committees to combat machine politics—rather than play ball with them because they give jobs to our cousins? Why don't we set up a fair, uncomplicated

Birmingham, Ala.

Set of standards for voting—based on color? Why don't we look into our complicated civic—aside from intelligence, not quality? Find—any means to combat this thing—which gives each of us a sickening attitude of condescend- ing grace towards the Negro?

Ministers Of Three Religions Oppose Boswell Amendment

The News Birmingham, Ala.
Tue. 11-1-46

While 80 Alabama clergymen of Protestant, Catholic and Jewish faiths attacked the Boswell amendment as "undemocratic and unnecessary," a statewide committee of 200 citizens issued an appeal, stating that its adoption "will assure the continuance of the kind of government in Alabama which was handed down to us by our fathers."

The clergymen expressed their stand in a statement signed by them and issued by Richard T. Rives, Montgomery attorney and chairman of a statewide committee opposing the amendment. The clergymen warned that the amendment, to be voted on next Tuesday, would place "arbitrary and undefined powers" in the hands of the registrars and that such powers might be used "unjustly and capriciously."

The Birmingham pastors conference earlier in the week in a resolution decried the appeal to Christianity as a reason for supporting the amendment. This action was taken after advertisements appeared in newspapers advocating support of the amendment as a Christian movement.

THE STATEWIDE COMMITTEE urging adoption of the amendment which is known as Amendment No. 4, is made up of leading citizens from all parts of Alabama.

Gessner T. McCorvey, chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee, issued a statement explaining the reasons for the amendment. Unless the law is changed, entitling Negroes who can read and write to voting privileges, there will probably not be a white county officer elected in some 18 or 20 of the Black Belt counties "where the Negroes in some counties outnumber the white population from five to one to 10 to one," the statement predicted.

In signing the statement by the clergymen, Bishop Thomas J. Toolen, of the Catholic Diocese of Mobile, said that he considers the proposed amendment "unethical, undemocratic and un-American."

The Rev. C. C. Daniel, Montgomery, district superintendent of the Methodist Church, predicted that "adoption of Amendment No. 4 (the Boswell amendment) would set our state back for many years."

"We definitely need clear standards for citizenship, but such standards should be applied effectively and without discrimination to all kinds of people in our state," the Rev. Daniel added.

In the statement explaining the reasons for the amendment, Mr. McCorvey pointed out that, when the Alabama Constitution was adopted in 1901, white supremacy in the state was satisfactorily protected by the requirement that voters be able to read and write, and had a tax assessment of real or personal property of $300 on which they had paid taxes.

"NOW, HOWEVER, there are but a few hundred Negroes of voting age in Alabama who cannot read and write and the result is that boards of registrars are required to register practically everyone, both black and white, who are over 21, regardless of their ability to vote intelligently," the McCorvey statement continues.

Then warning that this should be changed to avoid the wholesale election of Negroes in the Black Belt counties, the statement asserts that the Boswell amendment meets this need by vesting some discretion in the boards of registrars.

Under the Boswell amendment the registrars are permitted to pass on whether the applicant is of good character and whether he understands the duties and obligations of good citizenship under a republican form of government and whether he understands the constitution under which we live and can explain it, Mr. McCorvey said.

Registrars, he added, are not going to give a law student examination in constitutional law to applicants to register. He emphasized that the Boswell act is not retroactive and that all citizens who have registered will remain so.

"Negroes possessing the necessary qualifications under the Boswell act should be registered, but there should be no mass registration of Negroes until they are qualified to vote intelligently," the statement continued.

IN AN ADDRESS TO Birmingham Optimist Club members yesterday, Dr. John Hall Jones, head of the psychology department at Howard College, warned that "discriminatory action against an inferior race means a step toward oblivion."

"It is plain, claptrap foolishness," he declared, "for Southerners to give in to a sectional inferiority complex and to take it out on some one inferior to us.

"How can we, as Southerners, be citizens of the United Nations and the larger humanity if we can't be united in our cities, states and sections?" he inquired.

Look Away, Dixieland

Sun. 11-3-46

For the past six weeks the newspapermen and the party seers have been as busy as bird dogs across the land to scent out how the election is going. By the land I mean those teetering states in the middle tier from coast to coast which are "doubtful," in which something of political importance will happen on Tuesday.

Perry

None of these peepers has bothered to peep into the South, for the very good reason that the Southern states cast their dice back in the Summer when the primaries were held. Where the one-party system is fastened, the general election day ordinarily is just another day in November. And yet, this year, one or two things are cooking in the South that will bear watching.

One, of course, is Rep. Helen Douglas Mankin's write-in race for election in Georgia. Though liberal Mrs. Mankin received most of the votes in the primary, she was euchred out of the nomination by the notorious unit count. She is running, nevertheless, "as a Democrat" — probably because she feels the party name has something to do with democracy.

Next door, in Alabama, the poll-tax-attenuated electorate will vote on a proposed constitutional change—the Boswell amendment—to decide whether the state's elections hereafter are going to be more or less of a mockery than in the past.

The Boswell amendment is suavely billed as the countermove of the politicians of Alabama's black belt (black for the soil, not the people) against the Supreme Court's ruling against the all-white primary. It would leave it entirely up to the registrars in all the communities of the state whether the name of any citizen should be placed on the books for voting. As pointed out by the Birmingham Age-Herald, to give the registrars this arbitrary authority "means that the white voters (the black ones mercifully unmentioned) could be victimized at the behest of prejudice, partianship, or sheer meanness." Many of the state's newspapers are fighting ratification, as are Sen. Lister Hill, Rep. John Sparkman, Senator-nominate, and Big Jim Folsom, who will be the next Governor.

Alabama's black belt extends roughly from Montgomery, the capital, westward into Mississippi. It is the state's "Shelby County" and is accustomed to political power. Its politicians are backing the Boswell amendment as the only means of preventing "Negro domination at the ballot box." They profess to believe that Big Jim Folsom's pledge to kill the poll tax will be honored by the legislature, and this prospect also is made to ring in their alarm.

The truth, well known in Alabama, is that the poll tax (cumulative) always has rested as heavily upon the white suffrage as upon the Negro suffrage. It is also widely realized that the real aim of the backers of the Boswell amendment is to rivet control of the state in the black belt, thus staving off a long deferred reapportionment which would give industrial Birmingham and the Tennessee Valley counties in the north, the most progressive section of the state, fair representation in the legislature.

Democracy, as Prime Minister Clement Attlee stiffly informed the benighted Russians last week, has become a much abused word "often used by those who have never understood or practiced the democratic principles." The Boswell amendment, drawn by an Alabama Democrat, submitted by a Democratic legislature is advanced in the name of "White Democracy." If ratified (and nine out of 10 of the people can't even vote on the issue), the suffage right of a million and a half Alabamans will be cut loose from even the vague protection in law it formerly has had.

I think what happens in Alabama Tuesday will more importantly affect our form of government than a dozen Congressional elections in the nip-and-tuck states above the 40th parallel.

EQUAL OPPORTUNITY

The News Birmingham, Ala. Wed.

To the Editor of The News:

Congratulations on your keen foresight to see the grave danger and great danger lurking in the infamous Boswell amendment and the stand your paper is taking to defeat it.

Today millions of persons are dead and countless thousands of others are maimed for life because of the recent conflict between right and wrong, freedom and enslavement. All men should have a right to speak and vote in electing the persons who will represent us in governmental affairs in this our great nation. This right should not be determined by race, creed or color, as Mr. Horace Wilkinson apparently advocated in a letter that recently appeared on this page.

No man has ever been so wrong as Mr. Wilkinson when he says or attempts to influence others into believing that "the one aim and objective of the colored man is social equality and intermarriage." Maybe Mr. Wilkinson isn't big enough to keep abreast of the ever-changing times. 9-18-46

Just as America has advanced in commerce, travel, science and other fields that have gained worldwide respect and admiration for us, Americans have also been doing a great deal of improvement in their thinking. (This applies to people who are progressive and democratic in their thinking and not of the Ku Klux Klan, Bilbo, Rankin, Wilkinson type.)

The intermarriage angle upon which this whole structure of false thinking seems to be based has long been overworked. The two words, social equality, that have been used for too long a time by peddlers like the ones named above, are losing their drawing power.

People like Mr. Wilkinson are also rapidly losing followers. Too many American lives have been lost in the two world wars to let hate-mongers like him take away the very things for which the last shots were fired only a little more than a year ago—life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

Negroes are not interested so much in the pet phraseology social equality as they are in what present-day Americans are trying to do—see that everyone gets at home and abroad (even here in Alabama) equal opportunity. Why can't Negroes have equal opportunity in education, jobs and government? Is it because, if given an equal opportunity, they may prove to the other people in America the propaganda upon which people like Mr. Wilkinson have thrived so long?

Mr. Wilkinson and all who think like him are as antiquated in their thinking as the pony express and covered wagon are when compared with our modern streamlined trains.

All people who believe in democracy and true Americanism should be willing to support their democratic ideals by defeating any step to deny full citizenship to any citizen.

45e 1946 Alabama (Boswell Amendment)

Is White Supremacy Threatened?

The News

BY J. F. ROTHERMEL

The Boswell amendment is, of course, a move to maintain white supremacy in Alabama. That is the avowed purpose of the amendment, according to Gessner McCorvey, chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee. It is more, however, than an effort to keep Negroes from voting in the Democratic primaries. It is aimed at barring Negroes from qualifying to vote in any election. Birmingham, Ala.

But is white supremacy threatened in Alabama? In order to make sure that white supremacy is maintained, is it necessary to resort to so undemocratic, so potentially dangerous, a system of registering voters as the Boswell amendment would permit? Some facts, frankly and candidly considered, should be of help in answering those questions.

According to the 1940 federal census, out of Alabama's total population of 2,828,961, the Negro population was 983,290, or 34.7 per cent. Fear of Negro domination in Alabama, therefore, amounts to a fear that 34.7 per cent are going to dominate 65.3 per cent.

When persons of voting age alone are considered, the threat to white supremacy in Alabama becomes still more remote. The Bureau of Census estimates that of the total potential voting population in Alabama, those of 21 years of age or over, 1,559,680, only 520,980 in 1940 were Negroes. That percentage is only 33.4, or almost exactly one-third. The fear again is that one-third will control the two-thirds. Fri. 11-1-46

That is the situation as of 1940. If the prospects were that the percentage of Negroes in the state would grow larger, then it could well be that a threat might exist to white supremacy. But that is not so. The percentage of Negroes in Alabama has been steadily growing less.

Here is the percentage of Negroes in Alabama according to the last five federal censuses:

1900	45.2	1920	38.4
1910	42.4	1930	35.7
1940	34.7

No reversal of this trend is expected. Population experts believe that the percentage of Negroes in the South, including Alabama, will continue to decline. The prospect of Negro domination is remote indeed.

As far as the state government is concerned, Alabama does not need the Boswell amendment to maintain white supremacy.

There are, of course, Alabama counties in which Negroes are in majority. There are 18 such counties, according to the 1940 census, as contrasted with 49 counties in which whites predominate. It is likely that since 1940 the number of Negro-majority counties has declined.

These 18 counties, with their 1940 percentages of Negro population, are:

Autauga	53.4	Lowndes	84.7
Barbour	55.5	Macon	82.1
Bullock	78	Marengo	72.8
Choctaw	53.1	Monroe	52.9
Clarke	52.2	Montgomery	50.1
Dallas	73.8	Perry	71.8
Greene	83.8	Russell	59
Hale	71.9	Sumter	79.4
Lee	56.5	Wilcox	78.3

It will be noted that these counties all lie in a broad belt across the south-central part of Alabama. They include all the Black Belt counties. The other counties in the list adjoin Black Belt counties with the single exception of Lee.

In these counties also the general trend has been toward a smaller percentage of Negro population. In 12 of the 18 counties there were, relatively, fewer Negroes in 1940 than there were in 1930 or in any decade since 1900. Even in the six counties which showed a larger percentage of Negroes in 1940 than they did in 1930 there was a relative decline in Negroes as compared with census years before 1930. Not one of the 18 counties has as large a proportion of Negroes as it had in 1910, the first census year after the present constitution was adopted. The argument that a stricter registration law is needed now does not find support in any changes in population status.

The fears in these 18 counties are not to be brusquely pushed aside, however. They are understandable. But the question is whether the Boswell amendment is a wise, justifiable solution of their problem.

The 18 counties have a total population of 583,729. That is 20.6 per cent of the state total. Their white population is 214,586, or 11.6 per cent of the white population of the state and 7.5 per cent of the total population. What about the nearly 80 per cent of the state's population who live in counties where there are white majorities? Shall they be called upon to face the dangers of adopting a repressive amendment that threatens every minority in the state?

(Note—An appeal to voters issued by Gessner T. McCorvey under authority granted by a majority of the State Democratic Executive Committee to spend $3,500 of party funds in behalf of the Boswell amendment says there are only 17 counties with more than 50 per cent Negro population. Presumably the committee omits Montgomery County from its list. Counting out Montgomery and its 114,420 population would greatly alter many of the percentages given above.)

Stage Thunder

The News Birmingham, Ala.

The debate on the Boswell amendment is now in its last week. It is a striking thing that now, as at the beginning of the argument, supporters of the amendment have only one point to make. It is that a flood of Negro votes is impending and that the amendment is the only way in which to prevent this inundation and so to preserve "white supremacy." To support that contention, they have presented statistics intended to frighten and confuse, just as they have brushed aside our present laws on registration as though they were not on the statute books. The strange thing about the Boswellians is that they think about Negro voting much as did the men who wrote the state constitution a half century ago, but show little respect for the work of the hands of those men. Sat. 11-2-46

One proponent of the amendment has emerged from political retirement to lead this crusade. In the speech he has delivered on a number of occasions he submits figures calculated to harrow the souls and freeze the blood of his listeners, making their hair stand on end "like quills upon the fretful porcupine." Without this amendment, he asserts, 200,000 Negro voters will engulf the state, three Negroes will be on the Jefferson County delegation, while similar black ills and perils will descend upon the commonwealth. What this prophet of doom has done apparently is to assume that all bars will be down and that voters and their choices will proceed on the basis of the division of our population into whites and Negroes.

News Birmingham, Ala.

That's nonsense, of course. The provisions for registration we now have are stringent and searching to an extent which most of us do not realize. Implemented by a little additional legislation which can be enacted next year without constitutional amendment, as suggested by Peyton Bibb in his Kiwanis speech Tuesday, they will prevent the mass registration about which there is so much shouting. Even without such legislation, the qualifications now required will serve, as they have done for 43 years, to keep our voting lists free of the deluge which threatens us in the imagination of some. The truth of the matter is that this is largely stage thunder. White supremacy is in no such danger. The customs of the South are not thus imperiled. Birmingham

The Boswellians have a strange logic by any test. Here is Gessner McCorvey, father or godfather of the Boswell amendment, admitting that the proposal has its flaws, but that it can be perfected in a couple of years. Nevertheless, he cries out for approval of the amendment. He grants that the amendment is defective, but he asks the rest of us, who see still other weaknesses, to go along with him on the theory that any expedient is better than none. Expedient against what? Against mass registration by Negroes. But is that a real danger? Are we to approve a constitutional amendment which not only would undermine the rights of white citizens, but is quite gratuitous as a barrier to undue Negro registration?

Ala.

Instead of confirming this inept and bungling amendment in the hope of setting it right in two years, isn't it sensible to wait that time for the formulation of an amendment which does not have to be apologized for? Isn't it sensible, if the people of Alabama want a suffrage amendment, to call on the Legislature to draft something which will not make dictators of registrars and which will stand a good chance of receiving the okeh of the U. S. Supreme Court? If the voters of the state at large are receiving some of the literature which is being distributed in Jefferson County on behalf of the Boswell amendment, they should realize that it is not a good cause which has to be promoted by such intolerant appeals.

Those Who Fear Change

The News Birmingham, Ala.

The history of voting is replete with examples of what is taking place in Alabama today. Every effort to extend the franchise has found opposition in the ranks of those who through the franchise have favored positions. It is so in Alabama today, where much support of the Boswell amendment comes not from a fear of any particular group voting, but from a fear that increasing the total of voters will bring a shift in political power away from those who now hold it.

The Black Belt is the center of support for the Boswell amendment. The Black Belt is also the section of the state that for 36 years has successfully fought all efforts to reapportion the State Legislature as was supposed to have been done after the 1910 federal census and each 10 years thereafter. The Black Belt also failed to get its candidates for governor and for senator nominated in recent elections. Most election portents in recent years have pointed to the diminishing power of the Black Belt in state affairs, where it has ruled so long. Mon. 10-28-

Now the state again is witnessing a fight that very largely is a test of Black Belt strength. For the Boswell amendment is an attempt to limit the franchise substantially to meet the wishes of those who would lose by change. One effect of the amendment would be to increase the difficulty of putting an end to the injustices of the present system of apportioning the State Legislature by which a vote in one county, Bullock for example, has eight times the weight in state affairs of voters in another county, Cullman for example. The Boswell amendment would tend to continue, even to perpetuate, Black Belt domination of the Legislature. It could well be used to reverse the present tendency of other sections to gain more strength in state affairs through election of governors, senators and other state officials who do not reflect the Black Belt psychology.

Mon. 10-28-46

These criticisms of the Black Belt, however, are not intended to impute to Black Belters such base emotions as greed or selfishness. This paper is convinced that many Boswell amendment advocates are earnest and conscientious. They are convinced that what they are doing is for the good of the state. But in so thinking they are victims of one of the oldest delusions in mankind, the delusion that their good is also society's good. They are confusing, naturally enough, their own welfare with the state's welfare.

Sharp limitations on the franchise always create the danger in the class which has the franchise of thinking that its interests are identical with those of the state. The Black Belt has fallen a victim to that danger. Its citizens are victims even when they are sincere and high-minded, as many of them are. Their present alarm is but illustration of the truth of a statement by Schiller: "Every change makes the favorites of fortune anxious." The Black Belt is anxious and fearful at the prospect of change. It wants to retain the status quo because that is where its strength and power lie. Most of its people cannot see that the welfare and the progress of the state as a whole call for reapportionment and for a gradually expanding electorate.

LIKE HITLER

The News, Birmingham, Ala.

To the Editor of The News-Age-Herald:

Las' night I listened to some speaker rant over WSGN about the Boswell amendment till I was disgusted. At that time I had not made up my mind just how I wanted to vote. By the time he finished I knew I was going to vote against it, and so was my family.

I closed my eyes and thought I must be listening to Hitler rave again like he did before we got into the war, when we used to listen to him and then to an interpreter.

If this amendment is passed, all free privileges will be taken away from the lower and middle-class people.

Such abuse as went on over the air last night is enough to destroy all the good feeling that has ever existed between the races in Alabama. If we can't live in a small state like Alabama without such selfishness and abuse, how do you think an agreement can be reached at the conference table? If that amendment passes, we might as well be living in Russia. I am surprised at Southern people. I used to feel embarrassed for Mississippi with her Bilbos and Georgia with her Gene Talmadges, but Alabama now has so many like them I wonder what the end will be.

The trouble is the Southern or Black Belt "bigwigs" can see from now on that good old North Alabama is going to send some men to Montgomery. Wake up, North Alabama voters. Come to the polls and defeat this amendment, No. 4, and continue to live in a free state instead of under county dictators.

VIEWPOINT OF NEGRO YOUTH

To the Editor of The News-Age-Herald:

We have been doing much reading of the daily paper for our social studies class, and have been stimulated quite a bit with the opinions found in the various editorials. We would like to share our opinion as high school seniors.

A great many people are disillusioned and mistaken about the Negro and social equality. We, as young Negro Americans, do not feel that the members of our race are setting as their goal intermarriage.

We do, as a people, have our aims and desires, which are upon a different scale altogether. Some of our most important goals are equal educational opportunities, equal health facilities, the right to develop our capabilities as normal human beings to the fullest extent, to fill any position for which we are qualified, and the right to vote in a democracy. Are these aspirations too unreasonable to desire?

Anyone who was not denied the right to fight equally for this country should not be denied the foregoing privileges.

Many people do not realize that on the whole we are fundamentally the same, that we all desire the same things, peace, security and the right to vote. St. Paul sums it up for us in Galatians 3:28 when he says, "There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female, for ye are all one in Christ Jesus."

WHAT WHITE SUPREMACY?

To the Editor of The News-Age-Herald:

Since the proponents of the Boswell amendment are basing their entire argument for passage of this rotten proposal on the issue of supremacy of the white race, let's examine the facts concerning white supremacy.

White supremacy as advocated by the Black Belt politicians and their ilk is a myth. They would have us cry on their shoulders because many of their counties have two or three times as many Negroes as white people. But they would have you overlook the fact that they originally gained control of the State Legislature by using these same Negroes as a basis for securing the controlling number of legislators they have illegally held ever since 1910.

When the Legislature was apportioned after passage of the constitution of 1903, one of these periled Black Belt counties secured three legislative representatives and one senator on a basis of having almost 50,000 people within its borders. Here is the amazing fact: Of these almost 50,000 people, only one-fourth were white. They didn't mind using the Negro population to gain control of the Legislature. Since gaining control of the Legislature by using their Negro population as the basis by which to do so, they have defrauded the majority of the white people of this state of their franchise as voters. They have always stood for Black Belt supremacy, instead of white supremacy.

The voter in Jefferson County has never had a voice in the state government because the Black Belt legislators have knowingly, willfully and with full intent deprived him or her of the franchise as a voter. They have blocked at all costs any efforts to apportion legislators in accordance with the population figures as required by our state law. They have thereby deprived our white people of the vote by destroying the meaning of the vote, in that our vote for better schools, Jim Folsom's program, etc., is meaningless unless they, the eminent directors of our state's destiny, see fit to allow the people to have their wish.

Don't forget that under this proposal, if boards of registrars had the desire to register and use every Negro in their counties, theirs is the absolute and unquestioned right to do so. This is a terrifying thing to consider, if you really believe that the right to vote is a sacred thing and should not be handed to every person who wants to register because some agitator had insisted that he do so.

Frank Dixon tells the people that unless they pass the law this November we will never get another chance to pass it. This is an argument for passage; but strangely it constitutes the strongest argument against passage I have heard. If we can get by this political Black Belt monster then, thank goodness we will not be confronted with it again. If this monster is passed and becomes law, it can never be repealed, regardless of how rotten and filthy its administration may be. The same Black Belt boys who have passed it, and who have refused to let the people rule by preventing legislative reapportionment, will never allow its repeal, however sickening it may become. It was passed by them with their own particular benefit in mind and will be used by them for their own selfish benefit, not the people's.

WHO PLAYS THE FIDDLE?

The Advertiser, Montgomery, Ala.

The Boswell Amendment (Number 4 on November 5) is going to be defeated, but the people's victory over this brazen attack on their democratic rights will be hard-won. Thurs. 10-10-46

In this fight over the suffrage (which is not a party fight at all) the money of al Democrats is being used by the State Democratic Executive Committee to put over an Amendment to the State's Constitution on which even the members of the Committee themselves are far from unanimous.

That money is being used freely for newspaper space all over Alabama, and for mailing out hysterical printed matter calculated to stir the race issue.

Desperate before the indictment drawn so ably by Dick Rives, which shows that the Amendment hazards the franchise of every voter, present and future, the Horace Wilkinson-Frank Dixon crowd floods the state with that old voter-getter — "White Supremacy."

And now it seems that the voters of the Democratic Party in Alabama must face the money power not only of the State Democratic Executive Committee but also the propaganda mills of the present State Administration—at the taxpayer's expense.

It is our old friend Joe Poole, State Commissioner of Agriculture, and defeated candidate for Governor, who makes use of a State publication to propagandize for the Boswell Amendment.

Mr. Poole's office puts out a little paper known as the Alabama Farmers' For Sale, Want and Exchange Bulletin. It is an excellent medium of exchange for farmers. On the editorial page are these words: "Items can be accepted from farmers only, and the materials must be farm products, implements, and articles used in the furtherance of the agriculture industry."

But the rules for farmers apparently do not apply to Mr. Poole.

He uses the entire front page of the issue of October 15 for publication of his views on the controversial Boswell Amendment. Mr. Poole, an elected official of the people of Alabama, uses their money to tell them how they should vote!

It matters little, perhaps, that Mr. Poole displays his ignorance of the facts.

Example of his misinformation: "If we do not adopt the Boswell Amendment, we in Alabama will have little choice about who votes in the primaries, because, in view of a decision rendered by the United States Supreme Court in a Texas case, our Boards of Registrars will be forced to register practically everyone who applies for registration."

The fact is that the Texas decision had nothing whatever to do with registration. Instead, it declared that once registered, a voter must be permitted to participate in the primary. The Texas decision leaves intact every safeguard of our present Constitution against mass or indiscriminate registration.

But the people of Alabama may as well prepare for a deluge of such arguments from the political masterminds who are determined to reduce the voting lists and control elections in Alabama. They have money for their campaign, and now Mr. Poole gives them the use of his State-financed publication.

Obviously the big money, fiddling away strenuously at the tune of race hatred, is behind the Amendment. The hope of Alabama is that voters by now have grown suspicious of that worn-out, ugly tune, and look closely at the men who play the fiddle.

REGISTRARS NOT ATTACKED

Some of the supporters of the Boswell Amendment have said that the opponents of this amendment are attacking the registrars. It has been alleged that we have reflected on the integrity of the registrars.

There is no truth in those charges.

Opponents of Amendment No. 4 respect the registrars. Actually, some of the registrars are themselves opponents of the amendment. Montgomery, Ala.

The attacks are on the amendment itself. The registrars, who would have to interpret it if it were adopted, would be victims, along with the rest of us, of the amendment. They would have to bear the brunt of it.

We believe that registrars are, by and large, fine, honest people, selected because of their integrity and intelligence. We hope that the registrars to be appointed in the future will be similarly fine.

The trouble with the Boswell Amendment is that it provides a weagon for somebody who might have other ideas, who might some day appoint registrars for political purposes. Sun. 10-27-46

The simple truth is that Amendment No. 4 is undemocratic and full of dangerous possibilities. For this we do not hold the registrars responsible.

COMPARISON WITH GEORGIA

Editor, The Advertiser:

Every white man in Alabama should vote for the Boswell amendment on November 5. An examination of the situation in our neighboring state of Georgia caused by the mass registration of Negroes there is proof of the necessity of the Boswell amendment passing if we value our homes either sentimentally or monetarily. In Atlanta about 20,000 Negroes registered in a few weeks under Arnall's program.

Now mass meetings are being held in the oldest part of Atlanta in an attempt to keep Negroes from moving in next door to white people, and values of real estate are falling, due to the fact that if this continues many parts of Atlanta will not be fit for white people to live in.

In the forthcoming election Atlanta has barely missed having a Negro coroner. There were 29 white candidates and one Negro in the Democratic primary and with the votes of 20,000 Negroes, just registered, the Negro would certainly have been elected. It was only by the discovery of the fact that the Negro had a criminal record that his name was removed from the ballot, and even then the registrars fear being sued for removing a candidate's name from the ballot. The Boswell amendment will prevent such situations as this occurring. Alabama has been a good state to live in. A vote for the Boswell amendment will help to keep it so.

J. F. DUGGAR, JR.
Hope Hull, Ala.

(Editor's Note: The Georgia and Alabama situations are not comparable. Georgia dropped her restrictions on registration—all. Alabama has all the restrictions that have been in force since 1901. No "bars" have been erected. If additional qualifications are needed, they should be honest, genuine qualifications capable of fair administration. The Boswell Amendment, crude and unlikely to pass scrutiny by the U. S. Supreme Court, is not a solution at all.)

Poole Supports Boswell Plan To Brake Outside Influences

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. Wed. 10-9-46

Joe Poole, commissioner of agriculture and industries, losing candidate for governor in the last primary, but who supported Jim Folsom in the second primary, is in favor of the Boswell amendment, thus putting himself squarely against the position taken by Mr. Folsom.

Mr. Poole cites conditions that have arisen since the white Democrats of Alabama adopted the constitution of 1901 and says "Supreme Court decisions and economic conditions have nullified the objectives we attained in 1901 and it is necessary to adopt the Boswell amendment if we wish to retain White Supremacy.

Mr. Poole believes that Negroes who have proven themselves worthy of the ballot should be allowed to vote by our present system of county boards and registrars. But he does not believe the gates should be opened for an inrush into our primaries of many thousands of Negroes who are not yet fitted as citizens to vote.

Mr. Poole fears that if the Boswell amendment is defeated, the result will be an Alabama delegation to the next National convention favoring the nomination of Henry Wallace or some other leftwinger.

Writing from the point of view "of a layman" Mr. Poole presents the following argument for the Boswell amendment: The Advertiser

Cites Qualifications

"I am for the Boswell amendment because, if we adopt the amendment, we, the people of Alabama, through our boards of registrars in the several counties, will be able to determine who will vote in our primaries. If we do not adopt the Boswell amendment, we in Alabama will have little choice about who votes in the primaries; because, in view of a decision rendered by the United States Supreme Court in a Texas case, our boards of registrars will be forced to register practically everyone who applies for registration. At present the chief requirement to vote is the ownership of $300 worth of property and the ability to read and write. In my opinion, integrity, good citizenship and some degree of intelligence should be the qualifications for voting.

Little Choice

"I realize that technically the Boswell amendment provides that you have to be able to understand the Constitution to be entitled to vote, but don't forget that it will be left up to three registrars in each county to decide who will vote. These registrars are appointed by three of your elective officials—namely, the governor, the commissioner of agriculture, and the state auditor. Whereas, if the Boswell amendment is defeated, the registrars will have very little choice as to what applicants they will register.

"Now, I want to say here that I am not a "Negro baiter" and I am not a "Negro hater." I just don't think it is to the best interest of the Negroes to be given wholesale franchise at the present time. On the other hand, all citizens who appreciate the Negro for his real worth should see to it that the best Negroes are allowed to register and vote with their good white folks. Otherwise we will force all the good Negroes away from their white folks into a party sponsored by Republicans, renegades, a few well meaning but misguided people, and a lot of left-wing intellectuals. This, in my opinion, would prove a calamity for Alabama.

The Average Negro

"The reason the present requirements relative to voting were written into the 1901 constitution was to disfranchise the average Negro, because conditions were in such a deplorable state in Alabama at that time the best white people banded together and submitted the present requirements for voting to the constitutional convention. However, Supreme Court decisions and economic conditions have nullified the objectives we obtained in the 1901 constitution and it is necessary to adopt the Boswell Amendment if we wish to maintain "white supremacy" in Alabama. Let me repeat, if we do not adopt the Boswell Amendment, our Boards of Registrars are going to be forced to register practically all Negroes, and this wholesale registering of Negroes means wholesale bribery and debauchery at the polls. With feelings running high, as they usually do in most elections, you can imagine what the condition will be with all of these Negroes voting, a lot of whisky mixed up in the primary and certain outside influences preaching social equality. I am old enough to personally know that the two races are getting along better today than they did back when all Negroes voted before 1901. Montgomery, Ala.

"Misleading Reports"

"Many misleading reports have gone out. In The Montgomery Advertiser of Oct. 1 there is a statement by the Hon. Gessner T. McCorvey, chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee, correcting an erroneous statement that has been spread abroad to the effect that everyone will have to register again. Mr. McCorvey says this statement is not true, that everybody who is registered at present and who is allowed to vote at present will continue to be allowed to vote in the primaries. The Boswell Amendment only affects those who have not registered and will register in the future. So much for the Boswell Amendment. Wed. 10-9-46

"There are a lot of other issues that will develop as a result of the adoption or defeat of the Boswell Amendment. In my opinion, if the Boswell Amendment is adopted, Alabama will send a conservative delegation to the next national convention, who will be interested in nominating someone for president who will represent all the people—all groups. If the Boswell Amendment is defeated, in my humble opinion, we will send a delegation instructed to vote for Henry Wallace or some other left-winger who is interested chiefly in one group.

Sees PAC Support

"Specifically, I charge the chief support behind Henry Wallace is the PAC and the Communists of America. As you no doubt know, the PAC is a strong, left-wing political organization sponsored chiefly by the northern leaders of the CIO Union. These leaders advocate, stand for, and fight for, not only economic equality, but social equality between the races. Note that I said the northern leaders stood for this. This is not intended to indict the leaders of this organization in Alabama; but, at the same time, we must admit the Alabama leaders are forced in many instances to go along with these northern leaders. These same leaders are the ones who brought on one strike after another during the war when our boys were fighting on foreign battlefields; and, in many instances, they were deprived of sufficient ammunition, equipment, and even food, due to strikes brought about by these leaders.

"The CIO leaders advocate high wages for the members of their organization and always oppose increased prices for the farm groups. The present average income of a CIO worker is more than $2,800 per year. The average income for the farmer, including his wife and two children, is less than $1,600 per year. I do not think that any one group should prosper at the expense of other groups, but all groups should be treated equally and should be allowed to share alike in the fruits of the nation's economy. The CIO-PAC is going all out against the Boswell Amendment. This is one of the strongest reasons why we, who do not share in their political philosophy, should be for it.

"In conclusion, if you want to be dictated to by outside influences who are inspired and coerced by the Negro vote in the North and East, then vote against the Boswell Amendment; but, if you believe in State's rights, in local self-government, and that Alabama is capable of running its own affairs for the benefit of Alabamians, both white and black, vote for the Boswell Amendment.

Proposed Amendment No. 4 'Undemocratic'; Eight Others Okehed

Birmingham, Ala.

Gov.-Nominate James E. Folsom declared in an announcement issued today from Cullman that he would vote "yes" for all proposed amendments to the constitution scheduled for a vote in the Nov. 5 general election except the so-called Boswell amendment.

"I will vote 'no' on proposed Amendment No. 4, the so-called Boswell amendment," he declared, "because this amendment is undemocratic because it further restricts the right of franchise. At the present time the voting franchise is so restricted that a very small percentage of our citizens are able to participate in our primaries and elections." Fri. 10-25-46

Folsom said in his announcement that "many people have requested my opinion on the various amendments to be voted on Nov. 5."

"AS THE NOMINEE FOR GOVERNOR of the dominant party in Alabama," his announcement added, "I think it is my duty to make my position clear on each. And in line with that position I have also given the reasons as set out below:

"Amendment No. 1. I will vote yes. Reason: This amendment is of a local nature. Since it was advocated by the legislative representatives of the counties concerned, I favor its adoption.

"Amendment No. 2. I will vote yes. Reason: This amendment will enable the State of Alabama to obtain federal hospital funds for the various counties and communities of this state.

"AMENDMENT NO. 3. I will vote yes. Reason: This amendment is of a local nature affecting the town of Haleyville. Since the legislative representative of that district advocates this amendment, I am supporting it."

After announcing he would vote "No" on Amendment No. 4, and giving his reasons, Folsom's announcement continued:

"Amendment No. 5, I will vote yes. Reason: This amendment merely allows several towns and cities in Alabama voting privilege on local taxation. Believing in taxation by consent of the taxed, I favor its adoption.

"AMENDMENT NO. 6. I will vote yes. Reason: This amendment gives the legislators a longer period in which to debate and consider the various issues. I support this amendment because free and unrestricted debate and free and unrestricted elections are necessary to any free people.

"Amendment No. 7. I will vote yes. Reason: Air transport has become a leader in the transportation field. In order that Alabama shall stay abreast in air transportation, it is essential that we have airport facilities. It is necessary for this amendment to pass in order that we may participate in federal funds and acquire Army airfields.

"Amendment No. 8. I will vote yes. Reason: This amendment helps to make available essential hospital service to all the people of Alabama. I favor it.

"Amendment No. 9. I will vote yes. Reason: This amendment concerns only Mobile County. It was sponsored and approved by the legislative representatives of Mobile County, and I will therefore support it."

DR. WARD RAPS BOSWELL PLAN

CAMP HILL, Ala., Oct. 10—(AP)—Urging defeat of the Boswell amendment, Dr. Lyman Ward, Republican nominee for governor, said today that knowledge of the Constitution would be an unfair test of a voter's qualifications.

The amendment would require registrants in Alabama to be able to "understand and explain" any section of the U. S. basic law.

"If the real reason is for a literacy test," Dr. Ward said in a statement, "then some standard piece of English rather than the Constitution should be selected.

"No person seeking the ballot should be called upon to interpret the Constitution while wiser men are uncertain as to its meaning."

Citing the recent disclosure that all members of the Macon County Board of Registrars had resigned following a Negro's lawsuit in Federal Court charging members of the board refused to register him because of his race, the GOP nominee said:

"Under conditions as they are now, an increasing number of lawsuits is bound to spring up. If the Boswell amendment becomes a law, there will be still more lawsuits."

And, he added, it will be "increasingly difficult to get honest, fair-minded men and women to serve on the boards of registrars."

"There is absolutely no retroactive feature in the Boswell amendment," McCorvey said in a statement.

"It applies in no manner whatsoever to voters who are already registered. The franchise of any Alabama voter now duly registered is in no manner endangered by the Boswell amendment, and no re-registration is authorized, permitted or required."

He criticized as "absurd" a contention by Richard T. Rives, Montgomery attorney, that the amendment, if adopted, would be retroactive to 1903 and endanger the franchise of every Alabama voter who has registered since that time.

Amendment Opponents Openly Charged With 'Whispering Campaign'

McCorvey Hits Boswell Plan's

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

The party chairman, one of the leaders in the fight to obtain adoption of the amendment to tighten the State's qualifications for voting, said in referring to Rives' statement:

"Only in desperation would opponents of the Boswell amendment adopt such tactics in their efforts to defeat this very fair and reasonable constitutional amendment.

"We defy those leading this fight to point out any single solitary provision whatsoever, either in our constitution as it now stands, in the proposed constitutional amendment, or in the laws of Alabama providing for, authorizing or even permitting any re-registration of a voter who has already registered."

The amendment, to be voted upon Nov. 5, would require prospective voters "to understand and explain" instead of being able to read any section of the Federal Constitution.

ANTHROPOLOGY

Editor, The Advertiser: The Advertiser

If I never write another line please allow me space in which to commend Mr. Horace Wilkinson and his learned academic viewpoint on race as it is concerned in the Boswell Amendment. If I hadn't seen or heard his name anywhere I would have thought his speech came from no less than Ales Hrdlicka himself; though, of course, I know nothing of the latter's viewpoint, socio- or politically, on the graces of the White versus the Black Man. Montgomery, Ala.

There are minds naive enough to believe that since all humans exhibit similarities, possibly identities, that we are all "brothers under the skin." Also, there are those among us who came down South during the bonanza of the gold rush period of the late War, who are NOT Southerners and who hold divergent views on race, the most outstanding characteristic of which is the optical phenomenon of color-blindness. To them, having lived near the cesspool of Ellis Island without benefit of their "first papers," is it any wonder that they do not understand the meaning of White Supremacy? and of the pride (some call it "prejudice") in answering to the genus of Anglo-Saxon? . . . Just as every anthropologist knows, there is race differentiation; and where you have differentiation you will surely find the qualities of Superiority and Inferiority. Wed.

It is no accident that a Negro has never produced an Aristotle. It is no accident that a Negro has never produced a Poincare. It is no accident that a Negro has never produced an Ogden or a Richards. It is no accident that a Negro has never produced a work of abstract thought beyond the crassest superstition. It is no accident that the circularity and sphericity of the earth happened to be discovered by a White Man. Neither is it an accident that Jesus Christ happened to be a White Man. 9-25-46

And however imperfect it may be, it is no accident that it is the White Man who pulled himself—he—AND THE NEGRO—out of the Stone Age and made of this world what it is today.

And if some Atomic Court of the future ever decides that creation of the earth is a botch job. . . . You are right! . . . It will be the White Man who will blow it to bits!

WHY NOT REQUIRED VOTING?

Advertiser Wed. 9-25-46

Editor, The Advertiser:

Congratulations for your stand on the forthcoming election and the proposed Amendment No. 4—more popularly known as the Boswell Amendment. This is one bit of proposed legislation that should interest every one in Alabama.

To most of us it matters not if the law is unconstitutional. Leave it to the legal fraternity to debate that. The important question is whither does it lead? Everywhere but in Alabama the trend is toward more liberalized voting laws. Georgia abolished the poll tax only last year and also passed a law permitting 18-year-olds to vote. For some years both North Carolina and Virginia have permitted anyone of legal age to register and vote regardless of race, color, or creed — in accordance with our Constitution—and without the payment of a poll tax. The Advertiser

Judge Wilkinson freely admits that the purpose of the amendment is to prevent the Negro vote. The good judge seems to have forgotten about a Corporal named Adolph, and in his forgetting he would have Alabama take a long step back toward the horse and buggy days that all other States are getting away from. North Carolina with its Negro citizens with voting privileges has never had any "nigger trouble." Virginia, too, has been singularly free of race troubles since the Negro has had this privilege.

So we see that the gentlemen here in Alabama who are sponsoring this amendment are actually setting up straw men and knocking them over like duck pins. They are fighting windmills that do not exist. Then what is their real purpose?

Frankly, I don't know. Whatever the purpose, it is not what they tell us it is . Obviously they are less worried about this one per cent Negro vote than they are about the voting records of certain whites. Under the proposed amendment if they can prevent the Negro registering, they can also prevent anyone else registering. The law will protect no one. You will have no legal rights. Your qualifications will be on a strictly personal basis.

If these gentlemen really want democratic government, why not a law requiring everyone to vote. Let those who fail to do so pay a poll tax. Instead, the men whom we are asked to follow, are leading back toward the Civil War and Reconstruction days instead of marching toward an elgihtened 20th Century. Wise men will think carefully before following them into the by-paths of intrigue whither they are pointing. Yes, some strange bed fellows get into politics.

Poll On Boswell Amendment At Troy

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. Wed. 10-30-4

For this issue we decided to have the students speak not on a national or international issue but on a prominent problem soon to confront the voters of Alabama. Nov. 5, 1946, the voters of Alabama will say "yes" or "no" on nine amendments to our State Constitution. The amendment receiving so much attention and creating such a great controversy is known as the Boswell Amendment. (It will be shown on the ballot as Amendment No. 4.)

Considering the seriousness of the issue, it seemed appropriate to use the following question in this week's student opinion poll:

"Do you think the Boswell Amendment Should Be Passed?"

Auxford Sartain, Jr.: No. I think that the passage of the Boswell Amendment would set back democratic progress 50 years. The stated purpose of the amendment is to prevent Negroes from voting in the Democratic primary. The State Democratic Executive Committee has pledged itself to support "white supremacy." They claim that allowing the Negro to vote in the primaries would result in the election of Negro officials in some sections of the State. As of yet, the Negroes in the South have never voted as a bloc. They have voted as individuals and not as a race.

In regard to the actual provisions of the amendment, I cannot believe that the local boards have the necessary qualifications to determine just which voters are able to understand and interpret the Constitution. I also question their fitness to determine the "moral character" of the individual.

Ollie Baker. No. The Boswell Amendment in its true sense would benefit all Alabamians. But in my estimation it will never be used for that and that alone. If it is passed, an oligarchy will be formed and we will no longer have a democratic way of voting.

The main purpose of the amendment is to exclude Negroes and other persons objectionable to the board of registrars from voting even though they are qualified.

Before we pass this amendment, which would permit the color of a man's face to determine his voting status, we should remember that as Dr. Frank P. Graham, speaking at the Southern Conference for Human Welfare said: "It takes both the black and white keys of the piano to play "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Ann Hadley: No. I do not think the Boswell Amendment should be passed. First, is it a scheme or a trick? It purports to be a general provision on voting qualifications while, as has been admitted, it is designed to exclude Negroes from voting. It is my belief that we should exclude all false, deceptive and trick laws which will in time produce just that kind of citizenship.

I also believe that the Boswell proposal is a sure way to build an oligarchy and produce the worst corruption and injustice possibe. We don't want that in our democracy!

Mike F. Bannon: Yes. The Boswell Amendment will be a restrictive measure with which each individual registry board will wield the right to select who, in their opinion, should vote. The board of registry will judge both white and colored and will make themselves so obnoxious with their constitutional queries that the populace as a whole will finally arouse themselves from their long time political lethargy with such strength as to cause the repeal of the amendment in question, plus other restrictive laws. Sometimes poison has to be cured with poison. The poisonous Boswell Amendment would help as an antidote to purge our poisonous political situation.

Marion Nixon: No. If the Boswell Amendment were passed, I imagine Alabama would be shocked at just how few people would actually qualify to vote. Passing the amendment would bring on an oligarchy which is positively wrong for the people of our State. In fact, I am of the opinion that the voting laws could be made more liberal so that more people could have actual participation in the State's government. We call ourselves a democracy but if we allow this amendment to be passed we are going directly against the ideals of our nation.

Charlie Trussel: No. The proponents of the amendment claim that the sole purpose is to retain a white primary. The amendment says nothing about a white primary, but it has a lot of high-sounding phrases like the understanding of the Constitution, good citizenship and good morals as requirements for voting. If the law makers write an amendment that states one thing and tell us that they expect it to accomplish another, how are we to be sure what to expect from it?

Because of the race prejudice in Alabama, the issue of white supremacy is a good political football, but in this instance it is being used to get an amendment passed that could very easily subjugate the large majority of the people of Alabama.

Joseph D. Barlar: No. The Boswell Amendment should not be passed because it is undemocratic, unconstitutional, and un-American. If passed, the amendment will give a few men the power to decide who can and who cannot vote in Alabama. When a government ceases to function by the people, it ceases to be a democratic government. Any but the blind can see that this amendment is nothing more than an unlawful ruse to keep the Negro from voting. It is contrary to Federal law and I believe that if it is passed and put into effect the Federal government will intervene. Worst of all is the fact that it is un-American. Negroes, Jews, Japanese-Americans and whites have fought alike for this country. Surely all of us should at least be able to vote in it. How can any true American say to a man because his skin is black, "You cannot vote. You have no right to say how this state is to be run. You are to do as I say because your skin is black and mine is white." Is this the American way?

As college students and potential leaders it is our duty to know what goes on in our State government and to oppose the things we think will be bad for them. Through my faith in the fairness of the people, I believe the Boswell Amendment will be overwhelmingly crushed on Nov. 5. — The Tropolitan, student newspaper, Troy State Teachers' College.

The Old Order Labors To Impede Progress

The Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky. Thurs. 11-7-46

ONE of the unhappiest results of Tuesday's elections was Alabama's adoption of the "Boswell Amendment" of its State Constitution. Here is another of those futile and desperate efforts by so many people in the Old South—the people who elect the BILBOS and TALMADGES—to set a block in the path of advancing democracy.

The amendment frankly was designed to restrict suffrage; specifically, to keep Negroes from voting. It was seized upon when it became obvious that the poll tax is passing and sooner or later will be gone everywhere. It was urged to get around the Supreme Court rule that it is unlawful to bar Negroes from primary elections. It provides that in order to vote, a man or woman must "understand and explain" the United States Constitution.

This is not necessarily evil in itself. But the amendment goes farther. It gives to local boards of registrars the power to be judge and jury in the matter. Alabama's own Justice HUGO BLACK could be barred, if his board decided it didn't like his explanation. Every person who became a voter since 1903 would be subject to the test.

Something of the sort was tried in North Carolina around the turn of the century, but died of its own iniquity when a highly qualified Negro made a test of it. It is part and parcel of the labored efforts of South Carolina—and now, EUGENE TALMADGE promises, of Georgia—to take primary election laws out of the statute books and permit the Democratic Party to make its own rules to admit only whites to the polls. These are all efforts that

But all is not as bad as it seems. It was encouraging that the opposition to the amendment was so logical and articulate and representative. Among those who the Klan and Senator LISTER HILL, challenged it were Governor-elect FOLSOM and The margin of its approval was more than 100,000 votes. More and more there is this protest for such patholess than 10,000 in a total of more than 100,000 votes.

Denial of fundamental civil rights, and nothing more, will be doomed, because they are directed to the old order is slipping, to be made of them.

Veteran Group Okehed Following Objection From KKK Secretary

Tues. 11-19-46

MOBILE, ALA., Nov. 18.—(AP)—Probate Judge Norville R. Leigh, Jr., announced today that he had granted a charter for incorporation of an organization known as the Negro Voters and Veterans Association of Mobile after receiving an objection to issuance of the charter from an official of the Ku Klux Klan.

The group filed incorporation papers in the County Probate Court last week listing among its objectives to "assist and encourage" members to vote. J. J. Thomas was listed as president, and he identified himself in an interview as a Negro building contractor.

Judge Leigh said he received a telegram from William Hugh Morris of Birmingham, secretary of the federated Ku Klux Klan there, asking that a charter be denied the petitioning organization "in the interest of continued white supremacy and common sense."

The jurist said he had notified Morris the application contained "nothing violative of the laws of the State of Alabama" and that "as required by law, charter was this day granted."

Morris sent Judge Leigh the following telegram:

"If the Negro Voters and Veterans Association is allowed to incorporate under the protection of the laws of Alabama, they will only add fuel to the already dangerous conflagration of discord and distrust that threatens to erupt into open conflict at several points in our State.

Negro Group Seeks To Vote By Studying U. S. Constitution

MOBILE, ALA., Nov. 20.—(AP)—The leader of a newly-formed Negro organization which has as one of its objectives "to assist and encourage" members to register and vote reported today almost 600 persons had signed up for classes on the Federal Constitution.

J. J. Thomas, 55-year-old building contractor and president of the organization, said inquiries were being received from other cities in the state regarding plans for the organization, which was set up following adoption of the Boswell Amendment in the Nov. 5 general election.

A corporate charter for the organization, the Negro Voters and Veterans Association, was protested by the Alabama Ku Klux Klan on grounds that it would "add additional fuel to the already dangerous conflagration of racial discord and distrust."

"Our race has never had an organization which has aroused so much interest among our people here as this one," Thomas said. "A lot of the applicants are war veterans and many of them are college graduates."

The Boswell Amendment, approved by a 10,000 vote margin after a heated campaign, requires that a registrant for voting be able to "understand and explain" any section of the Federal Constitution. County boards of registrars would pass upon each applicant's qualifications.

Endorsed by Gov. Chauncey Sparks and Democratic Party Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey, the amendment was presented as a means of preventing mass registration of Negroes.

"With this amendment we had to proceed to do something to qualify for the ballot so we decided to start these classes," Thomas said.

"Now, since so much interest has been created, we feel that if we don't accomplish anything else we will have made our folks better citizens by understanding more about their Government."

Thomas said plans for selecting teachers and starting classes would be made Monday night. He added that prominent white attorneys and Democratic Party leaders would be invited to lecture and to offer ideas for qualifying Negroes for the ballot.

McCorvey said in a statement following adoption of the amendment the ballot would be extended to Negroes "just as soon as they have qualified themselves to vote intelligently."

Voters' Organization Wins Ala. Charter in Spite of KKK Protest

MOBILE, Ala. — Although the secretary of the federated Ku Klux Klan objected, Probate Judge Norvelle R. Leigh Jr., last week, granted a charter to the Negro Voters and Veterans' Association, J. J. Thomas, a building contractor, president.

The Klan official said the charter should be denied in the "interest of white supremacy and common sense." One of the objectives of the organization is to assist and encourage members to vote.

Organization Plans Study Of U. S. Constitution

By The Associated Press

The leader of a newly formed Mobile colored organization, which has as one of its objectives "to assist and encourage" members to register and vote, reported Wednesday almost 600 persons had signed up for classes on the federal constitution.

J. J. Thomas, 55-year-old building contractor and president of the organization, said inquiries were being received from other cities in the state regarding plans for the organization, which was set up following adoption of the Boswell Amendment in the Nov. 5 general election.

A corporate charter for the organization, the Negro Voters and Veterans Assn., was protested by the Alabama Ku Klux Klan on grounds that it would "add additional fuel to the already dangerous conflagration of racial discord and distrust."

"Our race has never had an organization which has aroused so much interest among our people here as this one," Thomas said. "A lot of the applicants are war veterans and many of them are college graduates."

The Boswell Amendment, approved by a 10,000-vote margin after a heated campaign, requires that a registrant for voting be able to "understand and explain" any section of the federal constitution. County boards of registrars would pass upon each applicant's qualifications.

Endorsed by Gov. Chauncey Sparks and Democratic Party Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey, the amendment was presented as a means of preventing mass registra-

Voting Rights

Washington Post, D.C.

Believers in equality of voting rights, as provided in the Fifteenth Amendment to the Constitution and reaffirmed by the Supreme Court, will rise to a challenge contained in a recent statement by Governor Laney of Arkansas. Negroes will not be allowed to vote in Arkansas Democratic primaries this year, Mr. Laney has ruled. "We will conduct our primaries for State officials as we have always done," he asserted. "The Justice Department can crack its whip."

In an effort to prevent Negro voting in primaries for State offices, the Arkansas Legislature last year passed a law divorcing such primaries from those for Federal officials. Mr. Laney's invidious statement is a particularly insolent reminder that Arkansas political leaders intend to maintain white supremacy by defying Federal law with every maneuver possible. In this they have apparently ignored the example of a number of more progressive Southern States which have gone along with the Supreme Court's 1944 decision and have ceased to bar Negro voters from Democratic primaries—all, we might add, without the dire social effects foretold by the rabble rousers. The latest State to join this fold is Georgia, whose Governor has taken an active part in bringing about recognition of Negro voting rights.

The Department of Justice has announced that it will prosecute anyone who attempts to bar a person from voting because of color. This is the test which will determine whether the Constitution is to be enforced or to be passed off as mere eyewash. Clearly the Arkansas program, if carried out as planned, is a mandate for Federal action. We trust that the Justice Department will meet Governor Laney's challenge to crack its whip by vigorous prosecution of officials in high places. Sun 4-14-46

Negroes Vote In Arkansas Extra Primary

The Courier Pittsburgh, Pa. Sat. 7-27-46

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—Negroes voted for the first time in a Democratic Primary last Tuesday for members of Congress without any incidents, but they will be barred from a second primary to select a governor and other State officials on July 30.

Separate dates for the two primaries were made final when the State Supreme Court upheld a new present State law separating the two elections to prevent Negroes from voting for State officials. This legislation was passed after the Supreme Court decision outlawing the white primary and was held unconstitutional by a lower court.

Lee Whittaker, Fort Smith war veteran, who filed the suit to have the "extra" primary law declared unconstitutional, was a candidate running against Congressman Fadjo Cravens. The attempt to unseat Cravens was unsuccessful and all the State's Congressmen won renomination.

RULING ENCOURAGES VOTERS IN ARKANSAS

Pittsburgh Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.

LITTLE ROCK—(ANP)—Arkansas' 5,000 qualified Negro Democrats, members of the Arkansas Negro Democratic Association, expect to go to the polls during the summer Democratic State primary elections, leaders here declared last week following announcement of new department of justice's ruling on Negro voting.

Based on the United States Supreme Court decisions upholding the right of Negroes to vote, the department ruled that in the future denial of voting privileges will be subject to Federal prosecution under the criminal code. Negro leaders here disclosed they had expected such a ruling "in keeping with the trend of events."

VOTED IN PRIMARY

W. D. Jones, secretary of the Negro Civic organization of North Little Rock, said "a very appreciable number of voters cast their votes in the primary election April 2, and it shall be our concern to vote in all coming elections."

The Rev. E. C. Dyer, pastor of the First Baptist Church here, expressed apprehension "at an apparent belief of some officials that there is still hope of denying qualified Negroes the franchise through the double primary system."

"There is no fear of mass or bloc voting," declared J. H. McSonice, ex-secretary of the Arkansas Negro Democratic Association. "The Negro only wants a voice in government and his full State citizenship. It is to our benefit to see that only qualified Negroes are allowed to vote as independent individuals. Our Democratic organization has been built up with this in view." Sat. 4-20-46

GOV. LANEY BARS VOTE BY ARKANSAS NEGROES

Mon 4-8-46 New York Times, N.Y.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., April 6 (AP)—Gov. Ben Laney said today that Negroes would not be permitted to vote in the Democratic primaries in Arkansas this year and added: "The Justice Department can crack its whip."

His statement followed a declaration by Solicitor General Howard J. McGrath in Washington yesterday that the Justice Department would prosecute "any State or party official who attempts to prevent a person from voting because of color" in a primary or general election.

Mr. Laney, nominal head of the Democratic party in Arkansas, said:

"We will conduct our primaries for State officials as we have always done." Mon 4-8-46

The Arkansas Legislature last year passed an act which separated Democratic primaries for State offices and those for Federal offices. Legislators frankly admitted the act was planned to prevent Negroes from voting in elections for State offices after the Supreme Court had held they could not be barred from voting for Federal officers in primary elections.

Resolutions on the subject of Negro voting included a denunciation of acts 107 and 108 as unconstitutional in separating federal and state primaries advice to voters "to observe order and to refrain from intemperate language and intolerance,' suggestions for selecting candidates, an appeal to Negroes to back the labor movement, and "organizations working to secure federal aid for regions economically unprepared to supply educational advantages." 6-29-46

"I don't believe there will be any attempt to prevent you from voting," said Atty. J. R. Booker, "but the department of justice wants you to fill out affidavits against any election official who refuse a qualified person the right to vote."

The affidavits, to be circulated if the state supreme court should hold the separate primaries law constitutional, will include the name of the voter refused, number of poll tax, number of years residence in the state, county and precinct, precinct in which an attempt was made to vote, statement that voter was refused ballot, and name of the election official involved.

"There is nothing in the 1945 act which stipulates that a Negro or any other nationality shall not vote in the Democratic primaries," remarked Dr. J. M. Robinson, president of the association. "It is my belief that this act was a mere smokescreen infiltrated with the shadow of intimidation and coercion." Houston Press

The association is not seeking soocial equality, he continued, but "we seek only those rights guaranteed to us by the bill of rights in our constitution. We seek the enforcement of law and not pretend enforcement of the law. We do not even seek to repeal of the poll tax.'

Dr. Robinson expressed the opinion that "a man who is too trifling to pay a $1.00 poll tax for the support of his schools is too trifling to make an effort to vote under any circumstance."

ARKANSAS KEEPS BAN ON NEGROES IN STATE VOTING

The Arkansas Supreme Court has upheld a legislative act designed to ban negroes from voting for state officials in Democratic primaries.

The act, passed last year, sets up separate primaries for state and federal offices. Negroes can vote in the primaries to nominate federal officials.

The federal preferential Democratic primary will be held July 16, with a run-off August 6. Primaries to nominate state officials are scheduled July 30 and August 13.

Lee Whittaker, of Fort Smith, candidate for Congress, challenged the act after seeking to force the Democratic State Committee to place his name on the state primary ballot.

Negroes Vow To Vote Or Take Court Action

LITTLE ROCK—(ANP)—At least 5,000 Arkansas Negroes are ready to vote or ready to take court action against any election official that denies them voting rights.

That sentiment was expressed here last week during a meeting of the Arkansas Negro Democratic association, attended by 75 delegates representing eight counties, at the Dreamland theater.

Arkansas Primary Fight Looms

The Defender Chicago, Ill. Sat. 2-2-46

By ENOC P. WATERS JR.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Whether between 30,000 and 40,000 qualified Negro voters in Arkansas will be allowed to vote in the state and county Democratic primaries July 30 has Negro leaders here on edge.

Apprehension stems from two previous attempts to bar Negroes since 1944 when the U. S. Supreme Court handed down the Texas primary decision. In the first attempt the state central Democratic committee flatly declared Negroes ineligible because of race. Officials were afraid to enforce this defiant decision. The second attempt was through legislative enactment, the effectiveness of which has been damaged if not destroyed by a recent state supreme court ruling.

Astute Atty. J. R. Booker said the court edict nullified the law. He notified Dr. J. M. Robinson, president of the Arkansas Negro Democratic association to urge all qualified Negroes to the polls in the primary.

Affidavits Provided

The Negroes have been provided with affidavits to fill out if they are denied ballots, for filing with the Justice department in Washington.

Aside from fairly uniform residential requirements, the elector need pay only a $1 poll tax per year, not retroactive. Dr. Robinson does not oppose the poll tax here because he believes any person "to trifling" to pay it will not try to vote anyway. He is not unanimously backed in this attitude by his organization.

The Negro is usually challenged here after he appears at the polls. In a primary immediately after the U. S. Supreme Court ruling. Texas primary decision, Negroes in their attempt to crash the primary asked two questions: "When did you last vote? and "Will you support Mr. X if he is nominated?" X was invariably the most unpopular candidate to Negroes. Many disqualified themselves by answers to these questions.

A small number of Negroes were allowed to vote here before 1944 in the primaries. Approximately 500 voted in Little Rock alone as long ago as 1928 without trouble. Now among the whites is that with all bars down, white control of nominations will be lost. The tendency of the whites to split allegiance and of the Negro to line up solidly behind one candidate might give the Negroes power to swing any election.

nence in 1928 as a Negro Democrat, with support of Al Smith for president, despite bitter opposition here because of religious prejudice. He lost much of his following because of the unpopularity of the Democratic label and because he was forced to go to court to cast a ballot in the Democratic election. The state supreme court ruling in his case might have an important bearing on Negro participation in future primaries.

Since the federal Texas decision membership in Robinson's Democratic organization has climbed to unprecedented heights. Class and economic lines have been cut across as interest in qualifying to vote grew.

In February, 1945, the state legislature alarmed at increasing numbers of qualified Negroes, passed acts 107 and 108 designed to bar them from the Democratic primaries. The first provides "for separate party primary for nomination of candidates for federal offices in which Negroes could vote." The second gives every organized political party right to prescribe qualifications for voting in its primaries.

Attacked Constitutionality

A white congressional candidate named Whittsker attacked 107 on ground that it violated the 14th amendment of the U. S. constitution. In its decision in this case Booker said the state supreme court ruled out 108, that was specifically directed at Negroes. The court ruled in effect that the Texas primary decision takes precedence over any state statute. It is quite possible that the court did outlaw 108, the Jim Crow voting device, even though it was not challenged.

Booker also laid stress on the decision in which he said a possible precedent was set to invalidate the "Democratic club technique" used by South Carolina to circumvent the federal court decision in the Georgia Primus King case.

Favorable as all this appears for the right of Negroes to participate in the state Democratic primary, the interpretation cannot be regarded as absolute until Act 108 is tested itself on its constitutionality. This is precisely the importance of the July 30 primaries.

How Would Suffrage in Washington Affect Us?

Calif. 2-1-46

WASHINGTON.—(ANP)—Proponents of suffrage for the district have been asked to consider the disadvantages which would accrue to Negroes under the plan to give the district a vote. Sponsoring local government officials would be inclined to further southern policies, regardless of the number of Negro voters in the district, it is claimed, and the overwhelmingly majority would be quick to institute further segregation thereby depriving Negroes of the few civil rights they enjoy in the capital.

Employment, this objector stated, would wilt because most of the jobs now held by Negroes are in federal service.

Setting up a local government would bring local political leaders imbued with southern ideals they would quickly put into practice.

Pointing out the jim-crow schools of the district, the jim-crow theaters, restaurants and recreational facilities, this objector said the jim-crow pattern would be extended further and applied more strenuously than in other southern cities, just because this happened to be the capital.

Jerrymandering would be restored to prevent Negroes from having full and fair representation, even with the creation of new Negro ghettoes in the northeast and southeast sections of the city.

This big Negro vote potentiality has scared off any plans for suffrage in the district, but with the population increases showing that whites have gained while Negroes lost, the puny representation of Negroes in any elected body in the district would be equivalent to the puny registration in congress, this spokesman said.

WASHINGTON—Although the 169,659 people in voteless Washington who turned out at the polls Tuesday to cast ballots for suffrage fell short of the expected quarter million mark, Negro communities led the way, with three precincts voting unanimously for local rule and national representation.

According to plebescite officials, Negro voters gave suffrage a larger majority than white citizens participating in the balloting which showed 139,727 or 84 per cent for suffrage. Precincts 22, 38, and 41 voted unanimously for full election rights for local and congressional representation.

Precinct 22, with voting booths at Cardozo High School, cast 2,793 votes for home rule and 2,790 for national representation. Precinct 38, with headquarters at Merrit School, recorded 697 votes to 0 on both issues, while the 41st precinct checked at the same place showed 937 votes to 0 for both propositions.

One of the oldest citizens voting in the plebescite was 104-year-old former slave John Wesley Washington, who walked to the polls. Washington cast a vote for the District's representative, 75 years ago, but lost his election privilege when he moved to the capital during World War I.

Washington Dramatizes

The Courier-Journal

IN CALLING national attention to their voteless plight, residents of the District of Columbia have been successful in their mock election. But it must have come as a surprise to many of them that sentiment for a real vote was not even more nearly unanimous.

The government of the district is, of course, unique in the United States. For here is a community whose citizens have, practically speaking, no voice in its control. They do pay taxes—although the U. S. Treasury annually supplies half the district's revenue—and this gives substance to the Washingtonians' complaint that they, like the early Colonists, are victims of unrepresented taxation.

The philosophy which fathered this system which seems so undemocratic to the Washingtonians, contemplated that the District, belonging to all the citizens of the United States, should be administered by them, through Congress. It may have been foreseen, even, that Washington would become the capital of special interest and bureaucracy, as well as of statesmanship. Louisville, Ky.

In short, there may have been an uneasy feeling that here, where national politics are supposed to flower into statesmanship, everybody could get along just as well without the diversion of local politics.

That makes sense if one envisions a District of Columbia owned by the Nation. But what galls the Washington residents is that not all of it is so owned, and they pay taxes on their real estate, and licenses on their businesses, just as the home-owners and the merchants of Baltimore do, but they are unwilling capons when it comes election time. Many nominal Washington residents maintain legal domicile in their home States, and vote in them. But that does not solve the dilemma of bona fide Washingtonians, of whom there are thousands. Thurs.

Since the mock election returns show that sentiment favoring a District vote on National officials, including congressmen, is greater even than that favoring election of District city officials, it appears that Washington people want a Constitutional Amendment. They obviously have a good argument for the vote. But they would be wise to consider the effect on their taxes should the rest of the country say, in effect, "All right, run it yourselves," and withdraw the very material share the Treasury pays to subsidize the District of Columbia. 11-7-46

Florida Prepares For Negro Voters

Tampa, —(SNS)—The Florida Democratic Executive Committee has taken steps to give Negroes the vote in the primaries of the state, in order to comply with the SSupreme Court in the Texas primaries.

The committee defined the qualifications of a Democrat as one who believed in the principles of the part one who will support and vote for the nominees of the party in the coming election, and one who is registered as a Democrat.

The committee asked counties to set up separate polling places for those Negroes who are registered as a Democrat.

Republicans Seek To Keep Negroes From Democrat Fold

By HAROLD PREECE

NEW SOUTH FEATURES

MIAMI — On the 137th anniversary of the birthday of Abraham Lincoln, Miami's Negro Republican leaders were making frantic efforts to hold Florida's newly enfranchised Negroes, registering by the thousands for the Democratic primaries, within the fold of the GOP which has since abandoned everything of Lincoln but his name.

"The sheep found a pasture with greener grass and they're loping toward it," one Negro Republican told me sadly. "There's nothing we can do but cuss since the Florida Democratic Executive Committee said that Negroes could vote in the primaries even if they laid down a rule about Jim Crow booths. And cussing won't change a single mark on a registration slip."

Slated for eclipse in the new day which is dawning for Florida Negroes are many of the state's conservative Negro leadership who went along with the Republican Party because it meant a few minor jobs during GOP national administrations and a few delegate's badges at the party's nominating conventions. Fighting to keep a toehold in the state's political life was Publisher Sam B. Solomon of the Miami Whip, whose violent attack on Negro Democratic leaders are now equalled only by his attacks on organized labor and his praise of open-shop industrialists like Andrew J. Higgins of New Orleans.

In a desperate effort to hold enough Negroes to constitute a base for further patronage and favors if and when the Republican Party returns to power, leaders of the Negro Republican Club are circulating 15,000 copies of a pamphlet supposedly to give information about registration and the primaries — but meant actually as a last minute effort to hold Negroes to the party which honors Lincoln's ghost but not his spirit.

But acting quickly to set up a political organization which could line up Negroes to cinch the victory that they won with the state committee decision, Miami Negro leaders who fought for the right to vote in the primaries have set up an association of Negro Democrats. This organization is led by Dr. E. A Ward and an executive committee of 15 outstanding Miami citizens out to mobilize the Negro vote which may reach 20,000 here in Dade County for a maximum vote in the coming May primaries.

No Mortgage Our Future

This organization has its feet on the ground and is giving no mortgage on the Negro's future to the Democraitc Party as such. Its leaders emphasize that much of the Negro's trouble in the past was due to his blind allegiance to the name "Republican" and that the Democratic Party is worthy of support only so long as the Negro can make really democratic gains through it.

Its philosophy is expressed pretty well in a letter sent by Harry T. Moore, executive secretary of the Progressive Voters League of Florida key organization in the seven-year fight against the white primary, to the state's Negro citizens and voters. The letter said in part:

"It now appears that we stand on the threshold of golden political opportunities. For the first time, Negro voters of Florida are recognized as members of the Democratic Party. Thus, if we are properly registered, we may now vote with the party that has held a virtual monopoly on the election of state and county officials during the past 50 years. In this way, we may help to select those officials who have direct control of our everyday affairs"

"Help to select those officials" — these are the magic words with which the newly arising Florida Negro leadership is able to persuade the state's Negro population that registering Democractic is the best strategy for colored ctiizens. Thousands of Negroes are learning for the first time that they can register as anything but Republican; thousands of them bound to the Republican Party for traditional reasons are realizing that a Republican ballot in one-party Florida is necessarily a Jim Crow ballot.

"I like the Republican Party because I was born in it," Willie Smith, 23-year-old Negro seaman and member of the National Maritime Union, CIO, told me at the NMU hall in Tampa. "But I'm registering as a Democrat."

Voting Out Lynch Sheriffs

"When we Florida Negroes go into the Democratic primaries, we can help vote out sheriffs like Lonnie Davis over in Madison County who left the jail door open for the men who came in and lynched one of our people, Jesse James Payne, on October 1. We'll be able to cast our vote for school trustees, maybe some of our own people, who will back us up in getting better schools for our children. We'll be able to vote for city councilmen whom we can influence to give our communities better streets and better sanitary conditions."

"We can help vote out the Florida congressmen who helped kill the FLPC because the big Florida citrus and other agricultural interests want cheap Negro labor. We can make our voices heard in Tallahassee, the state capital and in Washington"

CIO Helping

Meanwhile, the CIO, of which Smith is a proud member, was concentrating through its political action committees in Miami and Jacksonville on getting a full turn out of voters of both races in the primaries and of helping to register Negroes as Democrats.

"How long we'll keep on being Democrats nobody can tell," said Seaman Smith in Tampa. "I was talking politics to some friends in the barber shop the other night. They were saying that there'll never be another Republican like Lincoln or another Democrat like Roosevelt."

Mystery Threats Fail To Stop Registrations

JACKSONVILLE, Fla.—(ANP) —Jaxons of color are finding their way to the county courthouse and registering as Democrats despite threats believed to have come from members of the Klu Klux Klan.

According to reports, Porcher L. Taylor, newspaperman, received three aponymous calls by telephone threatening harm if his publication continued to urge Negroes to register to vote. Taylor stated that the calls came at night and were similar in threat.

Floridians recently were granted the right to vote in Democratic elections in compliance with the Supreme Court decision in the Texas case. The state Democratic executive committee in a Tampa meeting three weeks ago ruled that Negroes may vote, but that they were to be restricted to separate polling booths.

Reports of threats failed to stop registration. When the registration books opened last December, Negro registrants were reported as follows: Democrats, 3,214; Republicans, 5,523; Independents, 495, and Socialists, 2. Since the December compilation, it is estimated that at least 5,000 Democrats have been added to the rolls. Registration has proceeded daily.

Way Is Cleared For Negro Demo Voting

JACKSONVILLE, Fla.—(SNS) — The way was cleared this week for the Democratic primary campaign in Jacksonville and Duval County.

Rules were made and the primary dates—May 7 and 28 were officially set by the Duval County Democratic Executive Committee Wednesday night, at a meeting in the courthouse.

One of the regulations adopted by unanimous vote was to permit Negroes to vote in both primaries providing they shall have been registered as Democrats. They will also ballot on seperate voting machines.

The other regulations adopted at the confab were of lesser importance to Negroes and mostly concerned rules governing candidates for the various offices, their conduct, how they should advertise and in what type of publication, and the like.

WORD 'WHITE' DROPPED

Resolution No. 7, by merely dropping the word 'white' established the right of all qualified persons, regardless of color, to vote in the primary, if they subscribe to the principles of the Democratic Party and are previously registered as Democrats.

Ninth and last resolution requests county commissioners, "whenever advisable, to provide seperate voting places for Negro citizens who qualify as members of the Democratic party and are entitled to participate in primary elections in May."

Negroes Must Cast Ballot Jimcrow Style

Florida Democrats Make Ruling In Monday Meet

TAMPA, Fla. (SNS)—Negroes of this state who have qualified to vote as Democrats may do so in the primary elections of May 7 and 28, the Florida Democratic Executive committee said in session here Monday, but the committee ruled that they may do so only in separate polling booths.

The committee also defined the qualifications of a Democrat and set the State party assessment against candidates for office

Prospective voters, said a resolution adopted by the committee, are Democrats if they are registered as such and believe in the principles of the Democratic Party and will support and vote for the nominees of the said party in the ensuing general election.

NEGROES MENTIONED

The resolution mentioning Negro Democrats, which drew only a couple of "No's" from the 100-odd members of the state Committee, pointed to a U. S. Supreme Court ruling allowing Negroes to vote in the Texas primaries.

The Committee set at two per cent of one year's salary of the office sought the party fee to be paid to the State Committee by any candidate seeking state office—an office requiring that votes be cast in two or more counties.

Resolutions adopted by the Committee promised President Truman "unanimous cooperation in the struggle in which this nation now is involved," and approved plans for Jackson Day dinners to raise funds for the party on March 23, with 25 per cent of the revenues earmarked for the State Treasury.

Orders Jim Crow Poll Booths

Deletes Word 'White' As Definition of A Democrat

Special to Journal and Guide

TAMPA, Fla. — With the lifting of the ban on Negroes voting in the Florida Democratic primaries in May by the state executive committee, the committee, in simultaneous action last week, asked all counties to set up segregated polling places.

The long-sought opportunity of Florida colored citizens to vote in the leading state political party primaries came when the committee voted to drop the word "white" from the definition of a Democrat.

Instructions to all counties to provide jim crow poll booths were sent from the Hillsboro Hotel where the committee met.

"Whereas the laws governing primary elections in the state of Florida are similar to those of the state of Texas and,

"Whereas the Supreme Court of the state of Florida has ruled that Negroes are entitled to participate in primary elections in such state;

"Whereas the Supreme Court of the state of Texas has ruled that Negroes are entitled to participate in primary elections in the state of Texas; and

"Whereas the laws governing primary elections in the state of Florida and Florida Supreme Court's decisions, which left the committee no alternative.

The resolution stated: "Whereas the Supreme Court of the state of Florida has ruled that Negroes are entitled to participate in primary elections in such state;

"Whereas the Supreme Court of the state of Texas has ruled that Negroes are entitled to participate in primary elections in the state of Texas; and

"Whereas the laws governing primary elections in the state of Florida and Florida Supreme Court's decisions, which left the committee no alternative.

Only a few "Nos" came from the nominees of the such who "believe in the principles of the Democratic party and will support and vote for the said party

"Now therefore be it resolved that the county commissioners in the several counties of the state of Florida be, and they are hearby, requested to provide separate voting places for such Negro citizens who qualify as members of the Democratic party and entitled to participate in the primary elections to be held in May, 1946."

Among the outstanding state political figures at the meeting were: ex-Gov. Cone, ex-Gov. Holland, and Attorney General Tom Watson.

Floridians, Heedless of Threats, Register

JACKSONVILLE, Fla.—Despite threats believed to have come from members of the Ku Klux Klan, colored persons in Florida are daily registering to vote in the Democratic elections.

Taking advantage of the recent Democratic executive committee's decision, in line with the Supreme Court's ruling in the Texas primary case, more than 3,214 colored persons have registered for the spring elections.

'Democratic Vote Will Get Rights,' Says Leader

PENSACOLA, Fla. — The destiny of the Negro in the South lies in the intelligent use of the ballot . . . to vote the Democratic ticket!

This is the unswerving opinion of prominent Rev. R. A. Cromwell, pastor of the Mount Zion Baptist Church and organizer of the Pensacola Improvement Association, a progressive local civic group.

Further explaining his position on this issue, Rev. Cromwell declared:

"The greatest hope for the Negro in Florida is to vote—Democratic. Here in Pensacola we have seen favorable results already. The Negro citizens have voted in the City Democratic primary. They supported a slate of candidates that won."

RESULTS COME QUICKLY

"Forty-eight hours after the election," Rev. Cromwell continued, "We were given a $35,000 Community Building, which is now in the process of construction, and we have been promised all the advantages of a post-war, city-planned program for parks, playgrounds and paved streets.

TO VOTE IN MAY PRIMARY

For the first time in modern history, Negro citizens of Florida will cast their votes in the Democratic primary in the coming month of May. In this primary, a U. S. Senator, members of Congress, and various sundry county and State officials will be elected, since nomination as a Democrat is equivalent to election in this Sunshine State.

The pattern for this new milestone of progress in the political history of Florida's Negro citizens was, of course, the U. S. Supreme Court's decision in the Texas primary case.

FORCED BY COURT ACTION

This advance in political equality did not happen by accident; it has happened because a group of Negroes of this city organized themselves, laid their money on the table, secured an able attorney and took court action to force it. This action resulted in an unanimous opinion handed down by the Supreme Court of Florida which held that Negro citizens were privileged to participate in all elections held in the State.

GROUP ORGANIZED BY PASTOR

The organization sponsoring this action in Pensacola is the Pensacola Improvement Association. It was organized by the Rev. R. A. Cromwell, who served, together with Rev. O. E. Chavis, as one of the principals in the suit.

The militant and liberal counselor in the action was Atty. J. M. Coe (white) whose father and grandfather were both members of the Confederate Army.

Rev. Cromwell, when interviewed by The Pittsburgh Courier, declared that the decision of the Democratic State Committee to abide by the State and Federal Supreme Courts, can mean more to the Negro citizens of Florida than any single thing since the Emancipation.

DESTINY IN POLITICS

Rev. Mr. Cromwell's statement in follows:

"It is the conviction of the lead ers of this group that the politica educational, social and economi destiny of the Negro in Florid lies in his participation in Dem cratic politics. The Negro hei needs to help choose the sheriff mayors, school boards, and supe intendents, congressmen, gove nors, etc. For it doesn't make great deal of difference to a Neg in Florida whether the Preside of the United States is a Republi can or Democrat, so long as the white Democrats of his State have the final say on all that is most important in his life. Thus, ir Pensacola, a campaign is now in progress to register every eligible Negro voter as a Democrat, and it is our hope that Negro citizens throuhgout the State will follow the same procedure.

NEED PULPIT AND PRESS

"In this campaign for registration, The Pittsburgh Courier, which incidentally has the largest circulation of any Negro newspaper in the State, can be of inestimable service, for it is largely through the pulpit and the press that the great majority of our people are reached. It is also to be hoped that the ministry of all denominations in the State will direct and encourage their people to register —as Democrats.

Bans Lifted

Statewide Registration Drive Open

JACKSONVILLE, Fla.—The political pot is boiling throughout the State of Florida—and Negroes are figuring predominantly in what is being "cooked up" by the bigwigs of both the Democratic and Republican parties in their desire to court the votes of colored citizens who have already indicated, beyond a shadow of a doubt, that they will take advantage of their newly-won right of franchise guaranteed by the U. S. Supreme Court in the Texas primary case.

The trend was dramatically revealed last week in Tampa, Fla., where, in the Hillsboro Hotel, Florida Democrats adopted a new election rule which declared the right of Negroes to vote in the hitherto "lily-white" Democratic primary. The unprecedented action, marked with certain safegaurds, defined the qualifications of a Democrat, urged the sixty-seven Florida counties to provide separate polling places for Negroes registered as Democrats, and set the State party assessment against candidates.

QUALIFY WHO ARE DEMOCRATS

According to resolutions adopted in the Tampa conference, prospective voters are Democrats if they are registered as such and believe in the principles of the Democratic Party and will support and vote for the nominees of the Democratic Party in the forthcoming primaries in May.

When the actual vote was taken, there were only two votes from the more than 100 members of the Florida Democratic State Executive Committee against allowing Negroes to vote in the Florida State Democratic primaries. This clearly shows that the party bigwigs recognized that they had no alternative but to permit colored registered voters to cast their ballots in the primaries, in accordance with decisions by both the U. S. Supreme Court and the Florida Supreme Court.

SEPARATE POLLS

Under present arrangements, separate polling places are to be provided for colored voters, and supervisors of registration are to prepare duplicate lists of qualified voters so that the separate polling places will have no difficulty or delay in keeping check of the voters.

Though disclosures of what took place are unrevealed, Florida Republicans, oddly enough, also convened in Tampa at the same time as State Democrats. The GOP brigade assembled in the nearby Tampa Terrace Hotel.

REST OF STATE ALERT

In Miami last week it was estimated that there will be more than 40,000 Negroes qualified to vote in future elections. Progressive trends are also indicated in West Palm Beach, Pensacola and other parts of the State, notably Jacksonville.

Here, in the opinion of Fleming H. Bowden, Duval County supervisor of registration, colored voters are taking full advantage of many factors in "this business of registration." He points out that, first, returning servicemen and women are being pressed with the urgency of their getting qualified. He estimates that, all told, there will be more than 75,000 registered voters in Duval County and, to date, he reports the total Negro registration as 9,234, of which number 5,523 are Republicans; 3,314 are Democrats, and 459 are Independents.

Negro Registration Outnumbers White 2-1

MIAMI, Fla.—According to word reaching party headquarters here the registration of Negro voters for city, county, and State elections in West Palm Beach outnumber whites by almost two to one. It is estimated that of the 2,800 persons who have registered since the books opened Jan. 2, three-fourths are colored. Practically all Negroes are signing up as Democrats.

RESOLUTION

JUDGE T. W. CONOLAY
Chairman, Florida State Democratic Committee
Okeechobee, Fla.

Dear Judge Conolay:

We, the undersigned citizens of Miami, Florida, hereby vigorously protest the decision of the Florida State Democratic Committee to segregate Negro and white voters at the polls in the Democratic primaries. In our opinion such action is a violation of the constitution and a denial of the secret ballot to all voters.

We strongly urge that your Committee take the necessary steps to rescind this decision in the interests of the true principles of Democracy.

NAME

Above is the petition being circularized in Miami by the CIO Political Action Committee demanding an end to the segregation of Negro and white voters at Democratic primaries. Also reproduced is the leaflet distributed by CIO-PAC urging a big registration so that citizens can exercize their democratic rights in the 1946 elections.

Miami PAC Election Drive Widens Fight on Jimcrow

MIAMI, Fla.—The CIO Political Action Committee, swinging into action here, is meeting a tremendous response not only from union members but from outside organizations in both the white and Negro communities.

While PAC has been active on several fronts, the main drive now is registration for the 1946 elections. The Democratic Committee has also decided to try to segregate Negro and white voters at the polls. This also is intended to discourage Negro voting. CIO-PAC is circulating thousands of petitions opposing segregation. All PAC committees in the state are now taking similar action. Local 500 of the Transport Workers Union has an active PAC, led by 35 union members. A successful PAC meeting was held in the Negro community with members of the TWU and the Laundry Workers Union among chief sponsors. There were Negro and white speakers.

The Democratic Party primaries. The State Democratic Committee, on the basis of rulings in other states, opened primaries to Negro voters. However, The CIO-PAC is deluged with calls for information on where and how to register.

Negro voters from registering at all polls and win- and particularly to discourage them from registering as Democrats.

Previously, registration has been a feature of the Republicans are helping in this by "sorry" telling Negroes they will be eligibles. the final register Democratic." FIGHT SEGREGATION tions. CIO members have already distributed 100,000 leaflets and 5,000 showcards in stores and windows, urging registration. The CIO-PAC office is deluged with calls from union members and other organizations in the state.

Magnolias Droop As Negroes Plan To Go to Polls

P.M. New York, N.Y. Mon 5-6-46

For the first time since Reconstruction Days, Negroes will go to the Florida polls in tomorrow's primaries. More than 32,000 have registered. Negroes also are expected to vote in the Alabama primaries—an equally astounding event. Primaries also will be held in Ohio and Indiana. In all, two Senate and 49 House seats are on the block. Most incumbents are expected to win. Little chance to get rid of any poll-taxers or reactionaries this time.

Miami Appeals Zoning Ruling

Pittsburgh, Pa., Courier Sat. 4-20-46

By JOHN DIAZ
Florida Bureau

MIAMI—The high tribunal of the State of Florida last week was asked to uphold Circuit Judge Stanley Milledge's ruling that Dade County Commissioners exceeded their authority and violated the United States Constitution when they zoned Negroes from whites in Brownsville, a suburb of Miami. Making this plea before the State Supreme Court were Attorneys L. E. Thomas and E. F. P. Brigham.

Attorney Thomas told the court that sixteen per cent of Miami's population is made up of Negroes and that they are forced to reside in two per cent of the land space, forcing a bulging by Negroes into areas beyond the city. The attorney praised the City of Miami for its efforts to bring about better treatment for Negroes, and added that the housing problem elsewhere in Dade County is a local problem requiring the courage and intelligence of both races.

ASSAILS COMMISSIONERS

Attorney Brigham assailed the attempt of the Dade County Commissioners to maintain racial boundaries. He is representing two colored families arrested for violating the 1945 zoning ordinance by residing in the so-called white area.

In pointing out the housing shortage, the attorney declared that a U. S. Supreme Court ruling calls for equal accommodations when segregation laws exist.

The case is before the high court as a result of Judge Milledge enjoining the County Commission and Cecil A. Turner, Miami zoning director, from refusing to issue building permits to Negro property owners in the Brownsville section.

VIOLATES 14TH AMENDMENT Sat. 4-20-46

Judge Milledge held that the ordinance setting up Negro and white sections, violates the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. He ordered the County zoning director to stop refusing permits for electrical installations, septic tanks or new homes to Negroes.

Suit was filed by Wesley E. Garrison, wealthy white realtor, who previously had filed an injunction against the Board of Commissioners, seeking to refrain it from further molesting the colored property owners in the Brownsville area. It was in this area that the Felton and Willie Mae Coleman covenant case originated, and also the scene of burning Ku Klux Klan crosses. Sat. 4-20-46

The Colemans were jailed for occupying their property.

In view of some of the more sensational news items in the past few weeks, we would like to record some other goings-on that will never be given the same size headlines, but of which readers deserve to be reminded:

Five million, one hundred thousand American passenger trains (more or less) ran several hundred million miles last year without a single fatal accident; there hasn't been a major kidnaping case in the United States since 1942; the increase in marriages continues to be greater than the increase in divorces; Florida taught Negroes to use voting machines in the recent democratic party primaries; 130,000,000 persons in the United States last year did not suffer a single serious accident; American fire losses have at no time equalled the heavy rate that prevailed during the 1920's and 1930's. 5-30-46 Thros.

32,000 Vote In Florida

Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — More than 32,000 civic-minded Negro citizens of the State of Florida helped make political history Wednesday when they utilized their recently-granted right of franchise by voting in the Democratic Primary held throughout the commonwealth. It was the first time that Negroes had voted in the State and the balloting was marked by harmony and a noticeable lack of friction. 5-18-46

In many instances—even in precincts where the white population was predominant—colored voters outnumbered the white who were waiting to vote. A cordial relationship, however, prevailed and in several cases whites immediately fell in line with Negro voters, even though separate voting booths had been provided.

Opportunity of Outcasts

The News and Courier

Henry A. Wallace, Esq., the New Deal and Rooseveltian martyr, and Claude Pepper, Esq., having been black-listed as speakers for the Byrnes-Truman, or reactionary, "Democratic" party, they are at liberty to speak, yelp or howl at what entertains them. The prospect is that they will yelp at the shins of Dr. Byrnes, champion of the American foreign policy and of the teamsters union.

These two esquires, the Martyr and the Senator, have before them opportunity. In Florida, where the colored vote is numerous and might have the balance of power, might turn the scale, any gentleman offering for an office in the general election might operate as a scalawag, and as long as tens of thousands of persons shall be sucking juice from the federal treasury, as they do in South Carolina, the raw material of scalawaggery will be abundant. In 1876 the number of federal officers in Florida, including postmasters and a few postmistresses who could not vote, was less than 1,000. So it was in South Carolina. Charleston, S. C.

Mr. Pepper has said, seconded by Mr. H. Wallace, that he is opposed to a third party. If Mr. P. is forbidden to speak for the "Democratic" party, surely he will not speak for the Republican party—not with its approbation or consent. Not more than the "Democrats" do they want him.

Third parties already are in operation. In New York, for example, the "American Labor" party, the Communist party and two or three others are active, and one or all of them would give bed and board to Senator Pepper and the Martyr. Wed. 9-25-46

On an FEPC and repeal of poll tax platform any distinguished uplifter and semi-intellectual can gain the colored vote of Florida—and in that state thousands of white uplifters are on the federal payrolls.

FLORIDA CIO EXPOSES PLOT TO BAR NEGROES, STEAL VOTE

Daily Worker New York, N.Y. Fri. 9-13-46

MIAMI, Sept. 12.—The executive board of the State CIO Industrial Union Council is planning to acquaint all members with a plot of a private political association to steal primary elections.

The plot, which springs out of the historic 1944 decision of the U. S. Supreme Court in the Texas case, which assured to Negroes the right to vote in the primary elections, involves the proposed repeal of all laws on the Florida statute books pertaining to primaries.

This would have the effect of making the Democratic Party, which in practice is the state's only party, into a private association, with the power to set up any qualifications for membership it desired. It could rule out Negroes, in evasion of the Supreme Court ruling, and ultimately all of the people's political forces. Such a devious method has already been applied in South Carolina.

A bill to accomplish this was introduced in the 1945 session of the Florida legislature, but went down under the pressure of many honest Democrats. In the May primaries of this year it again became an issue, and State Senator John E. Mathews of Jacksonville has pledged he will reintroduce it.

The CIO state executive board will publish a full report of these maneuvers to be sent to all CIO members and other people's political forces, and plans to have a legislative representative on the job in Tallahassee when the legislature convenes again next April.

Voting In 1946 Is Negro's No. 1 Job

The Call Kansas City Mo 6-14-46

By C. A. FRANKLIN

The Negro will be an issue in the national election of 1948. That is inescapable. He cannot pull down the ramparts of the one-party system of the South and crash the gates of employment, without setting in motion the direst opposition his enemies can contrive. The Wigglesworths in the Republican party and the Slaughters in the Democratic party are not made happy by these proofs of the virility and worth of American principles.

Since it is highly unlikely that either party will make an anti-Negro platform declaration, the attack will be indirect, underhanded, skulking, but nevertheless deadly. Remember how Starnes struck at Negro employment by cutting down appropriation for federal agencies by the exact amount they devoted to Negroes?

Friday 6-14-46

The Negro has never had more friends than now. The liberals make a habit of giving him a place in democracy. The church, once the citadel of custom, is beginning to practice brotherhood. Witness the selection of a Negro to preside over the ministerial alliance of St. Louis, and a thousand other instances of including Negroes in church work. In politics the call to real democracy raised by Wendell Willkie is echoed generally. President Truman appointed one Negro to a life judgeship and another to a territorial governorship, both new honors for the race, with the Senate and the public approving.

The Call

Nor are the gains fleeting. Some of them stand on the solid foundation of court decisions. The ballot, employment, travel, housing are better for Negroes because the courts now say they have rights.

Kansas City, Mo.

Like everybody else, the Negro must pay the price of his gains. Anything worthwhile carries a price. Only those have rights who dare maintain them. For the Republican party to repeat its 1944 Negro planks in its 1948 platform, for President Truman to be able to persuade the Democratic party that it should join him in putting through the FEPC, Negroes will have to have demonstrated their voting strength beforehand. Look at your calendar! The only chance Negroes have to cast a vote that will make them considered by the parties, is in the coming primary and general election. The parties will have had their national conventions before there is another chance to show strength. It is now or never!

Labor has its yearly gathering and its continuing organization. The Bourbon democracy is already a working bloc. The prejudiced part of the public keeps its knife sharp. Negroes are in the midst of groups anxious and ready to direct the course of events.

Negroes have one tool, the ballot. Let them use it! In June, 1948, party leaders will be baiting their hook. They certainly will not waste bait where few votes are to be won.

Every person, every agency in the race should put voting at the top of the list of things that must be done. Let's talk voting everywhere we go and keep it up until we all vote. Gains made will be taken away if we let our friends be defeated at the polls.

Remember the Negro will be an issue!

Famed Evangelist Gives 12 Reasons Why Southern Negroes Should Have Right To Vote

Atlanta Daily World

Atlanta, Ga.

SHREVEPORT, La. — Rev. Dr Willard Leake, nationally famed A. M. E. Church evangelist, and recognized as among the twelve leading preachers in America, pastor of St. James A. M. E. Church here in a widely circulated pamphlet gave twelve reasons why the Negro in the South should have the right of franchisement.

The twelve reasons are as follows: Atlanta Daily World

1. Because the Constitution of the United States entitles him to it.

2. Because the right of franchisement does not mean social equality. Friday 6-7-46

3. The Negro would not expect or seek social equality through it because of the right of franchisement. Atlanta Daily World

4. Because most Negroes are now sufficiently intelligent to use their franchisement correctly and constructively. Atlanta, Ga.

5. The right of franchisement would increase the Negroes pride, his form of government and nation.

6. Franchisement would inspire love and loyalty to the Stars and Stripes.

7. The right of franchisement would give Negro leaders something with which to fight all foreign doctrine. 6-7-46

8. It would place upon the Negro direct responsibility and make him feel obligated for the same

9. It would require his active interest in federal, state and municipal government. Friday

10. It would prove to members of the dark race all over the world that Democracy is fair and just.

11. It would be the test which would determine that Democracy can work for all people.

12. Because I believe Democracy is the will of God and the right of franchisement for all people is true Democracy.

Tell the Whole Truth, Mr. Talmadge

Atlanta Constitution

Ex-Gov. Eugene Talmadge has an unadmirable habit of dealing in half-truths and of twisting facts to meet his own selfish ends.

Thus it is that Mr. Talmadge is currently citing South Carolina to prove that Georgia can maintain lily-white primaries by the simple expedient of abolishing all state laws pertaining to party elections.

6-7-46-Fri

What Mr. Talmadge is not saying, of course, is that South Carolina does not have the county unit system as Georgia does. Therefore it was not necessary there to repeal any act similar to Georgia's Neal Primary law, wherein the county unit system is provided. Atlanta, Ga.

Nor is Mr. Talmadge telling his audiences that South Carolina's action has been but lately taken, that there has not been time as yet for fraudulent election practices to become prevalent as inevitably they will once those so inclined realize they may stuff ballot boxes without fear of prosecution. 6-7-46- Fri

Mr. Talmadge is ignoring the fact that countless South Carolinians have great apprehension that, by removing party primaries from the influence of the law, they have opened the floodgates to an era of flagrant violation of the canons of honesty and decency. Atlanta, Ga.

Georgia can follow South Carolina's example and maintain—at least for a little longer—its white primary.

But Georgia cannot do it without:

1. Abolishing the law providing for a county unit system.

2. Inviting election stealing on an unprecedented scale.

And that is the whole truth which Mr. Talmadge has not been telling.

BEHIND The HEADLINES

By ALBERT L. HINTON

Atlanta Ga.

The Editor Of A Religious Publication Speaks His Piece

IN ALL probability you have never even heard of the Central Christian Advocate, of New Orleans, La. It is, as its name implies, a religious publication and its editor is Dr. J. W. E. Bowen, of Atlanta, Ga. Dr. Bowen is, of course, a minister but he is not averse to dealing with editorially with religious subjects and when the occasion arises—which it should be.

He took such an editorial excursion recently in commenting upon the "dangers and pitfalls" confronting his newly acquired ballot in those sections where it is a recent acquisition." Dr. Bowen confined himself to a clear cut and common sense discussion of the issues with which Negroes throughout the South are faced as a result of the favorable decision handed down in the Texas white primary case and certain other factors which have more or less smoothed the highway to the ballot box for them. But everything he said might be applied with equal force to the Supreme Court decision last week which outlawed racial segregation on buses in interstate commerce.

MR. HINTON

As Dr. Bowen sees it, the greatest danger facing the Negro now as a result of this newly-found freedom is that "of following leaders who can be bought out for money, or by the offer of privilege or a job." To these "selfish demagogs," white or colored, he warns colored Americans to close their ears and vote their honest, independent convictions. And he very wisely warns against over-rosy expectations of immediate results.

The homespun philosophical views expressed by Dr. Bowen are so pertinent to the issues faced by Negro Americans today, particularly those who live below the Mason-Dixon Line, the majority of whom are just beginning to sample this new-found political and civic freedom, that I thought it wise to give readers of this column the full benefit of his sage advice.

The editorial, in full, follows:

"We are sure the readers of the Central Christian Advocate will pardon our bringing before their minds a few serious thoughts on some dangers and pitfalls confronting our people in the newly acquired use of the ballot in those sections where it is a recent acquisition. It is not the thought that Negroes alone are subject to dangers and weaknesses; but it is our thought that any new tool requires the development of skill in its use.

"The Negro, because of his minority position, can lose or gain many advantages, according to the wisdom with which he uses the tools of civilization. In nearly every community the Negro voters are a minority, and it will take much wisdom to use the ballot to advance the interests of the race.

"Perhaps the greatest pitfall is that of following leaders who can be bought out for money, or by the offer of priviledge or a job. Now that whi[illegible] will seek Negro votes there will [illegible]ro men who will offer to turn ou[illegible] way needed in return for som[illegible] This handout may be money.

"Sometimes it is certain personal privileges that feed the pride of these leaders, lifting them outside the pale of the common restrictions applied to the race as a whole. Sometimes it is a job offered them, so that the only Negro who stands to gain by the vote of his peop[illegible]ne who gets a job for himself and [illegible]lack brethren go hang.

"The ability to [illegible]ars to these selfish demagogs an[illegible] to the polls and vote our convictions [illegible]l keep us out of our greatest pitfall.

"Another pitfall is big talk. It is so easy for people who have never voted before to talk loud and long about the big things the race is going to do with the ballot. The history of democracy in those nations of longest experience, England, Switzerland, France and America, shows clearly that nothing big or startling need be expected from newly enfranchised people.

"These people are just human beings like the rest and they will struggle along in the old human way, making a step of progress now and then, not always constantly.

"Big talk is mere nonsense. The Negro will have to learn and struggle along like the rest of humanity. Quiet planning, working with friendly sympathizers, real political wisdom are of real value. We can well shut off the big talk before it gets started."

Deep South Speaks

ROBERT DURR
NNPA STAFF WRITER

Negroes voted in the Democratic primary in Alabama on May 7 for the first time in 75 years.

A few weeks before the people of Alabama went to the polls someone, reportedly identified with the Christian Temperance union, caused to be published and distributed throughout the state a statement to the effect that one candidate for the governorship or his campaign workers had gone among Negroes in the Tennessee Valley, urged them to pay their poll taxes and, in the case of GIs, register for voting, and then had transported them to the polls where they cast ballots for prohibition in that area. The wets won.

Robert Durr

The statement referred to was to the effect that the carpetbaggers had returned and the white voters of the state were faced with a "Negro-vote" menace. The implication was that since in some sections of the deep South there are more or as many Negroes as whites, and, since Negroes are gullible, unscruplous politicians with their bags of filthy lucre will take over the government. The circular attempted to create a Negro bogey to the end that board of registrars would make it most difficult for Negroes to register which is a prerequisite to voting after payment of accumulated poll taxes. It was also designed to give grounds for resurrection of the Ku Klux Klan to combat this so-called "Negro-vote" menace.

Prior to the May primary this columnist had got all the candidates for public office in Alabama, except one, to promise not to inject the so-called race issue into the campaign. The writer urged Negroes throughout the state, who were to vote in the democratic primary for the first time in 75 years, to keep their ballots clean; to vote their conscience as a contribution to good government, and to desist from casting their ballots on the basis of race, promises of vengeance or special consideration for any group.

IGNORE REPLY TO ISSUE

One candidate for congress made bold to state that he was the only candidate who, if elected, would [illegible] all in his power to stop colored people from voting, tighten the segregation laws, and maintain white supremacy. We let him rant and rave on the so-called race issue without dignifying his billingsgate by any kind of reply.

When the votes were counted this man, who obviously was backed by powerful interests judging from the tremendous amount of space he bought in newspapers and time purchased over radio stations, got only 5,000 votes in a district in which there are 500,000 people. Two other candidates for the same office got upwards of 40,000 votes each.

Big Jim Folsom, who was the first gubernatorial candidate in Alabama to give me his pledge that he would not inject the race issue into his campaign, ran 11,000 votes ahead of the next highest among the four other candidates, but failed to receive a majority and will enter a runoff election June 4.

Big Jim and Senator Claude Pepper were the two deep South Democrats who supported Henry Wallace for the Vice-Presidential nomination to the very last at the Democratic National convention in Chicago in 1944. Jim is one of these big, friendly country type of men, and the fact that he got more votes than obviously smarter and more experienced opponents is indicative of the fact that the people are tired of smart men in high places unless these men are honest, decent, forthright, courageous and audacious when it comes to facing up to what is right. People, it seems, want good men but not men who are so good they are good for nothing. They want them good but good for something. The day of tricksters are numbered.

NEGROES ARE VOTING

There is no need to get overly excited over the fact that Negroes are voting in the South for the first time in a big way in 75 years. No matter who gets in office in the South—he or she must be able to resist the temptation of governmental racketeering, the exacting of pounds and pounds of flesh from the poorest people in the nation to feed a host of worthless professional politicians.

As I see it now, the Negro is on his way to sharing in the political future of the South, but that does not destroy the fact that there is not enough of what it takes to build and maintain a richer and fuller life for all the people in the South. Sharing control is desirable, if we regard it as a means to an end rather than an end in itself.

The South needs what it does not have—a leadership which can unify the people of the South; breathe into them all, white and black alike, a oneness of spirit and purpose; set them to work manufacturing millions and millions of things the world needs and is willing to pay for; a leadership which understands the importance of good health, adequate recreation, decent housing and adequate medical care for those unable to pay for these necessities; and, last but not least, a leadership which can make the people of the South understand how woefully they need educational facilities superior to those of any other section of the nation because of the South's backwardness in education for 75 years or more.

Politicians have never solved any big problems—they never will. Therefore, it must never be forgotten that our economic problems demand spiritual solutions first.

I hear the cry: "Give me good men to match my mountains, good men to match my plains, good men with empires in their brains and new eras in their purposes."

No Hope in democracy

The Times and Courier Charleston, S.C.

To the mentalities of the Northern highbrows and uplifters the saying will be impenetrable, but we tell them that were 300,000 negroes voting in the general election in a "race" between T. G. Bilbo and one of nature's noblemen, another white man, for United States senator in Mississippi, Mr. Bilbo would receive as many of those colored people's votes as the other man would receive. We have known in South Carolina politicians notorious for their sayings about crimes against negroes, human birds unceasingly damned in the North, to be adored among masses of the colored people. Were Walter White, acknowledged leader of American negroes, to become a citizen of Mississippi, Georgia or South Carolina and to run for governor, he would probably not receive a majority, much less solid support, of the negroes against a cunning scalawag. There is no hope for negroes from "democracy". (Or for white people.

Nothing to Brag About

Times Dispatch Richmond, Va.

VIRGINIANS have reason to be gratified over the size of the total vote in the Democratic primary of August 6, because the number of ballots cast—some 221,000—was by far the largest on record. The previous high mark for a Virginia primary was 193,274, in the gubernatorial contest of 1937.

But this showing was nothing to brag about, as recent election figures from other States should remind us. Virginia remains the lowest-voting State in the Union, so far as effective balloting is concerned—which in our case, as elsewhere in the South, means the voting in Democratic primaries. THE TIMES-DISPATCH in recent editorials has cited comparative figures which demonstrate this fact. Elections held since then furnish additional evidence of our low rank in this respect.

South Carolina provides a striking comparison with Virginia. The Palmetto State has had none too good a voting record in the past. It is probably the second lowest-voting State in the Union. But in the Democratic primary held last Tuesday, South Carolina cast a total vote which was estimated at 300,000. We have not seen the precise final figures, but the incomplete returns at hand indicate that the total was close to the 300,000 mark. The latest figures we have seen show that the count from 1,265 out of 1,539 precincts in the gubernatorial contest was 223,681. That was barely four-fifths of the precincts, and if the ballots in the remainder were in proportion, the total vote was around 275,000. In any event, South Carolina far surpassed Virginia's showing.

This would not look good for the Old Dominion even if the two States were about the same size. But the fact is that South Carolina is a much smaller State than Virginia. In the 1940 Federal census this State had a population of 2,677,773, to South Carolina's 1,899,804. Thus Virginia is almost 800,000 larger in population; or in other words, it is nearly half again as big as South Carolina. Moreover, the Negro population in South Carolina is proportionately much larger than in Virginia, and comparatively few Negroes vote—especially in the Palmetto State.

The Old Dominion should cast at least half again as many votes as South Carolina by virtue of size alone. But actually, though it set a new record for this State, the total vote polled on August 6 was about 20 per cent less than that in relatively small South Carolina a week later.

The improvement shown in Virginia is pleasing, but it is not good enough. Our people are urgently in need of a greater political awakening. If democracy languishes at the ballot box, it may be expected to suffer in other respects.

Political Objectives of Negro Aired Before Nation's Liberals

The Louisiana Weekly New Orleans, La.

Sat 10-5-46

By Luther A. Townsley

(By The Associated Negro Press)

Chicago. — The position, aims and objectives of the Negro voter in American politics were revealed here Saturday by Walter White, NAACP executive secretary, in a keynote address before the nation's leading progressives at Hotel Continental, who assembled here in a two-day conference to map effective national political action in the November elections.

Declaring that 'the Negro vote holds the potential balance of power in 17 states with 281 electoral votes," White said: "The Supreme Court decision in the Texas white primary case of April, 1944, has greatly extended the influence of Negro voters and at the same time activated democracy for whites as well."

More than "one million Georgians voted, approximately 100,000 of them Negroes, for the first time in history," whereas "until this year the highest number of voters who cast ballots in the Democratic primary of my native state of Georgia never exceeded 300,000," he pointed out.

Negroes are "looking forward not backward," White said, despite the fact that they, "and especially Negro veterans, have been subjected to a wave of incredibly sadistic mob violence during recent months."

The Negro shares none of the tired liberalism of many of his white fellow-Americans and "we are determined to utilize our growing political strength not only to end lynching, the poll tax, segregation, unequal educational and job opportunities, but also every other form of discrimination which afflicts Americans generally," he declared.

He called the Negro vote "an increasingly independent vote," which is not "Republican, Democratic, Communist nor Socialist," "but concentrates increasingly on men and measures and not on meaningless party labels" Negroes have not been "intimidated by the rantings of Talmadge, Bilbo, Rankin or the Ku Klux Klan," he said, "neither are we deluded by the soft words of men like Taft and Carroll Reece.

Other keynote speakers on the Saturday afternoon program beside White were Harold L. Ickes, former Secretary of the Interior under the late Franklin D. Roosevelt, and Heny Morgenthau. Jr. former Secretary of the Treasury. Speakers on the evening's banquet program were James Patton, president of the National Farmers' Union; Jack Kroll, director of the CIO Political Action Committee, and Senator Claude Pepper of Florida.

Kroll, who succeeded the late Sydney Hillman, reflected on "the many lynchings which have taken place in this country since the war's end. The American people want an end to these disgraceful lynchings. They want legislation designed to punish the guilty and prevent recurrence of mob violence. They want an end to those American Nazis, the Ku Klux Klan. They want an end to poll taxes and to all the other means which are being used to deprive minority groups of their basic American rights.

The Weekly

"We all know what the 79th Congress did to the FEPC," Kroll stressed. "We must defeat candidates who refused to support efforts to combat reaction and religious discrimination."

New Orleans La.

Philip Murray, president of the CIO, explained that "attacks upon labor and the attacks upon civil rights of other groups are but part of a single movement which seriously threatens to disfigure and distort the pattern of our democratic society." He joined Pepper, Morgenthau, Ickes and others in urging a return to the foreign and domestic policies of the late President Roosevelt.

CIO-PAC Also Is an Issue as Alabama Selects Senator Arkansas a Governor

Wed 7-31-46

The Political Action Committee of the Congress of Industrial Organization and the right of Negroes to vote were issues again yesterday as voters chose Democratic nominees for Senator in Alabama and Governor in Arkansas, The Associated Press reported.

Alabama held a special primary, which means election there, to name a successor to the late Senator John H. Bankhead, whose term expires in 1949.

Five candidates were in the field, including John Sparkman, House majority whip, and Representative Frank Boykin. Mr. Sparkman had the backing of the Political Action Committee, the American Federation of Labor and the United Mine Workers. Mr. Boykin attacked the PAC, saying it was out to "purge" him.

They competed with State Senator James A. Simpson, Red Allen, textile mill worker and Thomas H. Maxwell, a member of the State Democratic Executive Committee.

If no candidate receives a majority, a runoff will be held Aug. 27.

Wed 7-31-46

In Arkansas, where the primary vote also is equivalent to election, the first test was held of the new State law separating primaries for Congress and State office in an effort to bar Neegroes from voting for State office candidates. Negroes voted in the primary for Federal offices July 16, but in small numbers.

Election officials had planned to challenge any Negroes attempting to vote in the three-man race for Governor. Negro organizations had urged members of their race to appear at the polls.

Gov. Ben Laney sought a second-term nomination. His opponents were J. M. Malone, former Lonoket County Judge, and Virgil Greene of Blytheville.

Arkansas Also Votes Today In White Primary

McKellar In Tennessee Is Challenged By CIO; Kentucky's Is Saturday

Tue. 7-30-46

By the Associated Press

Primary election interest swings to the South this week with Alabama and Arkansas voting today, Tennessee deciding a hotly contested senatorial nomination Thursday, and Kentucky selecting party candidates Saturday.

Alabama's balloting today centers on a contest for the Democratic nomination for senator.

Five men, including Rep. John Sparkman, Democratic whip in the House, and Rep. Frank Boykin, are in the race. Sparkman has the backing of the CIO-PAC, United Mine Workers and AFL. Others in the race are State Senator James A. Simpson, of Birmingham; Ted Allen, textile mill worker, and Thomas H. Maxwell. Senator Swift (D), who was appointed to succeed the late Senator John H. Bankhead, is not a candidate for the remaining two years of the term.

In Arkansas Democrats will nominate a candidate for governor in a primary separated from the recent congressional primary under a State law designed to bar Negroes from voting for State offices. Gov. Ben Laney is opposed for renomination by former Judge James Malone, of Lonoke, and Virgil Green, of Blytheville.

Democracy the Negro Enemy

The News and Courier Charleston, S.C.

In his speech accepting the nomination for governor of Georgia, Eugene Talmadge, Esq., "acknowledged that the negroes had made great progress", that he wished them to have better schools, equal justice, a better health program and so forth, and all of that was excellent comment, but he also said that "the negro has not demonstrated his capability of casting an intelligent ballot."

Conceding that the majority of negroes, the great majority, have not the capability of casting an intelligent ballot, does a white skin prove the capability of casting it? The weakness of the Southern insistence on "white supremacy", is avoidance of direct and honest answer to that question.

Sun. 10-13-46

Southerners will countenance nothing short of white democracy. They hold that no man or woman 21 years old and older—if white—should be deprived of the voting privilege. They further hold that voting is a "right", not a privilege.

There are negroes sufficiently intelligent and responsible to exercise the privilege. They are a small minority in the population. In the white population are men and women, by no means the large proportion that is among the negroes, who are no more to be trusted to vote intelligently than are the great majority of the negroes.

In many communities these white voters are numerous and herdible and constitute a balance of power whereby political masters without scruple are elected and the rule of "rings" is maintained.

The limitation of the ballot to persons who have a little taxable property, a stake in the state, as well as a measure of learning, Southern white politicians say, would be tyranny, and the politicians in the Northern states, especially in their gang-ruled cities, are not less hypocritically servile to democracy, to universal suffrage, than they are.

Therefore, these Northern uplifters, or "Liberals", white as well as colored, denounce the one dollar poll tax that is a qualification for voting in South Carolina as outrageous. What they dislike is that the South does not adopt the loose suffrage that they have and by which they perpetuate their machine control and which, were it extended to the Southern negro masses, would bring back the chaos of the 1870s.

These Northern democrats (note, we are not referring to a Democratic party) are the obstacle to the adoption of customs and laws by which the minority of responsible Southern negroes could be accepted in white parties. In order to erect democracy in the South, they would destroy the right of the states to make their own suffrage laws, would have state rights demolished, and state government transferred to a congress dominated by the great city democracies.

The movement to have poll tax requirements repealed by congress is no more than a first step to deprive the states of the right to adopt property and other qualifications for voting.

Again be it said that democracy is the preliminary step to dictatorship, whether called Communist, Facist or Nazi, as it has been in Russia, Germany and Italy, in all lands throughout the recorded history of mankind. Never has unrestricted "popular rule" been successful anywhere and never anywhere has it lasted long.

The democrats (not the Democrats) are keeping responsible negroes out of white primaries in South Carolina and Georgia. They are ascendant in the cities of the Kelleys, the Curleys, the Hagues and the Guffeys and would entrench themselves in power by attaching to themselves negroes who would be the balance of power in Southern states were the Southern whites to divide.

The 'Yankee' Is Our Friend

The News and Courier Charleston, S.C.

Candidate John D. Long, one of the 11, said in a speech the other day, "Mississippi and Georgia have nailed the lid down on Yankee domination". Mr. Long's pleasure that the two states have resented outside interference is natural and speaks the heart of an honest Southerner. Charleston, S. C.

It is scarcely accurate to use the word "Yankee". The "Yankees", the old American stock, the people of Maine, Vermont, other Northern states are, with the exception of those holding offices and a few Great City "intellectuals", friends of the Southern people.

Sun. 7-28-46

The Northern persons who would, if they could, "dominate" the Southern states are democrats who, in coalition with Harlemites and Hague machines, would set up another "Reconstruction".

If they could arm the negroes in the South with the ballot in primaries, their scalawags and carpetbaggers might again come into power, and Southern state congressmen and presidential electors would entrench them in government.

History is repeating itself. The plan is a revival of the plan of Ben Wade and Thad Stevens. Negroes voting as a bloc in Southern states would have the balance of power, as they had it in Georgia the other day where the county unit plan made it ineffective.

The South could not have been delivered from the carpetbaggers and scalawags in 1875 and 1876 without the exertion of influence and extension of help by their "Yankee" friends. Many of those "Yankee" Americans are now dominated by "machines" in the great cities which buy, own and herd to the polls the negroes in the Harlems. They need Southern assistance, and that is why Southern states should choose independent electors in the Electoral College.

If Bilbo and Talmadge were pills not desired by the majority of the white citizens in their states, the interfering Northern "Liberals" forced the Southerners to swallow them.

Solving Our Racial Ills

Daily World Atlanta, Ga. Sat 8-17-46

Perry W. Howard, Republican national committeeman from Mississippi, in a Washington interview last week, prescribed a cure for the ills of American Negroes by urging the free use of the ballot by them. "What we need in this country," the Republican spokesman said, "is what I have advocated through my many years of public life, and that is the ballot." Mr. Howard, a rabid partisan, would have the poll tax eliminated as a deterrent to voting and envisions the election of a Republican Congress in 1947 which will give the country "an anti-lynching and anti-poll tax legislation and a strong fair employment practice commission."

This latest preachment of Mr. Howard sounds a little different from what he had to say a month or more ago when he advised them to stay away from the polls in Mississippi and wait until a republican election comes along. But no matter how it sounds, it is cut out of the identical garment. The thing uppermost in his mind is that nothing can be done to stem the tide of Negroes flocking into the Democratic Party in southern states. He, like so many other republican leaders, suffers from a pathological fear of this trend, despite the fact it is the only hope for Negro advancement and growth in the southern economy. And he, like a few other republican leaders, who have publicily expressed it, appears to prefer the total disfranchisement of his race than to see them integrated into the Democratic Party. But fortunately, his number are few and far between in America today. The great mass of Negroes and all of our sincere Negro leaders know that there is absolutely no hope in reliance upon any program which may be devised or evolved by a republican regime in the southern states. For more than 60 years, they have been doing just what Mr. Howard himself is doing, overlooking the important fact that the South is predominantly a Democratic section and that as such, Negroes must either go along with them and win some economic footing or else they must remain what they have been over these 60 years, politically impotent, until a two-party system can be evolved, which at this time is not even in the remote future.

We are in agreement with Mr. Howard that the ballot can at least help in solving the Negro's problems. But we differ in method. Mr. Howard sees only one way—the Republican way—and would just as soon not have the problem solved if it must be done through integration of Negroes into the Democratic Party. To the contrary, we are for any method which may bring relief to our sufferings and deprivation—whether that be achieved through the Republican or Democratic Party is really not important.

The imporant thing is relief. But in the South there is no active Republican Party.

The only time any casual mention is made of them is once every 4 years when they are about to hold their National Convention. Like the Democrats of the South, let the Republicans get busy and build up local units, rather than going to sleep after their National Conclave.

In Arkansas And Texas

Daily World Atlanta, Ga. Sat. 8-3-46

Without incident Negroes in Arkansas and in Texas voted in last week's primary elections. News accounts show that an estimated 75,000 voted in Texas, while no figures were given on the exact number voting in Arkansas. In view of the apparent belligerent attitude taken by the governor of Arkansas against the U. S. ruling in which Negroes were permitted to participate in the primaries, interest of a rather widespread nature was attached to that state. On a smaller scale, Negroes had previously voted in each of these states. But last week represented the first time in which large numbers voted. Thus, one by one, southern states are dropping their opposition to the Negro vote and beginning to abide by the judgement of the U. S. Supreme Court.

In Georgia, more than 100,000 Negroes participated in the recent Democratic Primary. This, according to estimates, was the largest number ever to participate in a primary in any southern state. This is especially significant if we consider the speed with which this was done. Six months prior to the Georgia election, less than 50,000 Negroes had been registered. Within that span, the registration of Negroes took a sharp upward turn with over 150,000 being on the the books, including the purges, by the July 5 deadline. Everywhere in the South, even in Mississippi, the Negro is going to become a definite factor in politics.

And despite the protestations of bigots and demagogues, they are going to aid in the fight to bring democracy to the South.

The Great Game Of Politics

BY FRANK R. KENT

STRUGGLE FOR THE NEGRO.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28. — It was in 1936 that the great Negro vote in the pivotal Northern states, which had been the basic Republican asset since the Civil War, was transferred almost solidly to the Democratic party through the Machiavellian machinations and low guile of the Hon. James A. Farley.

For ten years, covering three presidential and three off-year congressional elections, the Negroes have remained in the Democratica camp, registering Democratic and voting Democratic all the way from 75 to 98 per cent. In this year's campaign—the first since the Roosevelt death—the Republican have real hope or regaining this great group of voters whose defection counted so heavily against them. The Republican sufferings on this score can be easily understood, particularly when it is considered that each Negro vote lost counted twice. It not only had to be subtracted from the Republican total but added to the Democratic.

And now the Republicans, after more than a decade of futility, are making their first hopeful attempt to recover this practically indispensable party asset, which from 1861 to 1936 helped elect their presidential candidates and since then has been potent in defeating them. Neither time, money nor work will be spared this fall. The effort will be intensive and extremely earnest. All of which makes it pertinent to list, first, the means by which these votes were taken over by the Democrats, and, second, the reason the Republicans believe they can get them back now.

It was Mr. Farley, with Mr. Roosevelt's enthusiastic co-operation, who engineered this transfer in 1936. In the order of their importance he would list the means as follows: (1) The WPA, then under Mr. Harry Hopkins, and upon the relief rolls of which an amazing percentage of Negroes was placed; (2) Mrs. Roosevelt, whose fraternization was exceedingly effective—a million copies of her picture taken with a group of male and female Negro students were distributed among Negroes in ten selected States by the Democratic National committee; (3) Federal patronage a larger proportion of which went to Negroes in the early Roosevelt days than had been given by any other President; (4) employment by the Democratic committee of an unprecedented number of Negro teachers, preachers and speakers who, well paid both as to salary and expenses, traveled the selected states spreading the Roosevelt gospel; (5) the Negro press which, in one way or another, had become strongly pro-Roosevelt.

By these means was accomplished what Mr. Farley, with reason, regards as the most effective coup in the history of national politics. Now, the Republican grounds for feeling this is the time to "right the great wrong," as some have referred to it, are these: (1) Mr. Roosevelt is dead; (2) the WPA no longer exists; (3) the Democratic party failed to repeal the poll tax or to pass a Federal Fair Employment Practices Act, whereas one was passed by a Republican governor in New York; (4) the Federal patronage has mostly been distributed; (5) the Negro press, like a number of Negro leaders, has become disaffected and is now largely Republican again; (6) the present Democratic chairman, Mr. Hannegan, is many grades below Mr. Farley in skill, judgment, knowledge and tact.

He appears too busy proclaiming himself a "true liberal" and carrying on his personal feuds within the Cabinet to give the necessary time and attention to blocking this Republican effort or to appreciate what its success will mean to the Democratic ticket in about 10 important and debatable states. Checking the first list against the second, it does seem that the Republicans have about 60-to-40 chance of achieving their objective in this struggle for the Negro vote this time. It is one of the basic reasons for their general confidence.

U. S. To Try Vote Bans On Color

Atlanta Ga. Constitution Sat. 4-6-46

WASHINGTON, April 5—(AP)—The Justice Department in the future will prosecute under the criminal code "any state or party official who attempts to prevent a person from voting because of color" in a primary or general election.

The Department's policy was outlined Friday by Sol. Gen. J. Howard McGrath at a press conference.

"It is our position," McGrath said, "that the law has been settled by the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals and the denial of certiorari by the Supreme Court in a recent Georgia case in which it was held Negroes were entitled to vote in primary elections."

"There is no doubt that the decision affects local as well as general primaries and elections in all states." Sat. 4-6-46

All test cases have been brought as civil actions.

In a suit brought by Primus E. King, of Columbus, Ga., the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals held that a party primary was an essential part of the state's election process and that party officials were in fact acting for the state in conducting them.

By its refusal last week to review the decision in the Georgia case, McGrath said the Department of Justice took it the Supreme Court "let stand as law" its decision in a Texas case holding that a person cannot be denied the right to participate in a party primary because of color.

"It will be the position of this Department," he continued, "that any state or party official who attempts to prevent a person from voting because of color will be in violation of Section 18 of the criminal code."

The Solicitor General said that persons denied voting privileges also could sue for damages under civil statutes. The penalty under the criminal code is a $1,000 fine or a year in prison.

Prosecutions will be brought on complaints filed by individuals, either direct or with U. S. District Attorneys, McGrath told reporters, adding that the Department has "no intention" of sending observers into the various states, as a voter, he continued, emphasizing that registration and poll tax requirements were not in-

Dis- volved in either the Texas or Georgia case. Neither the state nor federal government was a party to the case, which was brought against the Muscogee County Democratic Executive Committee. "It is hoped," McGrath said in conclusion, "that everyone will abide by the spirit of the courts' decisions."

CIO-PAC, Negro Vote Again Are Issues In Alabama and Arkansas Primaries

Richmond Va. Times-Dispatch
July 31, 1946

By The Associated Press

The CIO-PAC and the right of Negroes to vote were issues again yesterday as voters chose Democratic nominees for Senator in Alabama and Governor in Arkansas.

A light vote had been forecast in both States. The campaigns excited little interest.

Alabama held a special primary, which means election there, to name a successor to the late Senator John H. Bankhead, whose term expires in 1949. It was the twenty-third senatorial nomination this year, with 13 more to go.

Five candidates were in the field, including two Congressmen, John Sparkman, House majority whip, and Representative Frank Boykin. Sparkman had the backing of the CIO-PAC, the AFL United Mine Workers and the AFL State Executive Committee. Boykin attacked the PAC, saying it was out to "purge" him.

Runoff Slated August 27

They competed with State Senator James A. Simpson, four-term State Senator; Red Allen, textile mill worker, and Thomas H. Maxwell, member of the State Democratic Executive Committee.

If no candidate receives a majority, a runoff will be held August 27.

Arkansas' Democratic primary, which also is equivalent to election, was the first test of the new State law, separating primaries for Congress and State office, in an effort to bar Negroes from voting for State office candidates. Negroes voted in the primary for Federal offices July 16, but in small numbers.

Election officials had planned to challenge any Negroes attempting to vote in the three-man race for Governor. Negro organizations had urged members of their race to appear at the polls.

Arkansas is the first State to adopt this policy following the Supreme Court's decision upholding the right of Negroes to vote in primaries for Federal office.

South Carolina, which holds a primary August 13, has eliminated all primary laws from its statute books since the court decision. The Democratic party, which will regulate its own primary, limits participants to white Democrats over 18.

Governor Ben Laney sought a second-term nomination in Arkansas yesterday. His opponents were J. M. Malone, former Lonoke County judge, and Virgil Greene, of Blytheville.

A Congressional Medal of Honor winner, Nathan Gordon, was among three candidates for nomination as Lieutenant-Governor.

Arkansas also provides for runoff primary to be held August 13, in races when no candidate wins a majority.

White: 'No More Shocked Than I'

The Worker New York, N.Y.
Sun. 10-6-45

No American was more shocked nor disheartened by the firing of Henry Wallace from the Cabinet than I and that feeling is shared by Negro Americans generally because Mr. Wallace has been the one member of the President's Cabinet who has spoken out without fear against discrimination and bigotry.

But we are met today to find a solution—if there is a solution—to a specific problem. If that problem is not met head-on and successfully, there is little hope for preservation of the democratic process. What is happening in Greece and China and Trieste is an integral part of the lives and fortunes of us all.

I want strongly to urge upon this conference that it concentrate upon the immediate job before us of doing everything in our power to see that an intelligent and liberal Congress is elected.

I do not think a third party is the answer either in 1946 or 1948. Not long before he died, Wendell Willkie told me that he had made an exhaustive study of the possibilities of a third party only to learn that it would take a minimum of six years to get a third party listed on the ballot of all the states.

I speak to you today as an American but also as a Negro American. Today the Negro vote holds the potential balance of power in 17 states with 281 electoral votes. The Supreme Court decision in the Texas white primary case of April, 1944 has greatly extended the influence of Negro voters and at the same time activated democrcy for whites as well.

Until this year the highest number of voters who cast ballots in the Democratic primary of my native state of Georgia has never been in excess of three hundred thousand. But in 1946 more than one million Georgians voted, approximately one hundred thousand of them Negroes for the first time in history.

I want to say to this audience that despite the fact that Negroes, and especially Negro veterans, been subjected to a wave of incredibly sadistic mob violence during recent months, the Negro shares none of the tired liberalism of many of his white fellow Americans. We are not disheartened and we are looking forward, not backward.

We are not in the least intimidated by the rantings of Talmadge, Bilbo, Rankin, or the Ku Klux Klan. Neither are we deluded by the soft words of men like Taft and Carroll Reece.

Let us devote ourselves from now until Nov. 5 to the most important single job in America today—driving out of Congress and public life the enemies of democracy who now infest our Congress and substituting for them men and women who really believe in freedom and have the courage to fight for it.

Negroes Vote In Primaries Of Two States

By the Associated Press

Rep. John Sparkman of Alabama, Democratic whip of the House, was within sight today of a primary election majority which would guarantee him the Senate seat of the late John H. Bankhead.

Returns from 1,532 of 2,360 voting districts gave Sparkman 67,588 votes for the Democratic nomination to 67,943 for four others. Unless he could overtake their total in the counting which remained, he faced a runoff August 27 with State Senator James A. Simpson.

Simpson had 38,326, Rep. Frank Boykin 28,435, Red Allen of Union Springs 764 and Thomas H. Maxwell of Tuscaloosa 418.

Sparkman had the support of the CIO-PAC and other elements of organized labor. But the ten-year veteran of congress, himself the son of a tenant farmer, obtained his most whopping majorities yesterday in rural areas.

Negroes Vote

Negroes voted throughout the state. The polls were opened to them in some counties for the first time to conform with a supreme court decree that they could not be barred because of their color. In other districts, they had voted for years.

The Arkansas Democratic primary yesterday, involving state offices only, resulted in an easy second term victory for Gov. Ben Laney, who nearly doubled the combined vote of two opponents.

A World War II winner of the Congressional medal was nominated by a similar margin for lieutenant governor. He is Nathan Gordon, 30 year old Morrilton lawyer and wartime naval aviator. Although it was his first political start, he finished far ahead of his nearest rival, Roy Milum, dean of the state senate.

J. Oscar Humphrey rolled up a 3 to 1 victory over the total for two opponents to win renomination as state auditor.

To test a new law which would exclude Negroes from voting for state officers, Arkansas held this primary separately from one July 16, when congress nominees were chosen. Nevertheless some Negroes voted yesterday without reported incident.

Democratic Party Eyes Dixie Primary Results

The Constitution

WASHINGTON — The Democratic Party has a peculiar and unusual interest this year in primary elections in the South.

Ordinarily, nobody in the party's leadership pays much attention to the solid Democratic South in such primaries, except for President Roosevelt's unsuccessful attempt in 1938 to eliminate Sen. George (Georgia) and "Cotton Ed" Smith (South Carolina) in what was referred to as "the Roosevelt Purge." The interest this year is not of that sort.

What concerns them now is the effect of some things that are happening in the South on the fortunes of the party elsewhere, relating in particular to Negroes and labor. Both hitherto were powerful in swinging big urban centers in the East and Middle West to the Democratic ticket.

Atlanta Ga

THE peculiar Southern problem of this new kind of Democratic leaders arises because of the Supreme Court's outlawry of the "White Primary," and the increasing strength of labor in the South. Negroes now are seeking to vote and, in some places, encountering the usual subterfuges, as well as open threats. Labor has intensified its political activity and effectiveness through the organizing campaign now going on in the South. Mon. 8-1-46

Both are running up against old Southern custom and tradition and are bringing pressure here for protection.

The Bilbo issue in the Mississippi Primary Tuesday symbolizes the problem for the moment. It is bound to arise later in other Southern States in the virtual political revolution that has started in the South—and in ways to harass and embarrass national party officials constantly, and put them on the spot.

Sen. Bilbo's appeal for all "red-blooded" Mississippians to rise up and keep Negroes from voting finally got official recognition here, both in the Justice Department and in Congress. Atty. Gen. Tom Clark is expected to take public notice of the situation on the eve of the Primary.

NEGROES hold a balance-of-power vote in several big Eastern and Midwestern cities. The Democratic Party is anxious to hold them in line. The Party's main reliance, both in this year's Congressional elections and in 1948, is in the metropolitan areas in the big so-called "doubtful" States in the East and Middle West. Victory in 1948 depends upon a combination of enough of the big States with the usual Solid South.

It behooves the Administration to show an interest on behalf of Negroes in the South who are denied the franchise. The CIO, now so active in the South, politically and otherwise, has been in the forefront for measures designed to give the Negroes a political voice in the South as well as to improve their economic conditions.

Mon 8-1-46

IN ADDITION to that interest, the CIO also has others directly affecting its own political activity. The influence of the Ku Klux Klan, which is trying to revive itself, has been observed in anti-union activities in the South. This, too, has its effects in politics, notably, for example, in Georgia, where Gene Talmadge has Klan support in an attempt for a comeback. He is raising the "white supremacy" issue in Georgia as Sen. Bilbo has in Mississippi. Pressure has been brought here for the federal government to do something about the Klan.

The CIO also will run up against old-line political machines. It now has, for example, some 30,000 members in Memphis, where Boss Ed H. Crump always has supplied the majorities in Shelby County to put over his candidates. You may be sure that if the CIO does not feel it got a fair count in the August 1 primary, in which it is opposing Boss Crump's candidate, Sen. McKellar, it will raise a fuss here in Washington.

Light in Alabama

The News and Courier

The Democratic committee of Alabama is appealing to the people of the state to cause the enactment of laws restricting registration and voting. Under existing laws of Alabama, any person paying taxes on property assessed at $300 or more can register and vote, whether or not he can read and write. Unless stiffer requirements shall be adopted, the negroes in Alabama, the committee says, will vote and have the balance of power. If the white people of Alabama shall avoid their peril they must make not only literacy a test for suffrage but raise the property qualification. Birmingham, Ala.

Similar amendment of the voting laws of South Carolina will be necessary. Negroes as well as white people are democrats. In a democracy universal suffrage is the rule, and if the propertyless white man shall have the right to vote it cannot long be denied to colored people. Mon.

Whatever necessity or excuse for barring negroes from the polls, by force or chicane, existed 50 years ago has passed. The white people are now a substantial majority in South Carolina and have been since 1930. Fraud is more hurtful to the practicers than to the victims of it. If democracy (the reference is not to the Democratic party) shall prevail in South Carolina the negroes will be the balance of power in elections, as they would have been in the recent Georgia primary when 100,000 of them voted in a bloc had not Georgia's white Democracy been protected by the county unit plan. 9-30-46

In South Carolina laws that would deprive 90 per cent of the negroes of the privilege of voting would deprive a large number of white people, 30 or 40 per cent of them, of it.

Voting is a privilege of citizenship, and assertion that it is a right is nonsense and folly. This, one day our people, white people, will perceive, though it will be education that they will take in bitter doses. They will eventually give it to themselves. Misgovernment is the unescapable result of democracy, and the relief from it is dictatorship, which is a form of slavery (it may be mild and soothing) to all people.

Men, as we are told in the Bible, are created a little lower than the angels. The failure of democracy comes from the fact that so many of them are created so much lower than the angels. The Alabamians begin to see straight ahead.

Voters Control Victory Margin In 58 Districts

The Defender Chicago, Ill.

Surveyed Areas All Non-Southern; Stands On FEPC Shown

NEW YORK—New importance has been given the struggle for the Negro vote in coming elections with the release last week of a survey compiled by the CIO Political Action Committee, showing that Negro voters hold the margin of victory in 58 non-southern congressional districts.

The report shows that the 58 districts are part of 100 marginal areas where the incumbents could have been defeated in 1944 by a switch of five per cent or less of the total vote. Analysis of the Negro vote potential showed that in the first 58 districts it exceeds the present incumbent's 1944 plurality.

Of the 58 districts, 23 are represented by Congressmen who refused to sign the discharge petition that would have brought the FEPC bill to the floor of Congress. Other representatives favor the measure.

Can Oust Reactionaries

In releasing the survey, Jack Kroll, CIO-PAC director, said that Negro voters along with other progressives and organized labor have the opportunity of ousting reactionary Congressmen and electing or reelecting progressives. He cited the example of Rep. Slaughter (D., Mo.) who was defeated in the Aug. 6 primary, after he blocked FEPC in committee. Kroll also mentioned the defeat of Rep. Rodgers (R., Pa.), who opposed FEPC. Both defeated incumbents lost by less than the total amount of the Negro vote.

The report pointed out that the Negro's potential is greater now than it has ever been since he became a factor in the American political picture. The report was based on the 1940 census, and represents minimums that have been increased by wartime migrations and population shifts.

Large Cities Not Covered

Large cities like New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, and Detroit were not covered by the survey, since the Negro voter there has long been recognized as a dominant political factor.

The statistical table of Congressmen who [illegible] sign the FE[illegible] discharge pet[illegible] is as follows:

Negro Voters' Shift?

The Times New York, N. Y.

One estimate of the Negro vote in the North speaks of it as being potentially decisive in a "reasonably close election" in eighteen States with no less than 281 electoral votes. This figure seems high in itself and is to be further weighed in light of the fact that for more than twenty-five years we have had no close Presidential elections.

Nevertheless, the basic fact remains that there were times when national elections were close and the Negro vote may have been a decisive factor in such contests within a single generation after the Civil War. Today it is a question of serious moment whether the Negro voters who went over in large numbers from their traditional Republican allegiance to the Franklin Roosevelt camp are drifting back or not. They can make themselves felt if we ever get back to the close elections of the Grover Cleveland era. Sat. 10-26-46

Few Weigh More

This factor of the Northern Negro vote somehow manages to get itself overlooked in most discussions of Negro disfranchisement in the deep South. We strongly suspect that in Ilya Ehrenburg's report on America to his Soviet countrymen it appears that the Negro is disfranchised everywhere in the United States.

Against this stark picture one might recall the bold thesis suggested by one ingenious native writer. He advanced the paradox that as a result of anti-Negro discrimination in the South the political role of the Negro in the country as a whole has been greatly enhanced. He argues that if the Negro were allowed to vote freely all through the South, along with freedom from all other forms of discrimination, then it is conceivable that the electoral vote of a Southern State here or there might be decided by the Negro vote; conceivable, though not very likely.

But a heavy Negro migration to the North, as the result largely of a denial of political and civic rights at home, has brought it about that three million Negroes in the North actually exercise a more decisive influence in our national elections than if thirteen or fourteen million Negro people in the South had been allowed to vote freely.

Vote For You.

(An Editorial)

The Defender Chicago, Ill. Sat. 10-19-46

The Chicago Defender is calling upon all citizens, especially Negro citizens to go to the polls on Nov. 5 and cast their votes.

The congressional election of 1946 is by far the most important election Negro Americans will face since the advent of the New Deal 14 years ago. With the substantial increase in the political strength of the Negro voter, we have today a much more powerful instrument with which to carve out our political destiny than at any other time since slavery: five million potential Negro votes for which both Republicans and Democrats are battling.

Through the leadership of the late President Roosevelt, issues which affect our fate for the next generation have been crystallized and clarified. It is no longer necessary for us to flounder when we are asked what we want. We know that our status as American citizens will be determined by the passage of a permanent fair employment practice legislation, anti-lynching legislation, the abolishment of the poll tax and complete federal protection to our civil rights. Only our votes can achieve these objectives for us.

With the full knowledge that the time for decision is here, the Chicago Defender launches a crusade for votes to buttress the fight which we have made and to fortify those representatives of the people who want to carry out the mandates given them by the electorate.

THE RIGHT TO VOTE

In a democracy, the right of people to share in the responsibility of government is fundamental. When this right is denied for good reason, there is no just cause for grievance. When it is denied for no good reason, man rightly raises his voice against such a process of government. This means that he is under a government in which he has no voice in the selection of officers to administer it, and has no opportunity to effect the passage of new laws except in an indirect manner. Montgomery, Ala.

Man is always happier when he feels that he is a vital part of the system under which he lives. Moreover, he will give more of himself spontaneously to make government serve his interests, if not the common good, if he knows he is at least partially responsible for what prevails. Without a vital part in government, man tends to stand off and criticize government, always finding faults which should be corrected. It is a government by others in which he has no personal part to play. Hence, when all does not go as expected he casts the blame on others. Under such a set-up it is difficult for man to give his best to his country as a patriot. Many do not falter in their devotion and loyalty to their government, but they do so more reluctantly than the person who has full right of voting as other citizens.

The question relative to the qualifications for voting has long been a source of discussion and disagreement. Property values up to a certain minimum, payment of a head or poll tax, the ability to read and write certain documents specified, normal intelligence, and freedom from a criminal record, all have been used in the past. In addition, residence, sex, and race have entered in. Still, no one seems to know exactly what should be requisite to vote. If education is required, how much education? If good character is required, what do we mean by that, and who shall decide on the qualification? This one thing is certain: more of the better type of people should be allowed to vote than present provisions commonly permit. Wed. 10-23-46

Colored Voter Is Democratic

Atlanta Constitution
Atlanta, Ga.

By GEORGE GALLUP
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N. J.—Recent Republican efforts on behalf of FEPC legislation in the senate once again highlight the longstanding Republican party problem of winning the colored vote back into the GOP fold. 2-18-46

These efforts are naturally concentrated upon colored voters outside the Southern states, since the vast majority of Negroes in the South do not cast ballots.

There is no evidence today to indicate that Republican efforts are winning over any great proportion of colored voters in the states outside the South.

In fact, a poll just completed throughout the nation, which included a cross section of Negro voters, finds the colored voters favoring the Democratic party today over the Republican party by a vote of three to two.

The fact that colored voters continue to prefer the Democratic to the Republican party can be explained in large part by economic factors.

HERE ARE THE FIGURES of Negro voters and white voters in comparable occupation groups.

The figures are based on the question:

"If a presidential election were being held today, which party would you vote for—the Democratic or Republican?"

	Democratic	Republican
Colored voters	60%	40%
White voters in same occupations	58	42

The figures above are of those with opinions on the subject. Three out of every ten colored voters, about two out of ten white voters in the comparable group, had no opinion. 2-18-46

AS WAS MENTIONED earlier, the above figure of 58% Democratic for white voters in the same occupation groups as the Negro voters, represents the opinion of white voters in the skilled, semi-skilled, and unskilled occupation categories. The Republican party is preferred by a majority of white voters in business and professional and farm groups, outside the South, and the two parties are about equally strong among the white-collar workers.

This is not to say that race will not at times be more important as a determining factor than economic status, but the evidence does indicate that until the present economic cleavage gives way, or until the Republican party can convince voters in the middle and lower economic income groups that it represents their best interests, little headway in winning the colored vote is likely to be made.

At the present time, Institute surveys find, only about one out of every ten in the lower economic groups thinks that the Republican party represents his best interests.

SENATORIAL SITDOWN

Birmingham, Ala. News

To the Editor of The News:

I wish to commend the article of James D Ross in the Voice of the People Jan. 24 on the sitdown strike of our senators, and he should have included most of the congressmen. If anybody can point out anything the lawmakers at Washington have done since Japan collapsed, that is worth one iota to the American people, they are better judges than the writer is. 1-30-46

I thought some home for holidays would try to heed the mandate of their constituents, but instead they start a talk of filibuster to kill legislation that the nation must eventually have before we will have a settled industrial status in America.

I understand that Sen. Carter Glass, of Virginia, has not answered a roll call since 1942, yet he draws his $10,000 plus any extras of the people's taxes. As a whole I think we could cut the Senate down to 50, and Congress down to 200; then cut off at least one-third of all government employes. Let the ones cut off go back to the farm and help raise some badly needed food.

James D. Ross very well portrays the Negro voting needs. Just why should not the Negro vote in the South as well as in the North? Unless the eight Southern states wake up and repeal the iniquitous long out-moded poll tax law there will soon be very few white people voting. There are less than 10 per cent now voting in Alabama and the number is decreasing every year because the old people who have their poll tax paid are passing away and younger people are not paying the tax.

I wish to warn the voters to ask all our Alabama legislators and other officeholders who are offering for reelection in 1946 to show what they have done that has helped Alabama, and make any others running state what they intend to try to do that will help the taxpayer. Maybe some of them will make a true statement and try to live up to it if elected. 1-30-45

Add Ironies Of Democracy

America has enfranchised the Japanese, giving the vote to every one over 20.

But on our home grounds we still keep the age limit at 21, holding that while young men of 18, ing that while men of 18, 19 and 20 and women of 20 are old enough to fight and die for their country, they are not old enough to vote for it.

And, while we have given the ballot to the Japanese without a dollar sign attached, the poll tax in seven American states still disfranchises millions of our own citizens.

Furthermore, there's no taint of stain of a color line on the new polling booth we've opened to the Japanese, yet in large areas of our own South we still tolerate the "white primary."

"Negro Vote Will Improve White Vote"

Negro Vote Wavers

Washington Post

The politicians will tell you that political events are cumulative. In other words, one event won't lose an election, but several of them taken together, will. Washington, D. C.

For instance, both Democratic and Republican politicoes agree that Mrs. Truman's "why not?" crack about the race question and the DAR, in itself would not lose her husband the Negro vote.

But when this event is followed by the Southern filibuster again FEPC and the exit of Harold Ickes, chief Negro champion of the old Roosevelt Administration, then the picture changes. Wed 2-20-46

Millions of Negroes remember the day when Ickes invited Marian Anderson to sing on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial after the DAR had turned her down. They know of Ickes appointment of a Negro governor to the Virgin Islands, which Southern Senators are now blocking, and his many speeches in Negro centers during crucial days of past campaigns.

Result of all these events: even more optimistic Democrats will admit that the strategic Negro vote which once went solid for Roosevelt has now slipped over to the GOP column.

Note—Politicians warned the White House that Senator Joe O'Mahoney's record on the race question would hurt his appointment as Secretary of the Interior. O'Mahoney voted against the antilynching bill, and against the antipoll tax bill, and against stopping the FEPC filibuster.

University Will Make Study Of Voting System In South

2-1-46

UNIVERSITY, Ala., Feb. 1—(AP)—A two-year study of the voting process in the South will be made by the University of Alabama bureau of public administration under a grant of $40,000 from the Rockefeller Foundation, it was announced today by President Raymond R. Paty.

The study, which will be in the hands of a full-time research staff, will get under way within the next two or three months, Dr. Paty said, adding that he will soon appoint a Southwide commission of nine to 15 leading citizens of the region to serve as an advisory body in planning and executing the study.

"THE STUDY WILL BE A FACTUAL one from beginning to end," said the university president. "It will be as objective and scientific as scholarly research can make it. The purpose of the study is not to prove that a certain course should or should not be followed, or that a given thing should or should not be done. Rather, it is to present a detailed picture of electoral practice in the Southern states.

"There is a widespread feeling that this whole subject has been the object of more discussion than thought, that more heat than light has been brought to bear on it. The one and only purpose of this study is to shed light on the electoral process in the Southern states."

Dr. Paty pointed out that certain features of the voting process in the South are unique to this section. Requirements for voting will be analyzed with care, including the poll tax.

OTHER PHASES OF THE PROBLEM to be studied include the one-party system, the system of nominations with particular regard to the direct primary, the registration of voters, election machinery and voting and other practices in some of the Southern states that in some of those as few as 15 to 20 per cent who might qualify to vote actually go to the polls and cast ballots.

Voting In The South

Birmingham News, Ala.

No region in the United States is so much talked about with respect to voting as is the South. Now, under a $40,000 grant from the Rockefeller Foundation, a two-year study of voting processes in the South is to be made. We should learn much about our region from it. 2-2-46

But—lest some head too promptly for the stump—we hasten to point out that the University of Alabama Bureau of Public Administration is to make the investigation. An objective, scientific report is being planned. A Southwide advisory commission of from nine to 15 men will be appointed soon by Dr. Raymond R. Paty, university president, who made the announcement.

We know that, in the South, we have far too many persons who, eligible to vote, rarely get around to casting ballots. Why? We hope to learn the answer. And we know that the poll tax keeps many from voting—how many? What is the specific effect of the poll tax on individuals? Again, we hope to get definite answers from this university survey. 2-2-46

The people of the South should be grateful for the Rockefeller grant, which will be administered by our own University of Alabama. The bureau of public administration at the Capstone, through this project, will be enabled on a sizable scale to serve the people, and this is its good object.

Ickes In New Job Is Expected To Bid For Large Negro Vote

Atlanta Ga. Daily Times

WASHINGTON, D. C. —(SNS) —The return to politics of Harold L. Ickes, former secretary of the interior, as executive chairman of the Independent Citizens Committee of the arts, sciences and professions indicates that that organization will seek to mobilize independent colored voters to press for the carrying out of the Roosevelt policies, foreign and domestic.

Mr. Ickes who is popular with colored people because of his liberal attitude while head of the interior department will have the support of some big colored writers

The committee, which was organized to support the late President Roosevelt for reelection in 1944 includes Duke Ellington, band leader; Hazel Scott, pianist; Langston Hughes, author; Paul Robeson, actor and singer. Tues 3-12-46

Supporting the view that colored support will be sought is the fact Jo Davidson national chairman, in announcing Mr. Ickes selection as the head of the committee, said the program of the reorganized committee would include abolition of the poll tax, elimination of the discrimination and establishment of a Fair Employment Practice Committee.

U. Of A. Seeking Cause Of Low Percentage Of Voters In South

Birmingham News Alabama

Wed 3-6-46

Research is now under way at the University of Alabama to determine the causes for the low percentage of voters in the South and why its natural resources have not been put to greater advantage, Dr. Raymond R. Paty, president of the University of Alabama, informed the Birmingham Kiwanis Club at its luncheon meeting yesterday at the Tutwiler Hotel.

The fact only 15 per cent of the population in the South votes, when this democratic privilege has been bought through bloodshed and other hardships, was mentioned by Dr. Paty as a drawback that could be the undoing of democracy. He said that one field of research now in progress is trying to determine the factors for such a condition.

THE OBJECTIVE of another avenue of research is the reason for failure to make greater use of the natural resources of the South, the university president told the club. One phase of this work is an effort to make an inventory of the coal situation, he said.

"The men who are quietly engaged in this work are trying patiently to solve the problems of this region with the hope that the results may serve to increase the economic level of the state and region," Dr. Paty added.

The university, he said, is placing equal emphasis on the cultural and fine arts. These, he underlined, are not mere frills but are designed to help future citizens get the most out of the resources of life.

Reporting on the medical college, Dr. Paty said, despite obstacles, the center, located in Birmingham, will be one of the finest developments in medicine in the South. He spoke optimistically of the chances of removing "the many obstacles."

ANOTHER FIELD OF RESEARCH concerns diets, Dr. Paty told the Kiwanians. By obtaining the best knowledge available on balanced meals, it is hoped to serve the most nutritious meals possible in the school lunchrooms of the state, he said. This, he emphasized again, is not a mere fad.

Because of backlogs built up during the war, education is now under its heaviest burden, the university president observed. Accommodating all the students who want an education is "a terrific and difficult problem," he declared. The university is determined not to turn away any students from within the state, he gave assurance. Part of Northington Hospital is being made available to the university and there is a likelihood of acquiring a larger part of the hospital, he said.

Dr. Paty was introduced by O. G. Gresham. John W. Black, president of the club, presided.

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:

Should a man give his seat to a lady on a public conveyance? A gentleman will offer his seat to a woman at any time and in any place. One of your writers used a club on the poor females when he accused them of voting, etc., and at the same time said he refused them a seat on the bus. Some people need to get the "beam out of their eyes" and quit blaming others for their actions.

Negroes vote first time in two state primaries

Los Angeles Examiner

Los Angeles Calif

Sat. 5-11-46

Florida and Alabama Negroes were allowed to have their say for the first time in state primaries last Tuesday, as four states (Indiana and Ohio were the others) picked candidates for Congress and state offices in their first peacetime primary elections in five years.

Negroes were given entry into the southern primaries by a recent Supreme Court decision outlawing their exclusion in Texas. However, the Negro turnout in the two southern elections was said to be comparatively small. In Alabama, one deterring factor was the unpaid polltax, which totalled as much as $36 per person, although returned war veterans were exempt. Sat. 5-11-46

Results of the voting were not available at TRIBUNE deadline.

When Will They Awaken?

The Montgomery Advertiser

The U. S. Court of Appeals at New Orleans having ruled that Negroes are entitled to vote in Georgia's Democratic primary election, Roy V. Harris, speaker of the Georgia House, calls for a special session of the Legislature to "save the white primary in Georgia." Montgomery Ala.

Two weeks from next Thursday, on March 28, Hamilton County will hold a Democratic primary election. Negroes will vote in that primary on the same basis as white people. In this city and county colored people will never again be challenged when they vote, even in Democratic primaries. Tennessee and Hamilton County admit the right of every citizen to cast his ballot, regardless of race or creed. Fri 3-29-46

No one wishes any longer to change that.

But the Negroes of this city and county ought to consider the best use they can make of this high privilege.

The news stories concerning the registration are full of references to the "controlled wards," and frequently it is stated that the most rigidly controlled wards are those heavily populated with Negroes. If the coming primary is like those of the past, on the morning of the election the political machine's taxicabs will burn up gasoline picking up Negroes and taking them to the polls, where they will mark their ballots as the machine instructs them to mark them.

In many residential wards, conscientious Negroes will vote against political machines, knowing that such machines have nothing to offer to the colored people which will better their condition in life. Fri. 3-29-46

Everywhere in the South political machines manipulate the Negro vote and cause the colored people to prostitute their newly won ballot. Do the Negoes get better schools by thus enslaving themselves to the ward heelers of the political machines? Do they get better housing? On the contrary, it is to the advantage of the political bosses to have the Negroes continue to live under slum conditions so that they can be better coralled and herded to the polls.

No element of the population should be more interested in law and order than the colored people. Yet they permit themselves to be "controlled" by the very members of their own race who submit them to the evils of "fixed" gambling dives, cheap liquor and general lawlessness. Fri. 3-29-46

Chattanooga has many conscientious Negro citizens who have the highest ideals for members of their race and wish to see them progress and get better opportunities in schools, employment, health, housing. Will the colored voters listen to those citizens in the primary election or will large numbers of the colored voters continue to be herded by a political system whose very existence depends on keeping the Negro in ignorance and in economic subjection?

The Negro will always have the right to vote in Hamilton County primaries, Democratic as wel las Republican. The wise leaders of the race are aware that under present conditions many Negroes use that great privilege to the detriment of all colored people in this community.

When will the awakening come? — The Chattanooga Times.

Neither Major Party Can Win If Negroes Vote As A Unit

WASHINGTON, (NNPA)— A mixed audience of about 2000 persons filled Turners Arena last Sunday to hear former Interior secretary Harold L. Ickes urge colored people to form a balance of power bloc to end racial discrimination. The program was sponsored by the committee for racial democracy to mark the opening of its drive to eliminate racial barriers in the district of Columbia. It was advertised as "We Are Americans, Too" rally. The fact that neither major party can win five vital northern states without the Negro vote was cited by Ickes as an example of what Negroes could accomplish politically if they established a solid bloc in their own interest but the first step in the fight against "Discrimination and Segregation" in the district must be called local self government, he warned. Ickes held up the status of senator Bilbo democrat of Mississippi, chairman of the senate district committee as "Mayor of Washington" as evidence of the evils of the present system of governing the National Capitol. "Can anyone imagine any city that would of its own free will elect senator Bilbo as mayor." He demanded of his audience the majority of which were Negroes. Tue. 5-21-46

Ickes advised Negroes to be persistent in their insistence upon their civil rights guaranteed under the constitution. But warned them not be "unduly sensitive" Both Negroes and whites should cultivate "A spirit of understanding and sympathetic goodwill toward each other. Icker was introduced by Mrs. Daisy Lampkin, Vice President of Pittsburgh Courier. Oeher speakers included George E Hayes local Attorney and Leon Ransom chairman of the Racial Democracy Committee. The Reverend Francis McTeekr, head of the Washington Federation of Churches, co-chairman was on the platform.

Arnall Answers Bilbo About Negro Suffrage

Montgomery Ala Montgomery Advertiser

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., May 22. —(AP)—Gov. Ellis Arnall, of Georgia, en route to Jackson, Miss., by plane, to address a Veterans of Foreign Wars encampment, answered critism of Senator Bilbo, of Mississippi,. on his stand of Negro suffrage.

Bilbo had been quoted in a campaign address at Aberdeen, Miss., as saying:

"There is one Southern governor—I'm not calling any names because I understand he's a guest in Mississippi today—who urged his people to accept the right of Negroes to vote and announced unqualifiedly that he would not convene an extraordinary assembly to pass legislation to protect the white primary. Now, that, in parlance of the prize ring, is asking for it. And, I might add, this 'conspirator' will get it at the polls in the next State election."

Gov. Arnall read the statement and said: Thur. 5-23-46

"In spite of a senator in a Delta State — and I'm not calling any names—I believe in the Constitution of the United States. I believe in upholding the decisions of the courts of the land and I think that a United States senator, a governor and all other public officials should uphold the Constitution and laws."

Negroes Win Vote Battle

P.M. New York N.Y. Fri. 4-26-46

Negroes in Louisiana and Alabama moved a step closer toward the vote when the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth District this week reversed the findings of lower courts that they could not appeal for Federal relief until they exhausted remedies provided by state courts.

The actions were instituted by William P. Mitchell, Macon County, Ala., and Edward Hall, St. John the Baptist Parish, La., who were denied the right to register for voting, though they met all qualifications.

In each case, the Federal District Court upheld the contention of state authorities that adequate remedies were provided by state law in instances of discrimination. In reversing the decisions, the Court of Appeals pointed out that the states provided only judicial relief, that is, merely a chance to present a grievance in state court, and not administrative relief when the discrimination was clear cut.

The Court of Appeals found both Mitchell and Hall were clearly entitled to vote and that the refusal of local boards to allow them to register, a condition for voting, was a violation of the U. S. Constitution. Fri 4-26-46

The decision was hailed by the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, which pushed the actions, as a great victory.

Wed 5-8-46 New York

COLUMBUS, Ohio, May 7 (AP)— A four-man race for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator received principal attention today as Ohioans balloted in a primary election which otherwise failed to excite the electorate.

"Exceptionally light" voting was reported, and rain tended to cut attendance at the polls in several cities. Secretary of State Edward J. Hummel had estimated that hardly 20 per cent of the State's 3,200,000 potential voters would turn out.

Besides nominating candidates for a full six-year term in the Senate, Ohioans also were choosing them for a nineteen-day unexpired term, for twenty-three Congressional seats, State and county offices and the Legislature.

The Republicans chose for the full-term Senatorial nomination former Gov. John W. Bricker, Vice Presidential candidate in 1944. He had no primary opposition.

Opposing Mr. Bricker in November will be one of these Democrats: United States Senator James W. Huffman, Marvin C. Harrison, Cleveland lawyer; former Representative Young, also of Cleveland, and Dr. Edward A. Huth, a Dayton university professor.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 7 (AP)—In Indiana's primary elections today, polling places were never crowed as the two major parties chose nominees for eleven seats in Congress, the State Legislature, county offices, precinct committeemen and delegates to the Democratic and Republican State Conventions next month.

Those conventions will nominate candidates for United States Senator and minor State officers to enter the November general election.

Sixty candidates seeking the eleven House nominations in each party included two women and all except one incumbent.

Rep. Charles M. LaFollette of Evansville did not seek renomination in the eighth district. He is to be one of Senator Raymond E. Willis' opponents for the Senate in the Republican convention in June.

Lower Court Decisions Reversed on Appeal

NEW ORLEANS. — Registrars in Louisiana and Alabama, who customarily refuse to qualify colored voters, received a setback last week when the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed the lower courts, holding that disfranchised citizens could appeal to the Federal courts for relief.

Agriculture was swelled unsuccessful opponent two years ago, and Laurie C. Battle, a veteran of World War II.

The ex-service vote was by the fact that Alabama exempts them from payment of its cumulative poll tax of $1.50 a year for the twenty-four years between the ages of 21 and 45. Many of the new Negro voters were exempt from poll-tax payment under this clause.

The decision of the lower courts that persons denied registration because of race could not seek Federal relief until they exhausted remedies provided by the State courts was reversed in an unprecedented opinion written by Judge Edwin R. Holmes of Mississippi.

The actions were instituted by William F. Mitchell, of Macon County, Ala., and Edward Hall, of St. John the Baptist Parish, La., who were denied the right to register for voting, though they met all qualifications. Sat 5-4-46

Sought an Injunction

Hall had sought an injunction and damages against the registrar for requiring colored citizens to submit to tests not required of other applicants for registration.

The Federal District court dismissed Hall's complaint on Sept. 17, 1945. An appeal was made in the U.S. Court of Appeals, Fifth Circuit.

Judge Holmes's opinion held that Hall was not required to proceed in the State courts before seeking redress in the Federal courts for violation of his constitutional rights on racial grounds.

In the Mitchell case against the registrars of Macon County, Ala., there was a similar action with the same court reversing a decision of the lower courts dismissing the action on Oct. 12, 1945.

Upholds Right to Vote

Judge Holmes again wrote an opinion upholding the right of colored registrants, stating:

"Since registration is a pre-requisite to vote in an election in Alabama, including the election of Federal officers, the action of the registrars did effectively deprive appellant of the right to vote."

Judge Holmes pointed out further that the States provided only judicial relief, that is, merely a chance to present a grievance in State court, and not administrative relief when the discrimination was clear cut. Sat 5-4-46

Violates Constitution

The decision held that both Mitchell and Hall were clearly entitled to vote and that the refusal of local boards to allow them to register, a condition for voting, was a violation of the U.S. Constitution.

Attorneys associated with Thurgood Marshall, NAACP chief counsel, and Robert Carter, assistant counsel, were A. P. Tureaud and A. Thornton in Louisiana, and Arthur W. Shores, a member of the Birmingham branch, NAACP, legal committee.

Will Prosecute All Attempts to Prevent Voting in Elections

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh Pa.
Sat. 4-13-46

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA)—The Justice Department will prosecute, under the criminal code, "any State or party official who attempts to prevent a person from voting because of color" in a primary or general election.

The department's policy was outlined by Solicitor General J. Howard McGrath at a press conference last Friday.

"It is our position," Mr. McGrath said, "that the law has been settled by the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals and the denial of certiorari by the Supreme Court in a recent Georgia case, in which it was held Negroes were entitled to vote in primary elections."

DECISION AFFECTS ALL STATE ELECTIONS

"There is no doubt that the decision affects local as well as general primaries and elections in all States." Sat. 4-13-46

All test cases have been brought as civil actions.

In a suit brought by the Rev. Primus E. King of Columbus, Ga., the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals held that a party primary was an essential part of the State's election process and that party officials were in fact acting for the State in conducting them.

Mr. McGrath said the Department of Justice assumed that, by refusing to review the decision in the Georgia case, the Supreme Court "let stand as law" its decision in a Texas case, holding that the right to participate in a primary cannot be denied to a person because of color.

Appeals

For Negroes' Voting Rights In Louisiana And Alabama

The Informer
Houston Texas

NEW ORLEANS — In a courtroom filled to overflowing with attentive Negroes, most of them students from the local high schools and Dillard university, attorneys for the NAACP argued for the rights of Negroes to register and vote in State and national elections. The Jim Crow voting appeals were argued in the Circuit Court of Appeals before Judges McCord of Alabama, Lee of Louisiana, and Holmes of Mississippi. Sat 4-20-46

NAACP attorneys, A. P. Tureaud of Louisiana, Arthur D. Shores of Birmingham, and Thurgood Marshall Counsel from the national office, representing Negroes challenging the traditional Southern Jim Crow exclusion, after reviewing the line of decisions since the 14th and 15th amendments and efforts of the Southern states to prevent Negroes from voting despite the Federal Constitution and laws, argued that the Federal Courts had a positive duty to grant relief in such cases and should not relegate Negroes to the use of state machinery.

Lawyers representing white supremicists of Louisiana and Alabama, one of whom ironically is a law partner of self-proclaimed Alabama liberal, Senator Lister Hill, maintained that the appeals must first go through the State courts where, it should be pointed out, there would be little if any chance of democratic consideration.

Thurgood Marshall, in the closing argument, cited the recent decision of the U. S. Supreme Court which catergorically makes the duties of the Federal Courts clear in cases where Federal rights are violated.

The case is under advisement with no indication of how long before a decision may be expected.

Prying Open the Ballot Boxes

Pittsburgh Courier

American Negroes won another important battle in their long fight against the Southern Democratic white primary last week when the United States Supreme Court upheld the right of Negroes to vote in the Georgia Democratic primaries.

Following by two years its similar decision in the case of Texas Democratic primaries, the court's action means the legal opening of the ballot boxes in two important Southern States whose combined Negro population exceeds 2,000,000, or one-seventh of the total American Negro population.

The legal department of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People is to be commended for the brilliance and diligence with which it carried the case of the Rev. Primus E. King up to the Nation's highest court and won another monumental decision.

The Georgia die-hards are understandably flustered, and Gene Talmadge, former suspender-snapping Governor, and Speaker Roy Harris of the State Legislature are urging Governor Arnall to call a special session of the Legislature to enact measures to insure continued white supremacy. Pittsburgh, Pa.

It appears that there are still a lot of white people in this country who feel that the only way they can insure white supremacy is by passing a law to that effect rather than meeting colored citizens in all fields on a plane of equality. Sat 4-13-46

This is something like a runner who constantly asserts that he is the best at his distance in the world, but nevertheless insists that all his competitors be handicapped before he will agree to enter a race!

Undoubtedly there will be much head-scratching in Georgia among the Confederate gentry to devise new methods of keeping colored folk away from the polls without resorting to the old Klan technique, but the NAACP lawyers probably will be able to defeat them.

As if this were not enough to render the Georgia die-hards sleepless, the Department of Justice warns that in the future it will prosecute, under the criminal code, any State or party officials who attempt to prevent a person from voting because of color in a primary or general election.

It will be interesting to see how the Talmadges and Bilbos will get around this, and it is also interesting to note that this assurance comes from a department headed by a Texas white man. Attorney General Tom Clark, all of which proves that it is dangerous to generalize about Southern white people.

The chief opposition to Negroes voting in Southern Democratic primaries is on economic grounds, there being millions of dollars worth of tax-paid jobs involved, as well as all the other emoluments and advantages that come through wielding political power, and from which Negroes have been excluded entirely for the past two generations. Sat. 4-13-46

It is well understood that once Negroes start voting in large numbers in States like Georgia and Texas, the jim-crow laws will be endangered and the whole elaborate pattern of segregation threatened and finally destroyed.

While this would be an excellent thing for the South to enforce it would seem to be the handwriting on the wall for the Southern Old Guard. and the Nation, it would do away with the special privileges of the Southern political oligarchy and it hangers-on, which have enabled them to maintain minority rule at home and to impose its will on the Government in Washington.

So we may expect an all-out fight from the Eastlands, Bilbos, Connallys and their ilk because a privileged class never willingly surrenders power.

Nevertheless, the latest Supreme Court decision and the expressed determination of the Department of Justice

FOR SALE—THE NEGRO VOTE!

THE Negro vote is for sale, but not for money. The price is democracy. A practical, working democracy for all citizens as provided for in the constitution of the United States.

We may thank God that Negroes are important constituents in both political parties—the Republicans and the Democrats. Furthermore as a group they are determining factors which demand specific consideration from either party in formulating its policies.

No longer can it be said that when the Republicans are in power the Negro is "in" and when the Democrats are "in" the Negro is "out." The Negro has so wisely balanced his vote that he receives consideration regardless of what party is in power and control of the government. As a race, he manifested a pronounced wisdom by becoming by-partisan. The basis of Negro support is no longer found in traditional loyalty to any one party, but upon the basis of that party which offers the most in improving the status of the race and nation.

During the administration of the late F. D. Roosevelt thousands of Negroes who had been traditionally Republicans shifted into the Democratic party. They shifted because of the progressive measures espoused by the late President Roosevelt. They also left the Republican ranks because the Republicans had become too sure of the traditional loyalty of the Negro and offered little or no inducements for him to remain in the party.

In a presidential election, the Negro vote can be the determining factor. Both parties are now desperately seeking to secure the Negro vote. No longer can the Negro vote be won by appointing a few Negroes to high positions, nor can the Negro vote be "bought" with money. The price of the Negro vote is democracy for all Americans regardless of race, color, or creed. The party which gets the major Negro vote will be the party which is most convincing that it has the most to offer in making democracy work for Negroes as well as other citizens. They will support the party which is "doers" of their word as well as "sayers."

In one of the Negro weeklies there is a slogan, "Don't get mad, get smart and vote." We may add that the Negro is also "getting smart" on how to vote. Politically the Negro is at one of the most advantageous points to gain consideration and action towards political and social justice in America. Much of this balance of power is due largely to wise counselling and realistic leadership of Negro churchmen who preached and taught our people to vote for the candidates and party which offer the most benefit for the race.

Many of the Negroes who have been voting democratic may be desirous of returning their support to the Republicans. But the Republicans during the next two years must "repent" of their unholy alliances with the reactionary Negro hating Southern Senators. Ministers and church leaders should advise our people to see what will be done about the FEPC. Let us see what will be done about the Anti-Poll Tax, about anti-lynching. This is the "down payment" of the price of the Negro support to either party which assures the democratic way of life.

Negro Support Sought By Both Major Parties In Last Ditch Fiaht

WASHINGTON—The most significant election since the advent of the New Deal in 1932 has caused brain-trusters in the camps of both major political parties to reach a near-frantic stage this week trying to figure where the strength of upwards of fi million Negro votes will be placed on Nov. 5.

Basic to their concern is the disturbing silence in Negro political circles. Construed to be a silence of conspiracy, party leaders fear it may manifest itself in an unexpected Negro voting landslide in November to dynamite careful party planning and upset the conservative trend presently gripping America.

No less agonizing to both parties are indications of an approaching marriage between the Negro voters and the progressives, a union which it is stated aims to hold the Roosevelt line against reaction.

Progressive Conference

Predictions of a disaffection of the progressive vote through a third party movement were dispelled at the Chicago "Conference of Progressives" held recently.

Political observers who before the meeting predicted a new political movement would be born, came away with a changed view. Instead of a third party movement, there was every evidence that liberals are lining up political action behind the Roosevelt foreign and domestic policies.

Progressive Democrats look to FDR in death as in life as a rally-ing point, and as a unifying factor for all intelligent Americans.

On the other hand, Republicans are counting heavily on the absence of FDR's "magic" over the Negro electorate as an opportunity to ride to victory on the strength of the Negro vote—past performance and unfulfilled promises of the party notwithstanding.

Negroes Control Balance

Negro voters hold a balance of power in 17 pivotal states and the margin of victory in 58 non-southern congressional districts. In 1944, even the ultra-conservative Wall Street Journal conceded the Negro vote swung the presidential election and won a fourth term for the Democrats.

Where this decisive voting strength will be concentrated three weeks hence is the subject of considerable back-room caucusing in Washington. Information trickling out of these locked-door sessions attest that leaders in each of the parties woefully admit they must win the Negro vote, whichever hopes to carry the election. How to attract that vote is their big headache.

At stake are 435 seats in the House of Representatives and 36 in the Senate. With a net gain of 30 seats, Republicans would have enough strength to elect a speaker.

Assisted by the southern Democrats with whom they have continuously consorted to kill all essential measures, the GOP could clinch control of the House, and thereby realize a 15-year-old dream.

Political analysts here admit a Republican controlled House will pave the way for a Republican president in 1948, and thus the march towards traditional Republican conservatism will be on.

No "Ballot-Box-Fantasy"

Evidence that a landslide of Negro votes is more than a ballot-box-fantasy is found in preliminary reports indicating wide-scale first-time registration of Negroes in such strategic areas as Chicago, Indianapolis, and St. Louis. A comparable trend is reflected in telegraphic reports from a Chicago Defender representative in California where it is indicated that along the west coast generally, large numbers of migratory Negroes from the South and elsewhere will cast their ballots for the first time. The Defender

An unusually large trek of Negro Republican leaders to Washington during the past several weeks is said to be a part of a plan to devise techniques through which the Negro voters may be wooed to the Republican banner.

From a usually reliable source has come the information that the Republican party has built up a sizable war chest which is being used to buy Negro votes. Many down-and-out oldtimers are said to be riding herd in the party again, prostituting the cause of the race for the moneybags.

Stake Hopes on Gains

Democrats stake their hopes to win the black vote on the many gains which have accrued to Negroes through the present administration. Chicago, Ill.

Under the Democratic banner, countless Negroes were politically emancipated through the Texas primary decision. Jim Crow interstate bus travel was similarly brought to an end. Sat. 10-19-46

The first Negro ever to be appointed governor of any U. S. territorial possession—the first Negro Federal judge to be appointed within the continental U. S.—and, the first Negro ever to be appointed special assistant in the office of the Postmaster General of the United States are among tangible factors which the Administration expects to help plead their case.

It should be pointed out that all of these appointments have met a solid phalanx of Republican opposition.

Rumor that a Negro may be appointed to the Supreme Court of the United Statses has likewise reaped unfavorable comment from Republican quarters.

Remember FBI Failure

However, in the face of these unquestionable gains, still fresh in the minds of Negro voters is the failure of the Federal Bureau of Investigation to apprehend any of the barbarous murderers who snuffed out the lives of four innocent victims at Monroe, Ga. Moreover, failure of the FBI to take action in the Minden, La., lynching, where eye witnesses are willing to identify the guilty parties, has dampened their enthusiasm.

Negro voters have taken a wait-and-see attitude in the Isaac Woodward case where an Aiken, S. C., sheriff was taken into custody for gouging out the eyes of a Negro veteran.

While sources close to the Department of Justice have stated that the FBI operates more or less as an independent arm of government since the days of former President Herbert Hoover, it is argued in wide quarters that Negro voters expect more than the usual "failure to find sufficient evidence for conviction" as an indication of the Administration's good faith in claiming equal protection of the rights of all citizens.

The FBI's failure in these and other comparable cases supports the contention of Negroes that the appointment of a Negro assistant Attorney General of the U. S. is long overdue.

Justice Dept. Blamed

The Department of Justice, it is felt, cannot duck responsibility for the FBI's failure to date to act in these atrocious and fiendish violations of justice, no matter where the fault rests.

Dissatisfaction over current shortages of essential living commodities is being used by the Republicans as a deliberate argument to force a big protest vote.

However, Democrats claim their efforts to hold the line against inflation through price controls were sabotaged by reactionary Republicans. In some circles it is alleged that Republicans are deliberately keeping meats, automobiles and other commodities off the market to force a depression, and thus cut the common man down again to what is considered to be his proper size.

Republicans count as their most important allies in this political skulduggery the big business interests, the "economic royalists" and their press and radio propagandists.

These powerful financial interests are working hand and glove under cover with a new political action movement made up of former Gerald L. K. Smith America Firsters and related "national" groups to purge 187 so-called "leftist" Congressmen who have consistently voted the liberal line.

It is stated that the aggregation, known as "American Action" has raised in the last few months close to $1,000,000 from among its wealthy and influential sponsors, well known in high financial circles.

Savannah of the Future

The News and Courier Charleston, S. C. Thurs. 11-22-46

The municipal election in Savannah in which negroes voted has passed without unpleasant incident, though the opposing parties each strove for negro support, offers no guaranty or reasonable hope that future contests in that city will be free of corruption and demoralization. In Savannah are thousands of impressionable, emotional negroes. In the recent campaign their preachers had an active part, and that is evidence that many of them are excitable, controllable, unfit to vote. A small minority of Savannah's negroes are as capable and desirable as voters as are white men.

Also in Savannah are numbers of white people who are corruptible or corrupt. They are not nearly so many, proportionately, as are the negroes. If in coming years the corruptible negro voters are to be added to the white corruptibles, Savannah will be a nasty mess of political disorders if not of riot.

Not until the suffrage restrictions shall be so rigid that the great majority of negroes and a considerable minority of the white people shall be deprived of the franchise will it be safe to conduct elections in Southern communities except by white parties that exclude negroes from participating in nominating candidates to be voted for in the legal elections. If the leaders of public opinion in Savannah do not perceive this and shall neglect to give it serious consideration the conclusion will follow that Savannah is sadly lacking in intelligent and honest white leadership.

24 Pro-Lynchers Face Defeat

Sat. 10-19-46

NEW YORK — Demonstrating that Negro votes in 24 Congressional districts outside the Solid South can defeat the 24 Representatives in non-Southern areas who refused to sign the anti-lynch bill discharge petition, the CIO-PAC this week called for a full turnout of Negro voters at the polls in November, to elect anti-lynch candidates.

A survey based on 1944 election returns showed that incumbents opposing the bill were elected by pluralities less than the potential Negro vote. The survey also showed a similar voting balance in 34 districts where Congressman favored the anti-lynch bill. The PAC pointed out the need for heavy voting to return them to office.

Release of the survey was accompanied by a statement from Jack Kroll, PAC director, who observed that the Negro's political power is greater now than ever before. He added that his voting power, once confined to large cities now extends to small cities in the West, and Midwest, and even in the deep South. The survey did not cover large cities where vigorous action has already insured a large progressive Negro vote.

Salient feature of the survey was that with the exception of Rep. Woodhouse, Conn., and Congressmen from Kentucky, Missouri, and Maryland, only representatives in the states covered who opposed the measure were Republicans. These men can be ousted by vote shifts of less than five percent, that is, if the full Negro potential votes against them. All representatives from Missouri, Maryland and Kentucky districts covered can be ousted by the Negro vote, except Rep. Spence, 5th Kentucky.

Breakdown of figures from the survey is as follows:

Negro Vote Can Save Nation

Chicago, Ill.

By VENICE T. SPRAGGS
(Defender Washington Correspondent)

WASHINGTON — The Republican party is making a frantic bid for the Negro vote as the bitterly fought off-year campaign rounds the turn into the home stretch.

Negro votes, this year, more than any single bloc in the nation have within their power to swing the country back into the path of constructive progress. Or, they may fall for the vote-baiting of the Republican party and assist in dragging the country down the road to boom and bust ending in a national depression. Sat. 11-2-46

GOP Ignored Negro

The Negro's past loyalty to the Republicans has received but scant reward, beginning with Pres. William H. Taft, and continuing through the Hoover administration. It was not until the advent of Roosevelt and the New Deal that Negroes were accorded full recognition in governmental positions—at both national and state levels.

Under Truman William H. Hastie was named the first Negro governor to any United States Territorial possession; Irving C. Mollison, first Negro Federal judge within the continental confines of the United States; Joseph Albright, Special assistant to Veterans' Administrator Bradley, the first Negro appointed to the Veterans' Administration; Marsden Cabell, first Negro special confidential assistant to the Postmaster General.

Should the Republicans ride into power in November, Negroes may expect the following consequences:

1. Wholesale loss of federal jobs. The GOP has promised to lop off 2,000,000 workers.

2. Defeat of Federal public housing program initiated under President Roosevelt.

3. Continued high cost of essential living commodities. Republicans voted solidly to scuttle effective price controls.

4. Continued discrimination in employment. The bulk of house Republicans refused to support a permanent FEPC.

5. Reduction in Federal funds for the continuation of health and education services, aid to farmers, aid to the unemployed, the aged, farmers, dependent children, and other urgent services.

5. Defeat of national health program.

6. Defeat of Federal aid to education.

Republican campaign camouflage cannot hide the dismal fact that on every issue directly affecting the Negro people, the Republicans overwhelmingly joined Senator Bilbo to block its passage.

Gain of 11 Seats in Senate, 26 in House Needed for Control; Both Parties Hit for FEPC Action

The Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

WASHINGTON (NNPA) —The trend of the colored vote in the current Congressional campaigns is definitely toward the Republican party, according to polls taken by political analysts in various cities of the East and Midwest.

Republican campaign workers here have received reports indicating that Republican candidates in the State and Congressional elections will receive overwhelming votes in Pennsylvania, New York, Michigan and other Northern States.

One reason for the falling away from the Democratic party is believed to be the death of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, who proved that the colored vote could be weaned from the GOP without causing a split in the Solid South.

Bilboism Seen in 2 Lights

Another major factor is believed to be "Bilboism," whose founder, Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo, not only has been the most blatant demagogue in preaching "white supremacy" and disfranchisement of colored voters, but also has insulted other minority groups.

However, Walter White, NAACP secretary, insists that colored voters have "little enthusiasm" for the Republican party, writing in a syndicated column that an overwhelming majority of colored people "prefer an out-an-out Bilbo or Talmadge to other politicians who make florid promises with no notion of keeping these pledges."

Only 37 Seats Needed

In the last Congress there were 56 Democratic Senators, 38 Republican Senators, one Progressive, and one vacancy. In the House there were 237 Democrats, 192 Republicans, one Progressive, one American Labor, and four vacancies.

A net gain of 11 seats would give the Republican 49 Senators and majority control of the Senate. A net gain of 26 seats would give them 218 Representatives and majority control of the House.

Both parties, however, are accused in connection with the failure of Congress to pass permanent fair employment practice legislation, for which President Truman fought, even to a break with Rep. Roger C. Slaughter (Dem., Wis.), who successfully bottled up the Norton Bill in the House Rules Committee.

While making no predictions, Mr. White does assert that if "Republicans continue to play ball with the reactionary Southern Democrats, any hope by the Republican Party that it will once again have the support of the crucial colored vote might as well be abandoned."

Felix Belair Jr., the New York Times roving reporter, forecasting a return of the colored voters to the Republican fold, pointed out that while Mrs. Roosevelt's attitude strengthened the Democrats' hold, her position as a private citizen has changed this outlook.

Says Negro Vote Shifted

The Nation
New York, N. Y.
Sat. 11-30-46

Dear Sirs: My paper says the C. I. O.-P. A. C. elected only 78 of 344 candidates it supported. Behind the Republican victory, however, are less than 3,000,000 votes. The figures, in round numbers, are 18,000,000 to 15,000,000.

My estimate is that at least 1,500,000 of the votes won by the Republicans were cast by Negroes, and that these votes previously went to Democrats. . . .

How silly, then, to talk about the failure of the C. I. O.-P. A. C. when the victory of the Republicans really belongs to the do-nothing, race-hating element among the Democrats—Truman included. In their necessarily elemental approach to the question of how to vote, Negroes could see nothing of worth to their race in the present set-up of the Democratic Party.

My sincere belief is that a shift of Negro votes to the tune of nearly 2,000,000 really brought the Republican victory and that no widespread anti-liberal sentiment had anything to do with it.

JUST ONE VOTE CAN SOMETIMES CHANGE HISTORY

Sat. 11-16-46

THE recent election recalled to many of us the necessity of everyone exercising his franchise. Voting down through the ages has caused some phenomena. Just one vote has often changed the course of history, hoisted men into prominence or likewise cast them into oblivion.

Yet, there are those who view this inalienable right rather insignificantly, and regard the opportunity with almost utter indifference.

Lucius Harper

Negroes above all folk in the body politic should revere the privilege to vote as sacred, and one to be scrupulously safeguarded. It is the only weapon of a minority to protect its interest, and to voice its objection against political abuses and frauds attempted or fostered by the ruling class. It is dynamite against those who would try to politically enslave us. Need we recite the sad plight of our kinsmen in the South who have suffered grievious wrongs through disfranchisement?

Stressing the value of the vote, Robert Ripley in his famous, "Believe It or Not" strip recently cited some "one vote" phenomena to prove that each ballot is of equal importance at election time. It was one vote, he said, that elected John Quincy Adams president; that elected Thomas Jefferson and Rutherford Hayes to the presidency. One vote enacted military conscription in 1941, and one vote that made Texas, California, Washington, Oregon, and Idaho states of the United States. Further, that one vote beheaded Charles I of England, elected Oliver Cromwell and made France a republic in 1875 and ended it in 1940. So we see from these startling events in history the value of just one vote.

IN THREE notable incidents the lives and the future course of Negroes have been decided on one vote. When Marcus Alonzo Hanna of Cleveland, O., commissar extraordinary of John D. Rockefeller, became the political architect of the new era back in 1896, he gained his power through one vote. At that time senators were not elected by direct primary as they are today. They were chosen by the House and Senate of states acting jointly. Hanna was chosen to run for the office from Ohio. The vote was deadlocked. After a deal was made in which Hanna promised to safeguard the interest of the Negro throughout the country should he be elected, Jay Williams Clifford, a Negro legislator of the Ohio House, broke the deadlock by casting his vote for Hanna. The senator was forever grateful, and when he gained control of the national Republican party and caused William McKinley to be elected president, he rewarded Negroes with political positions, minor and major, throughout the country. At McKinley's death his policies—in tribute to the one vote—were kept afresh in the Theodore Roosevelt administration. That's one vote of importance that Mr. Ripley forgot.

The Defender

In the incident of the one vote that Mr. Ripley mentions in connection with the election to the presidency of Rutherford B. Hayes, the Negro was the loser. It was in the presidential election of 1876. Hayes, a Republican, had been three times governor of Ohio, and had had an honorable if unspectacular career in Congress. He ran against Samuel Tilden, Democrat, and noted New York lawyer who outlawed the infamous Boss Tweed ring. In the popular vote Tilden got 4,285,992 and Hayes polled 4,033,768. The electoral vote stood: Tilden 184, Hayes 166, with 19 votes of South Carolina, Louisiana and Florida still doubtful. If the Republicans could establish a majority in all three states, Hayes would be elected by an electoral majority of one vote. Hayes went to bed that night saying that he had been defeated; Tilden, like Hughes, went to sleep believing himself to be president. But while UNDER Whitelaw Reid, editor of the New York Times, an arch enemy of Tilden, the Republican National Headquarters at the Fifth Avenue Hotel got busy sending telegrams to the three doubtful states: "Hayes is elected if we have carried your state," they read. In all three states President Grant had stationed federal troops to protect the rights of Negroes at the ballot box. The South had been chafing under this rule, and viewed this as a chance to make a deal, throw their votes to Hayes on promise that if elected he would withdraw the troops and leave the Negroes at the mercy of local political arrangements. The Hayes backers consented, and the three states gave him their 19 votes, making him beat Tilden by just one electoral vote. Hayes' first act as president was to call in the troops, and thereafter the Negro was driven from politics in the South through Ku Klux Klan threats and intimidations. One vote disfranchised the Negro. Mr. Ripley probably didn't have room enough to mention that.

Chicago, Ill.

It was Thomas Jefferson who tried to stop the African slave trade by inserting in the Declaration of Independence a clause prohibiting the traffic. In part it read: "He (the King of England) has waged cruel war against human nature itself, violating its most sacred rights of life and liberty in the persons of a distant people (Africans) who never offended him, captivating and carrying them into slavery in another hemisphere, or to incur miserable death in their transportation thither . . . determined to keep open a market where men should be bought and sold, he prostituted his negative by suppressing every legislative attempt to prohibit or restrain this execrable commerce. And to add to this assemblage of horrors of distinguished dye, he is now inciting those very people to rise in arms among us, and to purchase that liberty of which he had deprived them, by murdering the people on whom he had obtruded them; thus paying off former crimes committed against the liberties of our people, with crimes which he urges them to commit against the lives of another." A committee of five composed of Ben Franklin, Roger Sherman, Robert Livingston, John Adams, and Jefferson, backed this amendment with all force in Carpenter's Hall, Philadelphia, where that historic paper was being drafted.

Sat. 11-16-46

HATING slavery as an institution detrimental to the interest of the slave-owners, economically as well as morally, and resenting the action of the King of England in setting aside the attempts of the Virginia legislature Negroes had to struggle along in slavery for some 80 years longer when it came to a vote, and that national proclamation. Jefferson was determined to get vote stood between the clause in the Declaration of Independence. Despite he and Adams' ardent defense of its passage, vote was tied, it was left to Edward Rutledge of South Carolina to cast the deciding ballot. And the clause was voted out by just one vote.

Who knows? It may be that if everyone had been inserted in a form of Independence Just one vote was inserted in a Liberty and freedom for the black man. You vote doesn't mean anything to us today "Aw, my vote doesn't amount to anything."

When Will Negro in Georgia Be Ready for Vote in Eyes of Talmadge and His Ilk?

By BENJAMIN E. MAYS

(The views expressed in this column are those of the writer and do not necessarily express the editorial opinion of The Pittsburgh Courier—The Editors.)

The Courier Pittsburgh, Pa. Sat. 11-23-46

RECENTLY the Georgia Democratic convention met in Macon, Ga. At this meeting Governor-elect Talmadge reiterated his intention to follow the example of South Carolina and nullify the decision of the highest court in the land which made it possible for Negroes to vote in the Democratic primaries in Georgia this past summer. Although whatever the Governor does will be illegal and will ultimately be declared invalid by the Supreme Court, I am expecting Mr. Talmadge to keep his word and to do all that lies within his power to circumvent the ruling of the U. S. Supreme Court which declared the white primary in Georgia unconstitutional.

Mr. Mays

IT IS a terrible thing, and it shows how long our political mortality is, when the chief executive of a State sets about to find ways and means of nullifying the decision of the highest court in the land. When the highest officer of a State sets that kind of example, to whom can the people look for guidance in keeping and respecting the law? To change the State Constitution so that the ruling of the Supreme Court will not be violated is no better than violating the law outright. I am certain that in the eyes of God and in the thinking of logical minds one is just as illegal and unfair as the other. Such maneuverings prove again that the crisis through which the world is passing is a moral crisis.

The Governor-elect states and implies that the Negro is to be treated justly, that he needs better school and better health facilities but that he, the Negro, is not ready to exercise the ballot. No people can be justly treated if they cannot vote. Politicians regard only those who can elect or defeat them.

ONE MUST raise the question, when will the Negro be ready? During the recent purge in Fulton County, just before the summer primaries, the number of Negroes who were disqualified because of illiteracy was exceedingly small and the number disqualified bcause of criminal records was also small. I am convinced that if all citizens of Georgia were purged, some white people would be disqualified both on the grounds of illiteracy and criminal records. But here again the question of what is just and fair never enters the picture. It is only the Negro who is unqualified to vote. Again it is a question of morality, ethics, justice, honor.

When will the Negro be ready to exercise the ballot if he is not ready now? There are seven institutions of higher learning in Atlanta and eleven in the State of Georgia. The professors of these institutions are graduates of the best colleges in the South and the best universities in the United States. Some of them are graduates of the University of Chicago, Wisconsin, Michigan, Northwestern, Indiana, Cornell, Brown, Yale, Harvard, Columbia, New York University and other great universities. Some have studied abroad. Many of them hold the Doctor of Philosophy degree. When will these Negro professors have sense enough to vote? When will they become literate enough to vote? The Governor-elect says they are not ready. 11-23-46

THERE IS in Atlanta a bank owned and operated by Negroes. It is just as efficiently managed as the First National. Though smaller, the people's money is just as safe in the Citizens Trust Company as it is the Citizens and Southern. When will Negroes who have genius enough to organize and run a bank have sense enough to vote? The Atlanta Life Insurance Company, headquarters in Atlanta, is the result of a Negro's dreams. The organizer and founder was one of the most respected citizens Atlanta has ever produced. His son and other able Negroes carry on the Atlanta Life. It is as safe as the Metropolitan though not as large. It is a just as efficiently managed. The same could be said of the Pilgrim Life with headquarters in Augusta and of T. M. Alexander and Company. Some of the best business men in Atlanta are Negroes. The only Negro daily newspaper in America is published in Georgia. Some of the best drug stores are owned and managed by Negroes. Some of the best preaching in Georgia goes on in Negro pupits. When will these Negroes who have ability to do all these things attain sense enough to vote? I could go on adinfinitum. Negroes in Georgia own considerable property and pay much money in taxes. When will they be ready? People who occupy the vantage point seldom concede that those who are less fortunately circumstanced are ready to enjoy what they enjoy. The Governor says the Negro is not qualified to vote and seeks to prove it by robbing him of the ballot. But Mr. Talmadge is fighting a losing game. Even if he succeeds in disqualifying the Negro it will be a temporary measure. The Negroes in Georgia will vote.

Negro Majority Votes White Man To City Council

Defender Chicago, Ill. Sat. 12-7-46

ALBANY, Ga. — (ANP) — An overwhelming vote of Negroes of the Fifth Ward here last week elected Edward J. Davis, a white insurance man, city commissioner.

Davis was backed by the Albany Progressive Negro League, and won the election in spite of polling a minority of white votes. Fifth Ward Negro residents held the balance of power with 1,010 registered voters as compared with 913 whites.

Minority Votes Elect Ga. Mayor

The Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

SAVANNAH, Ga. — John G. Kennedy, elected mayor of this city on Dec. 10, owes the margin of his victory to the support given him by non-white voters, whose 4,874 ballots swelled his total to 14,348, just 4,152 more than 10,185 for his opponent, Col. Richard H. Mayer's. Sat. 12-21-46

Kennedy was supported by the Citizens' Protective League; while Mayer was the candidate of the GI-People's Party. Mayer, it was revealed, polled 2,967 ballots among the 8,000 cast by the newest group of voters.

Whole Slate Victorious

All CPL-backed candidates won, including a police court judge, 11 aldermen, and the 24-member city Democratic executive committee, in addition to the mayor. No incidents marred the quiet of the election.

CPL candidates won in 34 of the boxes voted in non-white neighborhoods; while their opponents won in only 10 such boxes. Approximately 50 per cent of the registered voters in the city participated in the election.

Negro Vote and C.I.O. Vote Are For M. E. Thompson

(From The Atlanta Journal)

MACON, Ga., July 15—(AP)—Solicitor General Charles H. Garrett said Monday he was investigating the distribution of several thousand sample-marked ballots showing candidates "sponsored by the P. A. C. of C. I. O."

Mr. Garrett said he had information that the marked ballots were being distributed in an effort to influence the Negro vote.

The solicitor general said in a statement:

"I have in my possession what is supposed to be a copy of the ballot which is to be used in the Georgia Democratic primary on July 17 and to be used in Bibb County.

"It is a marked ballot. It marks off in red pencil all the candidates to be voted on in Bibb County except those that the persons distributing the ballot desire to be voted for.

"For governor it marks off all the candidates except James V. Carmichael. For lieutenant-governor it marks off all candidates except M. E. Thompson."

He continued that the ballots favored Ben W. Fortson for secretary of state, Eugene Cook for attorney general, George B. Hamilton for state treasurer, M. D. Collins for school superintendent, J. C. Manning for commissioner of agriculture, Harry E. Monroe for State labor commissioner and Walter McDonald and Allen Chappell for public service commissioners.

The ballots, he added, also favored Harvey Roughton for Congress.

Garrett termed the marked ballot distribution as "illegal and a criminal offense and any person found guilty will be prosecuted."

He said that to his knowledge the ballots were not being distributed by local sponsors, but that he understood "the candidates on the ballot are sponsored by the P. A. C. of C. I. O."

Facing The Future

The speed, vigor and unanimity with which Georgia Negroes organized and prosecuted the registration campaign to secure the almost incredible total of nearly 150,000 on the registration books of the state reflects everlasting credit to the leadership which the Negro masses are receiving in the state. And the achievement becomes more impressive if we should pause long enough to point out that six months prior to the July 17th primary, there were less than 50,000 of these on the registration rolls. Everywhere outside of the state one chances to go now, white and colored alike are pointing to the heroic task achieved by the Negro leaders in bringing out so large a number of Negro voters, most of whom had never before cast a ballot in any sort of election.

Tuesday 7-25-46

No small part of the credit must be ascribed to the admirable leadership on the part of the Georgia Association of Citizens Democratic Clubs, organized just two years ago and boasting of member clubs blanketing the entire state. From this central body more than 51 clubs have needled their way into every important nook and corner of the state, preaching the registration gospel to the Negro masses in such clear and convincing tones that it was well nigh impossible to fail at the task. Another influence, working in close harmony with these clubs, was the leadership furnished by the Negro ministers, the greatest majority of whom were unmoved and unpurchasable in their determination to secure the ballot for their people. Not only were they anxious to give their churches over to these registration mass-meetings, but they gave their time and their leadership by helping to conduct the campaigns, to transport people to the registration headquarters and to speak at the rallies which were held for the purpose of educating and training our people in the duties of their franchise. Other groups, equally as zealous and public spirited gave invaluable assistance also.

There is another laudable tribute to be given also in regards to these achievements. At no time in our memory can we recall Negroes being more solidly united than at present. True, there is an occasional discordant note. But in every such instance, this is traceable to sheer personal jealousy or to financial considerations from old, entrenched politicians who have never done any real service to the Negro masses but who wish to regain their confidence for further exploitation. But there again, arises the true greatness of the Georgia leadership, for of all the workers scattered throughout Georgia, none of them received or expected renumeration for their services. A few more years of that sort of leadership and Negroes in the South will be forced to look to Georgia for their inspiration. But there is still a herculean job ahead for all of us. In truth, the real work has just begun.

Bonds Carried; Court Suit Looms In County

Daily World, Atlanta, Ga.

8-15-46

Atlantans and Fulton Countians stayed away from the polls in large numbers Wednesday as a $40,400,000 improvement bond was considered. Despite the last minute rallies and appeals, the vote was unusually light. At 5 p. m., a tabulated report from all but six of the City precincts showed 12,014 votes had been cast at that hour.

Late Wednesday night, unofficial tabulations showed:

The proposal passed by a good margin in Fulton County and by a wide margin in the City of Atlanta where only a simple majority is needed. It is contemplated that the Supreme Court suit may ensue as a result of the voting in the county, where a conflict between the constitution and an amendment exists. The amendment calls for a two-thirds majority of the total regis... ...ers for passage of bonds and the constitution calls for a simple majority. Thus.

Even though the vote was light there was little apprehension that all of the 17 items on the City ballots failed to amass huge majorities. Only a majority of those voting was needed to guarantee the city bonds, among which was the $3,531,150 allotment for Negro school improvement.

Negroes voted considerably in all precincts, but apathy was noted as in the case of the white voters.

The Fulton County bond issue remained uncertain last night, despite the vote. Under law, it was considered necessary that a majority of the 122,000 registered voters in the County vote, and of that number a two-thirds majority vote favorably.

Harold Sheats, Fulton County Attorney, announced Wednesday, however, that the Fulton Commission will certify as passed all Fulton issues which receive a majority in the balloting regardless of whether conditions of a special constitutional amendment are met or not.

Sheats said the Commission expected a majority of those voting would favor the $20,000,000 Fulton County share of the joint issue, and planned to certify it as passed under the new State constitution. The County then will file validation proceedings in Fulton Superior Court and will take the issue to the Supreme Court if necessary, Sheats added.

Fulton officials contend that the county should be able to issue bonds under the same conditions as all other governmental subdivisions of Georgia. Sheats holds that the new Constitution authorizing bond issues by a simple majority of those voting should control Fulton bond elections as it controls all other counties of Georgia and that a special constitutional provision affecting Fulton County only and passed at the same time that the new constituion was adopted is void and without effect.

Georgia Primaries to Test Three Important Trends

Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky.

Georgia is a state that always takes its politics seriously. This year the gubernatorial race will be closely watched by the entire nation, not alone for the personalities involved and the State's high office is sought by some of Georgia's strongest men, but also because this is the first 'teenage election to be held in this country. Georgia is the only state with an election law that qualifies voters on the basis of an 18-year-old minimum, rather than the traditional 21.

Recent U. S. Supreme Court decisions have also changed the traditional aspect of this year's Georgia election, as 120,000 negroes have registered for the Democratic primary, to be held July 17.

Wed 8-21-46

In addition to these two factors, an unprecedented voter resistration has been tallied in the usual voting brackets, probably because of the return of Georgia's war veterans.

The Georgia elections will, then, be carefully studied by the law-making bodies of other states. First, the country will want to see how the youngsters handle their new responsibility. So much enthusiasm has been shown by college students that the Georgia Board of Regents has ordered a general holiday on election day to facilitate student participation.

Second, will be the opportunity to judge the complexion of the returned soldier vote, a matter that has not yet year the fitness of negro voting in party had a strong test in this country. Police in Riot Conspiracy With Klan, Says Official

The Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

Sat. 6-22-46

By CARDELL W. McVICKERS

ATLANTA — The Klan has entered into a conspiracy with "fellow travelers" in the Atlanta Police Department to create a racial disturbance in Georgia on July 17, date of the State primary elections, it was disclosed last week by a State official.

The plot was bared by Assistant State Attorney General Dan Duke, detailed to prosecution of the hooded order, during a speech before members of the Commerce, Ga., Kiwanis Club.

Duke quoted a member of the police department as telling a Klan meeting that "if there is any trouble, the Klan will be permitted to do its work before the police are called out."

Voting an Issue

He further disclosed that more than 38 Atlanta policemen attended the last meeting of Atlanta's Klan Post No. 1. Dr. Samuel Green, grand dragon of the terrorist organization, he said, had assured a recent Klan meeting "there will be no more colored people voting in Georgia."

A Klan speaker, who followed Green to the platform, according to Duke, urged "whipping and beating to keep n—grs in their places."

Meanwhile the FBI has been asked by the American Federation of Labor to investigate the beating of one of its members, allegedly by a band of Klansmen.

The worker, Willie Dudley of Twiggs County, Ga., disclosed that he had been severely beaten with a rubber hose by four masked men claiming to be Klansmen. The men, he said, attempted to force his resignation from the union.

The AFL has been active in organizing hundreds of non-white workers employed at the P. W. Martin Clay Co., enrolling them as members of the United Cement Line and Gypsum Workers union.

Dudley, who was one of the first to join, was abducted from his home on Sunday night, June 9, carried to a lonely spot in the woods. When he refused to sign a statement tendering his union resignation, the men began beating him.

The Afro-American

William Green, president of the AFL, in asking a Federal investigation of the terrorism, called it "un-American and reprehensible."

AFL officials said they would file unfair labor practices charges against the company, claiming that an organized campaign is being undertaken by several former members of the union with the encouragement of the company to prevail upon its members to resign.

Sheriff Undisturbed

Twiggs County Sheriff W. E. Hambrick, apparently undisturbed by reports of the violence, said his investigation failed to connect the affair with the Klan.

Baltimore, Md.

"Those were merely members of the local anti-union folks," he said. Noticing a reporter writing he hastily added, "I don't want nothing published." Dudley said he could identify his attackers by their voices.

Georgia Primary To Set Political Trend For Dixie

The Defender Chicago, Ill.

Sat. 7-20-46

ATLANTA—With the Negro question as the crucial campaign issue, the Georgia Democratic primary slated for July 17 bid this week to become the barometer of future political trends in the South.

"White supremacy," used as a whiplash to goad Mississippi primitives into violence in that state's recent primary may be the deciding factor in the Democratic gubernatorial nomination race which is tantamount to election here. Georgia is more representative of what the South thinks than benighted Mississippi, where success of an appeal to race-hate is taken for granted. Despite that fact that Georgia is the home of the infamous Ku Klux Klan, proponents of "white supremacy" may well be rejected by progressive elements in the state.

Progress Made

Georgia has made great strides toward democracy under the leadership of liberal incumbent Gov. Ellis Arnall and cannot be classed with Mississippi in bigotry. There is race-baiting here, however, fostered by Klan-supported Candidate Eugene Talmadge. Twice governor, the hate-monger posing as the savior of "white supremacy," has caused law and order forces, led by Arnall-supported James Carmichael, his major opposition, much concern.

On election eve, Tal[illegible] re-portedly had a fair cha[illegible] to win. Two other candidates, [illegible] D. The system which gives the county unit vote to the majority candidate leaves the balance of power in rural areas, where prejudice to Negroes is greatest. Talmadge's main support comes from these areas. The great danger in this is that several small counties with a population of less than 35,000 can outvote one large county of 350,000 people.

Negro Vote Concentrated

The Negro vote is mainly concentrated in metropolitan areas. However, records reveal that in a number of small counties they can turn the election tide by voting in a bloc. Last-minute reports indicated that efforts by Talmadge supporters to disqualify Negro voters were defeated.

Purges against Negro voters in many of these rural areas were brought to a standstill before election day. Belated federal action and the determination of Negroes to carry the fight into the courts curbed the scheme allegedly employed by Talmadge forces.

At Macon, last week, U.S. District Atty. John P. Cowart launched an investigation into illegal purging of Negro voters in several mid-state counties. He warned that he would institute criminal action against anyone guilty of violating federal laws. He disclosed that numerous complaints of wholesale purging of Negro voters had reached his office. Persons, allegedly supporting Talmadge, systematically challenged the right of registered Negroes to vote. Under Georgia law, such a challenge, made in good faith, can be upheld by a registration board.

Warned Against Conspiracies

Similar warnings against conspiracies to deprive Negroes of [illegible]

Similar warnings against conspiracies to deprive Negroes of voting rights were issued by Judge Frank M. Scarlett, in Brunswick. He ordered the Atchinson County board to stop wholesale disfranchisement of Negroes, and postponed rulings on complaints against other counties until July 15, two days before elections.

Election officials of several other counties were ordered to appear before Judge Scarlett at the same time. Meanwhile, registration figures for the state showed 1,017,036 qualified voters, with 134,351 Negroes among them. Some quarters predicted that veterans' votes would decide the issue.

Chicago, Ill.

Mrs. Helen Douglas Mankin, recently elected to Congress by CIO-Negro support, faced opposition in the fifth district from Judge James C. Davis and W. C. Lowe. Also facing strong opposition was John S. Wood of the ninth district, head of the Un-American Activities Committee. Eugene Cox of the second district was another of Georgia's seven old line politicians who had to rush home from Congress to campaign for re-election.

Treatise on Bloc Voting

The Constitution Atlanta, Ga.

Voting day is coming on and it seems proper to discuss a feature in our political life which is doing the nation great harm.

That is the growing tendency not merely to split into groups, or sharply separated blocs, but to ignore the overall good of the nation and vote for the exclusive interests of these blocs.

Carried too far, such a course could split this country into warring factions—fighting politically at first, failing to see that such a program leads to fighting with something else.

Tue. 11-1-46

The way to vote is to vote American.

Any bloc which encourages its members to vote simply for the special interests of that bloc, ignoring the needs and rights of all other Americans outside that bloc, isn't practicing good Americanism.

If it continues, democracy will die in the process. So will the other things we talk so much about, "the American way of life," for instance.

Too many Americans are voting laborite or capitalistic, Protestant, Catholic, Polish, Jewish, Negro, Irish and so on. Still others vote a certain way because they are anti-one of the above.

That's our most dangerous American tendency.

It too often has major men doing minor jobs. It obscures the nation and puts a few spotlights on isolated causes or interests.

So, let's vote American.

* * * *

We can discuss this with a local application.

We may have a congressional contest to vote on next Tuesday in Georgia's Fifth Congressional district.

We think the Negro citizen, in several localities, is doing an outstanding job of preparing himself for citizenship. The recent illustration in Savannah where Negro citizens hired workers to assist the registration office in purging their own voting list, is one example.

But there is no doubt that the bloc voting by Negroes in our own congressional election of some months ago including the use of marked ballots in some counties on the day of the summer primary, was a grave error, giving their opponents a very real weapon. Marked ballots, instructions from certain political blocs, may have been features of many other elections and primaries over the State and nation, but that still does not remove the fact of error.

The same criticism applies to any other bloc voting.

* * * *

So, in Tuesday's voting—and in the primaries and elections of the future, let us not vote for special bloc interests, or because we think someone has been treated unfairly, or because we like the way the candidate dresses or the sound of his voice. Let us earnestly try to make of the privilege of voting an intelligent job in behalf of the United States of America and its form of government.

Too Great a Price To Pay

It seems to us that it would be fruitful of sober judgment to face that amazingly cynical Gene Talmadge idea—which Ed Rivers seems to second rather vaguely—of solving "the nigger question" by eliminating legal control of primary elections.

Once you look at it closely, we believe you will conclude that it is also a phoney—and dangerous, to boot.

In other words, it is an old-line political trick, designed to trap a few votes from the ignorant and unwary, and without a wisp of sincerity behind it.

The proof of that statement is in the ghastly stupidity of the proposal itself!

Why a Law? Why does Georgia have a primary law? Simply for the reason that a long and ugly period of political history at last convinced Georgia that it was not possible to achieve honesty in elections except under law, and that the master minds of the white Democratic party could not be trusted to manage things so as to give the masses of the people an effective voice in the selection of candidates.

Who will guarantee that there would be any primary in Georgia, once the primary laws are scrapped?

The answer is—No one!

What would prevent a private caucus of the chosen few—they used to be called "conventions"—at which candidates would be snatched out of thin air, and maybe at the beckoning of special interests, without any reference whatsoever to the wishes of the general electorate?

The answer is—Nothing!

What safeguards will be invented to protect the integrity of the registration list? What is to prevent "the party" from stuffing the boxes with "repeaters," or made-up names, or from indulging in all manner of skullduggery? What are to be the criteria of "party membership" and what appeal machinery would be installed to protect the voting rights of any citizens—white or black—who might be mischievously denied a ballot? Who, finally, is going to count the votes, who is going to watch the counters, and who is going to choose the watchers?

Again the inexorable answer is—No protection!

Georgia adopted a primary law to achieve decency in elections, and because the old system was intolerably indecent.

Now it is proposed to remove all legal restraint, and reopen the gates to fraud, and make Georgia primaries lawless primaries!

We know Georgians do not want any such thing; in fact they have often proved that they want no such thing. Yet that is what Gene Talmade offers, and it is all he offers.

Full Meaning We wonder if most Georgians quite understand just what would happen if these laws were scrapped, and we wonder, most particularly, if our rural counties comprehend the duplicity of this proposal in terms of the county unit system.

This newspaper is among those who do not like the county unit system, but that is beside the present point, which is that the rural counties do like it—in fact, they would be completely lost in State politics without it!

We believe the small counties of Georgia want to keep their present political importance, which rests exclusively upon the county unit system, which, in its turn, rests exclusively upon present primary laws.

Wipe the primary laws off the primary books and you wipe out the county unit system. Not even Mr. Talmadge has been able to suggest a way of saving the one without the other, although—to give him his due—he does say that he will try to think up a way.

The only way, then, for Georgians to evade a little longer the Supreme Court ruling which offers an unrestricted franchise to all literate, qualified Americans, is through the Talmadge formula, which is simply too great a price.

Georgians who remember history and who know that what has happened can happen again, will be quick to agree that it is too great a price, simply on the grounds of the general immorality that would be created.

And when the little counties understand that their county unit system is also doomed under the Talmadge plan, they also will agree that the price is much too great.

This Is Everybody's Concern

Daily World Atlanta, Ga. Thurs. 8-1-46

A leading Negro publisher of Alabama thinks that Georgia Negroes have something to be proud of. He said if Negro leaders can prepare their people for registering and then prepare them for voting to the tune of 100,000 strong within a span of about six months, then that same 100,000 ought to come forward without any speeches or resolutions and put up $100,000 to defend their civil rights. It should not require any argument to persuade Negroes in Georgia to do this he says. What happened in Walton County last week is eloquent enough. Suppose you try this in Georgia, he suggested and following the suggestion by leading off with the first dollar contribution.

The idea from this Alabama publisher is just the thing. It fits admirably into the campaign about to be launched by Atlanta Negroes and which eventually will blanket the entire state. Our fight for safety and security in Georgia has just begun. It would be simple folly to advise Negroes otherwise. Intimidations and threats in connection with registration in many of the counties; purges of hundreds and hundreds from the registration books, together with the definite and horrible upsurge of lynchings and violence over the state, all suggest that idle chatter cannot be depended upon to ease the tension nor solve the problem. To fight our battle, we've got to have money all down the line.

Of course, if we should follow out this excellent idea, it should be only as the beginnings of something greater to come. $100,000 is not a large sum of money with which to fight legal battles. Citizens working on the Defense Fund are, of course, concentrating their immediate attention upon aid to the families of the men and women who were lynched in Walton County last week and for burial expenses of the victims. This accomplished, the committee will then turn its attention to some broader issues of Negro civil rights in Georgia. It means aid for Negroes who are unfairly purged from the voters' lists in the counties; it means aid to Negroes who are beaten in retaliation to their ballot participation; and in short, we will need funds to cover and prosecute the whole range of civil rights violations. Now is the time for all of us to prove how much we want civil liberties.

Future Negro Voting

It was the issue over the Negro voting in the white primary that gave Eugene Talmadge his easy victory in the recent race for governor. There cannot be any doubt about that. Mr. Talmadge promised the people that he would restore the white primary. He is going to be governor and also head of the Democratic party in Georgia and we will doubtless see a vigorous effort on his part to restore the white primary. The followers of Gene Talmadge have a habit of saying that "He keeps his promises." He will have an opportunity now to keep another promise, and The Observer is willing to bet that he will find a way to carry his point temporarily.

He may not be able to find a scheme that will keep the Negro from voting. We have an idea that the Negro voter is with us to stay. He may be prevented from voting in white primaries that are entirely independent of state law, but he will vote in general elections. In towns and cities where no white primary is held the Negro will be a voter in the general election. He will probably avail himself of the opportunity to vote in the general state election and in the national election. There may not be much for him to vote against and little opportunity for him to make his vote count for anything, but it is our opinion that he will not lightly regard his opportunity to register and vote. There will be occasions when there will be independent candidates and the Negro may hold the balance of power. An instance of that kind seems to be coming up in the Fifth Congressional district of Georgia. Also there are rumors already that the Republicans of the state are planning to get together and put out tickets in the state and national election. They probably have little hope of making a showing this year that would be very impressive, but they evidently think that the idea has a future and that it will grow. It probably will grow. We will be watching the Negro vote in the future.

Issue Of Negroes Voting Paramount As Four Candidates Seek Nomination For Governor

Tuesday 7-16-46

BY M. L. ST. JOHN
News Special Correspondent

ATLANTA, Ga., July 16—With the registration nearly doubling all previous highs, and the federal government stepping in to protect Negroes voting for the first time in a Georgia Democratic primary, Georgia will go to the polls tomorrow to decide whether to continue the type government launched four years ago by youthful Elis Arnall or return to the type government carried on in three administrations by Eugene Talmadge.

Talmadge, who was unseated by Arnall in 1942, is seeking a comeback on the promise of protecting Georgia's white primary.

Jimmie Carmichael, 36-year-old manager of a wartime B-29 plant at Marietta, is promising to continue "honesty and decency" in state government. He has the endorsement of Gov. Arnall.

The betting between these two is even on the eve of election. Professional gamblers are offering odds of 6 to 5 either way. 7-16-46

ANOTHER EX-GOVERNOR, Ed Rivers, who has served two terms, also is trying a comeback, but he apparently is meeting with little success. The fourth candidate in the race is Hoke O'Kelley, of Logansville, veteran of two world wars, who sought the governorship in 1932 without carrying a single county. News

There are more than 1,000,000 voters, this year, as compared with 550,000 in 1942. Birmingham News

Carmichael is banking on the support of 500,000 new voters who will be casting their ballots for the first time this year. This includes 18-year-old boys and girls, about 100,000 of them, who have been enfranchised since the last gubernatorial campaign; an additional 200,000 women who have registered; 134,000 Negroes who are eligible to vote under a recent ruling of the United States Supreme Court, and thousands of poor persons who became eligible to vote when the poll tax was abolished in Georgia.

TALMADGE IS basing his hopes in stirring Georgians to angrily protest against "outside influences trying to degrade 2,000,000 white people to the level of Niggers." He contends that Georgia can keep the white primary under the decision of the United States Supreme Court by wiping out all election laws from the state books. He advocates protecting the county unit system—through which rural counties predominate in Georgia politics—by writing it into the state constitution.

Talmadge blasts Carmichael as a "stooge" for Henry Wallace, Jim Cox (ex-governor of Ohio and Democratic presidential candidate of 1920, who owns The Atlanta Journal), and Ellis Arnall. He charges that Carmichael favors mixing the races, and warns that unless Talmadge is elected, whites and blacks will go to school together, marry, and Negroes will serve as Georgia's senators and governor. 7-16-46

TO ALL OF these charges, Carmichael, an orator in his own right, boldly calls Talmadge a "deliberate, unadulterated liar." He says he will not be dictated to by any present or former officeholder if he is elected.

He says he is a native Georgian, that his grandfathers fought in the Confederacy, and that "I am just as seeped in Southern traditions as Eugene Talmadge ever has any hope of being." He recalls that he helped write into Georgia's new constitution a provision to maintain separate schools for the two races. He charges that Talmadge is waging a campaign of racial hatred as a "smoke screen to hide his own sorry record as governor."

Talmadge promises to stop buses at the state line and have riders walk across the lines in an effort to get around the United States Supreme Court decision outlawing Jim Crow laws on interstate buses.

Carmichael has said that the United States Supreme Court decided Negroes can vote, and "neither I nor Gene Talmadge nor anyone else outside the Supreme Court can reverse that decision."

* * * 7-16-4

CARMICHAEL WARNS that if Talmadge repeals all election laws that the notorious Augusta Cracker party (which used to run politics in that city) would take over Georgia politics, since the county unit system would be repealed. He laughs at Talmadge's plan to protect the county unit system by writing it into the constitution. "The minute he writes that into the constitution, he is putting an election law right into the heart of Georgia law, and thereby placing Georgia primaries back under the jurisdiction of the United States Supreme Court — and Negroes can vote, Carmichael observes.

WHILE THE TWO MAJOR CANDIDATES argue from the stump over the Negro question, Talmadge urged county boards of registrars to purge Negroes from the voters lists. He sent out a list of items for which he said voters could be purged. News

Boards in many counties—at the request of officials of local Talmadge clubs—began mass purging of Negro voters.

Suddenly the federal district attorneys issued public warnings they would investigate violations of civil rights of Negroes through mass purgings. Dist. Atty. John Cowart at Macon said it seemed apparent that discrimination existed when counties were striking off hundreds of Negroes without purging a single white person. He warned that registrars and challengers alike faced possible terms in the federal penitentiary. Dist. Attys. Saxton Daniel at Savannah and Neil Andrews in Atlanta said they had received complaints about the mass purgings.

Birmingham News

BITTERY BOARDS DISMISSED CHALLENGES in two or three counties, and others informed Negroes they didn't have to appear at hearings unless they voluntarily wished to do so.

Federal Judge Frank Scarlett in Brunswick ordered the names of 600 per cent purged Negroes reinstated on the rolls in Appling County by today. He halted the purging in Atkinson County, and ordered the Coffee County board to have its list filed with the proper authorities by today.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation now has launched a probe to insure that Negroes civil rights will be protected.

* * 7-16-46

WHILE TALMADGE, himself, has warned "wise" Negroes to stay away from the polls tomorrow, and while posters have been placed on Negro churches at Fitzgerald telling Negroes if "you vote July 17 it will be your last vote," Maj. Bill Spence, commander of the state patrol, says he anticipates no disorders at the polls.

Candidate Carmichael, however, has charged that Talmadge henchmen are trying to promote a race riot. He charged Talmadgeites offered Negroes $10 each to sit with whites at a Carmichael rally at Savannah—the Negroes rejected the offer. He said he had received word that Talmadgeites were planning a riot in his home county of Cobb. 7-16-46

THE CHAIRMAN of the Waycross Democratic Executive Committee charged that a Talmadge leader planned court action to try to force this committee to make Negroes and whites stand in lines together at the polls. The committee plans separate polling places.

A large part of Carmichael's campaign has been devoted to citing Talmadge's record. He said Talmadge was a dictator, who used bayonet rule to oust elected state officials—who blasted open the state treasury safe — who put strikers in "barbed wire concentration camps"—who disaccredited the University System of Georgia with a false racial issue in 1941—and who operated a pardon racket.

CARMICHAEL, a former legislator and lawyer, pledges to keep Georgia debt free; to impose no new taxes except what is necessary to raise teachers' pay 50 per cent; to simplify veterans' service, to build rural roads within state income; to offer a presidential preferential primary, and to have a program to develop industry and agriculture.

Talmadge, age 61, a lawyer and farmer, changed his usual "economy" platforms of the past to offer a "progressive" platform this time, but stuck to his policy of emphasizing race issues. He promised a 50 per cent raise for school teachers; free driver's licenses and five years tax freedom for veterans; to launch the greatest road building program in history, and to appropriate $1,000,000 annually to help build hospitals.

Birmingham News

BOTH CARMICHAEL and Talmadge are confident of victory. Polls by Georgia justices of the peace—never wrong in 10 years of predicting—forecasts a Carmichael victory. Several other polls also predict victory for Carmichael. Talmadge headquarters conducted a poll which claimed a Talmadge landslide—308 county unit votes, when only 206 are necessary for election. 7-16-46 News

Former Gov. Rivers also predicts his own election.

ATLANTA—A fellow should be permitted to get a bit personal when he comes back home.

When I was a youngster here it always seemed like a long way from the South to anywhere else, like going to another country. That feeling still persists, for some strange reason, but in reverse.

That is, when you've lived away a long time, even only so far as Washington, D. C., which is really on the edge of the South, the South begins to seem far away, like another country. When you decide to go back home you deliberate about the trip as if it were several days' journey. Thur. 7-18-46

JONATHAN Daniels made the point several years ago in his penetrating book, "A Southerner Discovers the South," that the South is not just one place, but many places. True enough. But still there is an atmosphere, a state of mind, that permeates a great stretch of territory.

The peculiar identity of the South is more accentuated today, the native finds when he returns, because the new and the old are in such sharp conflict for the moment. Perhaps the final conflict that precedes a new and better order. This is undoubtedly a state that is somewhat temporary and artificial, this present state of conflict, so that one must discount some of the bitterness. And there is plenty of bitterness, particularly over the racial issue, so-called.

Called up once again, from deep in the subconscious, is a longing for a society that has gone long ago. It was pleasant and precious to the comparatively few who could enjoy it, those who could clap their hands and have a host of Negroes scurry to their bidding. At least so it seems, though the South perhaps would deny it.

THAT privileged status became most roseate just when it crumbled under the War Between the States. Lovely even to those who never had it—though they fought for it—because they thought they might some time achieve it. It took the South a long time to come out from under the magnolias and the honeysuckle.

The second step has taken a long time, too, which was to get away from that state of mind left by the crumbling of a dynasty. But the South is well along on this second step now. Thur. 7-18-46

It is like coming out a showing of "Gone With the Wind" and walking down the street and seeing Negroes voting in large numbers, like any other citizens. The first time on such a scale since the 90s when the "white primary" was invented in this very State to stop Negro voting because cheap politicians were exploiting ignorant Negroes for purposes that had nothing to do with their welfare.

THE Negro has come a long way since the 90s, even if not as far as he might have come with more encouragement. Georgia has decided that he is entitled to stand on his own feet politically, with some dissent, of course. Over 150,000 Negroes registered to vote in Wednesday's primary, which is something indeed. There you have real change.

In the cities and small towns, labor organizers are carrying on a renewed campaign to enlist workers in unions so that they may win by organization some of the good things Southern gentry can give them. Only 10 years ago they were beaten up and driven out of towns which now are accepting them—accepting them not always exactly with open arms, but acquiescing, and no longer using the lash and the constable's nightstick and the deputy sheriff's gun.

It is good to come home again to what begins to look a little like the "New South" that the orators used to promise—though many of the orators did not mean exactly what we now find. It is good, despite the bitterness, and the dark spots, and the demagogs that still rant.

Many Negroes Register In Hancock County

SPARTA, July 3—The registration of Negroes hit a rapid pace here Monday and all day lines of them were standing in the corridors of the Hancock County Courthouse waiting to get in the Tax Collector's office. If they continue registering at the present rate it is said that possibly 700 or more will be on the books by July 5, when registration will be closed.

Georgian Quotes Lincoln to Pass Registration Quiz

The Afro-American Baltimore, Md. Sat. 7-20-46

ATLANTA—While it was necessary for the Federal Court to grant a temporary restraining order to permit colored persons to register in four southern counties of Georgia, non-white citizens are able to gain registration, here, at Fulton County, by demonstrating knowledge of Government.

Included among those to be registered, last week, was 35-year-old Joseph D. Burns, who when he was asked: "What is a Democratic form of Government?" replied with Abraham's Lincoln's definition: "A Government of the people, by the people and for the people."

Another registrant, 76-year-old John Baskin, when asked what his obligations to his Government were, raised his right hand and replied: "To give that hand to them, if they need it." He was accepted.

A Vicious Attempt To Limit The Vote

Atlanta Ga. Daily News

The action of the Georgia Senate in passing a bill requiring re-registration of all citizens of the state whose names were not on the books for the general election in 1944, will strike all of us as an effort to maintain a restricted voters' list, thus removing the threat which may come to politicians and demagogues in their efforts to maintain themselves in office. In another and more vital sense, it is an unmistakable move to reduce to a minimum the mounting list of Negro registrants throughout Georgia since the invalidation of the White Primary. Indeed, one commentator on the measure stated that the bill will invalidate the registration of approximately 7,000 Negroes in Chatham County since the 1944 general election, thus requiring them to re-register in order to be eligible to vote in the approaching elections.

Sun. 1-27-46

Fortunately for the citizens of Atlanta and Fulton County, Senator Everett got an amendment to this bill exempting Fulton County.

This so-called re-registration bill was sponsored by Senator Grayson of Chatham County (Savannah). It has not passed the House yet but probably will unless the liberal forces of the state immediately express themselves.

This is another of the many subterfuges which Negroes of Georgia and the South must come to anticipate in their struggles for the franchise. For it was in this same Legislative Assembly a year ago that House Speaker Roy Harris made the incredibly undemocratic statement that even if Negroes attacked the present Primary Laws, they will wear them out running back and forth to the Supreme Court by changing the laws. On its face, the statement is childish. But it is vicious as it is childish. And it is one which Negroes of Georgia and the South must determine to meet with effective and forthright action. It means that Negro Georgians, at least, must redouble their efforts to prosecute the vote drive throughout the state as well as continue their fight on the Primary violations and denials. It emphasizes too, the vital necessity for Negroes throughout the state to be solidly united on the methods they shall employ in achieving their goals. That is why we have and shall continue to insist that Negroes get behind one strong, central organization, thereby increasing the benefits to all. For it will be a most serious blunder if anyone should underestimate the fight which still remains before Negroes of Georgia will be able to exercise the franchise.

The End Of Appeal, We Hope

Atlanta Ga. Daily World

The action of the Circuit Court of Appeals in upholding Judge Davis' decision in which he ruled that Negroes of Georgia could not be denied participation in the Democratic Primary on account of race and color, will strengthen representative government in the state and will enhance the confidence of Negoes in the government under which they must live.

While the court sustained the decision of the federal court for the Middle District of Georgia in favor of Rev. Primus E. King against Muscogee County Democratic officials, the decision embraces Negroes similarly situated in all sections of the state, since the facts show that the action of the party is state action.

Sun 3-9-46

The ruling is so clear, both in the Georgia District Court and the Circuit Court, and the contention of the Negro to the right of the ballot is so righteous, that it will be difficult to understand how any reasonable excuse be given for any attempts at evasion. Already press accounts hint that such attempts will be made. It is to be sincerely hoped that the ruling will be taken in a fair ond judicious spirit. Nothing can be gained through any other course. Acceptance of the ruling without further appeals will serve to relieve tensions and distrust. Three Georgia cities, Athens, Valdosta and now Brunswick, have acted on the decision and granted the Negro his right to vote.

We believe Negroes can be permitted to vote in other cities and counties in the state without incident.

Half Million New Voters Seen

Atlanta, Ga.

The Young Democrats have picked out quite a job for themselves, if they expect to register even a large portion of the teen-agers eligible to vote under Georgia's 18-year-old vote law. Because a school census made a few years ago by the State Department of Education indicates that Georgia has more than 160,000 white boys and girls between the ages of 18 and 21. There are more than 95,000 Negro boys and girls in this age limit—which is significant if Negroes are permitted to vote in the Democratic primary this summer. This gives Georgia a total of more than 250,000 possible teen-age voters.

Some say that a bloc of 160,000 voters could elect a governor—that means that the white boys and girls in their teens could name the next governor, if they voted in a bloc. If all the teen-agers, white and colored, voted in a bloc, 250,000 votes probably could elect the next governor.

Hed 3-13-46

However, it has been four years since Georgia voted for a governor. And every year a new group of youths reached the 21st birthday, which was the old voting age. Today they are between the ages of 21 and 24. This group adds an additional 120,000 white boys and girls to the possible voters, making the total potential of new white voters about 350,000. This same group also adds about 72,000 new Negro voters, bringing the Negro potential new voters to approximately 171,000. Certainly a bloc of 350,000 white youths could control an election.

If Negroes are permitted to vote the total potential new young voters would be approximately 525,000—greater than the total voters' registration in 1941.

Of course, no one has any idea that all of these potential young voters will register. And no one has any idea they will be used as a rubber stamp to elect a governor. But the Young Democrats are seeking to register the new citizens so that more citizens may participate in governing their state. While the youths will not vote in mass for the same candidate, it is generally agreed that young people want candidates with progressive ideas in government.

New Around Here

We dropped in on the youth legislature for a few minutes during its session over the weekend. It was obvious that few, if any, of these 90 boys and girls had ever seen a real Georgia legislature in session. They were too studious of all the bills before them. The junior clerk was reading a bill when we walked in. Everything was so quiet that we were tip-toeing before we realized it, and easing into an inconspicuous seat in the rear. We peeked around, like a lady looking at other hats in church. Virtually all of the representatives had their eyes glued on copies of the bill which the clerk was reading. It would have been impossible to slip through an ill-placed comma on these boys and girls. There was no walking around, reading newspapers, or caucus between legislators and lobbyists. Lone exception to this for a moment or two was really conspicuous—conspicuous because the others were paying so close attention, and county delegation in the real house of representatives pulling such a stunt. A boy sitting in a Richmond county seat tried to lure his pal into a game of tit-tat-toe.

We don't know just how much fixing the adult sponsors of this YMCA group did to make the young legislature's work move off smoothly. Once the assembly opened, however, the kids took the ball, and quickly showed that they had minds of their own.

We followed an exasperated woman down the capitol steps after the first session. She was burned up plenty, and she was telling her friend all about it. It seemed that some "little whippersnapper" had had the audacity to challenge a ruling by the junior speaker, a close race with Thomas L. Camp, Jessir. The speaker was kind of nervous, anyway, with all that responsibility on him. Then this little smart alec had to try to upset the procession by challenging the presiding officer. Just when everything had started off so smoothly. The lady suspected that the little procession wrecker had been put up to this stunt by a man advisor. It just goes to show you what "we are up against in our efforts to train the youths."

We judged from the lady's reactions that little misguided boy had wrecked what the adult legislators would have called her well-oiled political machine."

Hoyt Davis subsequently rendered a verdict in favor of King and allowed him damages of $100.

Georgia's Press And Negro Voting

Atlanta Constitution
Atlanta Ga.

A review of the Georgia State press comments on the Federal Court ruling as to Negro voters reveals alarm only here and there.

Even papers which in the past had supported the many candidacies of Eugene Talmadge are taking positions which are calm and collected.

Sun. 3-31-46

Many of them argue, with sound judgment, that for many years to come few Negroes would vote if the regulations as to illiteracy and other qualifications are invoked. As illustrative is Mr. Belmont Dennis' Covington News. It urges the primary laws be left alone, estimating that about one Negro in each 100 will vote in primary or general election.

It takes as a basis for argument that the county unit system is important to good government, preventing, as it does, any large city machine obtaining a balance of power. The Tennessee political status is used to bolster this argument. In Tennessee Ed Crump, the aging boss of Shelby County (Memphis), has been able to hold the balance of power in state politics because of his ability to deliver a huge vote. No candidate has much of a chance without the indorsement of "Mister Crump."

For example, if there were no county unit system the county machines of Richmond (Augusta) and Chatham (Savannah) theoretically would be able, by joining together, to play a part in any election far out of proportion to their natural participation. If some genius could organize counties containing Atlanta and Decatur into one efficient political machine, it could do in Georgia what Shelby County does in Tennessee.

In this connection it is interesting to note that the two areas most disturbed by the court decision are Chatham and Richmond Counties, where, because they have fought the potential Negro vote and driven it into a bloc, rather than bringing it in as part of their organization strength, there is danger of an antimachine vote upsetting the machine.

Mr. Dennis urges that the Negro vote issue not be overemphasized because "often these matters are used as a smoke screen to hide a much more serious crime against society—the effort of city politicians . . . to take control of the political affairs of our state."

Qualifications I have now, as I have always had, an opinion which I would like again to express. The privilege of the ballot ought not to be given to the unqualified. Particularly do I think it should be withheld from those not literate enough to know the issues. I would oppose most vigorously permitting uneducated or otherwise unqualified Negroes to vote. At the same time it would be political folly, once the court decision is final, to bar those who are qualified. Democracy can be destroyed by ignorance and no man should be given the vote who cannot demonstrate an awareness of the issues. The Supreme Court has sustained the educational requirements in New York State.

It is an interesting fact, developed by several Georgia editors, that Tom Watson, who long has been Mr. Talmadge's political hero and preceptor, urged Negro participation in the primary and obtained it.

Sun. 3-31-46

It was when he saw the political machine at Augusta voted the Negroes as a bloc, handing out $2 and a marked ballot to each as they went to the ballot box, did he turn and become a violent opponent of Negro participation in primaries.

If the Supreme Court, to which the case now has been appealed, sustains the right, the Negro will make a great error if he allows his vote to go into the box as a bloc of votes. Only if he allows his qualified vote to be voted by a machine or group will his vote be an evil influence.

Progress We have made considerable progress in cleaning up politics. The cotton mill vote used to be voted in blocs. It was common practice in most cotton mills, before the eight-hour day and before education had made as much progress among mill hands as it has today, for the foreman to hand each employe a marked ballot. There are many Georgians who recall this practice.

Other editors are pointing out that it would be harmful to repeal primary laws at this time. The New Orleans court decision did point out a way for a primary to be carried on for a brief period of time. The Supreme Court may disagree with this.

Meanwhile, the consensus seems to be that the Negro who is qualified will, by court decision, be allowed to vote; that the proper procedure should be to go back to the primary laws covering qualifications; to look into the New York State literacy qualifications which have been sustained by the Supreme Court, and to aid the Negro in voting as a citizen, not as a bloc herded to the polls.

Also there is general agreement that the colored voter is doing something no civic clubs, leagues of voters or anyone else has been able to do—he is making the white citizen become interested in the ballot. All of it should mean better government.

Savannah, Ga. Tribune

We are still reminding all of our people who are 18 years of age and over to go to the Chatham County Courthouse and register and become qualified to vote. It is through voting that most citizens participate in government. It is the duty of every citizen to perform this simplest and primary function of government. We must make it our objective to get TEN THOUSAND voters on the rolls. This will be a splendid showing, well beyond that made by the state as a whole. In 1942 in the state-wide primary election, out of 1,772,936 of voting age only 303,151 votes were cast. In Chatham County the number of votes cast in the same election was 7,591 while there were 75,669 persons of voting age in the county. The record for the entire state shows that Georgia does not rank very high in political literacy. This means that the citizens of Georgia, along with those of other states, must develop a larger sense of political responsibility for the kind of government we have, depends upon it.

Ga. Paper Says 'White Primaries Outmoded'

Atlanta Daily World, 1-22-46

VALDOSTA, Ga. (ANP).—The Lowndes County News, a Georgia weekly, commenting on the voting of 300 colored citizens in a recent primary, believes that "white primaries are a thing of the past."

"The occasion marked a step forward for Valdosta and proved that the races can go to the polls and vote on the same issues without any bitter feelings," it added.

GEORGIA ELECTED a congresswoman over seventeen male candidates. Thanks to Negro voters of Atlanta who served as precinct managers and clerks for the first time in a Congressional election. Foolish people, like Harlem's Congressman Adam C. Powell, urge Negroes to leave the South but most Southern Negroes will solve their many problems without running away. This is an example.

Negro Voting Stirs Little Excitement

Atlanta Constitution
Atlanta, Ga.

Georgians seem to be accepting Negro voting in the Democratic primary this summer without a great deal of excitement.

This became evident yesterday when the cries for an extra session of the legislature to keep the ban on the Negroes died out, and more Georgia counties announced that Negroes would participate in their primaries.

Gov. Arnall disclosed that "not a single soul" had asked him to call the legislature into extraordinary session to amend the election laws.

Wed 3-13-46

To the contrary, Arnall said he had received numerous letters from points throughout the state urging him not to call such a session. Prominent citizens in many counties advised the chief executive to leave the election laws alone.

G-MEN COMING?

At the same time, political observers speculated that Georgia would be filled with federal agents this summer watching for violation of civil liberties laws. They said that any election manager who refuses to permit a person to vote because of his color faces the possibility of criminal prosecution.

Many letters to the Governor said that Georgia should comply with the federal appellate court's decision stating that the Negro is entitled to vote in primaries. Others expressed fear that Georgia's county unit system would be wrecked by any changes in the election laws, and this would permit the big cities to rule the state.

Negro Vote Decisive In Georgia Primary

Special to the Daily Worker

BRUNSWICK, Ga., March 28.—Negro citizens voted for the first time in the history of Brunswick and Glynn county in the Democratic primary last week which defeated all incumbent county commissioners.

More than 90 percent of the 2,400 Negro registrants participated in the primary, results of which heretofore have been tantamount to election. Only about 75 percent of the 6,700 white registrants voted, officials disclosed. About 7,000 votes were cast, the largest in the history of the county.

Observers stated that the general trend of the Negro voting was indicated in a precinct in Everett City, which had 112 Negro and fifty-nine white registrants. This precinct went overwhelmingly for candidates opposing the present administration. Nineteen candidates, all white, had offered for the seven county commission posts.

The Negro citizens' right to vote was given by the Glynn County School.

Serving the large number of Negro voters at this precinct were: Mrs. Rachel P. Herndon, Mrs. Dollie Alexander, Col. A. T. Walden, Prof. C. A. Bacote, Dr. J. A. Batts, Rev. Louis J. Bapt. Miles Amos and Rev. C. Westside precinct.

Early reports from Precinct 5-F at Forrest Avenue School indicated that Negroes were voting in large numbers. This precinct, conveniently located to the populace in the Old Fourth Ward is the second largest precinct serving Negroes in the city.

Democratic Executive Committee which decided to comply with the Macon Federal Court ruling by Judge T. Hoyt Davis that Negroes were entitled to participate in Democratic primaries. Judge Davis's ruling was upheld by the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans. N.Y. N.Y.

Most Negroes voted in the Brunswick District, which named four of the seven commissioners. All four incumbents in the Brunswick district were defeated.

The Brunswick Progressive Democrats, headed by J. M. Atkinson, appealed to the county Democratic Committee to give Negroes a voice in the county primary several weeks ago. There was a general appeal to the Negro voters throughout the campaign.

'Cracker' Democrats Advocate Expurgation Of Negro Vote

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. Thurs. 10-10-46

By ROMNEY WHEELER

MACON, Oct. 9—(AP)— Georgia Democrats, in state convention assembled, unanimously and whole-heartedly endorsed today the pledge of Eugene Talmadge that Negroes shall be excluded from Georgia primaries, and agreed to limit future franchise to "white persons who are Democrats."

The convention, almost entirely composed of hand-picked Talmadge adherents, whooped, stomped and hand-clapped as a procession of speakers promised to preserve "white supremacy" and it gave wildly responsive approval to the acceptance speech of Governor-nominate Talmadge—ailing in a Jacksonville hospital, which was read by his son, Herman.

Talmadge View

Talmadge, declaring that Negroes are not yet educated for voting, told the convention: "We Democrats who believe in the Democracy of our forefathers believe that a Democratic white primary should be restored in our Southland."

The convention, which earlier had abolished all existing party rules, immediately adopted new regulations paralleling Georgia's election code, but limiting party membership and election participation to white persons acceptable to party executives.

The convention, in adopting its platform, said: "We unanimously and wholeheartedly endorse the plans of the Democratic nominee for governor, Honorable Eugene Talmadge, for the preservation and perpetuation of the white primary system in the Democratic party.

"We urge the enactment of all laws necessary to accomplish that purpose. We likewise urge the repeal of all existing statutes which may prevent or tend to prevent the accomplishment of that purpose." "We direct and instruct the State Democratic Executive Committee, selected by this convention to adopt and enforce all such rules and regulations as may be necessary and expedient to the preservation of the white Democratic primary and that such rules and regulations provide for every contingency now governed by any statute which it may be found necessary or advisable to repeal."

Follows South's Lead

In effect, the convention's action follows the lead of South Carolina, which expunged all mention of primaries from State law, and made such elections "club affairs" controlled entirely by the Democratic party. The key section of Georgia's party regulations provides: "Any white person who is qualified to vote under the laws of Georgia may become a member of the Democratic party by indicating his willingness to become a member and subscribing to the tenets and beliefs of the Democratic party of Georgia, as pronounced by it in its last platform of declarations of policy." Thurs. 10-10-46

Keynote of the convention was set up by Representative Eugene Cox (D.), Georgia, in a bitter denunciation of Northern "interference in Georgia affairs. Cox castigated outgoing Governor Ellis Arnall, as one who had invited invasion by the CIO Political Action Committee which he described as "the hand of Stalin in our ballot boxes."

But the convention gave only mild applause when Cox declared that the South should break with its traditional support of the National Democratic Party 'in associating with the PAC and with "alien-minded doctrinations."

GEORGE McNABB

Affront To Intelligent

The Constitution Atlanta, Ga. Wed. 7-10-46

(The following is reprinted from The Newnan Herald.)

Can you think of any good reason for the kind of political campaign to which the people of Georgia are now being subjected?

The current political campaign is causing many otherwise amiable people to become irritable and grouchy. It is widening the breach not only between the white man and the colored, but between white men who often have a hard time understanding each other anyhow. It is arousing an ugly cloud of suspicion, mistrust and uncertainty.

What is the reason for such an unfortunate state of affairs?

The answer is a simple one: Some politicians know that, if left to go their peaceable ways, most Georgians are inclined to vote for a retention of the kind of good government we have had for nearly four years. In casting about for a man to take the leadership, a vast majority of us would pick James Carmichael as a logical choice. Therefore, Georgians must be made to forget about good government—their attention must be turned elsewhere if Carmichael is to be defeated.

And so the politicians look about them for a boogerman issue. The first hot one to come along is the question of Negro voting—absolutely made to order for exploitation. The politicians then begin shouting themselves hoarse over a matter they have plucked out of very thin air.

The result: Hatreds are aroused which will cause trouble in Georgia for many years regardless of who is elected this Summer.

The politicians stop at nothing in their attempt to build the boogerman into a scare issue. For instance, Talmadge told a Statesboro audience recently that once Negroes "are secure in their right to vote in our primary, Negro candidates for public office will be as thick as flies around a jug of molasses; they will become arrogant and drunk with their own power."

Unthinking folks may grow afraid and shake in their shoes at such words. Those who pause to think a moment will remember that the phrase "arrogant and drunk with power" was aptly used on Mr. Talmadge himself when he ran the State Capitol by personal dictum, at the point of the bayonet.

They may also recall that the idea of Negroes holding public office and becoming drunk with power may have been literally taken out of a former administration of Talmadge himself.

In May, 1941, Governor Talmadge appointed two Negroes to State office. One of them, Claude Malcom, was given the rather ludicrous title of Special Investigator of Cattle Rustling in Telfair and Monroe Counties—the Talmadge home district—attached to the Department of Public Safety. This man collected $194.66 for two months' service around the Talmadge farm property. But the joker was that he also collected an expense account of $175.42, listing such amazing items as three quarts of whiskey. No doubt Malcom was "drunk with his own power," and on State money. The other appointee, James White, was a bit more discriminating. His expense voucher showed that he bought 12 bottles of perfume and four of liniment on State money.

Perhaps Mr. Talmadge hopes that when he mentions the dangers of Negroes in office under Carmichael, no one will remember those who held office under Talmadge.

The truth is, there is positively no danger from the Negro vote, and anyhow, the Supreme Court and the U. S. Constitution have settled the matter. Talmadge knows this very well, but he must have an issue.

Why must we put up with such stuff?

We Are Grateful

The Constitution Atlanta, Ga.

Editor Constitution: God made us black, but He didn't make us bitter. He filled our hearts with humility, but not hate. The Negro is not greedy, he is grateful.

The white man brought the Negro to the South, and the good white people of the South have made him what he is today. For all of the good things done for us, we are grateful. Mon. 7-11-46

We were taught to work. We plow the corn, pick the cotton, and pull the peanuts, to help clothe and feed us all. One of us, George Washington Carver, a humble Negro farm boy, became a teacher of Negro boys and girls, and developed over one hundred different uses for peanuts.

The white people gave us schools, that we might learn to read, write and become more useful. For this we are grateful. We want our own schools. We do not need or want mixed races in schools. We don't want so-called social equality. And the back seats of buses and street cars are just as comfortable as front seats. We like them, and we are grateful.

We have our own Negro churches. We worship the same God as our white friends. We like our preaching by Negro ministers, and we like to sing and shout. White people don't have nearly as much joy or happiness in their churches as we do. We will always have our own churches, and for this we are grateful.

And when world wars come on us and threaten our nation, the Negro does not revolt. There was no passive resistance by the Negro. That may suit the black man in India, but not the Negro in the South. No, our Negro boys cheerfully entered the Army, to help preserve the democratic way of life. Negro boys lie buried in Italy and Germany; in Guadalcanal, on Saipan, on Leyte and Okinawa. We are grateful that they could serve.

We worked, and we fought, to help win your war, and our war.

Now the white man says the Negro can vote. We didn't strike to get the right to vote. The Supreme Court, composed of nine white men, gave us that privilege. Voting is not only a privilege, but it is a responsibility. We will do the best we know how. Good white people, won't you help us? —please don't hate us.

One "Uncle Tom" Voted For Gene

The Black-Dispatch Oklahoma City, Okla.

Likes Jim Crow Setup Down In Dixie Sat. 8-10-46

When all of the Uncle Tom Negroes have gone to their damnation, peace may come to black folks down in Dixie. Almost to a man Negroes down in Georgia voted against the Negro hating, rabble rousing Eugene Talmadge, and yet one blind ediot with a black face voted for the man who says openly he will restrict the rights and citizenship of Negroes.

This strange human being bears the name of Joseph Winthrop Holley, 70-year-old founder of a Negro school, where for two generation he has been begging "his white folks" for pittances, and he says in an interview Talmadge will give the Negroes "a first class university."

In a recent interview this Uncle Tom 'fesser proclaimed;

"That would seem to show that the Negroes permitted themselves to be organized and voted in a bloc with the so-called race issue the only question before them."

The gray-haired Negro, graduate of Phillips academy, Andover, Mass.. Boston's Revere college, Lincoln university and Aberdeen university, in Scotland, then disclosed that he had voted for Talmadge.

Dr. Holley explained why he supported the red-gallused campaigner for "white supremocy," who had promised to eliminate Negroes from the Democratic primary. Black Dispatch

"Mr. Talmadge is sincerely interested in the common run of the people in Georgia, black and white. He will give my people a first-class school of the university type, and he will do it now.

"He believes as I do that it is for the best interest of all that the races in Georgia and the South should be in separate schools but the accomodations should be the same. Oklahoma City, Okla.

Bad Leaders

Editor Constitution: The matter of opposing Negroes voting in the Georgia white primaries is not a fight against the Negro himself as against those with sinister motives who would use the Negro vote to attain their objectives. These are largely those organizations and individuals outside Georgia of the agitator, radical types, such as Communists, and those who fail to understand the South regarding the two races. These groups would use slogans and prejudice as pretended friends of the Negro to get the Negro vote to elect those who would carry out their evil designs. Thus using the Negro as a cat's paw to pull the chestnuts out of the fire. Tue. 7-9-46

The people of Georgia and the South have brought the Negro along way since being freed and have gotten along on the whole vise of bad leaders more readily peaceably and would continue to than good leaders, for the bad do this if influence of Northern leaders would make them wild agitators and radicals could be kept off the Southern Negro. If the Negroes are not wise, they will be led into a trap by those unreasonable and wild-idea groups.

Since vast majority of Georgia Negroes are not prepared to independently determine how to properly vote, they would follow adviser of bad leaders, for the bad leaders would make them wild promises.

Teen-Age and Negro Vote Watched in Georgia Primary

The News and Courier Charleston, S.C. Sun. 7-14-46

(By The Associated Press)

Georgia voters, with new faces by the hundred thousand among them, will select a new governor and other political leaders in Wednesday's Democratic primary but they also will settle many a question on practical politics.

Georgians will be voting on state and congressional officials but they will be providing the answers to these questions being asked all over the state:

How will the teen-agers vote? How will the negroes vote?

These two powerful groups of voters will be voting for the first time in a state primary. The state constitution tells the 18-year-olds they can cast their ballots. The United States supreme court says the negro can vote.

There have been other forces which have piled up registrations which total unofficially 1,017,026. The returning veteran has marched in large numbers to the registration office. Absence of a poll tax has helped swell the lists.

Governor Arnall predicts 750,000 persons will vote Wednesday. Others have made lower estimates.

Nomination in the primary is tantamount to election. Voting in the state and congressional races will be on a county unit basis. Pluralities in all races except the governor's contest will determine the winners. In the governor's race if no candidate receives a majority the two high men will enter a run-off primary July 31.

The polls wil open at 7 a. m. all over Georgia and close at 6 p. m. except in counties of 200,000 and more when the closing time will be 7 p. m. Sat.

The heated governor's campaign, which has hinged for a great part around the race issue, has taken the edge off all other races. As usual, Georgia voters have shown little interest in statewide races except the gubernatorial affair.

The gubernatorial candidates are Eugene Talmadge and E. D. Rivers, both ex-governors, the bomber plant chief, James V. Carmichael, and Hoke O'Kelley, the veteran.

Georgians will vote on candidates for a brand new office—lieutenant governor—which six men want to fill for the first time.

In many counties voters will select state representatives and state senators to represent them in the general assembly. Many ballots will include entries for superior court judge and solicitor general races.

Voters will choose winners in nine state administrative races and one judicial contest. All statehouse officials have opposition except several of the appellate judges. One court of appeals judgeship is being contested.

Here are the administrative races: attorney general, controller general, secretary of state, superintendent of schools, state treasurer commissioner of agriculture, commissioner of labor and two public service commissioners.

Seven of Georgia's 10 representatives have opposition. In the congressional districts races have been spirited and issues have varied.

Contests are being held in the First, Second, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth and Ninth districts.

Qualifications For Voters

The Constitution Atlanta, Ga.

(The following is by Roy Emmett, Editor of the Cedartown Standard).

While the question of voting is very much in the public mind—thanks to the attacks certain political candidates are making on the question of Negro voting—is a mighty good time for thoughtful and non-partisan consideration of who is qualified to cast a ballot and what should be done to regulate the right of franchise.

It should first be remembered that recent Supreme Court rulings giving the Negroes the right to vote was not and is not directed solely at the Negro. The Constitution prohibits the barring of any group or race from the polls. That is discrimination.

But no ruling of constitutional regulation prohibits any State or other political subdivision from prescribing qualifications necessary before a voter may cast a ballot. In Georgia, the State Constitution provides for a literacy test—the ability to "read and understand" a section from the Constitution of the United States—as a qualification for voting.

But the same Constitution provides for managers at the polls to instruct voters how to mark a ballot if said voters cannot read and write. Mon. 8-1-46

As a matter of actual fact, few if any counties in Georgia adhere to a literacy test in qualifying voters. But it is on the statutes, nevertheless.

We are very firmly of the opinion that any voter — white, black, red, green or mixtures—should not be permitted to cast a ballot if he or she cannot read that ballot. An illiterate person is not a qualified elector—regardless.

Personally, we've always been of the opinion, constitutional or not, that no person should be permitted to vote who was not a taxpayer. Every public officer is, in effect, a hired employe—paid a salary out of the tax dollars paid into the treasury by the property owners, the business establishments of the city, county or state—and those folks who pay the salary should, in all justice, be the ones who employ the official.

But that is, of course, entirely too radical — maybe unconstitutional.

But there should, by all means, be some definite standards of qualification of voters and in this Georgia, as well as all other States, has full and perfect authority to set up its own regulation. We can require that a minimum literacy test be passed by every voter before he is qualified, we can require that no voter will be qualified if he or she has been convicted of a felony crime; we can disqualify any voter who is under indictment by a grand jury.

We can, by intelligent thinking and planning, improve the caliber of Georgia voters to the extent that Georgia's elected officials will be men far more capable of serving the cititzens' of the State.

We cannot prohibit a man from voting because his skin is black or brown or yellow but we can demand that that man meet certain standards of citizenship before placing him on the qualified voters' list. We can do that so long as the white voters are required to meet those same standards.

Many Negroes Line Up To Vote In Georgia

ATLANTA, July 17— (AP) —Long lines of voters crowded polling places throughout Georgia today in the first Democratic primary in which Negroes participated.

In many places long lines of Negroes and whites were in line from the opening of the polls at 7 p.m., Eastern Standard Time. This heavy voting in the early hours indicated a record-breaking number of the more than 1,000,000 registered voters would ballot.

This was the first state primary since the voting age was lowered to 18 years.

In Greenville Sheriff C. H. Collier said seven white men burned a cross in Greenville's Negro section last night, the eve of the primary.

The sheriff said all seven were arrested and later released because "I don't know under what law I can prosecute them."

Collier said the cross-burners were from Manchester, Ga., and that one of the men was clad partially in a white robe.

In some places Negroes and whites voted in the same booths but at others separate ballot boxes were set up. The Negro vote was heavy in the large cities where most of it is located.

As the balloting proceeded, interested watchers were agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Acting upon instructions from the U. S. attorney general's office the FBI men were on hand in several strategic areas to prevent possible violations of civil rights.

Former Gov. Eugene Talmadge seeking his fourth term in the governor's chair, campaigned on a platform promising to "keep Georgia a white man's state" and take the primary from state control as a means of barring Negroes from future participation.

He warned "wise" Negroes to remain away from the polls.

James V. Carmichael, 36-year-old attorney and former state legislator who made the race with the blessing of Gov. Ellis Arnall, and former Gov. E. D. Rivers touched only briefly on the issue of Negro voting in their campaigns.

A fourth candidate for governor, War Veteran Hoke O'Kelley, confined his campaign to infrequent radio speeches in contrast to the heavy state-wide speaking schedules of his opponents.

Arnall Accepts Court Ruling On Negro Vote

Courier Journal Louisville, Ky.

Says He Will Not Call Session of Assembly

Fri. 4-5-46

Atlanta, April 4 (AP)—Governor Ellis Arnall said today that he would not call an extraordinary session of the Georgia Assembly "to do away with the county unit system and the criminal laws governing primary elections."

He said that if members of the Legislature want to assume that responsibility, "they have that right."

His statement was in answer to a question as to whether he cared to comment on action of the United States Supreme Court in refusing to review lower court decisions which upheld the right of a Columbus negro to vote in the Democratic primary election.

'Upholds Constitution.'

"The courts have spoken," the Governor said. "I call upon the people of Georgia to accept their decisions. It is our duty as good citizens to uphold the courts, the Constitution and laws of our land. As Governor, sworn to uphold the Constitution and laws, I will not be a party to any subterfuge or 'scheme' designed to nullify the orders of the courts.

"I am persuaded that the General Assembly would refuse to repeal the law providing a county unit system in our primary elections. This is the law that affords the small counties recognition in State political affairs. Likewise, it is my opinion that the General Assembly would refuse to abolish the criminal laws governing our primary elections. Should the criminal statutes be abolished, the people would have no assurance that the primary elections would not be 'stolen' by corruption and fraud."

Under the county unit system the candidate receiving the highest number of votes in each county gets that county's unit vote, and the state winner is decided by a count of these unit votes. Unit votes range from two to six per county depending on population.

SUMTER COUNTY DENIES CHARGES

AMERICUS, May 23.—There is no discrimination on the part of the Sumter county board of registrars against Negroes registering as charged in press dispatches Thursday, R. C. Moran, chairman, said tonight, adding that no registrant has yet been stricken from the registration lists.

The board of registrars, Moran said in a prepared statement for the press, "has not summoned any registered voter for examination save and except such registrants as those whose right to register has been legally challenged in writing upon constitutional grounds and the name of none of those called and examined before the board has yet been deleted from the list of those registered voters."

Continuing, the chairman's statement revealed "that no registrant has yet been asked to answer any question except such as are provided as the duty of the board of registrars to be propounded in order to ascertain and determine the fitness and qualifications of those questioned to become voters under Georgia laws.

"Every registrant is being accorded his or her full constitutional rights by the board of registrars as defined by Georgia law. This law is the only fair, just and equitable rule by which the qualification of registrants to become voters may be lawfully determined," the chairman's statement concluded.

Many Negroes Vote in Georgia Primaries

Daily Worker New York, N.Y. Thurs. 7-18-46

Many Negroes voted for the first time in the Georgia primaries yesterday where interest centered on the contest for a successor to liberal Gov. Ellis Arnall. Arnall backed James V. Carmichael in a four-cornered race with two former governors, Eugene Talmadge and E. D. Rivers, and veteran Hoke O'Kelley. Nomination in the Democratic primary is tantamount to election.

Most Negro citizens were still barred from voting and due to Georgia's voting system the popular vote does not necessarily determine the outcome.

Each county has a certain number of unit votes and the candidate receiving the largest number of units wins. Three small counties with a unit vote of two each can offset the six unit vote of Fulton County (Atlanta) even though their combined population may be only 15,000 compared to Fulton's 300,000.

116,345 Negroes Register to Vote In Georgia Primary on July 17

The Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.

ATLANTA, Ga.—As an aftermath of the Supreme Court decision permitting Negroes to vote, 116,345 colored citizens have registered to vote in the July 17 primary. The total registration in the State, including all races, neared the million mark.

The repeal of the poll tax and the extension of the ballot to 18-year-olds were two other factors in the increased registration. Sat. 6-22-46

Macon Progressive Arrested To Scare 10,000 Negroes

The Defender Chicago, Ill. Sat. 7-27-46

MACON, Ga.—The president of the Progressive Democratic Club here, a Macon businessman, blamed the disgruntled Talmadge political faction in Bibb County for his arrest last week on a charge of distributing marked ballots in the July 17 primary.

L. Marshal, prominent merchant and president of the Good Homes Development Association, who was released on a $2,000 bond after his arrest, said the beaten faction was trying to frighten the 10,000 Negroes in this Georgia area by making him the goat.

When Marshall was arrested by the Bibb County sheriff, he denied the charge. A deputy sheriff was said to have remarked prior to the businessman's arrest that he knew the move would not scare the Progressive leader but that it might "slow up the other Negroes here."

On July 17 when marked ballots were reported as having been found in Bibb polling places, the police arreested no one. At that time an official said he would press for an investigation by the grand jury.

Heavy Registration In Hancock County

Atlanta Daily World Atlanta, Ga. Tues. 7-5-46

SPARTA, Ga. — (SNS) The end of registration in Hancock County should see upwards of 700 names on the voters' lists. Registration of the group hit a rapid pace here on Monday and all day lines of them were standing in the corridors of the Hancock County Courthouse waiting to get in the Tax Collector's and Registrar's office.

Talmadge to Give Negroes University

Long Range Program Slated, Dr. Holley Reveals

Rome, Ga., News-Tribune
July 21, 1946

BY RUTH BRIGHAM

ALBANY, Ga., July 20.—(INS)—A prominent Negro educator, born of slave parents, today deplored the use by his race of their recently acquired vote in Georgia.

He regretted the solidity of the Negro vote.

Dr. Joseph Winthrop Holley, 70-year-old founder and President until recently of the Georgia Normal School at Albany, pointed out that nearly all of the Negroes who went to the polls in the Wednesday primary voted against Governor-nominate Eugene Talmadge.

In an interview with International News Service, Dr. Holley declared:

"That would seem to show that the Negroes permitted themselves to be organized and voted in a bloc with the so-called race issue the only question before them."

The grey-haired Negro, graduate of Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., Boston's Revere College, Lincoln University and Aberdeen University, in Scotland, then disclosed that he had voted for Talmadge.

Negroes Register In Increasing Numbers

Irwinton, July 5. Judging from the rush of prospective negro voters in the last two weeks an estimated thousand will have registered to vote in the July 17 primary when the deadline is reached today.

Nearly 300 registered the first three days of this week. The Tax Collector's office and the corridor was jammed Wednesday in a last minute rush to get on the list.

An estimated nine hundred negroes have registered to vote as of July 4th.

Passmore Militia District is said to have the highest percentage of registered negro voters, approximately 85 having registered from that small district. Normal white registration in the past in Passmore has been less than 100 white voters.

Churchwomen Back Negro Vote Appeal

Atlanta Ga. Constitution
Sat. 4-6-46

By M. L. ST. JOHN

Gov. Arnall has threatened to veto any possible legislative action abolishing the county unit vote and laws against election fraud. Senate Pres. Frank Gross, of Toccoa, has declared he will never agree to abolition of these laws. An Atlanta woman's organization has indorsed Arnall's position, which recognizes the right of the Negro to vote.

These were developments yesterday as House Speaker Roy Harris and Rep. James Dykes, of Cochran, a friend of Talmadge, continued their efforts to bring the Legislature into special session to retain the ban on Negro voting in Georgia primaries.

Arnall's veto threat came indirectly in a statement he issued yesterday pointing out that the State Democratic Executive Committee years ago "junked" the county unit system, and therefore could not be trusted not to do so again. Sat. 4-6-46

The Governor said: "I am persuaded that the Legislature will not do away with the Neill Primary Act. I am persuaded that it would be a mistake to do so. To abolish the Neill Primary Act would require two-thirds of the members elected to the Senate and two-thirds of the members elected to the House. These majorities cannot, in my judgment, possibly be obtained."

A simple majority vote of the Senate and House can repeal the primary law. A two-thirds majority is required to override a Governor's veto. Since Arnall said it would take a two-thirds majority to repeal this law, he obviously meant he would veto any efforts if they were successful in obtaining a simple majority.

Gross, a candidate for Lieutenant-Governor who caused a sensation recently when he went into Cracker Party Land at Augusta and opposed a special session of the Legislature, said yesterday: "I can never agree to abolishing the County unit system or to repealing the criminal statutes regarding elections. We must meet the issue honestly and intelligently. We have ample laws of qualification of voters to purge the list of voters." (The Crackers are opposed to Negroes voting.)

The Atlanta Council of Church Women yesterday passed a resolution indorsing wholeheartedly Gov. Arnall's stand in accepting the Negro's right to vote. 4-6-46

The resolution said: "Recognizing the responsibility of church members to function as Christian citizens in a democracy and believing in educational rather than racial qualifications for voting, we, the Atlanta Council of Church Women, hereby go on record as indorsing Gov. Arnall's stand in accepting the Negro's right to vote."

State Agricultural Comm. Tom Linder, who has urged preservation of the white primary, remarked that "if you believe in the Negro's right to vote, it necessarily follows that you believe in his right to hold public office." He said Negroes outnumber whites in many counties. White supremacy will be the controlling issue in this summer's political campaigns, Linder added. It will have to be, because it is a fight for survival, he said. Linder concluded that the candidate who remains silent will be classed as an opponent to white supremacy.

Double Voting Forestalled At Muscogee

Constitution State News Service.

COLUMBUS, July 17 — Muscogee County's two elections proceeded smoothly Wednesday, with the only major irregularity being squelched before it could occur. Democratic Executive Committee Chairman Joe E. Chapman, Jr., said he had heard a report that supporters of an unnamed candidate were going to double-vote registrants in the McCrary District who are eligible to vote at either Nankipooh or Bibb City polls.

Chapman said this threat was forestalled by requiring registrants in that district to sign their own names when they voted.

By midafternoon a record-breaking vote, estimated at 12,130, of whom nearly one-fourth (estimated 2,880) were Negroes, had been recorded. Polls for Negroes were set up in the basement of the Courthouse for both the $1,950,000 bond referendum and the primary.

Negroes showed less interest than the white voters in the bond election, with only about half of the Negroes voting on the bond issue who voted in the primary. Three-out-of-five white primary voters also voted on the bond issue.

The ratio of Negro voters to Negro registration totals, however, was greater than for the whites.

Voting Breaks All County Records As White And Colored Mix for the First Time At County Primary Polls

Monroe, Ga. Times
July 18, 1946

Eugene Talmadge, three times Governor of Georgia, was elected for the fourth time Wednesday by a good county unit majority, and has won the race on the first ballot, it appears from returns in hand Thursday morning.

At that hour, with several counties to be heard from, Talmadge was leading with 234 unit votes, Carmichael came second with 152, Rivers third, with 18, and Hoke O'Kelley with none.

Carmichael was leading in the popular vote, however, with 206,052, Talmadge came second with 176,814, and Rivers had 36,933.

A total of 206 unit votes is necessary to nominate, so it appears that Talmadge has a good majority over both his opponents.

Marvin Griffin Leads

For Lieutenant Governor, Adjutant General Marvin Griffin was well out in front of his five opponents, Eugene Cook was reelected Attorney General, Ben W. Fortson Secretary of State, Dr. M. D. Collins, State Superintendent of Schools.

George B. Hamilton is again chosen State Treasurer, Tom Linder Commissioner of Agriculture, Ben Huiet Commissioner of Labor, Walter McDonald and Allen Chappell for the Public Service Commission, Zack Cravey for Comptroller General, and Hugh McIntyre for the Court of Appeals.

Other candidates for the Court of Appeals and candidates for the Supreme Court had no opposition. Neither did Congressman Paul Brown from the Tenth District, nor Judge Henry H. West, as Judge of the Western Circuit.

J. E. Briscoe, Jr., Wins

For Representative from Walton County, Mr. J. E. Briscoe, Jr., has won out over Mr. E. L. Almand, who now holds that office, and Mr. J. R. Bearden.

On the proposal to continue the sale of beer and wines in Walton County the voters registered an emphatic no.

The vote in Walton County was the heaviest in the county's history, and unusual interest was manifested in every precinct. Carmichael received a good majority in Monroe, but the large rural vote cast for Talmadge gave him the county by a 78 majority.

In Monroe district a total of 2,248 votes were polled, 1,731 white, 433 colored, and 84 absentee ballots. The balloting began as the polls were opened at 7:00 o'clock, and continued brisk until late in the afternoon.

In Monroe district Carmichael received 1,253, Talmadge 635, Rivers 276, and O'Kelley 40. A total of 2,599 were registered in this district, 2,193 white and 406 colored.

Many Thrown Out

A large number of ballots voted in this district could not be counted because they were improperly marked, and most of these were negroes.

Thirty-nine votes were thrown out in the Governor's race, 418 in the race for the Court of Appeals, between Butler, Church and MacIntyre, and 250 in the race for Public Service Commissioner between Chappell and White.

1,017,026 GEORGIANS REGISTERED TO VOTE; 134,351 OF THEM NEGROES

More than 1,000,000 Georgians are qualified to vote in next Wednesday's Democratic primary, according to unofficial and still incomplete reports.

An Associated Press tabulation yesterday showed a total of 1,017,026 persons registered. Of this total, approximately 134,351 are Negroes.

Officials of two more universities announced yesterday that all classes will be suspended Wednesday so students may return home to vote. Emory University and Mercer University are closing for the election. Car pools have been formed at Emory by students who will drive to their homes in groups.

Negro Offers His Hand In Defining Obligations

By GEORGE GOODW...

The words of Abraham Lincoln and the promise of an aged Negro to "cut off my hand for my government" Friday saved two men from disqualification in special hearings before Deputy Election Registrar Ellis McClelland.

More than a score of Negroes were present to be challenged by Horace H. Scoggins Jr., of Union City, and his attorney, Charles Bruce.

"Send Sons to Army"

After one man had been disqualified for felony convictions and a woman had lost her privilege of voting because she could not define a republican form of government other than to say her obligations to such a government were to vote, obey its law and send her sons to the Army, one of Mr. Scoggins' associates whispered to him:

"That's two up and two down. We are batting a thousand."

Joseph D. Burruss, a Negro in his midthirties, and John Baskin, 76, cut that batting average to .500.

When asked under what form of government he lived, Burruss answered, "A democratic form."

"What is a democratic form of government?" asked Attorney Bruce.

"Government of the people, by the people and for the people," was the answer.

Although the attorney sought disqualification on the grounds that America has a republican rather than a democratic form of government, Deputy Registrar McClelland ruled that the young Negro's knowledge of Lincoln qualified him.

Baskin, who walked with a cane and spoke with difficulty, said he did not know under what form government the nation operates, but he declared that he owned property and had always paid his taxes.

When asked what his obligations were to his Government, he held up his hand and declared proudly:

"To give that hand to them, if they need it."

Again the deputy registrar overruled Attorney Bruce's objections and declared the man fully qualified.

Fail to Shift Burden

As Friday's session opened Attorney A. C. Walden, who is defending all those challenged, declared that Mr. Scoggins should take the stand and prove his charges rather than have those challenged submit to questioning before any specific charges were set forth. He declared that the defendants were being made to testify against themselves and that Mr. Scoggins did not know any of those he was challenging.

The attempt to shift the burden of proof to the challenger was overruled.

Later Attorney Walden called Mr. Scoggins to the stand and attempted to question him on how many people he had challenged, why he was challenging them, and why only Negroes were challenged.

Deputy McClelland ruled that he did not have to answer the questions, and he left the stand after admitting that his signature on all the complaints was a rubber stamp rather than in his own handwriting.

Peacock Flays Negro Group For False Lynching Story

"False and apparently malicious" was the term Sheriff Julian Peacock used yesterday to brand a story from the Fraternal Council of Negro Churches of America which stated a Negro veteran had been killed in Macon "because he dared to exercise his constitutional right to vote." The story was carried on Associated Press wires.

Sheriff Peacock pointed out that primary day was quiet and free from incident in Bibb County this year and that there was no restraint whatever put upon the privilege of registration by Negroes. He cited ballot tabulations to show that more than 5,000 Negroes voted in the primary in which 23,000 votes were cast.

The officer expressed the wish that counter-demand might be made upon the Department of Justice to check on the person who made the statement that a Negro veteran was killed here on primary day and that person held liable under any law applicable.

The statement issued by the Negro church council, according to the AP, was contained in a resolution that asked President Truman and Attorney General Tom Clark to "bring the criminals to justice" for "acts of terror and murder" against six Negroes in Georgia and South Carolina.

The resolution referred to the lynching of four Negroes at Monroe and the gouging out of both eyes of a Negro veteran in Aiken, S. C. Aiken's Mayor H. O. Weeks reiterated a denial of the story that a Negro, Isaac Wooward, had been subjected to such treatment by Aiken police.

Georgia Negroes Register

In the last week or two several unsigned letters have come to this column asking whether or not there is a Negro vote of importance in Georgia. I know there is an underlying propaganda motive to the letters but I see nothing to hide. As far as I can gather from Georgia officials there are now 135,000 Negroes qualified and registered to vote in Georgia. When Georgia abolished the poll tax, the Negro registration took place.

I can't, of course, answer questions as to how many Negroes will register in Alabama if the poll tax is knocked out by the United States Supreme Court or the legislature. Judging by the population of Negroes compared to white, something like 150,000 to 165,000 Negroes might, would or could register.

But if a Negro measures up to the standard of a white, why shouldn't he register if his poll tax disqualifications are removed?.

Will Provide For Negro Votors

Separate Booths Will Be Provided In Election

To facilitate the flow of voters at the polls here in Wednesday's election some of the voting booths will be shifted to the west end of the east and west corridor of the courthouse and these will be assigned for the exclusive use of negro voters, said Messrs E. A. Williams and J. J. Davis, Quitman members of the county executive committee. Two sets of voting managers will be named.

This will be the first time in years that negroes have voted in any considerable number in an election. No exact figures have been available as to the number qualified but it is said to be around 300 to 400. With the registration of 18-year-olds and negroes the voting list will be much larger and it was felt that opening up the other end of the corridor would avoid crowding and waiting.

Record Number Of Negroes On Voters' Lists

Warning Issued Vote Challengers; Some Withdrawn

Registrars of Georgia closed their books Friday, reporting a total 913,515 citizens qualified to participate in the important July 17th Primary election. Of this number, 118,387 were Negro registrants, most of whom have registered within the first six months of the year, following the action of a federal District Judge in ruling Georgia's Democratic White Primary unconstitutional and violative of the 13th, 14th and 17th Amendments to the U. S. Constitution.

Heaviest registrations were reported in Fulton, DeKalb, Bibb, Chatham, Floyd, Richmond, Troup and all of which carrying six unit votes. The total registration of Negroes in these counties is set at 50,347. There are 159 counties for the state with a total of 410 county votes. Sun. 7-7-46

COMPLAINTS POUR IN

Meanwhile, Negro leaders through out the state continue to report subterfuges and threats in newly registered Negroes. A. T. Walden, head of the State Association of Citizens Democratic Clubs, stated that a number of lawyers are now working overtime to stem this tide of rank discrimination against the Negro voters. In one county alone, declared Mr. Walden, one man, regarded as a Talmadge henchman, is reported to have signed 700 challenges ,the entire Negro registration for the county, in an effort to keep Negroes from the polls.

One response to this legal service being provided member clubs of the State Association, was that the names of 700 Negroes, were restored to good standing in Ware County, where three members on the Board of Registrars quit in protest to the bias and rank discrimination in purging the names of Negroes and skipping over those of whites.

PROSECUTION SEEN

In Atlanta Saturday, Henry Troutman, prominent Atlanta lawyer predicted that the Federal Government will prosecute these county registrars for arbitrarily purging the names of Negroes from their lists. "County Registrars who are striking off Negroes without also purging white voters are flirting with terms in the federal penitentiary, Troutman said in an interview. Others who have voiced extreme disapproval of the rank discrimination, threats and subterfuges against Negro registrants include Austin Dean, editor at Gainesville, who condemns the "Talmadge Purge of Negro voters in Hall County, where over 600 have been stricken from the list. Active purging of Negroes only is reporting also in Sumter, Houston, Early and in Randolph Counties.

"If this purge story is right, Mr. Troutman said in his interview, it is a part of the plan of such challenges to frighten the Negro voters from appearing and defending their rights to vote, those who participate in such a conspiracy would be guilty of violating section 51 of the Criminal Code of the U. S. Constitution, which provides that if two or more persons conspire to injure or oppress, threaten or intimidate any citizen in the free exercise of any rights secured by the Constitution or the laws of the United States shall be fined not more than $5,000 and imprisoned not more than 10 years. Notice that this section says imprisoned and fined. It requires that a prison sentence be given." Sun. 7-7-46

STOP NEGRO MOVE

In further clarification Troutman said: "The Georgia law requires that where a voter's name appear on the list taken from the voter's book, this is evidence of his right to vote." This is set out in the Frank B. Snow, white attorney, revealed on July 3. Stating that about 825 colored residents already have been registered, Snow, representing the 20 signers of the challenges, contends that only about one-eighth of them are qualified to vote under the new State constitution.

The challenges, filed with the Hall County Board of Registrars, charge specifically that the new registrants do not meet the requirements which cover age, residence, character and ability to read and understand a paragraph of the United States or State Constitution.

GAINESVILLE, Ga.—Apparently fearful of the effect of the colored vote, a small group of white citizens has filed 240 challenges questioning the qualifications of all colored persons in the Gainesville District to vote in the July 17 Democratic primary.

Bias in Georgia: The National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored Peoples has requested Attorney General Tom Clark to investigate the attempt to "purge" Negroes from the voting lists in Georgia, where former Gov. Eugene Talmadge is seeking re-election in Wednesday's Democratic primary on a "white supremacy" platform. Joseph D. Burris, among those challenged by the registration board at Atlanta, won his right to vote when he quoted Abraham Lincoln. John Baskin, 75, challenged to define his obligation to the Government, also was accepted when he held up his right hand and said: "To give that to them if they need it."

105 NEGROES WILL BE ELIGIBLE TO VOTE IN MITCHELL

Information from the offices of the Board of Registrars of this county say they have completed their work of examining the registrant and that 105 have been passed and declared eligible to vote by reason of their ability to qualify under the state law.

In Pelham it is likely the negroes will vote at the F R & N. E colored waiting room. These quarters are well situated, and while it has not been officially passed upon it is very likely this is where the negroes will cast their votes.

About 100,000 Negroes Voted In The State

No Trouble Reported And Few Incidents Marred The Day

An estimated 100,000 negroes voted in a Georgia primary for the first time last Wednesday. In this county only 316 were registered although many more than that tried to register. In Quitman there were 179 and outside Quitman 137. Apparently no separate figures were kept at the rural precincts but in Quitman negroes voted in separate booths and 107 cast ballots.

No untoward incidents occurred here and none were reported in the county. Voting booths were placed in the east corridor of the courthouse and in the sheriff's office for white voters and booths were placed in the west corridor for negro voters.

The Associated Press report for the state said that more than 130,000 negroes were registered and it was believed their vote would run to 100,000. At Cochran it was reported a group of negroes left the polls when a crowd of white men "gathered around them."

One of the gubernatorial candidates, Mr. Talmadge, made "white supremacy" his main issue and was echoed by Marvin Griffin who was a candidate for lieutenant-governor. Mr. Talmadge said he would restore the white primary although the Supreme Court has ruled that no one can be excluded from an election on account of color.

185 Negroes Vote In Spite of Threat

In spite of threats posted on the doors of Negro churches Saturday night by unidentified persons, most Negroes who were registered and qualified in the Fitzgerald precinct cast their ballots Wednesday. There was no trouble at the courthouse, where white and colored voting was separated.

A total of 186 Negro votes were counted, out of a few more than 200 who were qualified. More than 900 were registered, but most were stricken from the lists on challenges by County School Superintendent Newton Watkins.

Typewritten notices pasted on church doors Saturday night read: "The first Negro that votes in the white, democratic primary, in Fitzgerald, July 17, will never vote again."

Here are Negroes voting yesterday for the first time in a Georgia Democratic primary. This line was at Marietta, hometown of James V. Carmichael, who was trailing under Georgia's county unit vote system, though leading by popular vote for the governorship in early returns. Thousands of Negroes turned out despite warnings of Gene Talmadge, trying for a comeback as governor, to stay away from the polls. Talmadge was leading.

Talmadge Has Legal Loopholes Ready For Halting Negro Vote

Birmingham News Alabama
Mar 9-2-46

BY PERRY MULLEN

ATLANTA, Sept. 2 — (AP) — To make effective Gov.-Nominate Eugene Talmadge's white supremacy plank, the Legislature which meets in January will have available the examples of South Carolina and the constitution of Mississippi.

Throughout the campaign which preceded his nomination in the Democratic primary, Talmadge said from stumps all over Georgia that he would push through the Legislature a bill restoring the white primary. He would do this, he indicated, by asking the legislators to repeal all laws affecting the primary and leaving it entirely in the hands of the party machinery. In that way he and his followers expect to get around the United States Supreme Court decision which opened the Democratic primary to Negroes.

It has been estimated that 100,000 Negroes voted in the Georgia primary on July 17.

SOUTH CAROLINA last year repealed all state laws referring to the primary so as to insure against Negro voting.

The county unit system in use in Georgia Democratic primaries may be utilized as a constitutional handicap against the possibility of Negroes making their strength effective in the general election. For instance, in Mississippi, the county unit system for the general election has been effective since 1890. It provides that all Mississippi state officials shall be elected by county unit votes, with each county having as many electoral votes as it has representatives in the state House of Representatives.

The Legislature apportions the county representatives. It could thereby give smaller representation to counties with a large Negro population and at the same time increase the representation in the predominantly white counties. This was what Mississippi did.

Thus it is indicated that the Georgia Legislature, which meets in January, may be asked to repeal the law which makes the primary nomination for state offices on a county unit system and at the same time may receive the suggestion to provide for the county unit system of election in the general election. In Georgia's general elections the popular vote governs on a statewide basis.

Mar 9-2-46

IT IS OBVIOUS that if the primaries are left entirely to the parties the Democratic State Committee or state convention would provide as a party measure for nominations to be on a county unit basis, but this would be a party measure and not a state law, as far as the primary is concerned.

The Legislature meets on the 13th of January and Talmadge will be inaugurated the following day.

The Democratic state convention, which meets in Macon on Oct. 9 formally to nominate Talmadge, will frame the platform to carry out his campaign promises. The white supremacy plank is expected to be the most important and it may foreshadow what the incoming governor will ask of the Legislature on this subject.

Georgia Negroes Get First Vote In City Primary

Chicago, Ill.

ALBANY, Ga.—(ANP) — Negroes here will vote in the city primary for the first time in history Nov. 18.

White were unconcerned over this unprecedented fact when candidates met with the Negro Voters Club and pledged definite improvements if elected, and the city registrar offered further reassurance that only in the Fifth Ward do Negro citizens outnumber the whites.

Sat. 11-16-46

Participation in the primary marks the third time this year that the city's Negroes have voted, the first two occasions being county and state primaries.

Heaviest Vote Due In Liberty County, Ga

The Defender Chicago, Ill.
Sat. 6-15-46

McINTOSH, Ga. — The heaviest voting in the history of little Liberty County was expected here last week as a result of an intensive registration campaign conducted among Negroes by the Liberty County Citizens' Council of which the Rev. W. C. Shipman is chairman.

Two days before the election, it was reported that 1,340 had qualified to vote in the county primary. This figure was believed to be in excess of even the potential white vote.

This condition exists because Negroes constitute a majority of the population of the county. In 1940 the figures were 3,046 whites and 5,518 Negroes.

Tried Purge

Soon after Negroes began registering in large numbers, white politicos saw the possibility of Negroes dominating the political picture and sought to purge their names from the registration rolls.

All Negroes who had registered were summoned to appear in person to take a written examination, the results of which would provide an excuse to strike the names of most of them.

A protest against this procedure immediately was filed with Gov. Arnall. The very day that 200 Negroes appeared to take the examination the chairman of the county board of registrars received a letter from Eugene Cook, state attorney general, declaring that the procedure was illegal.

This county, according to Claudius A. Turner, field worker for the American Missionary Association, is one of the most unusual in Georgia.

Not only do Negroes outnumber the whites, but they own more property.

The financial status of the Negroes is attributable in a large extent to a flourishing credit union and two farm cooperatives that Turner had a hand in developing.

About five years ago, J. L. Jenkins, principal of Dorchester Academy, and N. R. Smith, one of the instructors, launched the Dorchester Federal Credit Union. Preaching the gospel of cooperatives, they carried on for two years until Turner was dispatched to the county by the AMA to stimulate the movement.

The academy, that had been privately financed and had outlived its usefulness, became the Dorchester Cooperative Center and under the expert guidance of Turner the credit union flourished.

Today it has assets of $7,000 and 300 members. Out of it has sprung two cooperatives: The Dorchester Farmers Cooperative, Inc., and the Retreat Farmers' Union.

The former, specializing in hay, crops and livestock, has purchased farm equipment that is used by the co-op jointly.

Retreat Farmers' Union owns 30 acres of land.

The Retreat Farmers' Union is more the economic standard of the Negroes in the community.

Increased production has raised the Negroes' standard of living more of them to Whites, realizing the possibility of children to boarding of it, conspired to have Turner completing their dismissed from his job and haled into court on charges of disturbing the peace.

Acquitted, he returned to Atlanta university where he had been studying during the summers, earned a master's degree in economics and was immediately employed by the AMA as a field worker. His first assignment was Liberty County where his work has won wide praise.

In five years the results of the project are already apparent. The machinery has liberated from farm drudgery many youngsters who are now able to attend school for the full season.

Raised Standard

While principal of Dorchester County Training School in Arkansas, he became interested in the cooperative movement and immediately set out to organize one of the Negroes in the community.

His first assignment was to Whites, realizing the possibility of it, conspired to have Turner dismissed from his job and haled

Federal Judges Grant Orders in Some Counties Against Taking Names From Lists

Sun. 7-14-46

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ATLANTA, Ga., July 13—A permanent Federal Court injunction was granted today forbidding wholesale purging of the names of Negroes from voter registration lists by Atkinson County registrars. Judge Frank Scarlett at Brunswick issued the order. Hearing on an injunction appeal involving three other south Georgia counties, Coffee, Appling and Pearce, was delayed until Monday.

At Macon, Federal Judge T. Hoyt Davis continued "until September" a hearing on an injunction petition seeking to halt the disfranchisement of Negro voters in Ben Hill County. The ruling had the effect of continuing a temporary injunction granted earlier this week. 7-17-46

The court action highlighted developments in Georgia's Governorship campaign, in which former Gov. Eugene Talmadge is seeking election Wednesday on "a white supremacy" platform. James V Carmichael has the endorsement of Gov. Ellis Arnall. Former Gov. E. D. Rivers is in the running and Hoke O'Kelly, is also a candidate.

Registration at New Peak

An unofficial and still incomplete count today showed a record 1,017,026 voters registered, 134,351 of them Negroes. The total registration is about three times the previous record number.

Meanwhile, Negro leaders in Atlanta disclosed that the Justice Department was investigating complaints that Negroes had been purged from registration lists in thirty-one Georgia counties.

C. A. Scott, editor of The Atlanta Daily World, a Negro newspaper, made public this telegram from Theron L. Caudle, Assistant Attorney General.

"Re wire concerning the discrimination against Negroes in the registration process in Georgia: Please immediately furnish United States Attorney M. Neil Andrews (Atlanta) with all available information on subject. Complaints mentioned in your wire regarding other Georgia counties now having attention." 7-12-46

Mr. Scott and C. L. Harper, president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, had asked Attorney General Tom Clark to investigate alleged purging of Negroes from the voting lists i: Fulton (Atlanta) County and thirty other counties.

It is known that many registrars have refused to disqualify Negroes. The Spalding County board at Griffin dismissed challenges against 200 Negroes "because the charges were too general and the complainant admitted he didn't know the individuals whose right to vote he was contesting." Sun.

The Polk County board at Cedartown dismissed challenges against 199 Negroes, stating that it felt the tax collector had carried out his duties properly when he qualified the Negroes.

Atlantans Ask Inquiry by U. S. Into 'Disgraceful' Actions Laid to 31 Counties

Trib. 7-12-46

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ATLANTA, Ga., July 11—Atlanta Negro leaders today called upon United States Attorney General Tom Clark to order an investigation of "disgraceful purges of Negro voters" in thirty-one Georgia counties.

At the same time, a petition charging a "Statewide conspiracy to disfrancise Negro voters" and asking for an injunction in four south Georgia counties was filed in the district Federal Court at Brunswick. A hearing was set for Saturday at 10 A. M.

These steps highlighted the day's developments in Georgia's Democratic governorship primary campaign, in which former Governor Eugene Talmadge is seeking to be returned to office on a white supremacy platform. James V. Carmichael—who has the endorsement of Governor Ellis Arnall—and former Governor E. D. Rivers are the other two principal candidates in the four-cornered race. The voting is next Wednesday.

Foes of Mr. Talmadge say that he has the support of the Ku Klux Klan and allege that Talmadge leaders are spearheading the campaign to purge Negroes from registration lists. Trib. 7-12-46

Hostile Examination Alleged

In a message to Attorney General Clark, the Atlanta Negro leaders charge that Negroes are being discriminated against, that no white voters are being challenged in Fulton County (Atlanta), and that those Negroes whose qualifications have been challenged have been subjected to "a most hostile examination" by Charles G. Bruce, former Talmadge office holder and chairman of the Fulton County Talmadge Club.

"We estimate that over 20,000 voters have been challenged, of which an unknown number have been disfranchised," the complaint reads, dealing with the State as a whole. "We fear this purge pattern wil lspread over the South, if not stopped, making the disfranchisement of the Negro more complete than it was before the Supreme Court decision."

The decision held that Negroes could not be barred from Democratic white primaries.

The complaints lists the thirty-ones counties and is signed by C. A. Scott, editor of The Atlanta Daily World and president of the Fulton County (Negro) Democratic Club, and C. L. Harper, president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and executive secretary of the Georgia Teachers and Educational Association.

Challenges Said to Hit All

"In some counties, every Negro registrant is being challenged," it was alleged.

The Federal court petition in Brunswick was filed by Rufus Moore, Douglas (Ga.) lawyer, representing voters in Coffee, Pierce, Atkinson and Ben Hill Counties.

The injunction plea says that practically all Negro voters of the four counties have been notified by their boards of registrars to show cause why their names should not be stricken from the list of eligible voters for the July 17 primary. The petition said that "no challenges and notices to show cause have been sent to other than Negro registrants." 7-12-46 Tri.

Various reasons, the appeal said, were given why the Negro voters should be removed from the lists, some being alleged to be under 18 years of age, others as not having resided in their respective counties for six months, while others were charged with not being legal residents of the State.

200,000 Are Registered for First Participation by Race in Democratic Primary

New York N.Y. Wed. 7/17/46

By HAROLD B. HINTON

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ATLANTA, July 16—Candidates for Governor and twenty-six other State offices, as well as for the ten Georgia seats in the House of Representatives ended today campaigns which brought some of the most bitterly contested political races in recent State history. These aspirants, along with candidates for the General Assembly and for local offices, face decisions by the State's Democratic voters in a primary election tomorrow.

Greatest interest centers in the race for the Democratic governorship nomination, which will insure election in November. James V. Carmichael, who bears retiring Gov. Ellis Arnall's endorsement; Eugene Talmadge, who has been elected Governor three times; E. D. Rivers, twice Governor, and Hoke O'Kelly, a veteran of World War I, are contending for the governorship.

Challenge to Negroes Fought

Mr. Talmadge has warned Negroes to stay away from the polls. Sporadic attempts to challenge Negro voters and to causet he removal of their names from electoral lists have been made in various parts of the State, but these attempts seem to have collapsed under cooperative resistance of State and Federal officials. 7/17/46

Predictions of peace officers here are that there will be no intimidation of negroes when they vote tomorrow for the first time in a democratic primary in Georgia.

A note in pencil was found pinned on the door of a negro church in the outskirts of Atlanta this morning. It warned negroes to remain indoors all this week. It was signed "the Flying Unit, KKK."

M. Neil Andrews, United States District Attorney for Northern Georgia, turned it over to the office of John F. Trost, resident agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Mr. Talmadge waged his campaign on the issue of white supremacy in Georgia, charging that white supremacy was menaced by permitting negroes to vote in a democratic primary.

Talmadge Program

He declared that, if elected, he would have deputy sheriffs search railroad trains entering Georgia to evict any Negro passengers found in Pullman cars. He also proposed to stop interstate buses at the Georgia line and force any Negro passengers to ride into or across Georgia in intrastate vehicles which have Jim Crow sections provided by Georgia law.

Mr. Carmichael's campaignpromises involved continuation of the kind of State government Governor Arnall has given. He told the voters that this included a policy of making the State live within its income without new taxes, except possibly for increase of teachers' salaries. He promised that new taxes, if needed, would be submitted to a referendum of the voters.

Mr. Carmichael was manager of the Bell Aircraft plant at Marietta, near here, which manufactured B-29's during the war.

Mr. Rivers promised an extensive road-building campaign and the extension of school and hospital facilities. He assailed Mr. Talmadge's administrations and attacked Mr. Carmichael as a friend and "stooge" of the rich.

Seven House Contests

Neither of Georgia's United States Senators is up for election this year. Seven of the State's ten seats in the House are contested. Representatives Stephen Pace, A. Sidney Camp and Paul Brown are unopposed.

Representative Helen Douglas Mankin seems to face the greatest opposition.

Georgia's county unit system of counting votes, added to the unpredictable number of first votes, makes the outcome of most contests uncertain. 7/17/46

The new registered voters number nearly 500,000. They include an estimated 200,000 young men and young women between the ages of 18 and 21. Georgia, alone of the States, permits voting at 18, the system coming into effect this year. Included also are an estimated 100,000 men and women who reached the former voting age of 21 since the last election and persons other than Negroes encouraged to register for the first time by the repeal of the poll tax.

The number of Negroes who are registered for the first time is estimated at 200,000.

Given the cool, cloudy weather, with only occasional showers, predicted for tomorrow, election officials privately estimate that as many as 800,000 votes may be cast. There are an estimated 1,200,000 registrants.

Under the county-unit system a majority of the popular vote would not necessarily mean the nomination of a candidate. It aimed at preventing control of State political life by the large urban areas.

The eight most populous counties of the State have six unit votes each. The medium-sized counties have four each and all the others have two each. There are 410 unit votes in the State. A candidate for Governor, for example, must win 206 of 410 unit votes to be nominated. If no candidate obtains that number there is a run-off between the two highest.

Savannah Parties Worked Vigorously For Vet-Negro Vote

Registration for Primary Sets Record in LaGrange

LaGrange Ga. News

The largest number of persons in the history of LaGrange have registered for the forthcoming City Democratic Primary, Clarence H. Day, city clerk, has revealed.

Tabulation of all the names of persons who registered have not been completed, Mr. Day said, but between 5,000 and 6,000 persons have signed registration books at the city hall to be eligible to vote in the primary October 9.

Among those registering, between 800 and 900 were Negroes.

In some cases, Mr. Day said persons registered two or three times. A complete check is being made on all names of those registered and the total number will be announced as soon as possible Mr. Day said.

In the race for the position of city recorder T. P. May, J. H Dukes and Paul Pike are opposing J. L. Spikes, the incumbent.

For seats on the city council Robert Hammond, Bill Dunn and W. J. McDaniel are running against James G. Guinn, who is seeking reelection. H. J. Denham and R. E. McTigue are opposing each other for the seat on the council held by William H. Turner Jr., who has announced that he will not run for reelection. Frank Dickinson is opposing Paul Hammett, incumbent, for the third city council position.

Negro Wins Vote In Savannah

Chicago, Ill. Sat. 6-22-46

By ENOC P. WATERS JR.

SAVANNAH, Ga.—The national capital is further removed from the consciousness of the average southern white man than it is from the Negro who is inclined to regard it as a supreme and somewhat benevolent authority.

The federal court decision ruling out the white Democratic primary, therefore, meant little to the white registrar in the South until the Negro made him realize the authority back of the decision. The ruling did not decide the issue of Negroes voting in the primary, it just raised it.

White Democrats who thought they would never have to be concerned about the Negro vote in a primary, were frightened by the spectre of thousands of Negroes voting after the poll tax was abolished.

First a Trickle

6-22-46

When the first few Negroes presented themselves at the courthouse here and expressed a desire to register for the primary, they encountered no difficulty.

But when the trickle of Negroes desiring to register gradually increased into a flood, the white man began to regard the whole thing with genuine alarm.

According to the 1940 census, the only accurate gauge the whites had of this possible Negro threat, there were in Savannah 50,844 whites and 43,237 Segroes. For Chatham county the figures were just as uncomfortably close: 62,971 whites and 52,883 Negroes.

One day early in October of last year, several score Negroes who formed an orderly line in the courthouse to register were greeted by this sign:

AVOID TAX PENALTIES

Automobile or Personal Property Owners who have not made returns for State and County Taxes, BEFORE REGISTERING, should go to the tax receivers' office across the lobby.

Make declarations and return with certificates which will serve (1) to verify residency qualifications; (2) to avoid return to the courthouse; (3) to lessen tax penalties.

Pay taxes promptly.

Lines Renewed

Many, unfamiliar with the personal property tax, and others, not sure of their qualifications, were temporarily stymied, but in a few days the line of Negroes began to stretch out again to the dismay of the whites.

A second sign was posted, this one reading in part:

Ignorance of, or disrespect for law unfortunately makes this notice necessary. When you register you take an oath. Registrations are taken based upon answer to check and confirm the right to register. These answers will be verified. Any inaccuracies may lead to (1) Question as to validity of registration; (2) Another trip to the courthouse; (3) Rejection of registration; (4) or charge of perjury.

Meanwhile the heads of homes whose addresses had been given by members of the household who had registered began to receive official looking letters. They read as follows:

John Doe who registered at this office for voting states that he lives at your house. To complete the records you can assist him as a reference. As you do not appear to have returned your state and county taxes, and to avoid penalties, you should come to the Court House at once. Then you may give the information required to verify the registration of your lodger. Please bring this to be checked by registration and tax department Chatham County Court House.

Many of those who themselves had registered and felt that they were all set to vote were disturbed to find the following notices in their mailboxes:

A check of the information given by you when registering is inaccurate, incomplete or unsubstantiated according to the records or authorities that are considered acceptable to reasonably assure the validity of your registration.

You have shown your interest by offering to register. Your further interest is to be expected by compliance with this request that you call at this office to be advised of the necessary steps to remove any question or doubt as to the validity of your registration.

Fear Involvement

The long lines began to shrivel. Many who had been anxious to exercise their full rights as citizens began now to waver, not sure of the risk they were taking, and fearful of some involvement with the law.

The few brave souls who continued to show up soon noticed that the line moved very slowly. The simple ritual of registering became drawn out so that only four persons could be registered in an hour. Fed had the time or patience to wait so long.

By this time just a few more than a thousand Negroes had been registered and that figure instead of 12,000 might have been the number of Negroes now qualified to participate in the elections to be held July 17.

But something unanticipated by local white reactionaries occurred. Atty. Aaron Kravitch, a Jewish lawyer, appeared and sought an injunction in Federal court restraining registration officials from employing subtle threats and delaying techniques designed to discourage Negroes from qualifying as voters.

This surprise action announced to local officials the determination of Negroes here to see that the federal ruling was recognized.

Letters Stop

Even before the court ruled on the appeal, the signs came down, the letters stopped and the prolonged registration rite was reduced to a routine affair requiring only a few minutes.

Resigned to a heavy Negro registration, the whites took the only other alternative open to them. They launched a registration drive of their own with the Junior Chamber of Commerce, the Civitan club, the Women's Civic Improvement league and various veterans groups taking the lead.

Principal credit for the success of the heavy Negro registration expected to reach 15,000 by July 5 when the books close has been given to indefatiguable John W. McGlockton, West Broad st., a grocer.

Modest, hardworking McGlockton, chairman of the NAACP citizenship committee, was unanimous choice of the Hub to head up its political action committee which was to spearhead the campaign.

The Hub was formed in March 1945 when 55 business and professional men responded to 65 invitations sent out by John Q. Jefferson, director of the USO, who saw the need for an organization of responsible men who could augment the work being done by the local NAACP.

McGlockton President

McGlockton is now president of the Hub, One of the most ardent supporters of the registration drive was the World War II Veterans association, headed by Grover Eubanks, that sponsored two mass meetings and distributed thousands of pieces of literature.

INSPIRATION FOR WHOLE WORLD

Democracy Marching on in Georgia And End Is Not Yet in Sight

Atlanta Constitution

Atlanta Ga.

AN EDITORIAL FEATURE
By WELLINGTON WRIGHT

Democracy is on the march again!

Here in the United States, it is the same long march that began before the days of the American Revolution—the march that has inspired hope in all the peoples of the earth.

In Europe, it is a march that received its dynamic inspiration from the French Revolution, a march that has gone at times haltingly, but always confidently and surely. Sun. 5-12-46

Elsewhere throughout the world, even in Asia and in Africa, that march is now in struggle to get on the way, the effort of the inarticulate masses to grasp for some of the human dignity which the philosophers of the ages have described as almost divine.

Thus, all over the planet, "from Greenland's icy mountains to India's coral strand," the march of democracy is either in progress or is in the throes of birth, a living symbol of the voice of multitude seeking to find its adequate expression. And nowhere is the end in sight.

MARCH EVIDENT IN SOUTH

In no place in all the world is that march more evident, more articulate, than here in the South. For here more and more people are going to vote in elections, to participate, many for the first time, in the activities which make democracy work.

Here, as elsewhere, it is a symbol of democracy revitalized, democracy resurgent, democracy on the long march to fulfill its destiny.

In the South, it is really a phenomenon and it arises directly from the decision of the United States Supreme Court to admit Negroes into White Democratic Primaries. In Georgia, an additional factor derives from the recent abolition of the poll tax.

It was inevitable that this identical situation should have come to pass in the South. Recent events have only pushed the time ahead for a few years. That being so, it is just as well to face the issue now, to face it and to solve it.

In Georgia, the new voters already have proved their political power. For in Brunswick, Augusta and Atlanta their votes were decisive in recent elections. In Brunswick and Augusta, they voted out the old machines and put new faces into the picture. In Atlanta, the votes of newly-enfranchised Negroes carried the balance of power in a close Congressional election.

IMPORTANT DECISION

The decision to permit Negroes to vote in Democratic primaries is an important one. But, important as it is, it is not nearly so important as the effect it has had. For it has forced thousands of white people for the first time in their lives to take an interest in public affairs, to exercise their duties and responsibilities as citizens of a democratic society.

Thus, in the days of the White Primary and the poll tax, the largest vote ever cast in a gubernatorial election in Georgia was around 350,000—this is a state with more than 3,000,000 people, more than 2,000,000 of them white! But, under the new dispensation, it is now predicted that the vote for Governor in the coming primary will reach 650,000, maybe a million. And that will be democracy at work!

Many other southern states also face a similar situation. And nowhere has it yet developed that the Negro is likely to put the members of that race into the seats of political power. What it will probably do will be to raise the level of Negro citizenship, a level that is now much too low for the welfare of the South and of the nation. In fact, only in the elections in Brunswick and in Atlanta did the Negroes tend to vote "en bloc." In Valdosta and in Augusta, they split their votes in about the same proportions as the white people. Sun. 5-12-46

BIG AID TO PROBLEM

It is quite evident, then, that, more so than any other event in the past 50 years, the granting of suffrage in Democratic primaries to members of the Negro race has gone far to solve a problem that for years has worried an increasingly large number of Southern white people, the problem of how to induce white citizens in the South to assume their responsibilities as members of a democratic community—in short, how to interest them enough in their civic duty to make them get out and vote on election day.

Now, what the white people of the South apparently could not do for themselves, the Negroes have succeeded in making them do. The present registration of 100,000 white people in Fulton County is sufficient proof of it.

In that way, as in other ways (such as the abolition of the poll tax), democracy is marching on in Georgia. And all indications now are that, with the enlarged electorate, the people of Georgia will get a better and a more representative type of government. And that is something which for a long time the people of Georgia have greatly deserved.

True democracy is the rule of the majority—and the white people of Georgia are greatly in the majority. So, why worry about the outcome?

CALIBER OF DEMOCRACY

The real worry should come from another direction. For, since democracy is always an experiment in government, always an essay into something just a little different from what has gone before, the real worry should be about the caliber of democracy, the quality of the people who make it work. And that, of course, gets down to the heart of the problem, the way in which the people of a democratic society assume their responsibility.

Obviously, here in the South that is a problem that should concern both the white people and the Negroes. For if people tend to vote "en bloc" on the basis of prejudices rather than principles, then democracy is in danger of failure. It is thus the duty of all persons of good will, especially here in the South, to see to it that this shall not happen here.

Naturally, in addition to the admission of Negroes to Democratic primaries and the abolition of the poll tax, there are other factors at work to increase the size of the electorate, to give increased power to the long march of democracy. The increase in the membership of the trade unions is a powerful incentive and, in particular, the CIO, with its Political Action Committee, has acted as a constant spur to enlarge the number of voters. Sun. 5-12-46

POLITICAL MACHINES

In the past, the primary factor which has made democratic society work has been organization. This has created the mechanisms of democracy. Unfortunately it also created the political machines which, especially in American cities, have done so much to negate the processes of genuine democracy.

Now, the CIO with its Political Action Committee comes along and embarks upon a nation-wide campaign to organize the unorganized voters. Its specific purpose is to organize members of CIO trade unions for political action. And, once organized, it seeks to channel these votes into movements that favor candidates which the CIO has indorsed. In recent elections, it has had some marked successes.

This movement already has gained much headway in the North and some headway in the South. At the present moment, the Political Action Committee is establishing headquarters here in Atlanta to carry on its campaign of organizaiton all through the South. And it, of course, will seek to take full advantage of the new electorate in the South, including the Negroes.

Obviously, this movement is going to lead to a counter-movement, an organization of those opposed to the principles of the Political Action Committee. And probably nowhere will that counter-movement be so strong as in the South. Sun. 5-12-46

NEW ERA OF DEMOCRACY

Thus, in the new era of democracy in this country, the people will see better and stronger political organizations and the time is surely coming, especially in the South, when no important election is going to go by default. Ultimately, one of the results will be the establishment of the two-party system in the South, a system that on many occasions has proved its worth as the guardian of the democratic principle.

As an experiment in government, democracy is very old. Long, long ago, Plato and Aristotle were talking, teaching and writing about it. The early Apostles of the Christian Church embraced it. Augustine, Aquinas and Dante advocated it. The great philosophers of modern times have explained and justified it. The Men of the Renaissance have glorified it. Montesquieu, Rousseau and Jefferson have immortalized it. Thus, democracy . . . marching on and on . . . the one imperial force of our times . . . dynamic and powerful solely because great men have expressed great thoughts and have penned them on the eternal scroll!

Why is all this so?

Simply because democracy does for the material world what religion does for the spiritual world, that immaterial world which is the Kingdom of Souls. In essence, it brings hope to the multitude—the kind of hope that makes men free.

DEMOCRACY A PATH

Like religion, democracy is a personal thing. It is for people, men and women. It is a path by which such people may travel to the goals they dream of. The hope it creates inspires ambition—and ambition is a conquering force. Thus, democracy helps people and, best of all, helps them both as individuals and as members of their society.

In the United States, the progress of democracy has been slow, steady and sure. At first, the Founding Fathers, fearful of the too-rapid expansion of the voting franchise, hemmed it in with many qualifications, the ownership of property being chief among them.

However, the lapse of years has witnessed a gradual lowering of the bars and hence an extension of the electorate. At present, there is a tendency throughout the country toward making character and education the sole qualifications for the voting privilege. And that trend is now evident in Georgia and elsewhere in the South.

WORLD MOVEMENT

This movement for the extension of the democratic principle, now so evident in Georgia, is only a part of a world-wide movement. No man now lives alone, no community now lives alone—and Georgia must participate in a movement that now tends to become universal. It is democracy resurgent, democracy on the march . . . democracy dynamic and powerful! Sun. 5-12-46

In the final analysis, it is an effort to improve the lot of all people—the effort to make our century "the century of the common man." It is an effort fraught with great idealism, great hope—and great danger. Clearly, the ultimate outcome depends on the people themselves.

All this explains why democracy still remains the most fascinating human adventure in all history. For it is now, as it always has been, simply an effort to translate into effective and constructive social action some of the noble religious principles we are all so adept at professing.

So, again, democracy is on the long, long march . . . and the end is not yet in sight!

All Primary, General Elections Now Open

WASHINGTON

Hailed as the most progressive step in the fight for a free ballot, since the Supreme Court 56 years ago outlawed the nefarious "Grandfather Clause," the Justice Department last week served notice that no longer can any American be denied the right to vote because of color in a primary or general election" will be subject to prosecution for violation of the U.S. Civil Rights Act.

Observers pointed out that the ruling makes it unnecessary for disfranchised citizens in such States as Mississippi, South Carolina and Louisiana, to seek long and costly redress through the Federal courts as was done in Texas and Georgia.

Any person denied the right to vote because he is not white, may file a complaint with the Federal Court and criminally has to file a complaint by the Rev. Primus E. King of Columbus, Ga., held that a party primary was an essential part of the State's election process and that party officials were in fact acting for the State in conducting "because of race or color." Under the order issued Friday, "any State or party official who attempts to prevent a person from voting because of color in a primary or general election" will be subject to prosecution for violation of the U.S. Civil Rights Act.

The 5th Circuit Court of Appeals, rulings on a suit brought by the Rev. Primus E. King of Columbus, Ga., held that a party primary was an essential part of the State's election process and that party officials were in fact acting for the State in conducting all them.

Mr. McGrath said the Department of Justice assumed that, by refusing last week to review the decision of the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals and the denial of certiorari by the Supreme Court in a recent Georgia case, in which it was held that a party primary was an essential part of the State's election process and that party officials were in fact acting for the State in conducting all primaries and elections in all the States."

decision in the Primus King case, the Supreme Court "let stand as law" its decision in an earlier Texas case, holding that the right to participate in a primary cannot be denied to a person because of color. Sat 4-13-46

Another spokesman at the Justice Department stated that inasmuch as primaries are party elections the biggest difficulty in enforcement of the law would doubtless come from them.

He pointed out that as a Federal agency the Justice Department would investigate every case where a person had been refused the right to vote because of color.

If evidence is found that such a right has been denied, the case will be turned over to U.S. attorney in the district involved for prosecution, it was pointed out.

Swiftly on the heels of the Justice Department's announcement of its future policy in regard to primary elections, two opposite views came from Southern States, Georgia and Arkansas.

From Atlanta, Gov. Ellis Arnall called up Georgians to accept the right of colored citizens to vote and emphasized that he would not be a party to a "scheme" designed to prevent a free ballot.

The "scheme" to which Gov. Arnall referred was the suggestion by former Gov. Eugene Talmadge that Arnall hastily call a special sesion of the legislature to repeal State primary laws.

"If the members of the legislature want to assume the responsibility they have the right," Gov. Arnall declared. He predicted that even if the legislators convened themselves they would not repeal the State's primary laws, since these statutes setup the county unit system through which sparsely populated counties are given equal recognition with more urban communities.

"Should the criminal statutes be abolished," he said, "the people have no assurance the primary elections would not be stolen by fraud and corruption." Sat 4-13-46

Just the opposite view was expressed by Gov. Ben Laney of Arkansas ,who declared colored persons would not be permitted to vote in Democratic primaries in Arkansas this year and that the Justice Department "can crack its whip."

Speaking from Little Rock, Gov. Laney, nominal head of the Democratic party in Arkansas, blasted "we will conduct our primaries for State officials as we have always done."

The Arkansas Legislature last year passed an act which separated Democratic primaries for State office and those for Federal offices.

Legislators frankly admitted the act was designed to prevent colored people from voting in elections for State offices after the Supreme Court had held they could not be barred from voting for Federal officers in primary elections.

Georgia's colored citizens, for over two decades denied the right to vote in State Democratic primaries, tantamount to election, were jubilant over the Supreme Court's declining a review of the King case.

King had sued in the Columbus Federal court, charging that he and other qualified colored electors were denied ballots when they went to vote in the Statewide Democratic primary July 4, 1944, on the basis of color and race. Sat 4-13-46

Harry S. Strozier, white, of Macon, was principal lawyer for the Rev. Mr. King, a Baptist minister, while the defending Muscogee Democratic Executive Committee was represented by Attorney Charles J. Bloch, also a Macon lawyer and president of the Georgia Bar Association.

The Supreme Court apparently saw little difference in the primary as conducted in Texas where a ruling wa made two years ago and in Georgia.

Attorney for the defendents had contended that Georgia had no rules and regulations prescribing to the primary.

Strozier, however, had argued that so interwoven were the State and the Democratic party that the office of the secretary of the Democratic State Executive Committee was maintained at the State capitol.

Colored leaders generally hailed the court's refusal to handle the Georgia primary case.

ADVISE STATE NEGRO DEMOCRATIC CLUBS

In Annual Session At Brunswick

Savannah Evening

CONVENTION TO GATHER AGAIN JUNE 12

Savannah Ga.

In Special Meeting At Albany

Thurs. 5-16-46

Brunswick, May 11. — With the major topic of discussion centering around an increased number of Negro registered voters in Georgia and how best to secure them, the Georgia Association of Citizens Clubs met here today in its first annual meeting, the business session being held at the Boilermakers hall following the public welcome exercises at Risley high school.

The need for solidification of the Negro vote throughout the state was considered at length and much emphasis was placed on the proper evaluation of the various candidates who are running for state offices. The body felt it unwise to endorse at this early date, any gubernatorial can date.

In the midst of the afternoon session, business was suspended long enough for the body to listen in on the radio address by James V. Carmichael, gubernatorial candidate, in which he based his platform on "[illegible] and honest government." The liberal stand which the [illegible] Marietta te expressed on the race question was [illegible] applauded by the [illegible]

The meeting was attended by representatives from many sections of the state and was highlighted by the annual address of President A. T. Walden of Atlanta in addition to the formulation of concrete plans for increased registration

Mr. Walden told of the wide activities of the organization during its first twelve-months period, in which he mentioned the Roosevelt ten-dollar-per-plate dinner which was held last January in Atlanta at Clark university; the appointment by Governor Arnall of himself and C. A. Scott, also of Atlanta, as representatives from Georgia to the Freedom Day celebration in Philadelphia; the part the Atlanta Negroes played in the Fulton county elections of February 12, when for the first time in Georgia, or the south, since Reconstruction days, Negroes were placed in complete charge of an election precinct and in which their votes proved the deciding factor in the election of Congresswoman Helen Mankin; how the association participated in the Augusta election of last month in which Roy Harris, rabid Negro bater, was defeated in his effort to return to the state legislature; and how invaluable aid was, and is being, given to the various associate Democratic clubs throughout the state in increasing Negro registration. He also told how the association assisted Thurgood Marshall and Judge William H. Hastie in preparing brief amicus curi in the Primus King primary case, not only to uphold the lower court, but to award and extend that ruling to include all local privileges, which the Appeals court did.

In laying plans for increased registration between now and the deadline on July 5, it was decided to conduct an intensive campaign with a director for each of the congressional districts. County leaders will work under each director and a county committee under each leader.

The congressional district directors appointed are as follows: First district, T. J. Hopkins, Savannah; second district, Dr. J. H. Griffin, Bainbridge; third district, J. W. Cooper, Eastman; fourth district, L. R. Lyons, Barnesville; fifth district, C. A. Scott, Atlanta; sixth district, Lucius Bacote, Dublin, and L. Marshall, Macon; seventh district too few Negroes for director; eighth district, Dr. M. A. Cassell, Brunswick; ninth district, Dr. E. E. Butler, Gainesville, and tenth district, Dr. W. H. Williams, Athens.

A full time, paid general registration organizer was decided upon for the next two and a half months. An appropriation of $1,500 was made available for his salary at $250 per month and expenses. W. H. Wilburn of Augusta widely known insurance executive was chosen for this position. It will be his duty to travel throughout the state and assist the various communities in this registration campaign. Thurs. 5-16-46

While Atlanta, of course, reported the largest number of Negro voters, 25,000, and the most scientific method of securing registrations, yet Macon in proportion to its population, made the best showing, with 11,000 Negro voters. Savannah reported approximately 10,000.

In view of the need of getting as many as possible of the 634,000 potential Negro voters of the state registered, the association will hold a special meeting in Albany Wednesday, June 12.

The association maintains headquarters in the Herndon building, Atlanta, and its officers are A. T. Walden, president, Atlanta; Charles A. Moore, first vice president, Brunswick; E. J. Granberry, second vice president, Albany State College, Albany; E. M. Calhoun, third vice president, Macon; V. W. Hodges, secretary, Atlanta; L. J. Jones, assistant secretary, Moultrie; J. M. Atkinson, treasurer, Brunswick; Rev. J. F. Carter, chaplain, Albany. Thurs. 5-16-46

An Expert Speaks on the Primary Laws

Constitution Atlanta, Ga.

Charles J. Bloch, immediate past President of the Georgia Bar Association, is recognized as one of the ablest lawyers in the State. True.

Thus it was that, when a Columbus Negro, Primus King, brought suit against the Muscogee County Democratic Executive Committee for refusing to allow him to vote in a party primary, Mr. Bloch was retained by the State Democratic Executive Committee to defend the case.

Mr. Bloch studied the statutes at great length. He sought precedents and amassed all evidence obtainable pointing to a decision that Primus King and other Negroes had no right to vote in Democratic primaries. He argued the case—and, by his opposing counsel's admission, argued it well—before a native Georgian, Judge T. Davis of the Macon Division of the U. S. District Court. 5-21-46

Losing there, he appealed to the New Orleans Circuit Court where, in a decision Judge Samuel [illegible] refused to hear the case, thereby upholding the Negroes' right to participate in primaries which are tantamount to general elections. 5-21-46

Thus Charles J. Bloch knows, better perhaps than anyone else, the ins and outs of Georgia's primary laws. And Mr. Bloch and others who know something about law see in his half-baked plan? 5-21-46 says there is no way to retain a white primary in Georgia without opening the door to election frauds and jeopardizing the county unit system.

With all statutes pertaining to primaries repealed, says Mr. Bloch, ballot box irregularities would be invited and unfair election practices encouraged.

Strange, isn't it, that the candidate who is all out for removing the safeguards from our primary system never touches on the dangers which Mr. Bloch and others who know something about law see in his half-baked plan?

Georgia Split on Vote Issue Despite Supreme Court Ruling

(SPECIAL TO THE AFRO)

ATLANTA.—Georgia is split wide open today on the racial issue. Once again, on the verge of a State-wide political campaign, the question of the white primary is uppermost in the minds of all citizens of the State. There are two opinions prevailing, that of the liberal element headed by the present Governor Ellis Arnall and the pro-white group headed by former Governor Eugene Talmadge. Known far and wide for his stand on the color question, Talmadge has indicated that he is going to run for re-election as Governor opposing whatever candidate is endorsed by the incumbent—using the racial issue as his main platform. Sat 4-20-46

Recently the United States Supreme Court ruled that all voters were eligible to participate in the Georgia primaries, which as in all other poll-tax States is equivalent to election to office.

Arnall Adamant

Refusing to call a special session of the State Legislature to circumvent the Supreme Court decision, Governor Arnall recently called upon the voters to give minority group citizens a chance to show how the system will work.

Talmadge, on the other hand, absolutely refuses to give the decision a chance to work and has called for an immediate session of the Georgia State Legislature to devise ways and means of continuing the "white primaries."

Lily-White Platform

In a statement of his intentions, Talmadge recently outlined his platform, declaring:

"The most important issue of all now faces the people of Georgia and of the Southland—the Democratic white primary. Alien influences and communistic influences from the East are agitating social equality in our State.

"They desire others to participate in our white primary in order to destroy the traditions and heritages of our Southland. They desire to pass the FEPC law and to defeat our Southern Senators and Congressmen who have opposed the FEPC. Sat 4-20-46

"They seek policemen, office-holders, tax assessors and many other offices, Federal, State and local, that are held by the white people of this State.

Would Protect Group

"If elected Governor, I shall see that the traditions which were fought for by our grandparents are maintained and preserved.

"I shall see that the people of this State have a Democratic white primary unfettered and unhampered by radical Communists and alien influences.

"Colored persons should be protected under the law. They should have good schools, the opportunity to work, protection of our health laws, the right to earn and make a living and educate their children, but they should not participate in our Democratic white primary in the Southland.

"We must protect them from the Communist organizations and alien influences. Their best friends are their Southern friends. Their best friends in Georgia are their white neighbors and white public officials and citizens in the community in which they live."

Returns to First Love

State Commissioner of Agriculture Tom Linder, a former supporter of Talmadge, who deserted him to support Governor Arnall, now has deserted Arnall on the vote question and has said he would vote for the candidate favoring a white primary.

Linder also assailed Governor Arnall for eliminating the poll-tax and for his letter to Mrs. Roosevelt "insulting men of Georgia who were responsible for Mrs. Roosevelt's not coming to Georgia to address a mixed audience in the city auditorium in Atlanta."

Linder is not expected to seek the Governorship, but his influence will throw a number of votes to the candidate supporting white primaries.

Bias Hit by Ga. Press

The North Georgia Tribune at Cantan has come out flatly in favor of "people of all races" to vote. Says the Tribune, "The old question of open primaries has arisen again in Georgia. Sat 4-20-46

"By the publicized statements of opponents who have a mania to adhere to a democratic form of Government, yet are willing to defeat the first principle of democracy, we are reminded that the old witch-hunting spirit still lingers to hinder progressiveness.

"The intemperance of some racial relation reformers in the nation's capital and the intolerance of fanatical racial subjugators in the South have set the nation at odds, and until all races are regarded as the human race, there is little hope for humanity."

New Registration Highs

In Atlanta, there has been a general rush for registration with a new high being reached compared with other years.

It is estimated that of the 75,000 persons registered, about 10,000 are colored voters, many registering for the first time.

This alarm the "ins" for unusually large registrations usually means turn over in office holders.

One-Fifth in Augusta

In Augusta, also, registration hit a new high of 26,442 against a normal registration of from 12 to 15 thousand persons. Of those registering, 21,825 were white and 4,617 colored, approximately 20%.

What counts most is the fact that the latter are heavily concentrated in segregated areas and thereby will have practically a 100% decision in the election of city and State representatives from their areas!

Outsiders regarding the strife in Georgia are coolly calculating the causes and outcome. Two writers say colored voters already had a part in the ousting of unfavorable representatives, citing the case of Martin Dies.

3 States Stand Alone

Only three States will keep white primaries and white elections this year, it is reported. They are Arkansas, Mississippi and South Carolina. In some areas of these States, voting has been open.

However, in all three States, during the immediate future, colored voting will undoubtedly be much rarer, more local and more sporadic than white voting.

It is important that eight States which formerly had white primaries now have primaries in which some previously restricted voters will participate. Sat 4-20-46

Rankins in Frenzy

"All of this drives Southern Democrats of the type of John Rankin of Mississippi," say Joe and Stewart Alsop," into a sort of incoherent frenzy."

Quoting a typical Southerner, they said recently, "It's a Communist plot,' he said. 'That's what I know about it. They'll be down there buying elections. They'll try to give the n---r a vote. No n---r will ever run against me.

" 'Of course, we slipped up once. We let them beat Martin Dies and Joe Starnes. We're all asleep at the switch. They're taking over the country; we got to stop them if we want this country.'

Ulimatum for Future

"There was more than a trace of evident fear in remarks which were delivered in a tone half-way between a yelp and a bellow.

"Every sensible Southerner joins every Northerner who does not belong to the lunatic right in regarding Rankin as one of the least appetizing figures in American politics.

"If the CIO campaign is successful, the days of Rankins are numbered in most parts of the South. But if it fails, it will confirm the power of the Rankins and their kin in many areas and it will make them a lot worse."

The question is: "Will the people register and vote?"

THE WALTON TRIBUNE

Prejudice and Passion Flame

(Editor's Note: Ralph Jones is on vacation.)

Constitution

The Tribune has had little to say regarding Negroes voting in the July State white primary because we realized that the Supreme Court of the United States had decreed they could vote, and nothing we might say would or could alter that decree.

This fact is recognized by all the candidates in the gubernatorial campaign, and by a majority of the people, but the Negro appears to be the principal basis for the entry of Eugene Talmadge in the race.

The publisher of this paper supported Eugene Talmadge in two of his races, but left him at his second nominating convention because those running the convention made a bitter attack upon President Franklin D. Roosevelt, even though Talmadge had previously assured me that he would "hands off" the President.

Sunday 6-23-46

Shame and Disrepute

Most everyone will agree that Talmadge made a good Governor during his first term, but later on, drunk with power, he assumed the position of a dictator, and was guilty of several acts which brought shame and disrepute to the State .

Aside from numerous promises which will be impossible of fulfillment even should he be elected, Talmadge's main plank in his present race is an attempt to array the whites against the blacks, and fomenting race hatred which could easily result in trouble among peace loving people, even before the primary.

And yet, Talmadge knows, as we know, and everyone knows, it is impossible to bar the Negro from voting in the approaching primary, for the reason that the Suprem eCourt declares he is entitled to that privilege ,and the Department of Justice has said it would prosecute any person attempting to keep him from voting.

Atlanta, Georgia

Ridiculous Proposal

Any pretense the the State of Georgia could pass laws or regulations to prevent the Negro from voting is too silly to consider, as the State would be powerless to nullify any act of the highest court in the land.

Now it is being proposed to abolish all State election laws and permit the whites and the blacks to have separate primaries in which they could register their choices.

Abolishing present laws would probably result in wholesale graft and corruption, and the suggestion for separate primaries might also result in confusion and trouble.

Many of our people probably havent' thought of it, but a number of Georgia counties have more Negroes than whites, and in these counties it would be possible for the Negroes to nominate and later elect all the county officers if they voted in a colored primary.

Sunday 6-23-46

And in State elections it would be possible for them to vote for Negro nominees for Governor and State House officers, and send Negro delegates to the State convention.

Under the circumstances, it appears for better to obey the law as defined by the Supreme Court and let the Negro vote in the white primary, where he will be under the restraint of white people, and in many cases, will follow their suggestions as to voting.

New Georgia Laws Bring on a Rush Of First Voters

By James T. Howard

The Associated Press forecasts that voters in Georgia's July 17 primary may exceed a million. An AP survey of county tax collectors shows that 897,067 voters, including 116,345 Negroes, have already registered, which is more than double the total four years ago.

Sun. 6-16-46

The sharp increase is attributed to three causes: repeal of the poll tax, extension of the franchise to 18-year-olds and a Supreme Court decision permitting Negroes to ballot in a Democratic primary. New

Press Exposure Of Registration Bars Achieves Results

Atlanta Journal

(COLUMBUS, Ga.—(NNS).—The press exposure of crippling and hindering tactics employed by some Georgia registrars against prospective Negro registrants has brought about results

white registrants, numbering 333,000 alone exceed the total vote cast in the 1942 race for Governor when progressive Ellis Arnall ousted reactionary Eugene Talmadge.

White Registrants Lead Negro Voters Seven to One

White voters outnumber Negro registrants by a ratio of seven to one, a survey of registration lists throughout the State by the Associated Press has revealed. Excluding the five "big city" counties, the ratio is nine and half to one.

With the approaching July 17 state-wide Democratic primary being the first in which Negroes will have the right to vote, the survey showed 780,722 white persons registered, 116,345 Negroes for a total of 897,067.

Further registrations are possible in all Counties except Fulton, the books in that County having closed June 5, a month before the deadline in other Counties.

An analysis of the survey shows that the heaviest concentration of Negro registrants is in the traditional "big city" counties of Fulton (Atlanta), Bibb, (Macon), Chatham, (Savannah), Muscogee (Columbus), and Richmond, (Augusta).

In these counties, the preponderance of white registrants to Negroes is approximately three and a half to one, with 188,717 white registrants, 55,187 Negroes for a total of 243,904.

The exclusion of these five counties from the list leaves the following figures for the other 154 counties of the State:

White	592,005
Negro	61,158
Total	653,163

This means that outside the "big city" counties, the white vote holds an edge of about nine and a half to one over the Negro vote. Slightly more than half the Negro vote is distributed between these 154 counties.

The five "big city" counties control 30 of the unit votes of the State's 410 in the primary election, leaving 380 for the other counties.

In only one county of the State does the Negro registration approach the number of white registrants. This is Liberty County, which reported 1,470 white registrations and 1,330 Negroes.

In six counties—Webster, Dawson, Fayette, Forsyth, Towns and Union—the survey showed no Negro registrants.

Negro Vote Ban Rumors Are Probed by Cowart

MACON, Ga., June 15—(AP)—United States Dist. Atty. John Cowart said Saturday investigations were being made to determine whether Negroes seeking to register for voting in the Democratic White Primary have been disqualified illegally in some Georgia counties.

Explaining that he could make no specific statement at this time regarding such allegations, Cowart added:

"We are vitally interested in seeing that the rights of Negroes are protected."

Charges of disfranchisement of Negroes have arisen at intervals since the United States Supreme Court recently upheld their right to vote in Georgia primaries. County officials have denied the charges.

Citizens Of Both Races Complaining Of Denials, He Says

The office of District Attorney M. Neil Andrews is investigating numerous complaints that in several counties both white and Negro people are being refused the right to register for voting in the state Democratic primary of July 17.

Mr. Andrews also reported that further complaints are being received that whites and Negroes are being arbitrarily purged from the list of qualified voters.

From Rome, meanwhile, came word Monday that petitions challenging the right of 150 Negroes to vote July 17 were filed with Floyd County Board of Registrars by Vaughn Terrell, solicitor of the Floyd City Court.

6-18-46

The solicitor was quoted as saying he would file 150 similar challenges daily until the total of some 1,200 Negro registrants in Floyd have been challenged. He further declared his intention of checking criminal records there "for 50 years back" and of asking the registrars to strike from the lists the name of any Negro who has been convicted of a felony or a crime involving moral turpitude.

District Attorney Andrews said he had received no official notification of Mr. Terrell's action, although Floyd County is in Mr. Andrews' district.

A prepared statement by Mr. Andrews said partially:

"It is my duty to investigate all complaints reaching this office that charge an illegal denial of the right of a citizen to register or to vote and in proper cases to bring criminal action against those who deny or attempt to deny the lawful exercise of the right to vote.

In Sumter County, meanwhile, a group of Negroes was planning civil action in the courts against the Board of Registrars there, charging that some 600 of their race had been stricken from the list in that county.

Middle Georgia District Attorney John P Cowart revealed in Macon, Saturday that his office investigating similar complaints in that section.

Vote Buying In Macon Hit

Courier

Pittsburgh, Pa.

MACON, Ga.—(ANP)—The steering committee of the Bibb County Progressive Democratic Club adapted resolutions last week asking for the cooperation of "the good white people of this country" to use their influence in the eradication of vote buying and selling in the forthcoming primaries.

The resolutions stated: "Buying and selling of alleged influence and buying and selling of votes do not contribute to clean politics or sound government. The club members believe in clean politics and recognize our part of the responsibility in keeping our city, county and State elections on a high level." They further stated "that we seek the good will and the offices of the good white people of this country to use their influence to keep unscrupulous white people and unscrupulous Negro people from buying and selling votes."

Separate Polling Places For Whites and Negroes, Careful Purge of Voting List Is Urged

Valdosta, Ga., Daily Times, June 12, 1946

Interest in Coming Democratic Primary Is High Here; Large Number of Negroes, Some Whites Have Been Found "Illiterate."

Keen interest in ballot-casting by qualified voters in Lowndes is evident as time for the forthcoming July 17 democratic primary draws near, and county officials expressed confidence today that a record number of voters will be eligible to participate in spite of the fact that a resolution was unanimously adopted at a recent meeting of the Board of County Commissioners calling for a careful purge of the voting list by the Board of Registrars.

A large number of Negroes are expected to cast ballots, and in view of the crowded conditions that undoubtedly will take place at the polls the Board of County Commissioners also unanimously adopted a resolution calling on the Lowndes County Democratic Executive Committee to as far as possible provide separate voting places for whites and Negroes.

Meanwhile, it was pointed out by Tax Commissioner Jeff Davis, in charge of registration, that a large number of Negroes, appearing at the court house to register to vote have been found "highly illiterate" and therefore disqualified as voters.

A number of whites, although fewer than the Negroes, also have been found disqualified due to illiteracy.

The two resolutions adopted by the Commissioners, in full, were drawn up as follows:

Be it resolved by the Board of Commissioners of Roads and Revenues of Lownds County, Ga. and it is hereby resolved by authority of the same, as follows:

That, for obvious reasons, the Lowndes County Democratic Executive Committee, is herby respectfully requested, as far as it is possible to do so, to provide separate voting places for whites and Negroes in the Democratic Primary to be held July 17th.

Unanimously adopted.

Be it resolved by the Board of Commissioners of Roads and Revenues of Lowndes County, Ga., and it is hereby resolved by authority of the same: That, as we now have the largest registration of voters in the history of the county, and that they will with difficulty be provided with facilities to vote: We respectfully request that the Board of Registrars of the county purge said list of voters with great care, so that the voters actually qualified to vote may not be denied that privilige, and that only those legally qualified be permitted to vote.

Resolution unanimously adopted in open meeting.

Voters Also Indicate Choice Of County Manager

6-5-46

BY WILLIAM A. FOWLKES

Negroes voted for the first time in Fulton County primary Tuesday and reports from precincts where they are registered in large numbers indicated the voted steadily about Fifty-Percent voted. No disorders are reported during the election.

They were out early in the 7 a. m. to 7 p. m. balloting and their lines kept up steadily throughout the day. Ward managers in the most heavily concentrated areas said they outnumbered whites four to one. The interest was particularly encouraging for leaders who fought for their inclusion in the primary voting heretofore open only to white electors and always tantamount to election.

At Ashby Street (E. R. Carter) School, pooling place of 3-B predominantly Negro precinct, 2488 of the 6,300 registrants voted during the 12-hour period. Also here one of the successful candidates R. L. Doyal received the majority vote of 1483 again his opponent Ellis B. Barrett who polled only 834 votes.

There was no election machine at 3-B, although the precinct has one of the heaviest registrations of any in the city. Mr. Sharp predicted it would be late before his finaling votes was complete.

Talley was likewise heavy going at ballots was being cast by Negroes in the Precinct F of Ward 5, located at through the late afternoon, when the group at the Forrest Avenue School. It has been stated that the entire 150 machines purchased by the City of Atlanta and Fulton County will be in operation and use at the "heavy" precinct places on July 17, date of the state primary.

A Safeguard Against Omission From The Voters' List

4-30-46
Atlanta Ga. Daily World

In the April 25th issue of the Statesman, Ex-Governor Talmadge is urging the Tax Collectors and white citizens all over the state to purge the names of Negroes on the registration lists.

All the laws regarding registering and voting were published, including the following law: Georgia Code Section 34-605. "List Open to Inspection; Proceeding to Contest Right to Register.—The list from the voters' books furnished by the Tax Collector to the Registrars shall be open to public inspection, and any citizen of the county shall be allowed to contest the right of registration of any person whose name appears upon the voters' list, and upon filing a contest as to the qualifications of the voter the registrars shall notify said voter and shall pass upon said contest. Each challenge shall specify the ground of the challenge, and when notice is given the voter by the registrars a copy of such challenge shall be furnished the challenged voter at least one day before passing upon the same."

As a safeguard against the names of Negro registrants being eliminated from the voters' list, we recommend the following: Jue. 4-30-46

(1) The formation of voters or political clubs in every county.

(2) Purchasing of a complete list of the Negro voters after the deadline for registration which is July 5th for all counties except Fulton which is May 4th.

(3) If a registrant is sent a notice of challenge, he or she should answer it promptly and within the one-day time limit.

It will require organized action to acquire our full and free political rights. The possession of a list of the voters will be evidence of eligibility to vote in case any registrant's name is omitted without notice.

Frankly, we do not believe many, if any, of the Registrars will try this scheme suggested by the ex-governor, but if they do, we hope the parties concerned will promptly call on the F.B.I. and the District Federal Attorney. The present administration has promised to uphold our rights to register and to vote. Jue. 4-30-46

The right to register is a Constitutional and Federal right because if one cannot register he cannot vote even in a general election every four years for President. We must not compromise on our right to register and to vote.

Let Them Sin No More

Atlanta Daily World

Attorney A. T. Walden, President of the Georgia Association of Citizens Democratic Clubs, called attention this week to specific instances in which Registrars in certain Georgia communities are hampering the registration of Negroes by illegal and extra legal maneuvers. It appears that in Sumter County, for example, the Sheriff, in cooperation with the Registrars, is calling certain Negroes in for a "quiz" on the Constitution. Strangely enough, the report indicates that teachers, some holding Masters degrees, were the ones selected to take the so-called "quiz," rather than some of the less literate ones. But whether educated or uneducated, it is not the practice in this state to make such requirements and Registrars doing so should let that fact be known and then should apply it without discrimination as to race or color. Atlanta, Ga.

Other reports show that Negroes in Early County are experiencing difficulties and delays in registration by the Registrars in an effort to slow up the progress. These are samples of a situation rather widespread in some communities in South Georgia. Perhaps there is no great cause for alarm about these violations, except the fact that these Registrars must no longer think that they are running local self-governments and that it is nobody's business when they choose to violate some right belonging to a Negro. Of course, such a view is dangerous and will constitute a serious cause of action by the Government, if not discontinued. We take it that these Registrars have already learned that U. S. Justice Department officials stand ready to deal firmly with everyone who elects to set the Negro off as a special case, to be handled as local feelings dictate. The law is that Negroes, like all others, are to be registered and if there is anything spurious about it, he should be prosecuted under the same law. Jue. 5-25-46

It Can Be Done!

Atlanta Daily World

Georgia Negro Democrats, headed by Attorney A. T. Walden of Atlanta, have announced a campaign to step up the registration of Negroes over the state in order to secure 100,000 additional registered voters by the time the books close on July 5. And in order to attain this objective, they have approved the appointment of W. H. Willborn Augusta, Georgia leader, as full-time State Organizer. In addition, they elected a captain each for 8 of Georgia's 10 congressional districts to superintend registration activity.

In acting thus, we believe the Association has chosen well and wisely. Mr. Willborn is no stranger in Georgia. He is capable, tactful, yet sufficiently intelligent and courageous to prosecute registration throughout the state without engendering hostility or friction among local Negro organizations seeking to achieve the same ends. His service is to be understood as an addition to, rather than in the place of, existing Negro agencies. Taken in this light, there is no good reason why all of us should not be proud of the results Mr. Willborn, working with others, will be able to attain. There is great need right now in Georgia for Negro leaders to relegate to the background any sort of leadership jealousies they may have and let the present registration campaign reach its highest crescendo in these next 7 or 8 weeks. In simple truth, we are in a race with time. And if we fail to clasp hands with those who are working at fever heat to get Negroes registered, we will lose the opportunity of a generation. So that, Mr. Willborn's chief task will be that of advising and working with local groups in helping them to keep their eyes on a single objective—getting as many of their people registered as possible within the next 60 days. We know it can be done. We believe that it will be done. But it is going to require the united efforts of each of us, young as well as old, teachers as well as ministers. Get behind this registration drive!

SOLIDIFYING OUR VOTE

Every thinking citizen in Savannah is concerned about what is going to happen with the vote. Those who appreciate the importance of the new status which Negroes have assumed by virtue of being enfranchised, and the danger of having their political potential nullified, are no more concerned than those who would exploit this new possible power. It would be to the definite advantage of those who are suspicious of the new and unexpected interest Negroes are manifesting in political affairs, to divide and scatter the Negro vote. So everybody, honest leaders and demagogues included, is ransacking mind trying to find a way to give the voters the information they need at this critical time. The time is critical because one: that Negro voters do not intend to be misguided-"sold down the river" by anybody; that Negroes they intend to get and follow honest leadership and everything ership. We Must Not Turn Back

Atlanta, Ga. Daily World

A visitor at the Hungry Club meeting recently commended the Negro citizens of Atlanta for their patriotism in civic and political affairs. He mentioned our activity in the recent congressional campaign, our inspired drive to get 25,000 Negroes registered and our fight to insure more adequate public school facilities from the proceeds of the proposed Bond issue.

It is fine for these visitors to pat us on the back. We need to be praised when we are working for the benefit of the whole city. But we must not let the small successes we have gained go to our heads. The battle has just begun. In the words of the well known hymn, "We have put our hands to the plow and we will never turn back no more."

Negroes in Atlanta are facing trying days and we must gird our loins for a hard and continuous battle. For the first time in decades we have the opportunity to vote in the Democratic Primary. Let us take advantage of this and vote. Twenty-five thousand registered citizens may be no good if all of them do not vote intelligently. The following opportunity to vote will come to us within the next 12 months: (1) Fulton County primary; (2) Gubernatorial election (3) Congressional election, and (4) City of Atlanta Bond issue for improvements. All of us who are qualified must vote on each if our interests are to be protected. And we must vote intelligently. Wed 4-24-46

"The price of safety is eternal vigilance." To us this means that we must be forever watchful of our own interests and be ready to vote for better schools, better councilmen and liberal and fairminded officers in all positions of public trust. We started out to get 25,000 registered names on the Registrar's books. We cannot stop until we have passed this mark!

CHOOSE YOUR CANDIDATE

Within a very few days all candidates for election will be presenting their platforms to the people of Georgia through the newspapers, on the radio and in mass meetings. It is almost the solemn duty of voters to make use of these mediums to keep informed as to the records and promises of candidates. They will be unable to vote intelligently if they do not know them and what they stand for. It will be possible during the campaign to determine upon what candidates to place their ballots. If a candidate's record discloses that he has been an opponent of good government; that he has not been a friend to the forgotten man; that his conscience is elastic, especially on moral issues as they regard basic human rights-voters will know what to do with his name on the ballot. Voters in Chatham County will have the opportunity to vote for a Municipal Court judge, three members to the state legislature, and a state senator, in addition to a lieutenant-governor, a governor and other state officers. We are very anxious that Negroes do a good job of voting this time. We must not bungle it. Atlanta 5-16-46

ILLITTRACY HELD NO BAR IN VOTING

Atlanta Daily World

ATLANTA, May 7 —(AP)— Atty. Gen. Eugene Cook said today that it was not necessary for a person to be able to read and write to qualify as a voter.

Cook and his legal aids said a registrant could qualify as a voter if he met either one of these constitutional requirements:

1. Be of "good character" and understand the duties of citizenship "under a republican form of government."

2. Be able to read and write any paragraph of the State and Federal Constitutions.

Cook's assistants explained that a person could exhibit evidence of understanding citizenship requirements without being able to read and write. Wed. 5-8-46

As the state's legal department explained this phase of registration qualifications, the state proceeded to roll up unrecedented lists of qualified voters.

During the past few weeks registration officials throughout the state have reported turning down would-be voters because of failure to pass literacy tsts and meet character requirements.

Other qualifications stressed by Cook today included being at least 18, being a Georgia resident for one year and having lived in the county where he intends to vote "six months next preceding an election in which he offers to vote."

Meanwhile, the gubernatorial candidates who will seek the votes of those who have qualified through registrations polished up their plans for opening their campaigns.

James V. Carmichael, Marietta, will start off his stumping in Moultrie Saturday. E. D. Rivers will initiate his campaign in Waycross on the same day. Eugene Talmadge will begin his vote drive in Lyons May 18. Wed 5-8-46

Negro Vote

Constitution Atlanta, Ga.

Editor Constitution: In the name of all that's fair and just, let us look at this matter of the Negro vote in an unprejudiced and unbiased way. We compel these people to pay taxes, we draft and force them to help fight our wars and make them obey our laws. Another thing, we originally forced them to come to this country without their consent and against their will. We don't need to ever have social equality with them, but we cannot legally and without rhyme or reason deny them the right to vote in our elections without incurring the displeasure and hostility of our higher authorities. This is not an attempt on my part to engage in any prolonged discussion, crimination or recrimination with any individual or group; am only trying to see this matter through in its broadest light. Somebody just as well start praying—we are going to stay on our knees until you do.

Editor Constitution: In reply to Mr. Talmadge's remarks in The Constitution of April 18, saying: "If Negroes vote you'll go to their homes, knock on their doors with hat in hand, shake hands with all of them and kiss their babies if you want to be elected."

I wish to ask if the white people who run for office in Georgia go around and kiss the white babies to get the parents to vote, and visit from house to house shaking hands. If so the whole of Georgia might as well be thrown in a trash can. Each candidate should have a platform and let the people vote for what they think the State should have.

His remarks are solely to play on the ignorant whites to put him in office. You can fool some of the people sometime, but you can't fool all of the people all the time.

FOE OF NEGRO VOTE DEFEATED IN GEORGIA

New York Times New York

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 17 (AP)—Roy V. Harris, Speaker of the State House of Representatives, who campaigned for retention of the white Democratic primary, conceded defeat today for renomination as a member of the legislature.

Harris blamed his defeat by William S. Morris, publisher of The Augusta Chronicle, on the vote of Negroes, balloting for the first time in a county Democratic primary.

He said he would continue a State-wide campaign for repeal of the primary law which the courts recently declared permitted Negroes to vote. He said he would either be in the race for Governor or would support somebody who would advocate retention of the white primary. Thurs 4-28-46

Morris had the backing of an independent group which sought to break the hold on county politics for 20 years of the self-styled Cracker Party. Besides Harris, another member of the House and three county commissioners, all supported by the Cracker Party, were running about 2,500 votes behind independent candidates. Registration totaled 26,500, the largest in the county's history.

Griffin Opposes Negro Vote in White Primary

Constitution Atlanta Ga.

Constitution State News Service.

DUBLIN, June 1—Adj. Gen. Marvin Griffin, candidate for Lieutenant Governor, Saturday praised his "fine opponents" in a speech here but declared the race should be based on issues rather than personalities. 6-2-46

"A candidate seeking the Democratic nomination for Lieutenant Governor is either for or against Negroes voting in a Democratic primary in Georgia," he said, adding: "I am unalterably opposed to Negroes having the balance of power and taking over my party and your party, and I am not afraid of the Negro vote."

Griffin explained he believed steps should be taken to disqualify Negroes from White Primary participation by removing the Neill Primary Act from the statute books. Sunday

Abolition of these laws against Primary fraud and chicanery would not cause any more "political shenanigans" than already have been witnessed in "our party machinery," Griffin said. 6-2-46

Gov. Arnall Tells Georgia To Accept Negro Vote Rights

Black Dispatch Savannah 5-18-46

ATLANTA — (ANP) — Acceptance of Negro voting rights in Georgia primaries was urged here last week by Gov. Ellis Arnall before the state Democratic executive committee. He denounced those who are unwilling to uphold the law as unworthy of citizenship and pleaded for honesty.

"Let's not run from the quacks who would confuse the issue," he said. "Let's not be afraid of the demagogues."

There is no poll tax this year, Arnall pointed out, and there are more young veterans registered than ever before. There are more women registered than men. Thousands of Negro voters have registered to vote in the primary, which will be held on July 17, since federal court ruling upheld their rights to ballot in Democratic primaries.

"It is the first election in the history of Georgia where our young people can really speak out and have a voice in the government of Georgia," Arnall remarked. Oklahoma City

The governor, prevented by the state constitution from seeking a second consecutive term, declined to announce what candidate he will support. Former Gov. Eugene Talmadge, a race baiting gubernatorial candidate, has promised to maintain white supremacy if elected.

Arnall "well knows Henry Wallace is at the head of a movement of the PAC (Political Action Committee) to take control of the voting strength of the south through the Negroes and to pass the FEPC," Talmadge commented on the governor's statement before the executive committee.

ATLANTA — A total of 24,280 colored people registered in Fulton County to vote in the Democratic primary on July 17, when registration closed on May 4.

More than 350 more, who stood four abreast for half a block at the courthouse, were unable to complete registration, although the deadline had been extended an additional five hours.

The intensive campaign drive to boost the registration of colored people, with a special appeal to veterans, resulted in a grand total of approximately 124,000 registrants. 5-18-46

On a Trend

Wed 4-3-46

Merely for the sake of the record, it may be well to discuss factually the Supreme Court ruling which declares the present Georgia primary must permit Negroes to vote.

Negroes already vote in Democratic primaries in all but three Southern States, Louisiana, Mississippi and South Carolina.

They have voted in a number of small Georgia primaries and indications are that most Georgia counties, while demanding literacy and other voting qualifications, will obey the law as it now stands and permit Negroes to vote in the primaries to be held this summer and fall.

The number of Negroes who have been able to qualify in the states to which primaries have been opened to them, runs from a few thousands to 40,000 in Oklahoma. There the Democratic party has found them an asset and the white Chairman of the Executive Committee recently stated they regretted they did not long ago bring them into the party. Texas, Florida and Alabama also accepted Supreme Court decisions, but there has been no comment from their party officials indicating what their reactions are.

While Texas, Florida, Alabama and Oklahoma are new additions to the Southern States permitting Negro participation, it must be kept in mind that North Carolina, Virginia, Tennessee and Kentucky have allowed Negroes, who were registered and who met other qualifications, to vote for a great many years. The average is something more than 25 years. The Negro vote in Shelby County (Memphis), Tennessee, has been one of the real strengths of the Crump machine for at least 30 years.
